First Church, High Point.—An impressive communion service, in which the members of the Junior church united, was observed Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, being conducted by Rev. E. L. Ballard, director of religious education. A large number of communicants joined in this solemn celebration of the Lord's Supper. A solo, "The New Commandment," was rendered by Arthur Fidler, and the choir sang "The Lord is King," by Marston, with Prof. Ernest B. Stimson at the organ. At the 5 o'clock Vesper service Sunday afternoon Rev. E. L. Ballard brought a forceful message on "Shepherding the Sheep."

The executive committee of the Woman's Auxiliary held its monthly meeting Monday afternoon at the church.

The Young People's Society met as usual Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock, and discussed the topic, "How May We Find Our Life Work?" The new Intermediate Society will hold a session next Wednesday evening, following the Fellowship Supper. The minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, will return in time to conduct the devotional period Wednesday evening. Mrs. Paul S. Kennett's Circle, No. 6, will serve the supper on Wednesday evening.

The church school report is as follows: Attendance, 375; offering, $14.30.

The second quarterly conference is called to convene Wednesday evening. All organizations of the church are urged to send written reports, and every member is asked to be present.

Heartfelt sympathy from the entire congregation is extended to Mrs. R. I. Farmer, wife of our pastor, in the loss of her father, Mr. W. H. Fogo, at Wellsville, Ohio, on Tuesday of last week. Mrs. Farmer had been at his bedside for two weeks, and was making plans to return home, but he grew worse on Sunday, and she was advised by physicians in charge not to leave. Mr. Fogo had attained a ripe old age, being 82. He and his wife spent a winter here as guests of Rev. and Mrs. Farmer since they have lived in High Point, and made many friends here, who are saddened to learn that he has fallen on sleep. Mr. Farmer left Tuesday for Wellsville to conduct the funeral services, and he and wife are expected home today or Wednesday. In their absence Mary Elizabeth and Joseph Farmer have been guests in the home of Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe.

Ministerial students from five colleges of the state, Lenoir-Rhyne, Catawba, Elon, Guilford, and High Point, will gather here next Saturday for a joint conference in the First church, which will be devoted to discussion of their future work. The High Point Ministers' Association will assist the students of the local delegation in entertaining the visitors. The conference will open at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning, and among the speakers will be Rev. George R. Shaffer, T. Wingate Andrews, Supt. of City Schools, Rev. T. A. Sykes, of Central Friends church, and Dean P. E. Lindley, of High Point College. A dinner will be served the members of this conference at 6 o'clock in the First Church by Circle No. 8 of the Woman's Auxiliary, of which Mrs. J. G. Snipes is chairman.

Rev. and Mrs. E. Lester Ballard left Monday for Westminster, Md., to attend the commencement exercises at the Theological Seminary. They will also attend the Annual Woman's Missionary Convention in Baltimore, May 8-9, Mrs. Ballard being a delegate from the N. C. Branch. While in Baltimore Rev. and Mrs. Ballard will be the guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Ballard.

Mrs. P. T. Crawford and her son, R. Lynn Trout, arrived here from St. Louis, Mo., last Friday, and are visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Robbins, south of the city. They will spend a few days with Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe before going to Concord, N. C., where Mr. Trout and Miss Annis Smoot will be married on May 15th. The bride-to-be is a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Smoot, of Concord, and a niece of Mrs. T. Wingate Andrews, of High Point, with whom she has made her home for the past three years. Mr. Trout is a member of First Church and has many warm friends among the congregation who are much interested in learning of his approaching marriage. Sincere congratulations and cordial good wishes for the happiness of this popular and highly esteemed young pair are extended in advance.

Miss Xannie Stowe, of the City Nursing Department, left last night for Washington, D. C., to attend the International Congress of Mental Hygiene, which will be in session there this week.

We are much pleased to announce that Miss Ruth Welch, who underwent an operation at Guilford General Hospital, is recovering satisfactorily, and has returned to her home on North Main street. Her mother, Mrs. J. C Welch, Sr., is also improving from a recent illness.

Fountain Place.—Last week and this our special meeting has been in progress. Our pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, is doing the preaching himself, and is bringing us great truths. In the early 'services the attendance was rather small, but it has increased steadily. Even last night, Monday night of the second week, a good number was present.

The attendance at Sunday school last Sunday was good, about 107 present. After a short class period the school assembled and the pastor spoke to the children. At the close of his talk the children were invited to accept Christ as their personal Savior and a number of them did. The parents, Sunday school teachers, and others workers stood with them at the altar, thus showing their approval of the children's decision and intention of helping them in the new life. Since that service two other little girls have given their hearts to Jesus.

It was our privilege to have the Branch meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary in our town, though not in our church, a few weeks ago, and a number of our people attended the services. This opportunity of meeting and associating with the leaders of our church and workers from all over the state is always enjoyable and helpful.

In the latter part of March one of the circles of the Woman's Auxiliary from First Church, Burlington, gave an interesting play, "A Southern Cinderella," at our church. Our ladies of the Auxiliary have been having cake and candy sales and making money in various ways during the last weeks.

Fairview.—We are planning a big day May 11—Mother's Day, Home-Coming and Memorial Day all combined. We want all our old members, pastors and friends to come and enjoy the day with us. Lunch will be served on the church grounds for all.

—The Adjutant General of the army has transmiteed to the service the information that it is the desire of the Secretary of War that each officer and enlisted man in the army write a letter to his home on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 11th, next, as an expression of the love and reverence we owe to the mothers of our country.

—Mrs. C. W. Bates had a full day last Sunday. She heard three sermons, attended two communion services, and made two addresses herself. In her round she visited two churches on West Forsyth charge.

—Mrs. Roscoe Causey is an appendicitis patient in Clinic hospital.

—John William Sykes lost his life last Sunday night by walking on Highway No. 10 near Mebane when he was struck by a passing car whose driver was blinded by the light of a coming car. Funeral conducted by Rev. W. M. Loy.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Deane

Miss Minnie Sylvia Deane was born at Oak Ridge January 14, 1892, and passed away Sunday morning about 8 o'clock, April 13, 1930. She lingered for only a few days after suffering a stroke of paralysis. She was the daughter of J. S. and Alice Self Deane. Her father preceded her in death. Miss Minnie as she was known united with the First Methodist Protestant Church, Winston-Salem, when but a girl of 13 years under the pastorate of Dr. J. D. Williams with Rev. G. F. Millaway assisting in revival services. All who knew her attest to her devotion to the church and Sunday school.

We miss her and bow to God's will. We ask the Divine Comforter to guide the bereaved family and friends. May others be raised up to take her place made vacant by her going. The surviving are her mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Pendergast; one brother, Mr. J. L. Deane, and one sister, Mrs. Cora Smothers, beside other near relatives.

The funeral services were held at the home Monday afternoon, April 14, at 3 o'clock. The writer, assisted by Revs. R. C. Stubbins and J. G. Bruner, conducted the services. Burial was in Salem cemetery.

"Now we lift our tear-dimmed eyes
To the smiling skies above,
And we know our dear one lies
In the bosom of thy love.
Father, in Thy gracious keeping,
Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

Brittain

Rev. Nebula Brittain was born in Weaverville, N. C., December 4th, 1891, and passed to his reward April 15th, 1930. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Brittain, of Weaverville, N. C. We were told that when he was a mere child he felt the call to preach. When very young he accepted Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South. He remained a member of this church for a number of years, preparing for his life work.

In 1922 he came to the conference of the Methodist Protestant Church which was in session at Henderson, N. C. After standing the required examination he was admitted to the class of the first year and recommended for work.

Bro. Brittain's services in the conference extended over a period of just a few years. He served only three charges, Yarborough, Roberta, and St. Paul. He was pastor of the last-named charge when the summons came for him to pass from labor to reward. He was serving his fourth year as pastor of this church. His earnestness had won for him a large circle of friends wherever he was known. Those who knew him best loved him most.

In December, 1922, he was married to Miss Bessie Cline. This union proved to be a happy one. He was a kind and thoughtful husband. Our sympathy goes out for his faithful and loyal wife who is left behind, and who feels more keenly than anyone else this dispensation of the providence of God.

It was our privilege to assist him in the last revival he held on his charge. We are glad we had such a privilege. We shall always look back on that experience with pleasure. During that meeting, and at other times, we were in his home and had opportunity to observe his kindness and thoughtfulness for those about him.

He leaves to mourn their loss his wife, his parents, three brothers, four sisters, and a host of friends. He is gone, but not dead. While his going was our loss it was his gain. Let us think of him in the language of the poet:

"No, not cold beneath the grasses,
Not close-walled within the tomb:
Rather, in our Father's mansion,
Living in another room.

"Living like the man that loves me,
Like my child with cheek a-bloom,
Out of sight, at desk or schoolbook,
Busy in another room.

"Nearer than my son whom fortune
Beckons where the strange lands loom:
Just behind the hanging curtain,
Busy in another room.

"Shall we doubt our Father's mercy?
Shall we think of death as doom?
Or the stepping o'er the threshold
To a bigger, brighter room.

"Shell we blame our Father's mercy?
Shall we sit enswathed in gloom?
When we know our loves are happy,
Waiting in another room."

A short funeral service was held in the home, Dr. S. K. Spahr and Rev C. W. Bates had charge. The body was then carried to the home of his parents at Weaverville. The next day funeral services were conducted in Clark's Chapel by Dr. S. W. Taylor and the writer, after which his body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

Holt

Mrs. Nannie Braxton Holt, 72 years old, widow of the late Levin W. Holt, passed to her heavenly reward on the morning of May 3rd after an illness of several months. The funeral service was conducted at the First Methodist Protestant Church, of Burlington, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Dr. Potter, pastor of the First Persbyterian church, assisted the pastor in the service. She was buried in Pine Hill cemetery along side her husband.

Sister Holt is survived by one sister, Mrs. G. M. Thompson, of Reidsville, and by three sons and two daughters: Mrs. C. C. Moser, of Starkey, Va., and Mrs. W. N. Stansell, Carl, Fred, and Braxton Holt, all of Burlington.

She was converted and united with Bethel M. P. Church in South Alamance when about 15 years of age. Something like 35 years ago she transferred her membership to Burlington. She was ever interested in her church, taking an active part in the women's organizations as long as she was able to attend. She lived to see not only all of her children, but all of her grandchildren, members of the church. It has been this pastor's privilege to receive three of the grandchildren into the church.

Truly, she was one of our best women, and she will be missed by her loved ones and by her church. But there is great consolation in the fact that she was triumphant in the faith. For nearly 60 years she had endeavored to serve God and we believe she has received the reward of the faithful.

May the comfort and peace of God that passeth understanding keep the hearts of all who mourn her going.

Lane

Samuel A. Lane died March 26, 1930, aged 35 years, two months and 26 days. He professed faith in Christ in 1911, and later joined Mount Zion church, where he lived a consistent member until death.

He had been in declining health for several years, but bore all of his suffering with Christian patience, never murmuring, but seemingly cheerful and hopeful.

He leaves father, mother, two sisters, three brothers, one half-brother and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss; but we should not grieve as those who have no hope, as he was a good boy, an obedient son, a loving brother, a kind neighbor, and a loyal church member, and will be greatly missed in all these capacities, but especially will he be missed in his home, where he had spent the greater part of his life; but the Lord is able with His Spirit to fill all these vacancies. May we all be able to look forward to the reunion with our loved ones in the "sweet bye and bye."

Burial services were conducted by the pastor and Rev. R. A. Hunter, of Henderson, after which the remains were laid to rest in Mount Zion cemetery under a mound of beautiful flowers, showing the high esteem in which he was held.

The bereaved have our deepest sympathy.

A. L. HUNTER.

Cecil

Mrs. W. S. Cecil, one of the oldest and most faithful members of Pleasant Grove church, died April 8th, 1930. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. G. L. Reynolds, April 9th, at Pleasant Grove, after which the remains were placed in the church cemetery. The large congregation present showed the esteem in which her memory is held.

She is survived by her husband, Mr. W. S. Cecil, one adopted daughter, Mrs. Minnie Moore, and a host of other relatives and friends. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

Resolutions of Love and Respect

The members of Tabernacle Auxiliary offer a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Miss Angeline Causey, who passed away March 25, 1930.

Aunt Angeline was one of our oldest and most faithful members. She was 93 years old.

We realize in her death we have lost a true friend, a good neighbor, and one who was always interested in all the activities of her church.

Therefore, Be it revolved, that we cherish with loving remembrance her many years of faithful service in church and mission work.

OLD FLOORS

At the recent Branch meeting in Burlington we spoke briefly of our floors.

Barefoot time has come, and wife and daughters have already pulled many splinters from the feet of little children.

Our appeal seems to have met a hearty response. We have a good oak floor already laid in one large room.

The other day a good lady in Burlington wrote for the measurements of one room. We are sending her dimension of the dining room, and hope to have it taken.

Then, just this morning, two good friends came in and took the measure of our lower hall, and we almost have the definite promise that the old floor there is soon to be covered with good oak flooring. This encourages us and cheers us very much.

Our upper hall and several rooms remain. We shall be glad to send dimensions to anyone, or ones, who will undertake to secure the flooring for us. We thank you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

LINK WITH ABRAHAM

Four temples—one of them the work of Nebuchadnezzar—have been discovered at Ur by the joint expedition of the British museum and the University of Philadelphia.

The expedition has been tracing the walls and defences of the city which existed 4,000 years ago.

Two of the temples, one to En-Ki, the water-god, and one to Ningishzida, the brother of Adonis, or Tammuz, were built in 1990 and 1885 B. C.

These temples bear the dedication of Rim-Sin of Larsa, who in his old age was defeated by Hammurabil, of Babylon, and thus can be reckoned Abraham's contemporary.

The fourth temple is the work of Nabonidus.

The excavation of two of the temples is still in progress.

Under one of the Rim-Sin buildings the expedition is finding ruins of an earlier date.

The report of the expedition says that little is left of the walls, but enough to enable one to picture what they were like 4,000 years ago.

The base of the wall is a rampart of mud brick, along the top of which ran a burnt brick wall.

It was built by King Ur-Engur in about 2,300 B. C.

The rampart is an amazing structure. It was about 26 feet high and its width varied from 70 to over 90 feet.

The back of it was mostly hidden by the terrace on which the town stood, and for which it acted as a retaining wall.

Its front sloped sharply down, and for much of its length was washed by the waters of a wide canal.

Ur was almost entirely surrounded by water; the Euphrates ran to the west of it, canals along its north and eastern ends, and to all appearances a canal was dug right through the middle of the town.

On and behind this mud brick rampart were found buildings mostly of the date of the Larsa kings (2100-1900 B. C.)

Generally they were private houses, but among them were the four temples.—World-Wide News Service, Inc.

—"Dogwood in bloom presents a beautiful scene," says Mr. Graeber. "So does a field of golden grain; but, we do not ask the farmer to refrain from harvesting his wheat crop. A new crop will take its place next season. The same thing applies to dogwood. It is a commercial necessity, supplying wood from which shuttles are made for use in weaving cotton, silk or rayon. No practical substitute for this wood has been found, but since trees less than five inches in diameter are not merchantable, the owner leaves his younger and more vigorous for future crops."

A CIVIL WAR HERO

At the age of 23 he was made brigadier-general, and at 25 a major-general. Eleven horses were shot under him in battle. Though he was a subordinate officer commanding a compartively small division of the Union Army, his troops within six months captured in open battle 111 pieces of field artillery, 65 battle-flags, and more than 10,000 prisoners, including seven general officers. During this time they never were defeated, never lost a gun or a color, and never failed to capture every piece of artillery the enemy opened upon them.

"Nearly six feet in height, broad-shouldered, lithe, and active, of immense strength and endurance, and, as he used neither liquor nor tobacco, his physical condition was perfect through all the hardships of his life. He reverenced religion, he showed deference to the aged, he honored women-kind and was fond of children. His domestic life was characterized by a simplicity, joyous contentment, and fondness for home that was surprising when it is remembered that, out of 37 years of his brief life, 14 were spent in active warfare." His name was George Armstrong Custer, and he was born in 1839 and killed by the Indians in 1876.

MEN OF MOSCOW

Men of Moscow,
Common clod,
Do you dare
Defy your God?

He is watching,
Choose your fate;
Repent, repent ye,
Ere too late.

Men of Moscow,
Common clod,
Rouse your spirit,
Turn to God.

—"When we use eggs in the diet, we are availing ourselves of one of Nature's richest storehouses of food," says Miss Mary Thomas, nutrition specialist at State College. "Not only does the yolk contain a fine quality of protein and fat for building material and energy, but it also contains a rich store of minerals and vitamins necessary for growth, health and vigor. The egg-yolk is one of the richest sources of iron so essential in making red corpuscles in the blood. This yolk contains the vitamins A, B, D and E. It is particularly rich in vitamin A, needed for growth and for building up resistance to pulmonary diseases."

Shift Attention!

When all the world has turned to blue,
And you don't see how you can do,
When mind and heart are ill at ease,
When fear begins your soul to freeze,—
Shift attention!

When men awaken bitter thought
And fail to do the things they ought,
And you're about to sit as judge
And sow the seed of lasting grudge,—
Shift attention!

When God's not seen in heaven or earth,
And deepest gloom is brought to birth,
When hope is dead and faith is dying,
And deepest soul lies sick and sighing,

Our Temple Cleansing

Jesus was shocked to find the temple at Jerusalem which had been dedicated to the pure worship of God desecrated and profaned. He proceeded to cleanse it in most vigorous fashion. That temple has passed away, but Paul teaches that our bodies are now the temples of God, places of indwelling for His Holy Spirit. Can it be pleasing to Jesus to come and find in these temples unholy desires, covetousness, greed of gain? Surely not. He must be shocked and grieved to find in us any marks of unholiness. There can be no peace between us and God while we are in a state of unholiness. And we realize to our sorrow that we cannot make ourselves holy. We have tried in vain. But Jesus comes to us with cleansing power. Through His power we may be clean.

''There is a fountain filled with blood
Drawn from Immanuel's veins,
And sinners plunged beneath that flood
Lose all their guilty stains.''

"Fear Not, Little Flock"

Great multitudes crowded about Jesus, sometimes trampling on each other. But He speaks of His real disciples as a ''little flock.'' But their littleness was not ground for discouragement. He said to them: ''Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom.'' Little churches should take heart from these words of Jesus. Because they are numerically small they cannot bear as great a part in the work of the church as a whole as large churches can, but in respect to the greatest achievement of all they are on a par with the largest churches: they can win the Kingdom. The decisive question will be, not how many fellow-laborers did you have, but how did you act your individual part?

What Will Father Do?

A crucial time has come. The boy has been mother's boy and has attended Sunday School. Now he has come to be father's boy and it depends on father what he will do. Will father lead him to the church or away from the church? He will do one or the other. The boy has faith in father and will yield to father's influence. A great responsibility has come to father, one he cannot evade. It is the responsibility of using his influence for or against his own boy. If he leads his boy to the church, he puts him under the best influences in the world, influences that uplift and save. If he leads his boy away from the church he puts him under influences that degrade and destroy. The father knows this. He knows that his son does not know it so well. Will he take advantage of his boy's ignorance or will he be true to his boy's highest interests? Time will tell.

That First Palm Sunday

Jesus riding into Jerusalem on a donkey! How strange it seems. In his travels He ordinarily walked. He probably never rode on horseback or in a chariot. He certainly never rode in an automobile or a railway car. Why did he ride on this occasion?

That strange procession moving into Jerusalem with Jesus as the most conspicuous figure may have had a different meaning to the crowd, expecting Jesus soon to mount an earthly throne, and so to them may have seemed a triumphal procession, but to Jesus with his mind filled with visions of his tragic end and of the terrible things to come upon Jerusalem in the near future the day could not have seemed one of triumph. Surely he was not glorying in his immediate prospects. This street parade seems to have been arranged by Jesus himself and not by the shallow multitude. It had a meaning in his mind too deep and high for the comprehension of the masses of people. Even the twelve did not understand at first. Afterward they remembered that it fulfilled a prophecy. It was therefore a part of the larger movements of Providence, extending through centuries and ages. Jesus was not a man of one generation; he belonged to the ages of human history. He was here acting his part assigned by Providence in promoting the high ends of Providence in man's history. He was announcing himself as the Agent of God in working out the redemption and uplift of man. He was not bidding for the votes of men to make him king. He was announcing in symbolic fashion that he would be the Messianic King. Hitherto he had forbidden men to declare his divinity. Now on the eve of his departure he declares it himself most unmistakably.

IS THE PREACHER TO DEAL WITH SOCIAL QUESTIONS?

"I am determined," says St. Paul, in the first letter that he sent to the church at Corinth, "not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and Him crucified." A preacher talking continually about Jesus Christ and Him crucified—surely nobody could object to that.

But now let us begin to consider whereunto a continuous discussion of Jesus Christ and Him crucified might conceivably lead. It is interesting to observe that, in the very letter in which Paul announces that he is determined not to know anything among those Corinthian Christians save Jesus Christ and Him crucified, he proceeds to offer chapters of advice about litigation, marriage, wedlock, falling in love, personal liberty, the exercise of personal gifts, the length of women's hair, the veiling of women in the churches, and the taking of a collection. When Paul had finished the writing of that letter, he might have reflected, "I have covered substantially all subjects in which our Christian folk at Corinth are vitally interested."

Was he, then, insincere in his announcement that he was determined to know nothing among them save Jesus Christ and Him crucified?

Would it be going too far to say that St. Paul was always thinking of Jesus Christ? His thought began and ended with Christ. He had only one ambition in this world and that was to exalt the Lord Jesus Christ. Not only the matter of his discourses but even the manner of their delivery was dictated by his thought of Christ. And would it be an unwarranted conclusion that therefore he felt constrained to talk about any and every matter that was of vital interest to his converts? He would have them look at all matters through the eyes of Christ. He would have them measure everything by the standards of Christ. He would build up in everyone of them the mind of Christ. In all their relationships to God, to one another, and to the world at large he would have them express the faith and the spirit of Christ.

Now, suppose that some modern preacher were as profoundly convinced as was St. Paul that there is but one true and abiding foundation on which human life may be built, namely Jesus Christ. About what would such a preacher feel constrained to talk when he stood in his pulpit on the Lord's day? Personal piety, domestic morality? Of course! He would be eager to have men think of God in terms of Christ. When men wonder, as they sometimes do, what is the meaning of life, or whether indeed life has any meaning, any purpose, or goal, he would have them feel able in their heart of hearts to believe that the meaning of life is Christ, that the hidden source from which life comes and the hidden goal toward which it is moving are most fully revealed in Christ. And in all their most intimate relationships to those who dwell with them under the same roof, he would have them express the spirit of Christ.

But would this modern preacher with St. Paul's conviction about Jesus Christ be content to stop there? Would he feel that he had any right to stop there? After all, men are something more than husbands, or brothers, or fathers, or sons. Men are brick-layers, or plumbers, or walking delegates, or contractors, or industrial executives, or bank directors, or physicians, or teachers, or ambassadors, or governors. If, therefore, a modern preacher sincerely and even passionately believes that Jesus Christ is life's one true and abiding foundation, is it not only natural and right that he should plead with men to build upon that foundation, not only their personal and domestic life, but their business life, their industrial life, and their political life? Might not such a preacher announce to his congregation that he was determined not to know anything among them save Jesus Christ and Him crucified, and then that very morning proceed to preach a sermon on industrial or international relationships viewed through the eyes of Christ?

This determination to build the message of the Christian pulpit about Jesus Christ and Him crucified has another implication that is highly significant. To St. Paul, Jesus Christ and especially Jesus Christ, the Crucified, was something more than a human ideal. In the thought of Paul, the cross of Christ was a revelation of the heart of God. It was even more than that, it was the very deed of God. God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself. In that pathetic, tragic figure of the man of Galilee hanging upon a cross, God was suffering for men—suffering in order that by His suffering men's eyes might be opened, their consciences stabbed, their vision cleared, and their wills enlisted for a noble cause. Let it never be forgotten that in the thought of St. Paul, and in the thought of Christian preachers through nineteen hundred years, what we have to deal with is a universe that is on the side of Jesus, a God who is supremely revealed in the crucified Christ.

But if that be true, if the universe is on the side of Jesus, if God is like Christ, is there not something which may and should be said from a Christian pulpit about the conduct of business, and the organization of industry, and the acts and policies of government? This assertion that what we all have to do with—men in low position and men in high position—is a universe that is making for Christlikeness is, if true, nothing less than tremendous. For what it means is that no kind of business can hope permanently to succeed in this world, no kind of industrial organization can hope permanently to prosper in this world, and no nation, no civilization, can hope permanently to endure in this world unless it takes practical account of the principles of Christ. Suppose, then, that the Christian pulpit should confine itself to personal piety and domestic morality. Suppose, it should make no demand at all for the enthronement of Jesus Christ in the world of "big business" or in the world of politics. Would not that pulpit be recreant to its own high calling? Would it not be a traitor to the future welfare of mankind, and a weak and timid traitor at that?

Surely it is not only the right but the imperative duty of the Christian pulpit to insist that the grand total of human life should be brought into harmony with a universe that is making for Christlikeness.—Rev. Ernest F. Tittle in Federal Council Bulletin.

CAN THE CHURCH RECOVER PENTECOST?

The movement for the observance of Pentecost differs from most other movements in the Church in being carried forward without external organization or machinery, without artificial promotion by committees, without setting of financial or statistical goals. All the emphasis is being placed upon leading the members of the churches into a deeper personal experience of religion and a more receptive attitude toward the Spirit of God.

It would be a dismal nineteen-hundredth anniversary of Pentecost if the church should simply content itself with the rehearsing of a twice-told tale or speculating concerning the attendant circumstances of the manifestation of the Holy Spirit long ago. It is not a celebration of the first Pentecost but an actual experience of Pentecost itself that the church is needing. At the beginning the Master made it clear that it would be of no use for His disciples to start out to evangelize the world until they themselves had experienced something of which, up to that moment, they were ignorant. They had heard the Master's teaching, but the transforming power of it had not laid hold of them. It was futile then, it would be futile now, for Christians to proclaim that teaching unless the vital power of it has been felt in their own inner lives.

We are not concerned about the spectacular phases of the first Pentecost—the lambent flame, the miracle of tongues—but we are concerned that the glowing spiritual experience which these accompanied—the experience of the present reality of God—should be an indisputable fact in our own lives. We hear much talk about applied religion. But how can we apply a thing which we do not really possess? One cannot lift himself by his bootstraps Archimedes needed a standing-place and a lever to move the world, and we must have the same.

Will the churches wait, in meditation and prayer and consecrated purposes, during these days which are just ahead, until in answer to their sense of uttermost need the infilling of the Holy Spirit shall be an accomplished fact? Then every church might receive a Pentecost of its own. Why not, during these fifty days of the period of Pentecost (and especially during the ten days leading up to the Day of Pentecost on June 8), so far as possible lay aside our absorption in various programs, which, however good, derive their final value only from their relation to the will of God, and give ourselves to a renewed dedication?

Men stand shivering today around altars where the fires have gone out. What contrast with those first Christians, whose zeal was all aflame! What is needed above all else is that the churches become conscious of the Divine power to which Pentecost bears witness.

A churchman tells of a visit to the little room in Aldersgate Street, London, where John Wesley's heart was "strangely warm." As he sat in meditation a colored man came in. He read the inscription on the bronze plate which told what happened to Wesley on that spot. As he stood in silence the tears began to fall, and dropping on his knees and raising his hands to heaven, he said: "Do it again, Lord. Do it again!" That is Pentecost! Power first; program afterward!—Federal Council Bulletin.

WOMAN'S RIGHT TO USE TOBACCO

More and more the question is being forced to the front: Why shouldn't women have the right to use tobacco, if the men have that right? Why should it be thought improper for women to chew or smoke, so long as it is considered all right for men to do so?

Regardless of "rights" in the matter, most persons feel about it as does David Starr Jordan, former president of Stanford University, in California. Discussing this point he said: "They should have all the liberty a man takes in this regard. It is their affair, not mine. But when I see a woman smoking, I drop her name from my visiting list."

Whether the smoking women realize it or not, they are looked down upon by many of the best citizens of the country in just about the same way as indicated by David Starr Jordan. Smoking women are not considered good enough to associate with the average clean-living individual, man or woman.

The Pathfinder, with a circulation of over 400,000, comes at the question from another angle, as follows: "Personally, we believe that men should not smoke unless they expect their wives and boys and girls to follow their example. Any vice is a sign of weakness. Roosevelt wouldn't smoke—not because it would have sent him to a premature grave if he smoked, but because he felt, just as we do, that any such indulgence is a sign of weakness and a bad example."

In spite of every effort to popularize smoking among women, it won't "pop."—Will H. Brown.

A PRAYER FOR THE RURAL PEOPLES OF THE WORLD

Almighty God, who hast blessed the earth that it should be fruitful and bring forth whatsoever is needful for the life of man, and hast commanded us to work with quietness, and eat our own bread, bless the labors of the husbandman. Show thy loving-kindness, that our land may give her increase; and so fill us with good things that the poor and needy may give thanks unto Thy Name.

Look, we beseech Thee, upon the little companies of our faithful brethren who in the lonely places of the world are striving to uphold the banner of the Cross. If the comfort of human sympathy seem far from them, be Thou their close companion and pour into their hearts the spirit of hope; that they may steadfastly persevere and be of good courage because of Thy Word.

Increase in us a desire to minister to those living on farm and ranch, in little town and open country, and so guide us by Thy Spirit that we may harvest the souls committed to our care in love and power and understanding; through Him who said of old, "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth laborers into His harvest," Thy Son, our Savior Jesus Christ.—Rev. H. W. Foreman.

AURELIAN SPRINGS STANDARD LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

May 26th to 30th

Four coursses will be offered by competent teachers. The courses probably will be the "Pupil," "Principles of Teaching," "Life of Christ," "Missionary Materials," and "Methods." There will be five nights with two recitation periods each night. The main purpose of the school is to better equip ourselves for the common task of trying to save our world for Christ. If you are interested in this task then here is your opportunity along with others to get better training. However, even the leaders of religious education recognize that "all work and no play" even here "makes Jack a dull boy," so there is to be a recreational period with lots of fun and splendid Christian fellowship. Do not miss this opportunity so near at home to improve yourself and join hands with your fellow co-laborers, whose task is your task.

Rev. F. L. Gibbs, M. A., S. T. B., assistant secretary of the Department of Religious Education of our denomination will be the dean of the school.

Watch your paper for further announcement regarding this school!

For information regarding this school, write Miss Ethel Harrison, Littleton, N. C. Miss Harrison is chairman of the First District Council of Religious Education.

J. Clyde Auman, Chair. First District.

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

May 11, Sunday. I was not with any of our churches on this date, owing to an appointment to preach the commencement sermon of the high school at Advance, in Davie county. This appointment gave me an opportunity to be with relatives, and to see friends that I have known from my childhood. In fact, I went back within three miles of my birth place. The intervening years have wrought many changes. When I was a small boy in that community, the log school house was the fashion. Many times and oft, have I passed the place where I preached on this date, but "nairy" a time did I think that one day the boys and girls from far and near would be flocking there, many of them in school buses, to attend school—an A-grade high school, and that they would be housed in a commodious and well-appointed brick building. But such is the case. Perhaps I should have been wise enough to forsee that it would be so. Our progress in education during the past quarter of a century has been marvelous, and we are only now beginning to approach the wonderful educational developments and opportunities that await our grandchildren. I enjoyed the day, and was honored in being privileged to be with this splendid school in this part of the commencement program. I was pleased, too, that my family could share this pleasure with me.

High Point College

The Trustees will meet tomorrow (Wednesday) to hear the report of the committee appointed to nominate a president for the college. This will be a very important meeting, and one that will be attended with far-reaching results. We shall hope and pray that clear and united thinking may lead us to proper conclusions. The college has already demonstrated its usefulness, and we must plan wisely and well for its increasing growth and service.

Pastor's Reports for Second Quarter

Quite a number are in, and we hope to have the remainder promptly, so we can publish a digest of these reports by next week. We shall be grateful to pastors who have not yet sent in their reports if they will let us have them with the minimum of delay, with all questions carefully answered so our digest may be as full and as complete as possible.

May 18—Third Sunday

Pastors know, of course, that this is High Point College Day,—so ordered by the Annual Conference. During the day the College is to be emphasized in some way in every church. We earnestly trust that pastors and superintendents are preparing to do this. It can be done without any considerable break in the regular program where the full time can not be well taken up with the college. A brief talk, either in the Sunday School, the preaching service, or in both, will serve in realizing the purpose of the day. The idea is to boost the college, and to create an intensified appreciation of its value and its place in the conference and the state. Where "Dollar a Member" has not been provided, this day will afford a splendid occasion for that. Try this, brethren, and let us have several churches to add to "Dollar a Member" honor roll by next week.

Children's Day

One noticeable thing about the pastor's reports that have come in to date in the number of churches that did not hold an Easter service, as provided by the Board of Missions. We trust that this may not be true of Children's Day. Pastors and superintendents should see at once that programs are ordered, and preparations begun in due time for the observance of this day. Send orders to Rev. G. W. Haddaway, 516 North Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

Baltimore Meeting

May 8.—At the call of Dr. Broomfield, president of the General Conference, and Dr. Straugn, promotional secretary and treasurerof the General Church, Treasurer Brown, Secretary Bates, and myself attended a meeting held in the assembly room of our publishing house in Baltimore, May 8. Quite a number of conference officials were present, and a worthwhile day was spent in discussing denominational programs and problems. The Woman's Annual Missionary Convention opened in Baltimore on this date for a four-day session. We had the privilege of being present at dinner and the reception given to the delegates on the evening of the opening day. A considerable number were present, representing various geographical sections of the church. Mesdames Hammer, Brown, Bates, Redding, Ballard, Minnis, Harris, were there from North Carolina. A happy spirit was in evidence, and the prospects appeared encouraging for a good convention.

Assigned

On April 30th, Rev. W. F. Ashburn was assigned as pastor of St. Paul's to fill out the unexpired term of Rev. N. Brittain, deceased. The improved condition of Brother Ashburn's health is gratifying, and we trust that he and the St. Paul congregation may have great satisfaction in their work with each other for the remainder of this conference year.

Appointments

May 14.—Meeting of College Trustees, High Point College.

May 18.—Why Not Charge as follows: Flag Springs, 11 A. M.; New Hope, 2:30 P. M.; Seagrove at night.

June 1-2.—High Point College commencement.

June 1.—Commencement sermon, Curry Training School, 7:30 P. M.

June 8.—West Forsyth Charge, as follows: Tabernacle, 11 A. M.; Union Hill in the afternoon.

June 13.—In special program at Concord Church, Saxapahaw Charge.

June 29.—Bethel Church, Flat Rock Charge, in District Rally.

"Grace be with you."

Fraternally yours,

May 13, 1930. S. W. Taylor.

Next Week's Issue

Rev. N. M. Harrison, Chairman of the Annual Conference Committee on Herald subscription Field Service, has asked for large space next week, and the editor of the Herald, not wishing to rob any other department, has agreed to give Brother Harrison his own space. We have confidence in Brother Harrison's judgment and do not expect to find that he has abused the privilege. On the contrary, we expect that he will give to next week's paper features of special interest.

ARE FOREIGN MISSIONS ANY GOOD?

How fifteen acres of ground which he bought ten years ago for $8.33 has increased forty-fold in value and now holds a hospital, boys' boarding-school and other Christian institutions is told by Dr. Sherwood Eddy under the interesting title, "A Moral Miracle," in the Missionary Review of the World for April.

It is the story of Bishop Azariah, whom Dr. Eddy first knew when he himself was a missionary in India thirty-three years ago. Bishop Azariah gave himself to work among the most degraded people in all India. He was later consecrated as the first Anglican Indian bishop, and is now the first Episcopal native bishop in all Asia.

"The moral miracle" is not the increase in the value of the piece of land; that is only a barometer of change. The miracle is that as a result of Bishop Azariah's own work, there are now 166,000 church members in his diocese. Having given up drink, theft and immorality, they have so impressed their high-caste neighbors that already 3,000 of these proud and cultured folk have become Christians, while an even larger number are said to be seeking admission to the church.

The fact that ought to catch the attention of American church people is that no one of these 166,000 Christians is paid to preach, yet all are expected to do so; and, like the early Christians, they seem to find it a joy to live up to that expectation. Bishop Azariah ascribes the transformation in the life of his people, first of all, to "the sacrament of the changed life of each worker who lives among them."

Dr. Eddy concludes, "As I see the moral miracle that has uplifted these once carrion-eating drunkards, I think that I can answer the question, 'Are foreign missions doing any good?' "—Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty.

SUBSIDIES OF THE CHURCH PRESS

Religious literature, like every kind of cultural effort, has a hard financial route to travel. One might easily call the names of publications which in former times had extensive circulation, at least sufficient to defray their expenses, but have now either entirely passed out of existence or have merged with other periodicals of similar nature or have found it necessary to secure subsidies.

Not only the strictly denominational connection. As an illustration of this fact, reference may be made to the call which has recently gone out from the newly founded Christian Publishing Company of Kansas City, which is to publish the paper named The Christian, edited by Dr. Burris Jenkins, pastor of the Community Church (Linwood Christian). This corporation is endeavoring to raise an endowment of $250,000. It realizes that the paper cannot be self-supporting and must be heavily subsidized. Under its former management, it ran an annual deficit of about $10,000.

Denominational publications can get no comfort from the hardships of other periodicals, but in making a complete survey of the situation they are able to understand some of the reasons for their own difficulties. The Churchman, a publication of the Episcopal Church, and The Commonweal, a very able weekly of the Roman Catholic Church, are in the same row with the rest of the Church journals. There is no easy solution to the Church paper problem. Great wisdom will be needed by all Churches when they consider it.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

DATE OF PASTOR'S SUMMER CONFERENCE CHANGED

It has been found that the young people's denominational conference at Sabina, Ohio, meets at the same time our Pastor's Summer Conference has been appointed. A number of our people are anxious to attend both conferences. Among these are Dr. Forelines and Dr. Lindley who have been asked by both conferences to take leading parts. The engagement of Dr. Forlines is the most long-standing with us and therefore we would not lost him but we would lose Dr. Lindley as he has promised his services to the Ohio conference sooner than to us. To change the date of our conference for a few days would make it possible for all to attend both conferences. After consulting with a number of the brethren and finding no objections to a change it has been deciding to change the date of the Pastor's Summer Conference from June 16-20 to June 23-27. It is hoped that this plan will not conflict with the plan of any pastor and it will make it possible for both conferences to be better and greater. The thought and policy of "Live and let live" which it is believed to be the principle we all love has been followed. Let us make this the greatest conference yet.

Geo. L. Curry.

FIRST DISTRICT

On next Sunday, May 18th, Rev. Lawrence Little is to visit the First District in interest of the proposed Leadership Training school to be held at the Aurelian Spring high school May 26th to 30th (nights). He will speak at the Enfield church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock: Eden church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and Hawkins' Chapel at night. Our people in the locality of these churches want to be sure to avail themselves of hearing Mr. Little.

The following Sunday Rev. F. L. Gibbs will be in the District, speaking at Hollister in the morning at 11 o'clock, Bethesda in the afternoon at 3 o'clock and at night he will have charge of a special service preparatory to the beginning of the Leadership Training school the following Monday night at the Mt. Tabor M. E. Church just in front of the Aurelian Spring high school. Brethren and fellow co-workers, let us arouse our people to take advantage of this school and try to have them present on the Fourth Sunday night at the Mt. Tabor church.

For further information see any of the pastors or Miss Ethel Harrison and the members of her council, Mrs. E. I. Bellamy and Miss Winnie Burt.

TAKE GOD INTO CLOSE PARTNERSHIP

When a man has a clear and vital realization of his eternal life he will be filled with uplifted thought, earnest work, and high ideals. He will carry with him an indescribable sense of confidence and happiness, and an unwavering faith equal to every opportunity, emergency, and obligation. The privilege of knowing God, of sharing in his love and truth, of communing with him anywhere at any time, belongs to every man. Hence it is that every man chooses for himself whether or not he will take God into intimate partnership in his daily thoughts and affairs. Thousands of Christian men have demonstrated the practcal value of a close alliance with God, and of looking solely to him for guidance and wisdom.—Grenville Kleiser.

MIXING VALENTINES

"Hello, Harry!" said Pat. "What're you grinning about?"

"Oh, a nice little valentine my two best friends are going to send," replied Harry.

"Who're they sending it to?" asked Pat.

"To you," laughted Harry.

Pat puckered his brow and pulled out his lip and thought over all the little girls he knew.

"Who're the two friends?" he asked at last.

"Me and myself," laughed Harry.

"Aw, you!" exclaimed Pat. "I bet it's an ugly valentine."

"No—indeedy," was Harry's reply. "It isn't square and it isn't round and it's good to eat."

Of course Pat at once thought of candy hearts and a bright happy smile broadened his lips.

Come on over to my house and I'll let you work around my new radio set," he invited.

Both boys were very much interested in radios and had home made sets which they prized highly. Harry looked a little guilty when his friend made his generous offer.

"Say, Pat," he muttered, "don't be disappointed when you get my valentine. It isn't awfully grand, but I—"

"Aw, Harry," broke in Pat, "fellers our age are interested in motors and radios and thinks like that. I don't care if I don't get any valentine at all. It's a kid-stuff."

"Well, maybe," said Harry. "You know my big sister Polly. She's seventeen and sometimes she says she's only a kid and other times she's a grown-up person, see? Like when Mommer wants to go to a tea and tells Polly to knead up the dinner rolls and put the roast on the table, then she is young and might spoil the bread, but when Mr. Bradford comes around and asks for her, she says she's old enough to have a beau."

"Oh, it's all right to send a valentine to your girl, if you got one," said Pat with a scornful sniff.

"I hope it is," said Harry confidently, " 'cause Mommer kind of doesn't care to have Mr. Bradford coming around too much to see Polly. He's twenty and works for his father downtown somewhere and Mommer says he can't come more'n once a week or so because the first thing we know he'll be getting serious and wanting to marry Polly. Well, if you promise you'll keep your head shut, I'll tell you something."

"I promise," said Pat, yawning, as the subject bored him.

"Well, sir, here's where I may get into a lot of trouble," whispered Harry mysteriously "Mr. Bradford has asked me to do a favor for him.

Pat looked curious because curiosity was natural to him.

"He's got a valentine for Polly and he wants it to be the first one she opens on Valentine's Day," whispered Harry, "and he's going to give it to me this evening so I can slip it to her the first thing in the morning at breakfast."

"Well, you oughtn't to find that any trouble," said Pat.

"No, but Mommer may get sore at me for helping Mr. Bradford," said Harry. "She says he's too serious."

The two boys were now turning into Pat's yard and they soon forgot Polly and her beau.

But as it grew dark, Harry hastened home and near his house a man stopped him. It was Bill Bradford.

"Here, Harry," he murmured. "Remember now. And take this."

He tried to press a bright quarter into the boy's hand, but Harry stiffened.

"No thanks," he said, "Polly's my sister and if I didn't think you were good enough for her I wouldn't be taking your valentine to her."

"Ah!" cried Bill Bradford. "Cupid, the messenger of Love!"

Harry had seen the fat little cupids without any pants flying around on valentines and he blushed.

"All right, give me the quarter," he mumbled savagely.

Bill Bradford gave him the quarter and a small square package and the boy hurried away, trying to stuff the package into his sweater pocket and not succeeding.

When he got home, he found time to fix his own valentine, a pretty lace one for his teacher and a large flossy one for his mother and a comic for his sister and a tiny one for the little girl with long curls who gave him peppermints almost every day, and the one meant for his best pal, Pat.

The next morning he did not need to be called. Down he hustled and placed a neat square package at his sister's place at the table. Then he went to the back door and saw somebody standing outside. It was Pat leaving a valentine.

"Say, wait a minute," Harry called. "I got something for you."

He took Pat's gift and hurried upstairs, found Pat's valentine and gave it to him. Just then the rest of the family came down for breakfast.

"Oh, what's this?" Polly exclaimed, seeing the package at her place.

"It's from Mr. Bradford," said Harry, craning his neck.

"Open it right here," said his mother.

Polly eagerly opened the box. Inside was another box heart-shaped. She opened it and gave a little scream and dropped it.

"What is it?" everyone cried, even Sally, the family maid.

"I—I don't know but it looks dreadful!" gasped Polly.

Sally picked up the box and brought something out between her thumb and forefinger. It was dark-red and slimy and there was a feather stuck in it.

"Why," she exclaimed, "now ain't that cute? That's a chicken heart with a feather arrow through it as neat as can be. Now to think of Mr. Bradford sending you that!"

"Ugh!" cried Polly. "I think it's disgusting."

"It is disgusting," said her mother.

"He's got a nerve," said her father. "A raw chicken heart!" Maybe he means he's chicken-hearted."

Harry had been staring like an owl, and suddenly he sprang and took the chicken heart from Sally.

"There's been a mistake," he exclaimed, and grabbing the box he rushed out of the house.

Pat lived nearby and Harry rushed to his home, yelling "Pat!" at every step. Pat greeted him at the door, holding in his hand a half-eaten chocolate heart.

"Yummy!" he exclaimed. "Gee, this is the grandest valentine I ever got, Harry. You oughtn't to have done it, it's awful good and with all that lace and trimmings it must have cost a heap. But why did you put in a bracelet? I ain't a girl, so I gave it to my sister."

Harry thrust the chicken heart into his friend's hand as he grabbed the half-eaten candy from him. Then he explained what had happened,—he had switched valentines by mistake. Pat's sister, Grace, came up so they took the bracelet away from her.

"But it's cute!" cried the little girl. "I want it. You spin that little bangle and if you look hard you can see the letters on it say 'I LOVE YOU'."

"Aw boloney!" cried her brother snatching it away and handing it to Harry. "Take it. I'd ruther have yours. It's sure cute. Shows the ventricles and every thing. I'll have to show it to Teacher."

A race home and Harry laid the half-eaten heart and bracelet on his sister's place.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself," grumbled Polly.

"I'm sorry," said Harry, "that is, I didn't mean to do it, but I don't care, he called me a Kewpie or something."

"Harry's never had a sweetheart, never mind him," said his father.

"Sure, I got a sweetheart," said Harry, plumping himself on his mother's lap. "And she's the best one in the world." And his arms went around her neck.—Selected.

CHILDISH, OR CHILDLIKE?

In a letter received from a missionary in India occur these words: "To be childish is a token of decay, but to be childlike is a Divine principle which leads us ever deeper in the wonder-land of Divine Grace."

A second reading of that sentence, relating it to one's own life, is well worthwhile.

Childishness manifests itself in petulance, in selfishness, in lack of self-control, in foolish acts and in reckless disregard of the things of others. Childishness insists on having its own way even when that way is harmful. Childishness thinks only of its own desires. Childishness pouts when resistance is offered to the carrying into effect of its desires and pleasures. Childishness shows no control at any time.

One expects these things in a little child. We excuse them on the ground of their inexperience and lack of proper training. Bad as they are, we hope and expect that they will disappear later on. But when they manifest themselves in adult years, in those who should know and show better things, it is the most charitable construction that we can put on it when we say it "is a token of decay."

But to be childlike is different. One of the most charactehistic things of a child is a sense of wonder. Everything new—and everything is new to them at some time—causes the most delightful surprise. Every day brings some new unveiling as the bud of childhood opens into the flower of maturity.

Is it a sign of weakness then in Christians today that we have lost our sense of wonder? We have seen so many things happen—in our own life time, the telephone, the electric car, the electric light, the radio, the automobile, the flying machine, and others—that we take things rather as a matter of course.

There are wonderful things occurring though, particularly in the spiritual realm. The radio is not to be compared in wonderfulness to the answer to prayer; by radio the voice can be heard around the world in a fraction of a escond; but "before they call I will answer, and while they are yet speaking I will hear."

There is nothing in the material world as wonderful as the change that takes place in a life when Jesus Christ comes in and takes possession. Words have never yet been found that will give any adequate conception of the wonderful love of Christ. And since His name shall be called "Wonderful," there are riches of grace in Christ Jesus for you and for me that we have never yet even begun to explore.

Be childlike enough to find some new revelation of Him every day as He reveals Himself to the opening bud of your spirit until it blossoms into the flower of maturity, and to open your eyes in amazement at the new and beautiful things He will show us.—Selected.

STANDARD LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOLS IN THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

With the close of the Standard Leadership Training School at Asheville last week the North Carolina Council of Religious Education completed its fourth successful school to be held in the conference recently. Previously one had been conducted in each of the following places: Asheboro, Greensboro and Graham.

We found an enthusiastic group at the Asheville M. P. church. Some came in from Weaverville and a number from the M. E. church. I was favorably impressed with the possibilities of the Methodist Protestant constituency in the Western portion of the conference. With the presence of Brother Pierce and the young minister, Brother Thompson, on the Weaverville and Democrat work plus the fine work of Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Paschall in the Asheville church the work in "The Land of the Sky" should move forward.

To the Eastern part of the conference, Dr. T. M. Johnson, Rev. J. Clyde Auman and their associates are planning one of the best Leadership Schools yet held. Their plans are going forward with much zeal and endeavor. The writer and Rev. Lawrence Little will co-operate in the pre-registration campaign and assist in other phases of the project. The place is Aurelian Springs high schools and the date is May 26-30. A rally in the interest of the school will be held on the fourth Sunday.

Yours for a successful school,

F. L. Gibbs.

P. S.—Write Rev. J. Clyde Auman for further information.

CLOSELY SCRUTINIZE YOUR BELIEFS

Your beliefs largely govern you, whether they are true or not. An erroneous belief may lead you into most disastrous results. The more tenaciously you hold to false beliefs the more injurious will be their destructive influence in your life. Many intelligent men frankly acknowledge that they do not want the false and untrue, but are unwilling to make the effort to understand and apply the truth. Closely scrutinize your beliefs, and be eager to strengthen them where they are weak and to change them where they are wrong. Truth is the only basis upon which to found beliefs that will serve you in all the varied experiences of life. Truth is the solid rock upon which to build a life of happiness.—Grenville Kleiser.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

THE NECESSITY OF THE HERALD CAMPAIGN

The necessity of the Herald Campaign is apparent when we consider the figures given below, which are furnished me by the editor.

At the present rate of circulation, approximately 1,500 copies, per subscription per year cost, $2.57. The subscription price of $2.00 a year is all absorbed in paying the printing and postage bills. Even when this is done there is a deficit at the rate of $862.00 per year on these two items alone. Since the Board of Education has not been able to come to his rescue, for nearly a year now, our venerable editor has personally had to carry this deficit. He has done this in spite of the fact that he is receiving no financial remuneration for his services as editor. If Dr. McCulloch is willing to make this sacrifice in order that we may have a conference organ, (the only way by which we can keep the conference program, the needs of the College, the Children's Home, the women's work, our young peoples' program, and other church enterprises, before our people) surely we pastors, Secretaries of Literature, Herald Agents, and church members can afford to sacrifice a little time, and energy, and money, if need be, in order to put this campaign over in the allotted time.

The goal in this campaign during May and June is for 1,600 new and renewal subscriptions, which will give the paper a total circulation of 3,000. The larger the circulation the less the cost per subscription for printing. The returns from three thousand paid subscriptions will enable the editor to pay all bills and have $1,275 for his services. Can we envy him that reward? Can we deny it to him? Isn't he worth that much to our Zion in North Carolina through the columns of this paper? Let's show it to him, therefore, by relieving him of this financial strain caused by the lack of salary, and by carrying the deficit which belongs to us. Pastors, Secretaries of Literature, Herald Agents, for his sake, let's press the campaign NOW in our local church. Church people and friends, look up the above-named persons in your church, or send direct to Dr. McCulloch. Pay up your back subscriptions, renew NOW, though your subscription does not expire for six months, or subscribe—all these will mean the same thing to him—money.

N. M. HARRISON.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

A STRANGE PLATFORM

In Lumberton, N. C., "Bing" Frank Wishart thus announced his candidacy for sheriff of Robeson County: "I hereby announce myself for sheriff of Robeson County, subject to the Democratic primary in June. My platform will be:

"I shall not go out to make any arrests in bad weather, when it's raining or cold and disagreeable.

"I will not make a raid on any man's whiskey still, or search a bootlegger's premises without first notifying them 48 hours in advance.

"I am in favor of disposing of all captured whiskey as follows: Meeting the requirements of the sheriff and his deputies, the remainder to be turned over to the aged and infirm at the county home.

"The only reason I am running for sheriff is the salary.

"If I am defeated in the June primary, I promise to run on an independent ticket.

"Your vote and help will be appreciated, and I promise to carry out the platform to the 'letter.'"

MAY 25: HOW MISSIONARIES ADVANCE WORLD PEACE

Isa. 52:7-10

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—By preaching God's Fatherhood. Acts 17:28.

Tuesday—Man's Brotherhood. Matt. 23:8.

Wednesday—By teaching service. Rom. 15:1-4.

Thursday—By urging the Golden Rule. Matt. 7:12.

Friday—By proclaiming God's love. I John 3:14-18.

Saturday—By urging justice. Deut. 24: 17, 18.

To the Leader

There is a dramatization called, "They Just Won't Talk," which has been suggested for use at this meeting. This was written by Mary Katherine Reely and may be secured from Miss E. Estelle Downing, Michigan State Normal College, Ypsilanti, Michigan. If you cannot use this use something on the order of your usual program; however, use the play if possible for it will aid in giving variety to your programs.

Try to find out as much about the various fields of mission work as you can. Write to the Mission Boards of your church for this information. Let one person tell about one country, giving full accounts of the work being done in that place. If your church is especially interested in some particular missionary let someone give a brief resume of his life and the work accomplished.

If you cannot use the play—for the leader's introduction have him speak briefly as to the way we have hitherto erected memorials to our war heroes but seldom do we find our missionaries recognized in any such fashion.

Hymns

"Since Jesus Came Into My Heart," "Where He Leads I Will Follow," "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," "Faith of Our Fathers," "I Love to Tell the Story," "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," and "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun."

Answer These

1. How is the missionary a good-will ambassador?
2. Is Christ the one hope of the world? Why?
3. How much individual responsibility do we have regarding the lost world?
4. How can we help to advance good will among the nations?
5. What is Christ's plan for the redemption of the world and in what way are we vitally connected?
6. Name some of the most important hindrances to the mission work of today?
7. What do you think to be the best criteria for a missionary?

David Livingstone

To lift the somber fringes of the night,
To open lands long darkened to the Light,
To heal grim wounds, to give the blind new slight,
Right mightily wrought he.
Forth to the fight he fared,
High things and great he dared;
He thought of all men but himself,
Himself he never spared.
He greatly loved—
He greatly loved—
And died right mightily.

He passed like light across the darkened land,
And, dying, left behind him this command:
"The open door is open! So let it ever stand."
Full mightily wrought he.
—John Oxenham.

Victorious Warriors

An endless line of splendor,
These troops with heaven for home!
With creed they go from Scotland,
With incense go from Rome.
These in the name of Jesus
Against the dark gods stand:
They gird the earth with valor,
They heed the King's command.

Onward the line advances,
Shaking the hills with power,
Swaying the hidden demons,
The lions that devour.
No blood shed in their wrestling,
But souls, new born, arise;
The nations growing kinder,
The child-heart growing wiser.

What is the final ending?
The issue, can we know?
Will Christ outlive Mohammed?
Will Kali's altars go?
This is our faith tremendous—
Our wild hope who shall scorn?
That in the name of Jesus
The world shall be reborn.
—Vachel Lindsay.

CONTRIBUTIONS DESIRED TOWARDS THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A HOME FOR THE AGED AND INFIRM DEAF

"To be deaf is not a great calamity, but not to be able to get around it is," said one brilliant deaf man. The deaf in general are of his opinion. One great hardship they realize is to lose the ability to hear and take part in the affairs of every-day life.

Out of school life the deaf have to dive into a world full of cold-blooded business antagonisms. They have to bear all heartaches and bitter disappointments. In their vigorous youth and with the right training obtained they struggle well. Many others lose their jobs because of their handicap at the invasion of some sort of machinery.

Very few of the deaf are born with a silver spoon in their mouths. Not many of them earn money sufficient to lay aside for old age. When at 40 years of age—the dead line in this busy world—the deaf are hard hit. Soon their savings begin going away. Then more and more hardship comes on them. And they grow old losing their relatives and friends who might have taken care of them. Finally they are placed in the county home. They don't feel at home among the inmates with communication cut off from their fellow-deaf. They feel crushed by loneliness.

Approximately there is about one deaf inmate to each county home. The State cannot afford to spend so much money to have all the deaf inmates transferred to one central house so as to bring themselves to something like normalcy.

By reason of the facts mentioned above, the deaf of the South organized what is called the Dixie Association of the Deaf, one of its aims being the foundation of a home for the aged and infirm deaf.

At the second meeting of this association (now incorporated) the members contributed over one thousand dollars towards the establishment of the home. But it will take a considerable sum to erect such a home and afterward to run it.

The Home Fund Committee of the said association has started activity. This committee is composed of one deaf person to each of the Southern States, to be known as State Chairman of the Home Fund Committee. The State Chairman will be grateful to have the people from his state to send him contributions to make the home a reality. The state chairman will publish in all newspapers in his state a list of names of contributions, with a statement that he will send the amount to Mr. Herbert R. Smoak, of Union, S. C., the General Chairman of the committee and bonded treasurer of the Dixie Association of the Deaf, who is under bond to the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co., of Baltimore, Md.

During their years of activity these aged deaf have contributed much, both physically and financially to their home folks, to their home town civic clubs, churches, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Salvation Army, Red Cross work, and others. So it is the urgent desire of the Dixie Association of the Deaf that the public will look on the work the said committee is doing, NOT AS CHARITY, but just a good and deserving work.

The activity of the committee will be over three weeks before the next convention at Knoxville, Tenn., on July 2-3-4-5 to decide on the location of the home.

Dixie Association of the Deaf,
Raleigh, N. C.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

DYNAMIC PROGRESS

(Address of Mrs. Hammer, Branch President at Branch Meeting)

"Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press forward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Phil. 3:13-14.

The achievements of the years have been marked by the same earnest and persistent efforts which were characterized in the minds and hearts of the small group of our women in Pittsburgh in 1879 when they heard the story by Miss Guthrie of the two little girls who found no room in a Japanese Mission. The dynamic impulses which prompted them to press forward have been reiterated by our women this year as they have very seriously and conscientiously fallen in line with the new program of the church. As we study the history of the great movements of the mighty achievements of the past, we find that only those who have reached forward to the things which are before, and pressed toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, are those whose efforts have been crowned with success. We are living in the midst of a great shaking. The world is reeling and rocking as if in the throes of a mighty earthquake. There are domestic, social, moral and religious upheavals. The air is filled with questionings. The most fundamental themes, supposed to have long since been established, vital doctrines, which the fathers cherished and held sacred, are being commonly criticized even in the Christian pulpit and the religious press. In Hebrews we find the words, "Yet once more I shake," are followed by the assurance that behind and above it all is God's plan: "Signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain." What the church needs in this conflict is not more machinery, but more power—dynamic power to drive the machinery we already have.

Dynamic Faith

In this busy age in which we are living there are many things that tend to hinder that faith in God that brings power to his servants. Are we steadfast in our belief in Christ? Do we believe in the lessons He taught the disciples by the sea of alillee? Have we the faith of the afflicted man who sat by the pool of Bethesda waiting to be put in the troubled waters? And that of the blind man at the pool of Siloam that Sabbath morning, after having been cured of his blindness, when the Pharisess and people wondering at the miracle and angry that he had been healed on the Sabbath Day said, "One thing I know, whereas I was blind, now I see." As we have faced the problem of reorganization following the merged plan outlined by the Mission Board of our church, and have striven to meet the financial problems of the college, Children's Home, Bethel Home and the general budget of our church the past year we have heard the admonition, "Take up your cross and follow me." This accounts for the splendid reports which will be given by our various secretaries.

Dynamic Service Through Prayer

There are limits to the opportunities and possibilities of all methods of work save one. The only limitless opportunity is prayer. He who has learned to pray knows no limitations of geography; he can cross oceans and climb mountains. He knows no limitations of poverty; any needed blessing is his. He overcomes the limitations of weakness; his strength is made the strength of ten and single handed he puts a thousand to flight. Prayer has sent out missionaries and supported them. Prayer has built mission stations and equipped hospitals. Prayer has opened closed doors and given utterance into the hearts of men. The only limit placed on what may be accomplished through prayer is the limit of our faith. "According to thy faith be it unto thee" is not the obsolete measure of the early church but the measure and limitation of what we now accomplish through prayer. "If you cannot do anything else," we say comfortingly to the inefficient worker who pleads for the lack of time and lack of every other qualification, "you can pray," as if prayer required no time nor any other qualification, as if prayers were a sort of last extremity to be resorted to "if you cannot do anything else." Prayer is not a last extremity, but a first necessity. It requires time and costs more than those people are willing to pay. "I would rather teach one man how to pray than teach ten men how to preach," said a great teacher of theology. Preaching reaches the heart of men, but prayer reaches the heart of God also.

"I know not by what methods rare,
But this I know, God answers prayer.
I know that he has given his word
Which tells me prayer is always heard,
And will be answered soon or late,
And so I pray and calmly wait.
I know not if the blessing sought
Will come in just the way I thought.
But leave my prayers with Him alone
Whose will is wiser than my own,
Assured that he will grant my quest
Or send some answer far more blest!"

Dynamic Training for Youth

It does not matter much about the older women who love the work enough to do it under almost any form of organization. Their place and contribution are less important than that of our new generation who must assume some share in the world task, if it is to be completed and if they are to be complete Christians. Today as never before has the church and school system felt the need of widening their programs for the development of the child, and the world has been slow to heed the teachings of Jesus with regard to children. Only within our own memory have there been great wide-spread movements for the conservation of childhood. The imperative necessity of providing for the best and fullest development of all children was not realized until very recently. In our day the health, food, education and religious training of children have been given careful consideration. Now the doctrine of the place of the child in the affairs of the world is quite familiar to all. Dangers of neglected childhood have been brought to the attention of the leaders in almost every country of the world and child welfare organizations of various types have been called into being. In our own church the Young People's Conferences, and the training classes for Christian Education and Sunday Schools are doing effective work in training young people for service. Ellen Key called the nineteenth century "The Century of the Child," indicating that at least the child had come to occupy its proper place in the thinking and the planning of the world mind. Jesus was at least two thousand years ahead of the thought of men in his vision of childhood. He taught that the child is the most important factor in the Kingdom of God. If any one point of our missionary work needs extra attention it is this, and I appeal to each of you to use "dynamic" training in this department.

THE BRIDGE BUILDER

An old man going a lone highway,
Came at the ev'ning, cold and gray,
To a chasm vast and deep and wide.
The old man crossed in the twilight dim—
The sullen stream had no fear for him;
But he turned when safe on the other side
And built a bridge to span the tide.

"Old man," said a fellow-pilgrim near,
"You are wasting your strength with building here.
Your journey will end with the ending day.
You never again will pass this way;
You've crossed the chasm deep and wide,
Why build you this bridge at evening tide?"

The builder lifted his old gray head—
"Good friend, in the path I have come," he said,
"There followeth after me today
A youth whose feet must pass this way.
This chsam that has been as naught to me,
To that fair-haired youth may a pitfall be;
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim—
Good friend, I am building this bridge for him!"

Dynamic Love

The dynamic that is to save the world is the love of Christ. Christianity is not an industrial or economic enthusiasm, its watchword is "give all you can." It is a passionate devotion of the Saviour of the World. When that sort of devotion takes hold of us, every other question will have been solved. The reason why Christian people do not give as they should and do not live as they should is their low state of spiritual vitality. The whole Christian world needs to rediscover Pentecostal power. Jesus did not say to Peter, "Will you confess me," "Will you preach me" or "Do you believe in me," but he did say, "Do you love me." This is the dynamic that is to save the world, that is to extend the work in our homeland and in the foreign fields, to maintain our educational institutions and all benevolences. Let the dynamic love of Christ be the flame of faith, prayer, training of our young people, love, service, and evangelism, and set it aglow as a torch that lights our pathway on our forward march of progress, as we press to the goal of a greater and broader service.

REPORT OF SECRETARY OF MISSIONARY EDUCATION

(Read at Branch Meeting)

Madam Chairman and members of the North Carolina Branch:

Our Achievements

The reports for this department of our work, while not entirely satisfactory, are most encouraging. Because of a lack of a complete list of the auxiliary secretaries, I could not get the report blanks to all the auxiliaries. The majority of these auxiliaries reporting use of the Study Book, the Question Box, and once a month have a missionary meeting in the Christian Endeavor societies. Some missionary instruction is also given in the departments of the Sunday School, and one—State Street, Lexington—had a school of missions with a membership of ten. A few have organized mission clubs among the children, and some have the mission work correlated with Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, and Junior Church.

It is gratifying to know that the auxiliaries are pleased with the new order of things, and that real, earnest, concentrated effort has been exerted this year in getting our Women's Work before every woman of the North Carolina Conference. The task of organizing has been so great that the greater part of our time has been centered on that, so we are looking forward to next year when we will have become so accustomed to the new routine that we may branch out into other interests.

Our Needs

1. We need badly more subscribers to the "Missionary Record," so the first recommendation is that a campaign be launched in every auxiliary in the state for ths splendid magazine—our only source of direct information concerning our own work. We also need more subscribers to our church papers, the "Christian Herald," "Missionary Review of the World," "C. E. World" and "Everyland" for the boys and girls. With the wealth of material gleaned from these magazines, interesting and helpful programs may be built for every occasion.

2. That we continue to use the missionary page in the "Herald," and keep the editor supplied with material for this page.

3. Some auxiliaries have reported that they do not use the Study Book because they have no one capable of reviewing it. In view of this situation, we would suggest that they set aside one afternoon for this special work and invite some competent person outside their own membership to review the book for them. Perhaps some officer in the Branch would volunteer their services in this way.

4. Since the Thank Offering is a public service and affords one of the few opportunities to present the Women's Work to the men of the church and the public in general, we would urge that a great deal of prayerful time and thought be given to the preparation of the program for this service, in order that it may be made more effective and convincing, as well as helpful in a financial way.

5. That a School of Missions, as suggested on the report blank, be held in every auxiliary, or at least in every community, during the year.

6. That we urge the use of the programs for young people and children outlined by our own Mrs. Maier and appearing in the "Missionary Record" each month.

Our Hopes

Missionary education, however, should not include missionary instruction only, but should include those elements which stir us as individuals to desire to share the gospel of Jesus Christ with others. We do not need to sit before a class in Mission Study to give them missionary education. The missionary spirit is the spirit of Brotherhood, reaching out to save where the lost is found, and reaching furthest to where the need is greatest.

An old school master was once asked where in his time table did he teach religion. He answered, "We teach it all daylong. We teach it in arithmetic, by accuracy. We teach it in language, by learning to say what we mean,—yea, yea and nay, nay. We teach it in history, by humanity. We teach it in geography, by breadth of mind. We teach it in handicraft, by thoroughness. We teach it in astronomy, by reverence. We teach it on the playground, by fair play. We teach it by kindness to animals, by courtesy to servants, by good manners to one another, and by truthfulness in all things. We teach it by showing the children that we, their elders, are their friends and not their enemies."

In our new order we are trying to lay the foundations that will implant in the hearts of our boys and girls a desire to be accurate, thorough, reverent, fair in play, kind, courteous and truthful. What better opportunity do we have for this training than in our Vacation Church Schools? It is the one time in the year when we have our young people and children for continuous and concentrated work. This year the Board of Christian Education in North Carolina—formerly the Board of Young People's Work—is employing two young women for this work. They will be used where needed most. More work can be accomplished, more missionary instruction given, and more opportunities for definite and guided activity in these two or three weeks than during the rest of the year.

Three Leadership Training Schools have already been held this year, one in Asheboro, one in Graham and one in Greensboro, with a total attendance record of about 200. In July our Leadership Training School will be held at the college. Send your young people for this training. When the basic foundations for missionary education are deeply rooted in the hearts of our people, young and old, in North Carolina, our mission work will not be a problem but a joy.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD.

—Greensboro has 53,422 people.

—High Point by the new census has 36,708 inhabitants.

—Since the Senate refused Judge Parker, the President has proposed Owen Roberts, of Philadelphia, for the Supreme Court.

—Rocky Mount has two undertaking establishments, one known as Gay's Funeral Parlor, the other, Pleasant's Funeral Parlor.

—Bro. Tom Waugh, superintendent of Calvary Sunday school, has in his own home a very new member of the cradle roll department.

—It would be hard to conceive a better Mothers' Day sermon than that preached by Dr. S. K. Spahr in Calvary church last Sunday morning.

—Insufficiently cooked pork may be a very harmful article of diet. In a Guilford county family five persons were sick from a mysterious cause and one of them died. Others continue ill after months of suffering. It has now been decided that the cause was infected pork. Farmers are warned against feeding slaughter-house offal to hogs. All persons are warned against eating pork that has not been well cooked. The disease, trichianisis, if not fatal, may run on for years before it is cured.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Bethesda, Halifax Charge.—Yesterday being Mothers' Day, Mr. Fogleman gave us a sermon along that line, using Samuel and Hannah as a basis for his remarks. There was a good congregation present, and we were glad to have with us Misses Mary and Harriet Wills, of Greensboro, who are almost lifelong members of this, their old-home church. Many friends were glad to see, too, Mr. W. J. Boyd, who formerly lived among us.

Mr. Fogleman has been giving us some very good sermons—one especially notable receiving such comment as: "One of the best I ever heard," etc. With his power of analysis, he gets a great deal out of a seemingly small text, and he has the words to express himself well and forcefully. The high school principal, some miles away, was present on one occasion and remarked: "That's a good sermon; I'm coming again."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Fogleman are nice friendly people and seem to be much liked in this community.

The Ladies' Aid is still active, though the membership is small.

Some stir was occasioned at church yesterday when a message came for Mr. J. R Taylor, Sunday school superintendent, that his house had been entered and robbed. Investigation showed the loss to be small, however; and blood-hounds, quickly secured, trailed to a nearby negro house. Two men there are under suspicion, but more evidence is needed for an arrest.

Mrs. M. J. Hunter, one of the oldest members of this church, has just returned here for the summer, after spending some months with her people in Wilmington.

Miss Mary Hunter, who works in Chapel Hill, has come to be with her for a while.

Miss Lelia Partin, of Williamsburg, Va., has just left after an extended visit to her aunt here, Mrs. N. M. Harrison. She was formerly a member and worker in the church here.

REPORTER.

Why Not Charge.—Memorial services were held at Fairgrove church the first Sunday in May. A good attendance was noted, and the program was interesting and helpful throughout. Visitors from Asheboro, High Point Lexington, and elsewhere attended the service.

Special Mothers' Day services were held at Love Joy Mother's Day. A big crowd attended. The Ladies' Aid at Fairgrove gave a Mother's Day program at night. The writer was not present, but an interesting program had been prepared.

On next Sunday Dr. S. W. Taylor will preach at the following churches: Flag Springs, 11 a. m.; New Hope, 2:30 p. m.; Seagrove, 8 p. m.

At Seagrove Sunday night our revival will begin. Rev. Edward Suits, our helper, will be with us beginning Monday night, and will stay through the fourth Sunday.

Two of our girls graduated from Seagrove High School last week, Miss Euna Walker, of Seagrove, and Miss Genevieve Cox, of Flag Springs.

There is right much sickness over the charge. Uncle Jack Presnell is confined to his bed with heart trouble.

The general condition of the charge is fairly encouraging.

WM. H. NEESE.

Moriah Church.—Our work is moving along nicely. Very little has been said through the Herald concerning this work, but that's no indication we have not been busy. There is a marked increase in our church attendance during the past few Sundays. The Easter program was rendered by the young people, which conveyed beautiful thought of the resurrection of our Lord. Last Sunday being Mother's Day, a special program was arranged which was very fitting for the occasion. At the beginning of the service several white-clad children trooped in from the vestry. Over their shoulders were white floral ribbons with neat white baskets of flowers attached. After a hymn and prayer the children distributed their flowers among the mothers. The congregation was unusually large. The mothers numbered about thirty.

Next Sunday there will be a surprise awaiting the fathers. Fathers, don't miss this service.

"Dollar a member" for High Point College has been pledged in full; $105 has been sent in and a special effort is being made to raise the balance by June 1. Then the Herald campaign set for May and June. This must be attended to promptly. A committee was appointed last fall to canvass the field for subscriptions, but the results were not what we had hoped for. However, another committee will be appointed in the near future with the writer as chairman. I am strongly convinced that the pastor is the key man for this place, and that if he will get behind this drive and stay there he can put it across. We hope to secure our quota during the next ten days.

M. P. CHAMBLISS.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—We are planning to have Children's Day service on the second Sunday evening in June. We are expecting to present the pageant, "Onward and Upward." Mrs. E. T. Ellington, Mrs. W. E. Knight, Mrs. W. H. Howington, Miss Velma Hardy and the writer were appointed to prepare the program.

Mother's Day was observed in our regular evening service Sunday. The pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, preached a helpful sermon on the subpect of "Mother." Miss Fannie Melton sang a solo, "My Mother," very impressively. The choir sang "Mothers' Prayers Have Followed Me."

We are expecting F. L. Gibbs to be with us on the fourth Sunday morning this month. Some of our people are planning to attend the "Leadership Training School" at Aurelian Springs beginning on May 26.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet Tuesday afternoon at the parsonage with Rev. and Mrs. Fogleman. We hope to have a large crowd present.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Asheboro.—In my letter yesterday I failed to mention one of the important things taking place recently. On last Friday night Miss Esther Ross' class of young women gave a banquet in honor of their mothers. Fifty-four mothers and daughters, and pastor and his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Ross being included sat down to the banquet table. This being near Mother's Day the program centered around that idea. It was certainly an occasion long to be remembered and will do a great deal of good. Someone in commenting on our church recently said, "It seems like one big family."

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Laurel Hill.—The memorial service was held Sunday, May 11. A large number of friends and relatives from far and near gathered together to pay respect to their deceased ones. The cemetery was decorated between Sunday school and the preaching hour. It was beautiful, as it had been covered in white sand a few days ago. Then when the mounds were covered in flowers it was more beautiful.

At 11 o'clock our good pastor delivered a wonderful sermon. Mr. Morgan began his sermon by giving the people a period to express themselves or tell if they appreciated their father and mother, either deceased or living. The short talks were greatly enjoyed. Especially did the old people enjoy having a chance to tell about their good father and mother that had gone to a better land a long time ago.

Our Sunday school is getting along fine. We are proud to say that our attendance keeps improving.

We will have our preaching service next third Sunday night, as usual.

On next preaching day, which will be the next second Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, the communion service will be held at Laurel Hill.

The second quarterly conference of the Fallston charge will be held at Friendship church Saturday, May 12. There will be preaching at 11 o'clock and conference will be held in the afternoon.

Rev. J. M. Morgan was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Willis Sunday, May 11.

We were indeed glad to have so many of our distant members present with us and to worship with us Sunday. We want them to come each time they can.

LOIS WILLIS, Reporter.

State Street, Lexington.—The services Sunday morning were given over to the observation of Mother's Day. The address at the 11 o'clock hour was a beautiful and touching tribute to Christian motherhood. Special music at all the services added to the inspiration of the worship.

The evening service was one of the finest our pastor has conducted and was a tribute to Christian fatherhood.

Our young people are doing good work in the C. E. Society, and, indeed, all branches of the work are alive and moving forward.

We are especially pleased with the growth and improvement of the choir. Many of our friends come in often and help with both vocal and instrumental music. We are always grateful to them.

REPORTER.

Roberta.—This community has just passed through a few days of very unusual and varied experiences, among which we will mention three weddings, two funerals in one day at our church, two deaths near the same hour, both of which were caused by accident, one sudden and the other following the accident a few days later. The long-wished-for and refreshing showers that watered the parching fields after three weeks of hot, dry weather; and finally the Mother's Day service at the church Sunday which was a very precious occasion and greatly enjoyed by a large congregation.

The weddings were as follows: Miss Phebe Whitley and Mr. Graham Black, Miss Margaret Cochran and Mr. Glenn Furr, and Miss Virginia Cochran and Mr. Lewis Whitley, all of Roberta, except Mr. Black. These are fine and promising young people of good parentage, and we wish for them a long, happy, and useful career. Space will not allow further remarks.

Mr. Andrew Clay, a son of W. M. Clay, aged 18 years, after a day of hard plowing, unhitched his mule to go home. Soon after mounting, the mule became frightened and the young man was hurled from its back. His foot in the struggle became fastened in a loop in the chain, and he was dragged through stumpy ground and through woods for more than a mile. With clothes nearly all torn from his body, mangled and bleeding, and his head horribly crushed, his lifeless form was lifted by tender hands, some of which looked on helpless, while others ran after in the vain hope that they might do something to avoid the horrible tragedy. The effort that he seemed to be making to please God and the promise that his interest in a devoted life of righteousness afforded has caused much grief over his departure. But we are not to know all mysteries, and we therefore humbly submit to the will of Him who doeth all things well. His father, two sisters, a stepmother and several other near relatives are left to mourn their loss.

Mrs. Lovinie Garman was born December 20, 1844; 85 years, four months and 17 days was the span of her life. Being 16 years of age when the first guns of the Civil War were fired, and 20 years of age when it closed, she lived through times of much trouble and hardships. She was the mother of eight children, most of whom were very young at the death of her husband, nearly 50 years ago. She took the place of a father in the field, and of a mother in the home, struggling against odds; she was often toiling over her tasks till late at night at the old spinning wheel to provide for her family. She gave her heart to God while young, and her rich Christian experience was a stay to her children who rose up to bless and comfort her in her declining years. It was a source of inspiration to chat with her and hear her speak of God's goodness to her in her struggles, and the glorious hope that throbbed in her bosom when she would soon lay aside her feeble body and go to live with her loved ones "over there." Five living children, 45 grandchildren, 35 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild, three brothers, with a host of other relatives and friends, mourn her departure. Her death was the result of a fell from a high porch. Being almost blind, she seemed to think she was entering the door to her room, and stepped off the porch, sustaining injuries which were fatal. This was door all right, but it was the door from labor to reward, from earthly confinement to enternal liberty, from the valley of sorrow to the Mount of everlasting joy. A very godly woman said of her: "She was one of the best women I have ever met."

Each of the above was laid to rest in our church cemetery in the presence of a large concourse of people, and beneath a bank of lovely flowers. Our heart's sympathies go out to the bereaved and grief-stricken homes of each of the deceased.

ROBERT SHORT.

First Church, High Point.—We regret very much to announce the death on Friday last of a member of the Children's Home family, Master Elvin Coble, aged seven years. While at school at Jamestown last Tuesday, he fell from the porch on a cement floor in the basement, and received a severe injury to the head and bruises on different parts of the body. He was taken at once to High Point Hospital, and given medical treatment by Dr. J. T. Burrus. He seemed better and the next day was taken to the Home, but pneumonia set in, followed by meningitis, and he was again removed to the Hospital, where he died on Friday. The little fellow had just finished the first grade at Jamestown school, having been promoted. He was a bright and lovable boy, and is survived by his mother, two sisters and four brothers, two of which, Hebron Coble and Millard Coble, are members of the Home family. Funeral services were conducted at the Home on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. R. I. Farmer, and the little body was interred at Mount Zion church near Liberty, N. C., where final services were conducted by Dr. J. D. Williams. The passing of this dear, sweet young boy, so full of promise and so beloved by his playmates, has cast a gloom of sadness over the large family circle at the Home.

The church school report for Sunday, May 4th, is as follows: Attendance, 387; offering, $27.37.

Mother's Day was appropriately observed last Sunday, when the pulpit was beautifully decorated with large white peonies and roses, symbolic of the purity and sanctity of mother love. This annual custom, and a most beautiful one which was originated by Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, 23 years ago in honor of her own mother, and Mr. Frank E. Hering, of South Bend, Ind., who was awarded a medal by the American War Mothers in recognition of being the man who originated the idea of observing one day annually as Mother's Day. It is agreed that the honor belongs to both of them. The minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered a very appropriate and impressively tender message on "The Faith of Mothers," the text being taken from II Timothy 1:5, "When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother, Lois, and thy mother, Eunice; and I am persuaded that is in thee also." He said in part: "It is a saying of a Jewish rabbi: 'God could not be everywhere, so He made mothers.' How can I speak tenderly enough of your mother and mine? There is no word in the Anglo-Saxon language so sweet and holy and associated with God's comforting love as that of mother. Whether she lives in a palace or hovel, whether she is dressed in lustrous silks and satins or clothed in humble garb, whether her hands are gnarled, wrinkled, and calloused with toil or white and soft and carefully cared for, she is a beauteous being set apart in the heart of man. She may be weary, ill, or even dying, yet she has time for comfort and strength for her sons and daughters. No child has a fair chance in life who has no religious training. If the mothers of men did not give more care and thought to the spiritual life of their children than the average father, their condition would be extremely sad. I wonder if heredity is given the proper place in life that it should have. As is the mother, so is the child. We are today what we are on account of the generations before us. The law of transmission is heredity. Corn produces corn, and the rosebush a rose. I want to say in the fear of God that in the physical and moral life children inherit the traits of character of their parents just as they do their features, stature, and figures. Can a man sow his wild oats and reap a good harvest? Nature keeps a true account. 'Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.' Thank God for heredity! If one sows the seeds of sobriety, industry, frugality, honesty, sincerity, and purity in youth, he will reap a rich harvest of honor and esteem form his fellows, self-respect, and a competence for old age. Chance environment helps to form character. I have seen fathers and mothers neglect the spiritual life of their sons and daughters so that they may move in an exclusive social set which dances, drinks, and gambles, and they too often reap a whirlwind of shame, regret, and dishonor. The measure of a mother's influence is as boundless as eternity itself. Abraham Lincoln said in effect: 'All that I am or ever hope to be, I owe to my angel mother.' At this service the Mother's Day Doxology was sung by the congregation:

"Praise God for Mother, Home, and Love;
Prais Him for Bible from above;
Praise Him for Church and Country dear;
Praise Him for Chirst throughout the year."

Florence Nightingale Day was observed at the Vesper service at at 5 p. m. Sunday, and nurses of the city and surrounding vicinity were special guests. The minister brought a timely message on "Devotion in Full Measure." Mrs. J. H. Allred sang "Come Ye Blessed" with fine effect.

The Woman's Auxiliary met in monthly session Monday afternoon in the Assembly room of the church, with Mrs. S. S. Coe in the chair. chair. Plans were formulated for a fried chicken supper next Friday evening from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock. Only those holding tickets will be served. Flower plants will also be on sale.

The topic for the weekly C. E. Society on Monday evening at 8 o'clock will be "Developing Good Will Through the Home," and will be discussed by Miss Marjorie Welborn as leader.

The meeting of the Board of Trustees of High Point College scheduled for last Wednesday t oconsider the election of a president to succeed Dr. R. M. Andrews, who has resigned, was postponed until next Wednesday. The fact that the charter calls for a ten-day notice of such a meeting was discovered, thereby causing this delay. There is much speculation as to the decision of the Board.

A wedding of great interest to many friends was solemnized Saturday morning at 10 o'clock in First church, when Miss Ruth Voncannon, of Summerfield, and Mr . Charles Alexander Smith, of Linwood, plighted their troth in the presence of immediate relatives and a few close friends. The ceremony was performed by Dr. A. G. Dixon, of the Children's Home, who was assisted by the patsor, Rev. R. I. Farmer. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. J. W. Dixon, of Summerfield, and once taught at the Children's Home. She is a very attractive and splendid young lady. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of Linwood, where the young couple will make their home after a honeymoon trip to different points of interest in this state. Congratulations and good wishes of a host of friends are extended to this popular and worthy pair.

We are much pleased to know that Mrs. Johnsie Oakes Jackson, the popular secretary in the office of Principal L. R. Johnston, of the high school, has recovered from a recent operation, and is again at her post of duty.

Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon are in Baltimore attending the sessions of the Woman's Missionary Convention.

At the commencement of Westminster Theological Seminary at Westminster, Md., last week, our director of religious education, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, received the degree of Bachelor of Sacred Theology, and congratulations are extended to him upon the attainment of this honor.

Mrs. A. R. Surratt and three children, of Charlotte, were guests of her sister, Mrs. June A. Gray, on Saturday and Sunday.

Union Chapel, Mocksville Charge.—We were glad to have Dr. Taylor with us May 3. He brought a very interesting message. We wish he could come oftener.

Sunday was a great day for us at all services. The attendance at Sunday school was 75. Our pastor preached a very impressive sermon at 11 o'clock to a large congregation. Bro. Ferree is doing some plain preaching; we believe much good will be accomplished during the year.

In the afternoon a number of evangelistic workers from Asheboro had charge of the service. I am sure everyone enjoyed hearing them. I believe they are doing the Master's will. Would be glad for them to come again. If we could keep the thought in mind we heard yesterday and do it, I am sure that we could do more for our Master in a spiritual way.

Our pastor has secured 16 subscriptions to the Herald since President Taylor was here. Bro. Ferree believes he will reach the goal.

We had a number of visitors from other denominations Sunday. We welcome them any time. MRS. W. B. BAILEY, Reporter.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—We were disappointed yesterday morning. We were expecting Rev. Lawrence Little to be with us, but he was called to Baltimore. He will be with us at our regular appointment the third Sunday night. Rev. C. I. Smith gave us a splendid sermon. His text was from St. John 19:27, "Behold thy mother."

Some of our members from Rosemary were there. Miss Annie Mae Callum sang a solo. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. C. I. Smith and Mrs. Smith and daughter sang a duet, "Yes, tell my darling mother I'll be there in answer to her prayers," and were accompanied at the piano by her other daughter. That song made me feel sad and happy, too. When my sweet mother was on her dying bed she was leaving three little children. I was only 11 years, sister, nine, brother, 10 months and some few days. These words are with me: "You must bring them up to see me," and I am trying to let mother's prayers be answered.

On the first Sunday Rev. Mr. Thompson held prayer service, which was very interesting and helpful.

Our C. E. Society had a social meeting Saturday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hawkins. The social committee, Misses Maggie and Erma Hawkins, had some real interesting games. Refreshments were served. We were glad to have present our pastor and family and five others out of our community.

Miss Nettie Hawkins is in the Roanoke Rapids Hospital, but is improving nicely.

One of our oldest church members, Mr. Billy Hawkins, was stricken with paralysis two or three years ago, but on the second Sunday morning you can always hear the sound of his crutch. Why can't young people be more loyal to their church? If he hears anyone saying anything wrong about people he will say, "I wouldn't say anything if I couldn't say something good."

The Hawkins Chapel string band was glad to be in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Shaw Saturday night.

Mr. Lorenzo Pittard finished high school this year.

MRS. CLAUDE HAWKINS, Reporter.

Harmony.—The young people of our Sunday school rendered an interesting program at the Sunday evening service on the topic, "Mother," after which our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, made an interesting talk on the subject.

We were delighted last fourth Sunday evening to have a number of our friends from Cross Anchor worship with us. We invite these people to come again in order that we may know each other better. In this way we will be able to draw our churches more closely together.

Our church, at the present, is being covered. We appreciate the help of the men of the community who are giving up their time in order to render this service.

Our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor continue to progress nicely. We hope that they will continue to do so, but they will not without the support and prayers of the people.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—Mother's Day—a day of thanksgiving for our mothers. Is it not fitting, however, that a day be set aside each year to think only of mother? Our program was an effective one Sunday. Five girls, Sybil Davis, Helen Voss, Ruth Braswell, Emma Lee Lindenberger, and Wilma Martin sang, "That Wonderful Mother of Mine" very impressively. A recitation was given by Sybil Davis. Mrs. J. B. Winecoff sang as a solo, "Mother o' Mine." A splendid talk on Mother's Day and its meaning was given by the pastor, Rev. H. F. Surratt. All of the program was very effective. Quite a few of the older members of the church were present. In fact, the oldest. After prayer meeting the choir rehearsal immediately follows.

Albemarle.—The Cam Snotherly Circle met at the home of Mrs. Reece Smith Tuesday evening, May 6th. The hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," was adopted for our opening song at each meeting, and was sung at this time. Mrs. J. R. Anderson gave the Scripture reading, followed by prayer by Mrs. C. S. Moton. Mrs. Whitlock gave a reading entitled "Self-Examination." Mrs. J. A. Furr and Mrs. J. U. Whitlock were appointed a visiting committee for this month. Several articles of fancy-work were brought in at this meeting which were all sold.

A sale of cakes, pies and sandwiches was planned to be held Saturday at the 50-50 store, of which Mrs. Anderson and D. L. Hatley were placed in charge. The sale was held before this writing and proved to be a complete success, as all the things were sold.

It was decided that all members who have Octagon soap coupons bring them in to the society meeting next week, and they will be sent to the Children's Home to be used on the purchase of an electric refrigerator.

At the conclusion of the business hour, the hostess served brick ice cream and cake, carrying out a color scheme of pink and white.

Mrs. Marshall Hatley and Mrs. D. T. Curlee were joint hostesses to the Lucy Hatley Circle at their monthly meeting May 6th. Mrs. Allen Wagoner was leader for this meeting.

The regular routine of business was followed. The most interest part of the meeting was the report of the "quarter campaign." At the April meeting, each member was given 25 cents with the instructions to see how much they could make with it in one month, and they have surely done splendidly, for the sum of $75 was brought in for the month's work.

This Circle will entertain all the members of the Society at a joint meeting Tuesday, May 13th, at the church. Every member is urged to be present. During the social hour which followed, the hostesses served delicious brick cream and cake.

Friends of Mrs. D. T. Curlee will learn with regret that she is taking treatment for a condition arising from bone trouble in one of her limbs. She was taken to a specialist last week and he says that an operation may be necessary, but we are trusting that this may not be the case.

A beautiful Mother's Day service was enjoyed at our church Sunday. Our pastor brought us a touching message, and special music was rendered suitable to the day.

Mrs. Arthur Furr spent the week-end with relatives in Concord.

At a meeting of the Workers' Council last Wednesday night a Primary Department was organized for the Sunday school and Mrs. J. R. Anderson elected as superintendent. They will hold their classes in the basement of the church. More will be reported of their activities later.

Moriah.—We had 104 at Sunday school and around 200 for preaching service yesterday. The mothers of our congregation were honored by a special Mother's Day program. "Tell Mother I'll Be There" and "That Wonderful Mother of Mine" were beautifully rendered by Miss Burgess and Mr. Erlee Neese of Pleasant Garden. The junior choir sang "Faith of Our Mothers," "Spelling Love," and "My Mother's Bible." Seats were reserved for the mothers and six girls dressed in white, carrying baskets of roses presented each one with a rose. Our pastor preached a splendid Mother's Day sermon.

Visitors were present from Richmond, Va., Glen Allen, Va., Greensboro and Pleasant Garden.

Next Sunday a special sermon will be preached to the fathers. We hope to have all the fathers in the community and others at this service. No program has been announced yet, but I'm sure we'll have something nice.

A splendid Easter program was given on Easter Sunday morning with most of the children and young people taking part.

Our thank-offering service was held the second Sunday in March.

Plans are being made for Children's Day.

The Sunday school has on an attendance contest, the men against the women. Last Sunday the men were two points ahead. The winning side is to be entertained at the end of the quarter.

The college assessment has been subscribed in full.

We haven't reached our goal in Herald subscriptions yet, but hope our members are going to rally to the call and go "over the top" in the near future.

Our church and community have been saddened by the death of some of our most substantial members in the last few months. Mrs. Sarah Glass, Mr. Jule Sharpe, Mr. C. G. Dorsett and Mr. Henry Curtis. These members are greatly missed at the services and in the work of the church. We can't understand why our loved ones are taken sometimes but we trust that the bereaved families may be comforted and that they may be submissive to the will of the Heavenly Father. It is such a comfort to know that there is one who knows just how it hurts when we have to give up those near and dear to us. When our Lord stood by the grave of Lazarus and wept He bore for us this grief and He alone knows just how to sympathize and comfort us.

Tabernacle Charge.—The Tabernacle choir gave a pleasing musical program on the afternoon of Easter Sunday, consisting of solos, quartets, and choruses, all appropriate for Easter. Visitors were present from Greensboro, Pleasant Garden and Mount Pleasant. Those who attended were inspired by the excellent music.

Our C. E. Society is very active these days. One thing that the society did recently was to plant some beautiful shrubbery on the church lawn. This will add much to the appearance.

Brother Gurley Coble, of Greensboro, is sending the Herald to ten homes of the Tabernacle community. He has a warm place in his heart for Tabernacle church, and on his last birthday made this donation to the church. Pastor and people are grateful to him for remembering in this way the church of his childhood. We now lack only seven subscriptions of reaching our quota. Mrs. G. A. Garrett, Miss Ola Whitley, Mrs. Charles Sizemore, and Mrs. Arvel Reynolds are assisting the pastor in this work.

Brother David H. Hunter, who was a long time one of the leading members of Tabernacle church, did a very commendable thing by bequeathing $600 to his church . Only the interest can be used by the trustees, of which a certain per cent will be applied to the pastor's salary annually.

Among the seniors at High Point College this year is Miss Elizabeth Hanner, a member of our Julian church. Miss Hanner is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hanner and a granddaughter of Rev. R. R. Hanner, of sainted memory. She is president of the C. E. Society at High Point College, being recognized as one of the most efficient Endeavorers of North Carolina.

Brother J. C. Reynolds had the misfortune to get seriously hurt in the flour mill at Julian some time ago. He is now recovering rapidly, and we trust he will soon be able to occupy his pew at Tabernacle. A number of our faithful members at both churches have been sick. We are glad to report that some of them are improving.

Our second quarterly conference elected Brothers E. T. Coble and J. S. Deviney as nominees for delegate the next Annual Conference.

Mrs. Brooks Blackard united with the Julian church on Easter Sunday, coming from the Baptist church.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hanner, of Julian, were among the recent visitors in the pastor's home.

Enfield.—The second quarterly conference convened at the Enfiel dchurch Monday night, the 5th. At this conference Bros. J. R. Powers and S. C. Whitaker were elected as nominess to the next Annual Conference to meet at Albemarle.

Enfield Charge.—The time for prayer meeting at the Whitakers Chapel church has been changed from Thursday night to Tuesday at 8 o'clock. Come and bring your friends and we will do thee good.

On Easter Sunday night Mr. Durwood Cook united with the Enfield church. He is a promising young man of noble character and we welcome him into our fellowship.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Neal, who have made their home in Lynchburg, Va., since last fall, have recently returned to Enfield. To their great disappointment the higher altitude did not seem to help Mr. Neal's health. They have our prayers and deep sympathy. We are hoping, however, that yet a turn may be taken in his favor.

Mrs. J. M. Person has the sympathy of the church in the sorrow which come to her in the passing of her sister, Mrs. Mary Outerbridge.

Recently the writer conducted the funeral services of Mrs. Mary L. Finch Joyner, a member of the Whitakers Chapel church. At the time of her death she was living near Scotland Neck. She was a good woman and we believe she went to live with her Lord.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely, although the attendance is not what we would like to have. At the close of the class period a short Mother's Day program was given, which was enjoyed by all. We are planning to hold a Children's Day service some time in June.

At 11 o'clock our pastor, Rev. A. O. Lindley, brought us a beautiful Mother's Day message. He paid tribute to mothers, mentioning the fact that his mother is still living and is 89 years old. He said there should not only be one Mother's Day observed during the year, but 364 other days as well.

Misses Della Hanner and Kara Andrew attended the N. C. Branch meeting at Burlington as delegates from our Auxiliary, and report a good meeting.

The writer has been elected Herald agent from our church and hopes that a goodly number of new subscribers may be added to our list as this is one of the best ways we have of keeping informed of the work of our denomination.

We were glad to have C. W. Andrew and son, of Mount Airy, worship with us Sunday.

Mr. J. G. Hanner continues in very poor health. Also Mr. F. F. Fox is seriously ill. We hope that both may be restored to health.

Friendship Station.—The Preachers' Federation was held at this church last Monday with a large number present. We were indeed glad to have them and their wives visit us. We hope they will come again; the meeting was greatly enjoyed by all present.

There will be a love feast and decoration of the graves on the first Sunday in June. Everybody is invited to come and join in these services.

Mr. Marvin Almond, of Albemarle, N. C., died in the hospital April 26, and was buried April 27 at Friendship. He was 36 years old and leaves to mourn their loss his wife, five children, four brothers and one sister.

He had been a faithful member of this church for many years. The funeral was conducted by the pastor Rev. C. H. Hill, assisted by Rev. J. R. Anderson, of Albemarle. The bereaved have our sympathy.

First Church, Burlington.—We were pleased with the large attendance at Sunday school today, which numbered 381, and the offering amounted to $23.72. The Philathea class had charge of the school and furnished a splendid program throughout the school period.

Attendance in the Baraca class registered 79 and Bro. Lindley gave us a very uplifting message on the lesson. Reports from the sick members were given at the opening of the class. It was reported that our brother-member, Mr. L. L. Wilson, at Oteen, N. C., was getting along very well. We are glad indeed to hear this good news and hope he will soon be back with us and be fully restored to health. We had a good congregation at the preaching services. Bro. Gerringer brought very appropriate sermons at each preaching service, which were very helpful and encouraging.

June the 9th is time for the Daily Vacation Bible School to open. Miss Maxine Taylor, so pleasantly remembered as our young people's worker during the summer of 1928, will be with us to conduct this school, assisted by Miss Elizabeth Rogers, of the local church. We feel quite sure that with these splendid leaders in charge we will have a successful school and we trust that each child of the Sunday school that possibly can will register for this course.

Our pastor is leaving today to help Rev. Geo. L. Curry in a revival at High Point this week. We hope for these people a successful meeting. As Brother Gerringer will be in this meeting, it is expected that Bro. Curry will preach for us at the morning hour next Sunday (May 18th). Bro. Curry is a former pastor of this church and we are sure that many who remember him so pleasantly will come out for the service.

Mr. George C. Smith, faithful member of First Church, will conduct the mid-week

Mrs. J. E. Moore and Mrs. E. H. Moore were hostesses to Circle No. 4 of the Woman's Auxiliary Monday evening at 8 o'clock at their home. The living room was decorated with snowballs and pansies. Mrs. E. H. Moore, leader, was in the chair, and Miss Inez Way held the devotional service.

The program consisted of two readings by Rev. J. F. Minnis, given by Mrs. Harlan McPherson and Miss Susie Stafford; the question box, by Mrs. R. S. Maynard; and the Bible study, taught by Mrs. McPherson. Later the hostesses served strawberry shortcake.

Asheboro.—Yesterday was a splendid day for us. The Sunday school attendance was the largest ever, there being 289 present, as compared to 268 the previous Sunday and 266 the Sunday before that. All of these figures represent high water mark for all time. At the morning church service yesterday 13 new members were received on profession of faith, with more to join later. Our revival service began April 27 and closed May 7th. Rev. R. C. Stubbins came on Monday, the 28th, and stayed until the close of the meeting, preaching twice daily. Brother Stubbins did fine work among us and the people were delighted with him and his sermons. In the decision service on the second Sunday of the meeting about 40 boys and girls made their decision for Christ and the most of the 13 who were received into church membership yesterday came from that number. We had hoped to reach a number of the more mature people of the community, but somehow these have learned to stay away from revival meetings in large measure.

The first week of our meeting we designated certain Sunday school classes to be present on certain evenings and the Woman's Auxiliary was given one evening. This helped considerably to increase the attendance. The choir was very faithful during the meeting and rendered valuable service. One evening we had the Kearns quartet and two evenings the Bulla quartet. Yesterday both at the morning and the evening service we had a beautiful solo by Mrs. Moffit, of Ardmore, Oklahoma. Mr. and Mrs. Moffitt have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rich and family.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE LETTER

The sixth year of High Point College will close its activities on June the second. The final exercises are to begin May 29 with a cantata, "Fair Ellen," by the college chorus. Friday, May 30th, there will be an oratorical and essayist contest; Saturday, May 31st, class day exercises will be observed by the senior class, and at 6:30 there will be a banquet known as the alumni banquet to which the present senior class and the former students of Yadkin College have been invited. It is the wish of the administration that this will become an annual affair of great joy and benefit to both alumni of High Point College and of Yadkin College as well.

Sunday, June first, President J. C. Broomfield will preach the bacalaureate sermon at 11 a. m. in the First Methodist Protestant Church in High Point. At 8 p. m. President R. M. Andrews will deliver the annual commencement address to the senior class to which the public is also invited. Monday, June 2, the academic procession forms at 10:30 and the baccalaureate address will be delivered by Dr. Henry Louis Smith, after which degrees will be conferred and diplomas awarded.

This is the largest senior class graduated here and it so happens that there are twenty-eight girls and twenty boys in the class.

While this has certainly been the hardest year of our existence in so far as finances are concerned, yet it has been a good year in many other respects. The type of students has been above the average and the conduct of the students has been unusually good.

We would like so much to have a great number of our church people from nearby churches present on all these occasions; we know of nothing that would stimulate your interest in the college more than frequent visits here and a fuller knowledge of the services which the college has rendered to the young people who have attended classes here.

According to the action of the committee of the conference, this month we are closing the campaign to raise the "Dollar a Member" for High Point College, but it is the earnest wish that every church will see to it that we shall raise at least an amount equal to a dollar per member before the conference year closes.

We we heard a prominent pastor say that he never read the treasurer's reports. We do not know why, but we are quite certain that this pastor knows little or nothing about the financial condition of our conference, unless someone has told him about it. We have many laymen who do not read these reports, judging from the way my requests are utterly disregarded by them. Figures may be very uninteresting, but they are informing, and the information they impart is many times startling and disconcerting. The only really surprising thing the Herald publishes each week is my report. Read it and get a thrill.

VOLUME XXXVI GREENSBORO, N. C., MAY 22, 1930 NUMBER 28

History of The Herald

The editor-for-thirty-five-years is asked by the editor-for-this-week to write a brief history of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. Here it is.

In 1893 we came from Fairmont, W. Va., to the meeting of our N. C. Annual Conference in La Grange, N. C., and delivered three addresses. One was on "The Methodist Protestant Church" in which we tried to describe the beauty and grandeur of our spiritual edifice. One was on the need of a college in North Carolina in which we urged the Conference to undertake to build. The third address was rather an exhortation to the brethren to co-operate with Rev. J. L. Michaux in his effort to provide a weekly paper as a Conference organ. We returned to our pastoral charge in Fairmont. A result of our visit to North Carolina was the receipt of an invitation from Dr. T. T. Ferree, president of the Annual Conference, from Rev .W. A. Bunch, an ex-president, and from Rev. J. L. Michaux, asking that we return to North Carolina and undertake the publication of a Conference organ.

REV. J. F. MCCULLOCH
Editor of The Herald

We had spent a year in the office of The Central Protestant as compositor, we had had years of experience in college journalism, and we had some appreciation of the difficulties in the case. It was in the midst of the Cleveland panic, too, when Coxey's army was marching to Washington. Circumstances were intimidating, but we gave the call most serious consideration. We had come to believe that what ought to be done can be done. Before deciding, we wrote to each pastor to ascertain what would be his personal attitude and how many subscriptions he estimated his field would yield. The response was encouraging but not completely assuring. We did not wish to make a failure, even in a good enterprise. The need of the paper was apparent, but the means to provide it were not. While assurance of co-operation was most cordial, nobody offered a dollar, and we knew that many dollars would be required. Was it our duty to accept the call under such conditions? We pondered for weeks. One day we received what we considered a divine token which removed all doubt from our mind, never to return. We came in faith. We found a few men who kindly contributed to the initial expense and we went steadily forward, walking by faith and not by sight.

The first issue appeared November 10, 1894, bearing the name, Our Church Record. We had chosen that name deliberately. Some such name as "Christian Index," "Christian Register," had been proposed with the thought of a wider constituency, but we felt that what was wanted was not simply a Christian paper, but a church paper, our church paper.

The paper appeared just before the meeting of the Annual Conference in Asheboro. That Conference adopted it most heartily, but was not asked to assume any financial responsibility and did not assume any. However, it did assume responsibility for the field work of soliciting subscriptions. We went forward with hope and enthusiasm. We find these words in the first column of that first issue:

"Will this paper succeed?"

"Yes."

"Will it be permanent?"

"That depends on the kind of friends it finds and the number of them. The publisher cannot make it permanent. He does not expect to be permanent himself; but he hopes that when he fails some one else will be ready to take up the burden."

Before the end of the first year the publisher learned that all the brethren were doing and could do would not suffice to pay the expenses of publication. He therefore appealed for the building of a publishing house to subsidize the paper. There was a most generous response on the part of a few, comparatively, especially the Henderson brethren of the Harris family, and the house was built. For years the rents from this building helped the publisher to keep the paper going. (This building was sold last year for over eighty thousand dollars and the proceeds were applied to the debts of High Point College.)

Some years ago the name of the paper was changed to the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. There was a feeling that this name would better define the purpose of the publication. The editor believes in the Methodist Protestant Church and believes its periodicals ought to promote appreciation of and loyalty to the fundamental principles of the organization.

The Necessity for the Herald In Carrying Out Conference Programs

By President S. W. Taylor

Brother Harrison has asked me to write a brief paper on this subject for the "Special" edition of the Herald that is to appear this week, under his management as director of the campaign to increase subscriptions. I am very glad to comply with his request because the Herald is of such vital importance to the entire program of the conference.

There is no other means by which we can appeal to so many people on behalf of our conference and denominational work, and at so little expense, as we can through the Herald. It is a weekly letter to our conference family; it is our regular news-carrier to our thirty thousand members; it is our broadcasting station by which we make weekly contact with our two hundred and thirty churches, covering a territory of four hundred miles east and west, and a like distance north and south. Week after week, for fifty weeks in the year, this family letter goes over this wide stretch of territory, acquainting our people with conference programs, and giving to them the information and the inspiration of what the various churches are doing in carrying out these programs. "I saw in the Herald last week"; "I see from the Herald," are expressions that indicate the value of this paper as a news purveyor, and how the people depend upon it for information concerning conference matters.

The Herald is indispensable to us as a conference informing and inspiring agency. Without it we would lose the weekly contact with our people that is so essential to co-operation and success. A good woman said only a few days ago that this paper had gone to her home for thirty years, and that the loyalty of her six sons to the Methodist Protestant Church was due, in no small measure, to the fact that they had been regular readers of it. She would not think, she said, of doing without the Herald.

We bid Brother Harrison and his Committee a God-speed in their efforts to double the subscription list of this invaluable paper.

May 20, 1930.

Why I Strive to Put the M. P. Herald Into the Homes of My People

By Rev. B. M. Williams

My first reason is a personal one, brought about by my admiration for the editor, Dr. J. F. McCulloch. I have known him personally for nearly thirty years. All these years I have noted his deep interest in the Methodist Protestant Church and all its institutions. Had it not been for the persistence of the Herald in keeping before us the needs and importance of caring for orphan children, and the education of our young people, I seriously doubt if our Children's Home and High Point College would exist today. What I say of the Herald in regard to these institutions could be said in regard to all other activities of our church. The Herald has been a source of information and inspiration to me. It has developed in me more loyalty to the Methodist Protestant Church and more interest in the cause of Christ. To me it is an old friend, whose weekly visits I anxiously await.

The second reason for my interest in the increase of the Herald circulation is the fact that our people need just such information as this paper gives, without it how could we hear weekly from the president of our conference, our Children's Home, Pastors and People throughout the conference, progress of the work in every line besides numerous editorials and articles. Our people by reading this paper will become informed as to the real needs of our church and conference. When these needs are realized the people will respond to the program of our church more readily. As they respond to the church program willingly and intelligently the pastor's burdens are lightened. To bring about this desired response the M. P. Herald is the pastor's best assistant.

The Methodist Protestant Herald As A Home Paper

By H. C. Stout

The home is a unit, where attitudes are formed, where habits are fixed, and where character is made. Therefore, the influences of the home where children are reared are of vital concern. The company a young person keeps, and the kind of literature he reads are main sources of character formation. "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it," says the Word.

The reading habit has been a controlling influence in the home of the writer. Time spent by children of a home in the perusal of the noble thoughts of others, imbibing the Christian spirit, and being led in paths of righteousness saves the heads of the home from anxiety on account of wandering tendencies of children.

The Methodist Protestant Herald, during its long period of service, has been one of the "stand-bys" in our home. It contains a wide range of matter covering much worthwhile reading for a well regulated home Its make-up, or general content, written and compiled, as it is, by one who understands the needs of both young and old, renders the paper of inestimable value to the home—especially if that home is a Methodist Protestant home.

The Herald In Our Church Life

By Rev. G. W. Holmes

The Methodist Protestant Herald has been one of the chief agencies in the development of our church in North Carolina. It has championed every cause that has been for the good of the Church and for the advancement of the Kingdom. Without its aid our growth would have been retarded.

In recent years our interests have greatly multiplied. Our work has become more and more intensive. It has been necessary to have a paper as a medium of communication to keep constantly before the people the program of the Church in all of its activities. Not only so, but it has been necessary that we be inspired with the incentive to perform duty as a privilege which only an informed mind and quickened conscience will do.

The Herald was an invaluable aid in founding High Point College and will still be needed to help in its permanency.

The church press is more needed in our homes today than ever before. Our children are going to read. The world is flooded with pernicious publications that vitiate the minds and lives of our youth. If we do not put into our homes good literature, we can not hope that our children will be immune to the teachings of the sordid and vile now so prevalent. The vicious press is becoming more and more a menace to the home,

EDITORIALS

Honor Edition

This edition is in honor of Rev. J. F. McCulloch, D. D., the founder of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, and its editor for thirty-five years.

Dr. McCulloch has had no part in the composition of this edition, except to contribute a historical sketch of the paper, nor is he conversant with its contents, except the reports from the field.

We feel that no better opportunity presented itself than now to place a bouquet where it has so long been deserved. We, therefore, dedicate this campaign issue to our brother in Christ and much beloved editor, Rev. Joseph Flavius McCulloch, D. D.

Elsewhere in these columns will be found an attempted account of Dr. McCulloch's worth to the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina. This could not be done without showing the place of his pulpit—the columns of this paper—to our church and religious life in North Carolina. In this undertaking there has come from every side an expression of the indispensableness of the HERALD to our future progress.

Great is the man who can conceive, win support to, and build up an institution which not only marked the beginning of outstanding progress of our denomination in the state, but which holds in its hands the future progress of this denomination.

The Debt We Owe

To this great man of our midst, a son of our soil, we owe a debt.

To the mind and heart of Dr. McCulloch can directly be traced two of the leading institutions of our conference—the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, and High Point College. The latter is an outgrowth of the former, for the HERALD was established to create sentiment for a college.

According to Mrs. W. C. Hammer, the mother of the Children's Home, the inspiration to found that institutoin was received largely through the columns of this paper. One of our ministers has said: "But for the repeated statements of need of better ministerial education, through the HERALD, the Roberts Fund would not have been created." Another minister stated that: "The spirit of building better and more adequate houses of worship is largely a result of contributions carried from time to time in this conference organ."

These are mere statements of material things; there is no way to measure the spiritual blessing of this great man's life, but we know that it is great.

In these days of declining health, when age and the grind of ardent toil for our church have made inroads upon his strength, do we not owe him something? He has not asked for it! Indeed, by his action he has said, as long as he has strength to use a pen and a mind to conceive thoughts he will continue in harness. He has not asked for contributions to the paper; he has not asked for superannuate relations, though his former service, age, and state of health merit it. He has merely asked that we ministers and members aid him in extending the limits of his field of service to the church. His only request is to increase the circulation of the paper. The church is the recipient of the greater blessing in doing this, and not Dr. McCulloch. He has asked that the subscription list be increased to three thousand; it is now about fifteen hundred. Granting of this request is the least expression of appreciation for his service to us we could give. In the doing of this we are not giving him anything, we are getting something for ourselves. We are rendering a service to our own family and church.

Is It Nothing to You?

Is it nothing to you that the editor of the HERALD is losing fifty-seven cents per year per subscription, in addition to receiving nothing for his services as editor, all because of the small circulation of the paper?

Is it nothing to you that this old preacher of your church, who has served the North Carolina Conference over thirty-five years and the denomination longer, in order to keep the paper in circulation is having to dispose of some of the property which he has stinted, from his meagre wage, in younger days to save for old age?

Is it nothing to you that this financial burden is telling upon his strength, and shortening his days of service to the church?

Is it nothing to you that the very life of this paper is in peril, and with its threats to the progress of our church in the state?

If it means something to you, if it strikes at your denominational pride, if it fails to show your appreciation for your conference organ and the life and service of Dr. McCulloch, do something NOW.

It is something to you, and every other loyal Methodist Protestant. By co-operation in this campagin, by subscribing to the paper, by renewing your subscerption, by paying back subscriptions, by securing subscriptions and renewals from others we can relieve this situation.

DEADLIEST OF POISONS IS UNGUARDED TONGUE

An unmerciful tongue may be more cruel than the most terrible instrument of torture ever forged. It can stab more keenly than a dagger, and cut more deeply than a sword. That quick tongue; that fiery, temper-driven tongue; that insidious, insinuating tongue; that soft, slimy, slandering tongue; that sharp, sarcastic tongue; these, an inspired writer has said, are set on fire of hell! It is dangerous to handle such cruel weapons heedlessly. With one of them you may so rend your mother's bosom that she will wish she had never been born; you may so pierce your father's heart as to bring down his gray hairs in sorrow to the grave; you may cut the nearest, dearest ties and leave the heartstrings bleeding.—Montreal Family Herald.

Dr. McCulloch's Life and Work In North Carolina

By J. Norman Wills

Those who know Joseph Flavius McCulloch understand readily why, as a young man, he determined to secure a college education; why he chose an institution of the Methodist Protestant Church, and why he selected Adrian College, because at that time this college was of higher grade than any other institution of the Church.

His career was followed with interest by his friends in North Carolina. His reputation as a keen scholar reached the State. Upon one of his visits he delighted the congregations to whom he preached, and he was readily recognized as possessed of an intellect far above the ordinary.

He visited the Conference at LaGrange in the Fall of 1893 and there expressed his conviction that individual Conferences should provide educational facilities within their borders. He made some investigations with a view to establishing a Methodist Protestant College in the State.

In the Fall of 1894 he returned to his home State for the express purpose of devoting his efforts toward the establishment of a college. With this end in view he began the publication of Our Church Record. He felt that a paper was in itself an educational institution, and one that could serve the Church, but he did not cease to keep in view his ultimate goal. He was a man of faith, and believed not only in the principles of the Methodist Protestant Church, but had confidence in its membership. He believed that the Church would support the paper, and would eventually build a college.

Experience proved that he over-estimated the degree to which the Church would appreciate the paper, and within a short time he found that other means for maintaining it must be provided. He suggested an endowment fund which would be invested in a building which would serve as a publishing house, and also yield an income to support the paper. The Church contributed about $5,000 toward the fund for the purchase of a lot and the erection of a building. The total investment, including subsequent additions, was less than $12,000. At the beginning, a monthly payment of $20 was made toward the support of the paper. It would have been impossible to continue the publication of the paper, but for the fact that Dr. McCulloch possessed considerable mechanical skill, and not only edited the paper, but personally printed it. The publication of the paper was continued without intermission throughout all the succeeding years. The cost of production was greatly increased, but the appropriation from the publishing house was gradually increased also, until finally it was made $100 per month.

A few years ago Dr. McCulloch found it necessary to discontinue the printing of the paper and contracted with a firm of printers, McCulloch & Swain, for the printing. This increased the cost, but owing to the fact that one of the printers is his son, its publication was continued, though the printers sustained a heavy loss.

About fifteen years ago, urged by his devotion to the cause of the establishment of a college, Dr. McCulloch suggested that the scope of the Methodist Protestant Publishing House Corporation be enlarged; that it be reorganized as a Board of Education, which should hold the title to the publishing house property, as well as to a site which had once been decided upon for a college in Greensboro, and thus place all of the assets under control of one board, having for its main purpose the establishing of a college, though still providing for the publication of the paper. This reorganized Board later acquired the title to the college site in High Point, so it now holds the title to practically all of the property of High Point College.

The Board of Education decided that it would be advisable to sell the publishing house property and early in 1929 this was accomplished, the property being sold for $82,500 net to the Board. It was found impossible, however, to continue the payment of the appropriation of $100 per month, owing to the fact that the publishing house had been included in the mortgage executed to secure a loan for High Point College, and the mortgage given by the purchasers of the publishing house for the balance of the purchase price had to be assigned to the holders of the general mortgage. For this reason only $600 of the appropriation for 1929 was paid, and the Board was unable to make an appropriation for the current year. The Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina is therefore confronted with the problem of providing an adequate circulation for the paper, in order that it may meet its expenses, it being borne in mind that these expenses are considerably more than the income of the paper, plus the former appropriation of $100 per month.

Messrs. McCulloch & Swain cannot continue to absorb the loss; on the other hand, not only should there be an adequate income from subscriptions to meet the cost of publication, but they should be reimbursed to some extent for the loss already incurred. The questions before the Methodist Protestant Church, therefore, are:

1. Shall the publication of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD be continued?

2. If so, shall it be provided for by additional subscriptions, or in some other manner?

3. If in some other manner, what does justice to the firm of printers, and Dr. McCulloch, who has given the greater part of his life to the publication of this paper. require?

The establishment of High Point College is recent history. The Board of Education recognizes the fact that the enterprise would have been allowed to die but for Dr. McCulloch's persistence. Dr. Andrews, when President of the Conference, realized the demand on the part of the Church for a college, and under his leadership the movement crystallized and subscriptions were secured, which made it possible to erect Roberts Hall, the administration building, and to provide the central heating plant. Here the writer would have stopped, being opposed to incurring a debt. But the judgment of others was that the money should be borrowed, dormitories erected, and the beginning of an A-grade college undertaken. So we have a fine college ''plant,''have operated for six years, have demonstrated thta there is a demand for the college, and when further support is asked, it is with the consciousness that the church and the public generally know exactly for what the money they are asked to contribute will pay; not for something that we may have or hope to have, but for fine buildings erected upon solid ground, in an unexcelled location; for an institution that has gathered as its students a fine body of young men and young women; nothing vague, nothing visionary We do not have to pay in order to get the college, but we must certainly pay if we keep it.

Dr. McCulloch has reached the evening of life. It would be gratifying if, as he contemplates the lengthening shadows, he could reflect that the paper which he has published for over thirty-five years was so firmly established financially that its permanence could be assured; that the College which he conceived in his mind more than thirty-six years ago, was upon a substantial footing so that, while not free from difficulties, it had an array of friends who would stand by it, and that its career of usefulness would suffer no interruption. . The situation constitutes a real challenge to the Church which he loves, and to which he has given the service of a life-time.

The Editor of the HERALD As His Pastor Kows Him

By REV. C. W. BATES

Some time ago we had an exchange of pastors. The brother who took my place in the pulpit of Calvary Church was a bit perturbed, and perhaps did not do his best, because, as he said, he hesitated to preach with Dr. McCulloch in the audience. If he had known Dr. McCulloch as well as I do, he need not have feared. As a class preachers are usually sympathetic listeners. Dr. McCulloch is no exception. If he does offer any criticism it is done in the kindliest spirit, and is always helpful. He listens patiently—I suspect he needs to—and he listens attentively. Some one has said it is better to be a good listener than to be a good talker. I think Dr. McCulloch can qualify for both.

Another thing that impresses his pastor is Dr. McCulloch's faithfulness to the services of the church. He is present at all the services of the church—at worship, in the Sunday School, at prayer meeting, and, if there is anything extra on, he comes to that. I do not believe there is a member of the church who attends more regularly than he. And that, of course, pleases his pastor. How much it would mean to the success of the church in this respect if all the members were to imitate his good example and be at the services every time the bell rings! (He has a radio but it is never a substitute for a service at Calvary Church.)

And the devotion which manifests itself in this faithfulness to the services of the church is shown in other ways. I am certain he has not kept a record of it, but it would be interesting—and a bit amazing—if we knew how much money, first and last, he has put into the building and the maintenance of his church. And at what sacrifices he has done it! He is one of that noble band who give the Lord a Tenth. But he does not stop at that.

Dr. McCulloch has ever since the church was organized taught the Men's Class, as we call it. He is one of the best teachers I know. I am certain if we had a room in which he could teach without the handicaps of the present surroundings, we would have the largest adult class in the city, because, I am persuaded men want to go where they can get something from the teacher. Dr. McCulloch gives them something.

I know the editor best in his church relations. I do not know him so well as a man. He is busy with the paper and the preacher is busy with his parish, and we do not meet so often as we might face to face. But what I do know of him as a man impresses me quite as much as what I know of him as a fellow-worker in the church. For one thing he is steadfast in his loyalties. I have had occasion to prove that. He is true to his convictions even though those convictions may not be in harmony with the opinions of the majority. There have been a good many occasions when he has stood alone. Men honor him none the less for that. And he has a sense of humor unsuspected by those who know him only casually. To like a good, clean joke, and to see the funny side of things, isn't conduct unbecoming saints. And he is wise in his counsels. The preacher can go to him with his parish problems and be assured of a helpful hearing and find sympathetic suggestions for the work. And he is a man of his word. It is eminently true of Dr. McCulloch, as any banker in Greensboro will testify, and a fact for which the church has had abundant cause to be grateful, that "his word is as good as his bond."

I realize that all this is rather feebly done. I do not want to be fulsome in my praise of one of my parishioners. I must restrain myself. There is much more to say, and what I have said could be said, and perhaps ought to be said, much more strongly than I have said it. But it is my sincere tribute to a good man.

Biographical Sketch of Dr. McCulloch

By REV. T. F. MCCULLOCH

When the editor of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD was about four years of age an older half-brother of his taught a subscription school in a vacant tenant house near the home. Other children in the family were to attend, and when the morning of opening the school arrived he had his heart set on accompanying them to school. Consent was given for his going, it being supposed that by the lunch hour he would be sufficiently amused, but he decided to attend the afternoon session, and continued regularly to the end of the term. He became so much interested in his book that he would remain in the school room and study at recess while the other children were at play.

Very early he manifested an interest in numbers, practiced counting the objects in the home. Soon after attaining the ability to count to one hundred he began to count by twos, then fours, fives and tens.

In boyhood he had a share in mischievous pranks. When about eleven or twelve years of age he was riding on horseback, carrying a saw in his hand. He aimed the saw at a bird as though it were a gun, which frightened the horse. He was thrown to the ground with such severe injury to his back that he was forced to lie in bed for eight months. Some of the things he did to amuse himself and to pass the time were knitting stockings and making tatting.

When old enough to work away from home he went to Greensboro and learned the printer's trade with Rev. J L. Michaux, publisher of the Central Protestant. Later, at the age of 22, he went to Adrian College and worked in a printing office there and paid his way through college.

After graduation from Adrian College he went to the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and there became an instructor in mathematics. For original mathematical work he was given a fellowship in Clark University, in Worcester, Mass., and studied a year there. He also did special work in mathematics at Johns Hopkins University. He later became president of Adrian College.

After serving a pastorate in Fairmont, W. Va., he returned to North Carolina for the purpose of establishing a college in his home state. It seemed necessary in order to reach and enlist the people in a Methodist Protestant College to have a church paper, and he began the publication of Our Church Record, afterward changed to the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. He not only edited, managed and published the paper, but for many years did much of the mechanical work necessary to the publication of the paper. So it may be truthfully said that he has almost literally given his life for High Point College.

Deaths

On last Sunday, May 17, Sister McDowell, wife of Rev. W. F. McDowell, passed into the great beyond. Her death was sudden, though she had been in declining health for several months. The funeral service was held Monday in the Methodist Protestant Church at Asheboro, and was attended by a large congregation of sympathizing friends of the family. The pastor of the church, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, was in charge, and was assisted by Rev. J. B. Trogdon and myself. Interment was in the city cemetery of Asheboro. Brother McDowell and his family will have the sympathy of the conference in this sorrow. An obituary committee will be duly appointed and an obituary in her honor will be prepared for the conference memorial service.

Another cause of grief to us is the recent passing of little Elvin Coble, one of the boys at the Children's Home. His death occurred Friday, May 9th, after a short illness from pneumonia and meningitis. Brother Dixon, the superintendent, will no doubt report the detailss of this experience of the Home. We extend our sympathy and the sympathy of the entire conference.

President Elected

The Committee appointed some time ago to nominate a President of High Point College to succeed Dr. Andrews, resigned, made its report to the Board of Trustees yesterday, recommending Rev. Gideon Ireland Humphreys, A. M., D. D., for the place. After full discussion by the Board the report of the Committee was adopted. Dr. Humphreys graduated at Western Maryland College in 1902, Summa Cum Laude, the highest scholastic honors that Western Maryland confers upon any student. Two years later he graduated at Westminster Theological Seminary with the degree of Bachelor of Sacred Theology. He received his Master's degree at Western Maryland, and also the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. He is a forceful and polished speaker, and holds at this time the pastorate of the largest church in the Maryland Conference. He served for three years, the full time limit in Maryland, as President of the conference, and was chosen by Dr. Lewis, of sainted memory, to preach the conference sermon at the Centennial General Conference in 1928. Dr. Humphreys will come to the college with full appreciation of the splendid record that it has already made, and with full devotion to the task of strengthening the institution and enlarging its usefulness. He will take up his work June first.

Why Not Charge

May 18, Sunday.—Three of the eight churches on this charge were visited. The morning appointment was at Flag Springs; in the afternoon we were at New Hope; the night appointment was at Seagrove. Here we had the largest congregation of the day, the house being well-filled. The first two churches were new to us, this being our first visit with them. We were pleased with the care taken of the buildings. In recent years additions have been made to the church at New Hope which gives them more auditorium space and better Sunday School accommodations. By the use of curtains or accordion doors they could still improve their Sunday School facilities. Both church buildings seemed ample in size. We were glad to find each of these churches making preparation for Children's Day service. Each of the eight churches has a Sunday School. It was our privilege to be present in the school at New Hope. We regretted to find that they were not using our Sunday School literature. A very distressing accident occurred at this church in the early part of the year. A young man by the name of Cox (sorry that I can not give his full name) in starting a fire in the new heatrola at the church, used, gas, thinking that it was kerosene. His clothing caught on fire, as the result of some gas spilled on them, and in spite of his heroic efforts to rid himself of his clothing, he was so badly burned that he died a few hours later. He was graduating this spring from high school, and in all probability would have entered High Point College this fall. Our tenderest sympathies and prayers are extended to his bereaved father and mother and other loved ones.

The service at Seagrove was the beginning of a series of revival services to continue through this week. Brother Suits is to be with the pastor in these meetings. We are trusting and praying that the best of results may be realized. Seagrove has provided "Dollar a Member" in full, and lacks only eleven dollars of being out on all budgets. Hurry, Seagrove, and take first place on budget honor roll. The superannuate allotment is paid in full at New Hope. The charge has not paid a great deal on "Dollar a Member," but we trust that more may be paid during the year. One dollar was paid Sunday at New Hope for this purpose, and one also at Seagrove.

This is Brother Neese's first year on this charge. He and his family are ingratiating themselves into the confidence of the people, and a spirit of hope and progress prevails on the work. The pastor is giving himself earnestly to his tasks, and the people are co-operating. The charge ranks ahead of most rural charges in amount paid on salary to date. We believe the year will be a good one in every particular. One need on the charge is a larger circulation of the church paper, and more organizations, especially among the women, and the young people. This, no doubt, will receive attention, and be brought about in course of time. We enjoyed our day on the charge, and our grateful thanks are hereby extended to Brother Neese and his people for entertainment and other kindnesses shown us while on the work.

Abbreviated

Because of a very full and pressing program this week we must omit other things to which we would like to call attention in this report. Hard to get it all done.

Appointments

The editor has seen a great change for the better come over the North Carolina Conference in the last thirty-five years and is glad to believe that part of the progress is due to the fact that there has been a ready means of communication. The paper will not have lived in vain if it die tomorrow. And we trust those who appreciate the value of a Conference paper will not let it die at all.

This year an experiment is on to determine whether enough subscribers can be found to pay the expense of publication. If so, well. If not so, the paper will have to be subsidized in some way in order to continue.

The Herald In Our Church Life

church and nation. Decay and death are the natural resultants.

We are admonished to provide for our own. If we do not, we are rated as worse than infidels. It is an unwise man who does not provide food for the minds and spirits of his household as well as for their bodies.

We have a great connectional paper—The Methodist Protestant Recorder. It should, on account of its intrinsic value, be in the homes of many of our people where it is not now found, but we can not expect to have in any periodical outside our conference limits such detailed statements of our own activities as our local paper gives us.

I quote from a high authority as follows: "All over the country and in all communions the successful continuance of church publications has become a problem. No church can prosper without an efficient press."

Our conference paper, unlike most religious periodicals, has neither endowment nor subsidy. The time has surely come when all who are interested in the church should become exceedingly anxious about the continuance of the HERALD. Our pastors as leaders of their flocks should publicly call attention to the paper—stating its merits, its value in the home, its importance in the Church and how we would be handicapped in our work without it. This should be followed with private solicitations for subscriptions, which is the most effective of all methods.

OUR STORY PAGE

NEWSBOY REPORTER

It was interesting to work for a newspaper, even if you only sold the papers after they were printed. You could watch the presses waiting for the signal to go ahead, and then turning out the sheets by the thousands. You could see the reporters dashing in with the last-minute story of a big fire or an accident . . . and sometimes, when they weren't in too much of a hurry, they would stop and talk to you.

At least they always stopped to say a few words to George Dawson, because every once in a while he had a little bit of news that they could write up or a "lead" they could follow on a robbery or a hit-and-run accident. And in their turn they used to tell him to keep his eyes open and ask questions, because that was the way young fellows got to be reporters.

"Know anything about the smuggling ring?" asked Ted Milne one morning. "I'm assigned to the case and I can't find an ounce of news about it."

"Nobody else can either," replied George. "Not even the police."

"That's some comfort," agreed Ted. "But just the same, if you pick up any clues let me know."

George laughed. For the past two months regular shipments of opium had been coming into the country by means of a secret agent, who was so clever that he could not be caught. The chances of picking up any information while he was selling papers in the streets were very slim. He promised Ted, however, that he would be on the lookout and let him know. Then he picked up his morning papers and began to sell them.

He had forgotten about the smugglers entirely two hours later, but he had another thing about which to think. A little earlier he had noticed a man beckoning him from the lobby of the hotel. He ran over and held out a paper.

"I'm going to buy them all," the man said, grandly. "You're too bright to be selling papers."

"I've got to do something," replied George, hiding his surprise.

"Yes, I know," was answer. "But you ought to have a better job than that. How would you like to work for me?"

"What doing, sir?"

The man considered a long time before answering, at the end of which he said:

"I may as well tell you that I am a plain clothes man, and, therefore, if you work for me, you'll have to do everything I say without ever once asking why."

"That won't be so hard," answered George. "When do I start?"

"Right away. The first thing I want you to do," said his new employer, when they were alone in a hotel room, 'is to put on this bell-hop's uniform and deliver this box of flowers to a lady."

George wanted to ask why the disguise was necessary, but remembered what the man, whose name was Crawford, had said about not asking questions, and so he put on the gray suit with the brass buttons and then asked for the address.

"Pier 19. The lady is a passenger on a ship that docks there at 12 o'clock. You are to take the box of flowers to her cabin, which is No. 72."

"Yes, sir."

All this was very new and novel, so George enjoyed it. Everybody thought he was a real bell-hop as he walked through the streets down to the waterfront, and when he got to the pier the guards let him go through the ship without any questioning at all, although one of the Customs Officers shouted over to his chief: "He's a boy from the hotel delivering flowers."

That seemed to be all right, although George noticed as he climbed the gangway that he was being watched very closely. He found his way to Cabin 72, knocked, and when he heard a voice say "Come in," he opened the door and entered. Instead of finding a woman in the cabin, as he expected, he found a man—a Chinaman, ugly and oily, who looked at him suspiciously out of his slanted eyes.

"What 'Melican boy want?"

"Flowers for Mrs. Wortham."

"Who send flowers?"

"Card inside," said George briefly.

He thought by this time that perhaps the Oriental was Mrs. Wortham's servant and that everything was as it should be, after all. He felt more sure of this when the Chinaman took the box and went with into another cabin, but his ideas were upset a few moments later when the box was thrust back into his hands and the supposed servant said:

"Big mistake. Me Chinese man, no 'Melican woman. Take away."

"S'cuse me," said George, backing out of the cabin, and as he retraced his steps to the head of the dock, he puzzled over what had happened. Was this Mr. Crawford's way of finding out who was in Cabin 72? Or was it a mistake and was the right person in some other stateroom? His questions and guesses were cut short by the Customs officer at the street entrance.

"Wrong party, sonny?"

"Yes. How did you know?"

"There was a telephone message from the hotel. They want you to call number 1064, and get the right address."

"Thanks," said George. "I'll call at once."

Mr. Crawford answered the ring.

"I'm at 32 South Street," he said. "Bring the flowers to me there."

The officer had the box in his hand when George came out of the telephone booth.

"Pretty heavy box for flowers, eh?" he queried.

"A little bit," was George's answer. "But there's a pound of chocolates in with them, I think."

"Oh, chocolates, eh?"

"Yes."

This was all very mysterious. Everybody he met seemed to act strangely. Hadn't anybody ever made a mistake in delivering some hot-houses roses before? He was almost sure, as he continued on through the streets to 32 South Street, that he was being followed, and so he was glad to get inside of the door and climb the narrow dark stairway to the room at the top. Mr. Crawford was there with three other men, and together they hastily opened the box and examined what was inside. The roses were there as before, but in place of the chocolates were two strange looking cans with Chinese lettering on them.

"It worked," crowed Mr. Crawford. "The dock was lined with Customs Officials, and yet the opium got through without a hint of trouble.''

Opium!

So that was it! George went swiftly over what had happened and could understand it all. This was the smuggling ring, and he had been duped into doing its unlawful work!

With a sudden rush he made for door and tried to get out.

''No, you don't my young friend,'' said Mr. Crawford. ''I should say not. Before you can get out to tell your little talk, we'll be hundreds of miles away, taking the latest shipment of Chinese dope into the interior of the country. Tie him up, men.''

Hastily they bound rope around George's wrists and ankles and threw him against the wall in a corner. They packed the opium in a small handbag. They pulled their caps down over their eyes. Then they started to leave the room.

But when they opened the door they faced two determined men with leveled revolvers.

''Hands up!'' came the stern command.

Everybody obeyed excepting Mr. Crawford. He rushed the door and knocked the gun out of one man's hand, but the other caught him in a strong grip and held him until the first man clamped handcuffs over his wrists.

When the men were taken away the officers untied George.

''We understand about you,'' one of them said, ''But just the same, we want you to go along with us and give us the details of the story, so that you can be a witness against both him and his Chinese agent, who was arrested on the ship.''

''I'll be a witness, all right,'' answered George. ''But first I want to call up the Herald-News. It goes to press in about ten minutes, and I've just got time to tell my scoop to a reporter friend of mine, who can get it written in time for the afternoon papers.''

The officer smiled.

''Go ahead,'' he said. ''I might have known that you were connected in some way with a newspaper.''

And the story did make the press, and it was a scoop. In fact, it was the biggest scoop that the Herald-News had ever published, and Ted Milne, who wrote the story from George's detail, got great credit and praise. All this pleased George, of course; but he got still greater pleasure when he saw the paper that afternoon. The story of how the smuggling ring was detected was on the front page, and underneath the headline, in big letters, was the sentence: ''By Ted Milne and George Dawson, Reporters.''—Selected.

GRANNY'S GIFTS

Aunt Nell looked up from her sewing to see what it was that made her two little nieces and her nephew so quiet.

They were standing in a row by the window, watching the flurrying snowflakes as they came tumbling one after another down from the sky.

Then Aunt Nell got up and started to look around, as though she were hunting for something.

''Have you lost something?''inquired Donald. ''Tell us what it is and we will help you hunt it.''

''You may all help me,'' answered Aunt Nell. ''I can't find your smiles. They seem to have been misplaced.''

''Our smiles!'' echoed Janet. ''How could we have lost them?''

Then they began to laugh.

''Why there they are. You have found them for me. Now let's see who can keep them the longest,'' said Aunt Nell.

''Well, it's pretty hard to smile today,'' replied Donald. ''We wanted to go coasting this New Year's morning, and now we can't go?''

''But just think how much better the coasting will be when it stops snowing. I don't think it will last much longer, so let's think of something nice to do indoors,'' comforted Aunt Nell. ''Bring your chairs over here by me, while I put on my thinking-cap.''

Pretty soon she exclaimed, ''Oh, I know! We will give Granny Martin a birthday surprise. She told me last week that New Year's Day is her birthday. She never receives any presents, although she climbs the hill to her mail-box every birthday.''

''Oh, goody! goody!'' cried the children, clapping their hands. ''But what shall the presents be?'' asked Edith.

''Oh, I'm sure we can find something,'' answered Aunt Nell. ''Donald, you bring me those boxes out of the top of my trunk. Janet, get me a pair of scissors, and Edith bring that tissue-paper and ribbon from my room while I see what I can find.''

In a few minutes they were all back again.

''Now,'' said Aunt Nell, as she started cutting some gay paper, ''let me show you how to wrap these oranges to make them pretty. Donald, you pack these pieces of candy neatly in a box while Edith wraps these handkerchiefs in pretty red paper. I will put this shawl in a box, and then you may wrap it, too.''

''There!'' exclaimed Edith, as they finished tying the ribbons, ''aren't they lovely?''

''See! it has stopped snowing. Shall we take the packages out now and put them in Granny Martin's mail-box?'' asked Donald. ''We will let Janet sit on the sled and hold the packages, while Edith and I pull.''

Soon they were trudging through the snow.

''Here we are,'' said Donald. ''I guess I shall have to stand on the sled, for the box is pretty high. You girls can hand me the packages.''

''Be careful of that loaf cake,'' warned Edith.

''Now let's run home and watch from our window,'' said Janet.

They had no sooner reached home than they saw Granny start slowly up the hill. Her eyes grew wide with surprise when she saw something in the box.

''Look!'' said Aunt Nell. ''She has found something else in the mail-box.''

''What is it?'' asked Janet. ''I don't see anything.''

''She has found the smiles that you put in the box for her,'' answered Aunt Nell.

''Oh, I never thought of that!'' exclaimed Edith. ''I'm going to see if I can't find some smiles for everyone I see all through this whole year.''—Mary Ruth Clemens, in Exchange.

RELIGION

It has been said that men carry on kind of a coasting trade with religion. In the voyage of life they profess to be in search of Heaven, but take care not to venture so far in their approximations to it as to entirely lose sight of the earth; and should their frail vessel be in danger of shipwreck, they will gladly throw their darling vices overboard, as other mariners their treasures, only to fish them up again when the storm is over.—Colton.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

CAMPAIGN ORDERED BY CONFERENCE

By order of the last Annual Conference we are endeavoring to increase the subscription list to the Herald to three thousand subscriptions. We have set May and June for the campaign months. Below will be found quotas for the different charges.

This order became necessary because the paper is now without endowment, and because the subscription list is so small it makes advertisement impossible. Three thousand subscribers will make the paper self-supporting.

Herald Agents

Every pastor has been asked to either put the campaign on in his church, or churches, himself, or appoint someone as agent to do this during the appointed time. Several of the pastors have said they would rather do the work themselves; others have asked the Secretary of Literature of the Woman's Auxiliary, where the church has such an organization, and still others have appointed agents to do the work. In either case the writer has asked that you let him know whom to depend on in the campaign. If any pastor reading this article has not done so, please do so at once.

Because the matter is URGENT (read other columns of this issue), we have asked that the work be done during May and June. The agent will make a canvass of the membership, and send all subscriptions and moneys to Dr. J. F. McCulloch, Greensboro, N. C., each week.

The subscription rates are $2.00 per year in advance.

LET'S GO! EVERYBODY WORKING, EVERYBODY REPORTING WEEKLY!

N. M. HARRISON.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

FINAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL FOR EASTERN N. C.

PLACE: Aurelian Springs High School.

DATE: May 26-30, 1930.

Registration fee, $1.00.

Evening Schedule: Beginning Monday evening, May 26, at 7:30. There will be two class periods and an intermission which will cover the period from 7:30-9:30 each evening. The school continues for five evenings, closing Friday evening, May 30.

Faculty and Courses

1. The Principles of Teaching—Rev. F. L. Gibbs.
2. Life of Christ—Rev. T. M. Johnson, D.D.
3. Missionary Materials and Methods—Rev. J. Clyde Auman.

Last Sunday a number of services were held in the interest of the school and a number of students signed up for the courses. Only one Sunday remains before the opening. I am sure every pastor, superintendent and church leader in the eastern section of the conference will push all they can in the final efforts for registration.

RALLY in the interest of the school will be held at the Aurelian Springs M. E. Church Sunday night, May 25. At that time an address will be given on the subject of Christian Education, the students will be given their text-books and assignments will be made by the instructors. Let us work and pray that this school will result in much for the Kingdom in this district of our Conference.

Yours for a successful school,

REV. J. CLYDE AUMAN, Registrar.
REV. F. L. GIBBS, Dean of Series.

AURELIAN SPRINGS STANDARD LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

May 26-30

On next Sunday night at the Mount Tabor M. E. Church in front of the High School there will be a meeting preparatory to the opening of the school the following Monday night. At this meeting you will be assigned to your classes and the respective teachers hope to be able to assign lessons. This is a most important meeting and I hope you will make every effort to be present. Mr. Gibbs, the dean of the school, will have it in charge.

Outside of the price of your book a registration fee of $1.00 will be the total expense of the school.

Here is our opportunity to better equip ourselves for the GREAT TASK: Will we use it? The hour, 8:00.

J. CLYDE AUMAN, District Chmn.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER

President C. E. Society, High Point College

JUNE 1: HOW TO AVOID A SUMMER SLUMP IN OUR SOCIETY WORK

Heb. 10:24, 25.

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—By more consecration. Rom 12: 1, 2.

Tuesday—Our need of fellowship. Mal. 3:16.

Wednesday—Work in summer. John 9:1-7.

Thursday—Zeal for God's house. John 2: 12-17.

Friday—Wayside evangelism. John 4:1-14.

Saturday—"Always abounding." I Cor. 15:58.

Suggestions to the Leader

Try an "Honor Roll" meeting, if you have not had one recently. Have some members canvass your membership and secure as many people to promise to attend the meetings of the society throughout the summer months of June, July and August. Have them pledge to attend every meeting. Then at the meeting have these names read as the Honor Roll member candidates for the specified time. The attendance will necessarily be checked at each meeting. Your president might speak briefly on "The Value of Faithful Attendance."

The suggested hymns are as follows: "Where He Leads I'll Follow," "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go," "It Pays to Serve Jesus," "Faith of Our Fathers," "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" and "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord."

Leader's Talk

At the very beginning do not expect a slump! We usually get about what we expect. There are a few things that we should do to ward off a slump: plan your meetings ahead; undertake real pieces of service—do things that are really worth while; vary the meetings so that no one will know what to expect at the next meeting, for, after all, variety is the spice of life. We should not have the type of religion that is seasonal, and if we have this kind the sooner we get rid of it the better. It is high time that we are taking more seriously our obligations in regard to the Christ we profess to be following. At last, though, we are beginning to see that a slump in numbers may not necessarily mean a slump in the power of an organization—still there is strength in numbers. If the Christian Endeavor Society is as it should be—a place to meet our Lord rather than a place to meet one another—there is no reason why we have to disband our meetings or have such a few present that there can be no meeting.

Answer These Questions

1. What are the most important causes for the summer slump?
2. What are some examples of united work that your society can do during the summer that will aid in sustaining interest?
3. How could your society brighten things up a bit?
4. Give several good suggestions to avoid the slump.
5. Do you think that the weather has anything to do with the difficulty of living a Christian life?
6. What do you consider the reasons for the indifference of so-called Christians!

Poetry

The world is waiting for you, young man,
If your purpose is strong and true;
If out of your treasure of mind and heart
You can bring things old and new.
If you know the truth that makes men free,
And with skill can bring it to view,
The world is waiting for you, young man,
The world is waiting for you.

—S. S. Calkins.

Rest is not quitting
The busy career;
Rest is the fitting
Of one's self to one's sphere.

'Tis the brook's motion,
Clear without strife,
Fleeting to ocean
After this life.

'Tis loving and serving
The highest and best:
'Tis onward, unswerving,
And this is true rest.

The Lord had a job for me; but I had so much to do,
I said, "You get somebody else, or wait till I get through."
I don't know how the Lord came out; no doubt He got along;
But I felt kind o' sneakin' like; I knew I'd done God wrong.
One day I needed the Lord—needed Him right away;
But He never answered me at all, and I could hear Him say,
Down in my accusin' heart, "Child, I've got too much to do;
You get somebody else, or wait till I get through."
Now, when the Lord has a job for me, I never try to shirk;
I drop what I have on hand and do the Lord's good work,
And my affairs can run along or wait till I get through.
Nobody else can do the work that God has marked for you.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S RALLY AT FRIENDSHIP

The District Young People's Rally, which includes First Church and Fountain Place of Burlington, Gibsonville, Glen Raven, Alamance and Mt. Hermon charges was held a Friendship church Sunday, May 4.

The weather was fine and we had good congregations for both morning and afternoon services.

Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, pastor of Friendship church, led the worship program. "The Abundant Spiritual Life," and preached a very helpful and inspiring sermon, using as his theme, "Youth and the New Church" at the morning service.

A bountiful dinner was served on the grounds which everyone enjoyed immensely.

Miss Bessie Holmes, of Bethel church, led the worship service at the afternoon meeting. She used as her topic, "Jesus, the Explorer."

Then Mrs. H. W. Wade, of Fountain Place church, Burlington, sweetly sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," with Miss Juanita Amick as accompanist.

Rev. Lawrence Little, of the School of Religious Education of Duke University, brought a splendid message to young people in his usual masterful and inspiring way.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, Mr. Lee Moser, of Belmont Church, Mount Hermon Charge; vice-president, Miss Hilda Amick, of Fountain Place Church, Burlington; secretary, Miss Bessie Holmes, of Bethel Church, Alamance Charge; treasurer, Miss Tula Paul, of First Church, Burlington. We are sure this splendid group of leaders will handle the work of this district in a way that will accomplish much good during the coming year.

MAE PATTERSON, President.

—Great floods in Arkansas and Texas rob thousands of people of their homes. The storm period seems not to have passed.

-Will Smith, of Greensboro, son of Dudley Smith, came to the end of his life last week after weeks of illness. His funeral at his home was largely attended by friends. It was conducted by Rev. Mr. Hinckle, his pastor.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Kannapolis.—The interest and attendance at Sunday school and preaching continue to increase. The attendance at Sunday school Sunday was 112, the highest ever. The pastor preached on "Motherhood" and appropriate music was rendered. Gifts were given to the oldest and youngest mother present, Mrs. N. E. Tilley being the oldest mother and Mrs. Elizabeth Tilley the youngest, their ages 80 and 21, respectively. One new member, Mr. W. G. Plyler, was received into the church at this service. This makes a total of 15 members received this year. Our people are working and talking a new church and we have started a building fund with about $200 in the treasury, and we are hoping before very long our dream will be realized and we will have a church in Kannapolis. If there are any of our people who would like to help in this undertaking we would appreciate it. Send donations to the treasurer, Mrs. J. L. Love, Box 53, Kannapolis, N. C.

Lexington.—Our work is going along nicely. Our Sunday school is showing up well each Sunday under the excellent leadership of Mr. H. C. Koonts as superintendent and W. A. Snider as assistant superintendent.

The revival meeting closed on Friday evening. Rev. O. C. Loy has done some real good preaching during the meeting. We had 41 conversions during the meeting and received 19 new members in the church.

Bro. Isley has almost doubled the membership of the church since he came here about a year and a half ago.

We are very glad to see our work come out so much. We all feel very grateful to Mr. Isley and his mother for the splendid work they have done for us since coming here.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Bryan Myers on Thursday evening at 7:30. Our Ladies' Aid has meant very much to our church and we hope to see it make progress, as it is a great help to any church.

Mount Zion, Pinnacle.—Saturday, May 10th, the second quarterly conference was held at our church, all churches except one being represented and all seem to be working together in harmony. Brothers Ellis Stone and Oliver Jones are nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference.

Some of the men of our community met at the church on last Thursday and replaced the old roof on the church with a much needed new one.

The Ladies' Auxiliary held a meeting immediately after Sunday school Sunday, 11th.

Tuesday, April 29th, the little three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Logan, who died Sunday, was buried at Moent Zion.

Sunday, May 18th, the annual memorial services will be held at our church. We extend to all who have relatives or friends buried in Mount Zion cemetery and to any others who so desire to come and take part in this service. Services will begin at 11 o'clock. Picnic dinner will be served on the church ground. We suggest that you bring home-grown flowers to decorate the graves.

Best wishes to the Herald and readers.

St. Paul Church.—Since our last report death has entered our church and taken our Pastor, Rev. N. Brittain. He had served us faithfully for three and a half years and we had learned to love him and to look forward to his friendly visits in our homes, and only those who have lost their pastor can understand just what his death has meant to St. Paul church. On the day before he died he asked his wife to play and sing a song for him. It was a song his mother had taught him to sing when he was a little boy. At his request his body was carried back to Weaverville, the home of his childhood, and the last night on earth was spent with his aged father and mother. Just why in the midst of a prosperous year death came and stayed his hand, we do not know, but sometime we'll understand. On Sunday night following his death there was a memorial service held for him at the church. Mr. C. E. Wilson had charge of the service. Both men and women spoke of his beautiful Christian life and what it had meant to them.

President Taylor has sent Bro. W. F. Ashburn to us to finish up this year's work He is no stranger to St. Paul people as he has preached for us before and we welcome him to our ranks.

On Sunday night, April 27, Rev. J. L. Trollinger preached for us; there was a large crowd out to hear him. He is well known and has many friends here.

Easter services were held at the 11 o'colck hour on Easter Sunday. The children spoke their parts well and a large crowd was out to hear them. We owe our thanks to Miss Flossie Jones for training the children so well.

The second quarterly ocnference was held Friday night, May 9th, with a good report. Mrs. N. Brittain and Mrs. J. S. Wade were elected nominees to the next Annual Conference.

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Yates.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Wade and children of Burlington with us at 11 o'clock Sunday.

One hundred and forty-three were present at Sunday school yesterday.

Prayer meeting at 7:30 every Wednesday night. MRS. J. S. WADE, Reporter.

Siler City.—The Senior Philathea Class has made a bedspread recently to raise Money for the benefit of the church. Each member took one square and raised all the money she could by getting someone to pay 25 cents to embroider their name on it. On Monday night, April 28th, the class met in their Sunday school room and had a business meeting, followed by a social. At this time we brought our squares together and found we had $57.00. Mrs. L. L. Woody then bought the squares and will finish it into a nice bedspread and present it to the Children's Home.

The third Sunday was a good day for us. We had 111 in Sunday school. At the morning service Dr. Williams brought us a great message on "The Lord's Supper," after which about two-thirds of the congregation partook of the sacred feast.

Then, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Smith, of Liberty M. P. church, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Johnson and two sons from Burlington First M. P. church joined with us by letter. We are glad indeed to have these worthy members join with us and extend to them a hearty welcome. Others will join later.

At the evening hour we heard another wonderful message on "Doubting Thomas." This was a great sermon of Dr. Williams'.

On the second Sunday, Mother's Day, we had 108 in Sunday school. Some of our most faithful ones were absent, but we had some new ones. We are sorry our superintendent had to be absent on account of illness, but hope he can soon fill his place again. Just after Sunday school we had a short Mother's Day program, consisting of duets, quartets, readings, recitations, and a talk by Mr. T. L. Smith. I'm sure every one present enjoyed this impressive Mother's Day program.

Littleton Church, Littleton Circuit.—Things are moving on about as usual on this work. The young people's Christian Endeavor is increasing in number. They recently had a picnic supper and weiner roast, and all seemed to enjoy it. They sold some Mother's Day pins and procured a little sum for the treasury.

Our membership in this church is very small, hence we do not realize what we would like for our pastor and general church interests. We have two services per month—third Sunday morning and first Sunday evening. There being services at several other churches our attendance is quite small. We try not to be discouraged but keep hoping.

This week Rev. Lawrence Little is expected here and I hope his visit will be successful.

Wishing the Herald and our entire church prosperity and blessings. REPORTER.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We are sorry the rain kept so many away yesterday. Our pastor had planned to give us two sermons on Mother, one at the morning and one at the evening hour; and as he did not think the attendance large enough he postponed the morning sermon until the fourth Sunday evening. Mr. Russell gave some very good advice at the evening hour, of how to show our appreciation to mother. Mr. Glenn McClimon and his sister, Mrs. Sallie Bennett, sang a beautiful duet (in memory of mother. We were glad to have visitors from Greenville, S. C., at both the morning and evening hours. We are sorry to hear that Mr. Roosevelt McClimon, a member of this church, is sick at his home in Greer, S. C. We wish for him a speedy recovery.

Greensville Charge.—We entered our work on Greensville under conditions like we never had in any other field. This will explain in a measure why we have not written before. We have been trying to find our bearings and get things going. We are meeting with some encouragement and slowly and, we hope surely, the work is taking on new life. Congregations are growing to be much larger than at first. Since we have had time to find out more about our people we find some of the best people we have met anywhere. They are appreciative and responsive. They like for the pastor to visit them in their homes and they are always nice to him.

The first Sunday in May was our day at Philadelphia church, but the pastor's throat was giving him trouble and he just could not talk, but Rev. M. P. Chambliss was visiting his home-folks at this time and he came to our assistance and filled our appointment. Bro. Chambliss brought us a good message. Philadelphia is his home church and his home-folks have a high regard for him and appreciate him. We were better last Sunday and we held a Mother's Day service at Ebenezer at 11 a. m.; also at Philadelphia at 3 p. m. Both these services were well attended.

We are trying to keep before our people the Confrence program and we are making a little progress, but not like we would like to see. J. B. O'BRIANT, Pastor.

Gibsonville Church.—The revival meeting began here on Sunday, May 11, and is being continued into this week. There have been several reclamations and conversions. There are still others who are not Christians but have shown an interest in the meetings by their presence and have asked Christians to pray for them. Christians, let's pray for them and encourage them to make a decision for Christ before the meeting closes.

There are still others who are not Christians and are not attending the meetings. Pray for them that they, too, may become interested to the extent that they will let Jeses have His way in their lives.

On last Sunday morning at the regular preaching hour Mr. Bethea conducted a special service for children. Most of the children were converted. The father of two of the children was converted.

Mrs. Wade and Miss Pauline Pickard, of Burlington, have been giving us some splendid music in song. Miss Juanita Amick, of Burlington, plays their accompaniment. Miss Ruth Huffman, of Greensboro College, has furnished some special music that has been very much appreciated.

The Christian Endeavor societies meet each Sunday at their regular time and places. The Ladies' Aid holds its regular monthly meeting.

The young ladies' Bible class served supper to the Rotary Club on last Tuesday evening. They are planning to serve again next Tuesday at 7 p. m. REPORTER.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—Pastor Way was here Sunday morning at 11:00. He used as his text, "And his name shall be called wonderful." After the sermon the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed. We were glad to have a number of visitors with us.

Miss Lena Hunter will be hostess to the Junior Missionary Society next Saturday afternoon at 3:00. All the society members are requested to be present.

The meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary has been postponed until next week.

The C. E. Society will meet for its regular semi-monthly meeting Sunday morning immediately after Sunday school. Lola Long will be the leader. The topic is: "How Missionaries Advance World Peace." We hope all that can will remain for this meeting.

Our hearts have been greatly saddened by the death of one of our good members, Mrs. Veola Whitman, who passed away at her home on Monday, May 12, at 2 a. m. She was a loyal church member and attended church services as much as possible until about a year ago, when her health would no longer permit her to go. She was for some time teacher of the Junior Boys' Class in Sunday school. She was loved by all her pupils and they regretted very much to give up their beloved teacher. She will be greatly missed in the church as well as in the home and her community. She was a woman of high esteem and was dearly loved by all who knew her. It was hard to give her up, but God knows best, and we are sure "our loss" is heaven's gain.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Douglass, of East Bend. In addition to her parents, one brother, and one sister, she is survived by her husband, Hobart, and two children, Nora Mae and Clinton.

The funeral services were conducted at Pleasant Hill church on Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 by the pastor, Rev. C. B. Way, and Rev. Ellis Norman, of East Bend. Interment followed in the church graveyard. The sympathy of many friends goes out to this family who are so deeply bereft.

We are also sorry to report the death of another one of our good church members, Mr. John Speas, who passed away this morning, May 19. He was the father of Prof. W. B. Speas, superintendent of our Sunday school. The funeral service will be held at this church Tuesday morning at 11:00. The service will be conducted by our pastor, Rev. C. B. Way. Interment will follow in the church graveyard.

LOLA LONG, Reporter.

Pleasant Grove.—Our Sunday school is doing fine. We have 190 on roll; there were 190 present Sunday; collection, $7.27. There are others in the community we have not been able to reach.

We were glad to have so many out at the 11 o'clock service to hear the timely message delivered by our pastor from I Cor. 11:24. Then the Lord's Supper was administered, 78 taking communion.

The Christian Endeavor is very much alive. We feel there is a bright future for our church if we can keep our young people lined up in the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor.

Mr. Arnold Williams, while on a visit with parents, had to have an operation for appendicitis at the Guilford General Hospital at High Point. We are glad he is getting along nicely and is now back at the parsonage.

REPORTER.

High Point, Welch Memorial.—Welch Memorial is in the midst of a revival. Rev. L. W. Gerringer is doing the preaching to the delight of all. There have already been a number of professions and reclamations. We are hoping and praying for even greater results yet to come. Monday night was class night. All the classes of the Sunday school attended in bodies. It was a fine service. Tuesday night is to be Family Night. All families are invited to sit together. Wednesday night is to be Young People's Night. We are expecting good things fro mthese services.

Last Tuesday night just at the close of the service at the church someone asked that the pastor go to the parsonage at once. He obeyed orders promptly, thinking that someone was either in trouble or wanted to get into trouble. On arriving at the parsonage the pastor found that somebody had doubtless been in trouble, for great numbers of packages, so many and so large that they certainly were troublesome to carry, had been unloaded in the dining room. It was a bit of trouble for the pastor and family to get themselves composed because of the very pleasant surprise sprung on us, but it was no trouble whatever for us to appreciate all this. But then again it was trouble for us to find words to express our appreciation for this very kind token. God bless the good people of Welch Memorial who were so thoughtful and kind. It is impossible at this time to make mention of names or give quantities of the gifts. God knows and God will reward. GEO. L. CURRY.

Macedonia, Fallston Charge.—Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under the management of our superintendent, Mr. W. L. Huss.

Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Morgan, has filled all his appointments. On last Sunday he preached to us, using as his subject, "Why Christ Was Brought Into the World." Every one present enjoyed it. We had a good crowd at Sunday school today, and almost every one stayed for class meeting, led by our class-leader, W. L. Huss.

Our pastor's wife has been right sick with blood pressure, but we are glad she is improving some now.

Our second quarterly conference was held last Saturday at Friendship; the next will be held at Laurel Hill.

MRS. CARL DAVIS, Reporter.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—Our Sunday school attendance is good this spring; 130 on roll Sunday. Bro. Powell was with us Sunday and as always brought an interesting message. His talk was on "Good Citizenship."

Mrs. Beatrice Craven was received as a member of Spring Hill church Sunday by letter from Pleasant Grove M. P. Church. We extend to her a very hearty welcome.

The Ladies' Aid met Saturday night at the home of Mrs. Johnson. The report of the secretary showed that since last summer they had cleared $101.28. At this meeting it was decided to have a lawn party at Mrs. Herman Haynes' on Saturday night, June 7, for the benefit of the church.

The first Sunday in June Mr. J. B. Swain closes his singing school at Spring Hill. There will be Sunday school at 10 o'clock, then singing the remainder of the morning and in the afternoon also. The same day at 8 o'clock Bro. Powell will preach. Everyone is invited to attend all these services.

Mrs. J. D. Collett has been kept away from church the past few Sundays, but we hope she will be with us soon. REPORTER.

Concord. In our second quarterly meeting, Bros. L. R. Wensil and W. J. Widenhouse were elected nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference.

Our Sunday school numbered 303 last Sunday, May 18th. There were good congregations last Sunday at both services.

The greatest hindrance to the cherch here is the business depression. The mills are running on short time. We hope for better conditions. G. F. MILLAWAY.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Charge.—Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely under the leadership of our very efficient superintendent, Mrs. L. J. Maynard, although the attendance is not what it should be. Sunday school rooms have been curtained off, which is a great help, as we haven't been fortunate enough to have them built. Our pastor, Mr. Whitehead, has been giving us some splendid sermons. With his power of analysis he gets a great deal out of a seemingly small text, and he has words to express himself well and forcefully.

We are planning to hold our annual memorial service the third Sunday in June. It will be an all-day service; everybody invited.

First Church, High Point.—On last Sunday the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered a forceful and timely sermon on "Being Spiritually-Minded," which was appropriate to the Penteeostal season now approaching the 1900th anniversary. He said in part: "The superior life always finds its greatest pleasure in the spirit rather than in material things. Paul warned that to be fleshly-minded leads to destruction. The master minds of the world have been driven to despair by a failure to understand the ways of life. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Thinking may mean a clash of ideals; the thought of yesterday may be different from the attitude of today. What is our attitude toward Jesus? The hour of Christ in a nation, college, church, or individual is an inflowing of new power. To be spiritually minded is to accept the mind of Christ. It does not mean that one must be a hermit or recluse, but to be minded of the spirit. The highest art of living lies in the satisfaction of our desires, and the superior choices of life. I would pause long enocgh to suggest to you that the flesh does not mean the body as we see it, but it is the sinful nature; not the body alone, but that part of us, which is under dominion of sin. To be sinfully-minded is death, but to be spirit-filled is joy and peace. To make the pursuit of finer things of life the purpose of our lives is the source of the greatest happiness and peace. The influence of God wants to come into our hearts. Spiritually is seeing the will of God and doing it.

The Sunday evening service, which has been conducted at 5 p. m. during the spring months, has been changed to 8 p. m. for the summer upon the advice of the Advisory committee.

The Circles of the Woman's Auxiliary met in the homes last Monday afternoon. No. 1, Miss Margaret Snipes, chairman, will meet Thursday evening with Miss Esther Pritchard, 216 W. Ray street.

The Wednesday evening supper meeting will be held again on Wednesday, beginning promptly at 6:45 p. m. The minister will speak on the topic, "Loving the Unseen Lord."

The topic discussed at the C. E. meeting Monday evening was "What Are the Causes of War?"

A most important meeting is being held at the College this (Tuesday) afternoon, when the trustees are to elect a successor to President R. M. Andrews, who resigned his post several weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo T. Penny have returned from a motor trip to Lexington, Ky.

Mrs. L. J. Diffee, Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, and Mrs. F. M. Pickett will form a party which sails for a trip to Europe May 31st.

Pleasant Grove Ladies' Aid.—The Pleasant Grove Ladies' Aid met in the home of Mrs. G. L. Hilton. The devotional service was conducted by Mrs. Vivian Cecil. Our pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams gave es an interesting talk. The society decided to buy three dozen Hymnals for the church. Our collection amounted to $17.75.

After the meeting delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Hilton and Mrs. J. E. Veach.

Our next meeting will be held with Mrs. J. E. Cecil.

MRS. CLYDE PAYNE, Reporter.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—We are glad to report that the older people are taking more interest in Sunday school. They have at last realized that Sunday school is not for young people and children alone.

We were indeed glad to have President Taylor with us May 4; also our pastor's friends from Asheboro. We extend to them a hearty invitation to come again.

Our pastor filled his appointment yesterday with an inspiring sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was administered. We were glad to have Brother Ferree's family to worship with us.

We extend our heartfelt sympathies to our former pastor, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, who is ill. We hope for speedy recovery.

South Lexington Charge.—It has been some time since I have sent in a report, but no doubt Herald readers have noticed that the charge has capable reporters, who from time to time have been furnishing information concerning the work here.

The work of the charge is in good condition at present. At the South Lexington church the Sunday school has an enrollment of 301 and the average attendance is over 200. No doubt this progress is in large measure due to the efficiency of the superintendent, Mr. H. C. Koontz, who is constantly seeking new and progressive measures for use in the Sunday school. Especially strong is the Men's Bible class, of which Mr. C. L. Hedrick is teacher.

The Ladies' Aid Society, of which Mrs. B. F. Everidge is president ,is at work as usual, both making and carrying out plans for raising money to meet the financial obligations of the church.

The young people are taking a keen interest in the work of the Christian Endeavor Society. At present a play is being learned, the proceeds from which are to apply on the Society's pledge of $30.00 on the Dollar a Member for the college. Incidentally, the whole amount to be raised by South Lexington has been pledged.

Our revival began here April 22 and continued till May 2. Rev. O. C. Loy did the preaching in a very able and pleasing manner to large and interested audiences. As a result of the efforts put forth, 41 persons made profession of faith; and 23 joined the church, with a prospect of more additions later. This number of accessions makes a total of 28 new members for the year. It was a pleasure to all to have Bro. Loy and wife with us, and their efforts are greatly appreciated.

At Mount Carmel the Sunday school is doing good work under the efficient superintendency of Mr. Swicegood. The Christian Endeavor Society is well supported by the young people of the church. The Ladies' Auxiliary has raised over $100 on a quilt they are making, which fact gives some indication of their interest in and devotion to the advancement of the church work.

Lumber is on the ground for a new church building, to have in addition to a commodious auditorium, seven Sunday School rooms. We are very grateful to Mr. Fritts, a member of the Shiloh church, for the donation of a light plant to the church.

The second quarterly conference was held at Mount Carmel, May 13. In addition to the routine business of the conference, W. F. Honeycutt from South Lexington, and W. W. Swicegood from Mount Carmel were nominated to be voted on as delegates to the Annual Conference. Both are able men; and either one will make a good representative for the charge. C. G. ISLEY.

Asheboro.—Another Sunday School attendance record was smashed yesterday when our attendance went to 305. The school has made a new record for the past four Sundays as follows: 266, 268, 289, 305 and all this has been done without any attendance contest or any mushroom scheme. It is just an enthusiastic effort on the part of the school to reach the people of the community.

Six more new members were received into church membership yesterday morning on profession of faith, making nineteen to be received in the past two Sundays.

Next Sunday morning we will have our annual memorial service for all the deceased members of the church. There will be an appropriate sermon and the roll of the honored dead will be called. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Shelby.—Although it has been quite a while since there has been a report from our church we have not been asleep all the time. Some much needed repairs have been made on the church. A primary Sunday school room has been curtained off and equipped with little chairs and a semi-circle table—a junior classroom has also been curtained.

Our pastor donated twenty-five copies of 'The Complete Church Hymnal' to the church. Brother Lowdermilk is a great believer in congregational singing. We appreciate very much these nice song books.

The second quarterly conference was held the first Saturday night in May. The business was transacted in a harmonious way. The nominees for delegates to the annual conference are: Mr. J. T. Ramsey and Mrs. T. H. Glenn.

There has also been some work done at the parsonage. One of the bedroom walls was given a coat of paint and all the windows which needed screening were measured and fitted with complete screens.

Yesterday was a very good day for us considering that a number of our people were attending memorial services at old Home Church in the country. Our Sunday School is moving along nicely. We enrolled several new members yesterday. The messages brought to us both at the morning and evening services were helpful and made us feel that we should be busy in the Master's vineyard. If the members would only attend regularly and co-operate as they should, the work of the Master would be extended more rapidly and much joy would be theirs. We realize that the progress that is being made here is only a result of the efforts of our pastor and his companion. Pray that we may each see our duty and help in this great work. work.

REPORTER.

Mt. Carmel Church.—The C. E. Society is making progress and an increase of members. Before two weeks ago meetings were held every Sunday night. The attendance was not so good, so it was decided that to hold our number and gain new ones we would change the time of the meeting from Sunday night to Sunday following Sunday School. This change was made and we found that it helped and we are having more success with the meetings.

The people of Mount Carmel Church wish to thank Mr. Jeff Fritts for the fine light plant he has given the church. The people appreciate it very much even though the light system has not been installed yet.

Shiloh.—Who does not love to go home? Isn't it a happy time when the whole family that has scattered here and there over the land can all come together again at the childhood home? Shiloh's family, or at least part of it, came back home on the Third Sunday in May, and how we all enjoyed the "Homecoming." The Mother Church gave the glad hand of welcome to every son and daughter, also to every friend and even to the strangers. We were glad to have each and everyone, and sincerely hope you will come again. We hope you will be a stranger at our home church but once, and that Shiloh may be a blessing to all who come within her borders.

Rev. R. S. Troxler preached at 11 a. m. on "The Challenge of the Church." After dinner on the ground, we heard inspiring songs from the Carlton quartet of Erlanger, the Berrier sisters, Miss Willie Veigh Leonard, and the congregation, too. We heard an inspiring address by Dr. P. E. Lindley on "A Constructive Program of Christian Living."

Short talks were made by Brother Clate Koonts, Brother Lewis Berrier, Mrs. Lewis Berrier, Brother Robert Leonard and Brother Sid Kedrick, all of whom were home-coming children. Already we are looking forward to the next home-coming day.

On Mother's Day, our C. E. Society gave a splendid Mother's Day program at 8 p. m. It was well attended and it seemed that every phase of a mother's life was portrayed in the pageant, and it was well done. Sure, we are grateful for such a C. E. society!

We have always been glad to have Brother Joe Roach, a young Baptist preacher, come to see us. But do you know what he has done? I'll just tell you. He came last week, took one of our very best, sweetest girls and changed her name to Mrs. Roach and is going to take her home with him. In other words Mr. Roach and Miss Florence Sink were married last week. We shall miss Florence, but Shiloh sends her very best wishes for Mr. and Mrs. Roach to have many, many years of happiness and service together. We are glad that we have girls who are worthy and capable of filling so important a place—the wife of a minister.

Mrs. Carl Berrier has been visiting at the home of Mr. W. J. Berrier.

Mrs. Avery Beck, who had a major operation several weeks ago, is at home and seems to be improving nicely.

With very best wishes,

MRS. WILEY SHOAF.

Two Weeks' Report

The above is our financial report for two weeks, covering the first two Sundays of the month. We were both in Baltimore last Monday and Tuesday attending the Woman's Missionary Convention, and the Board meetings, so could not get our report to the Herald. That accounts for the two weeks' report at this time.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. G. G. Bivins, Hillsboro, N. C., 1 coat, 3 pieces of underwenr, 3 boys' shirts, 6 dresses and some small pieces of goods.

Mrs. J. W. Crew, Pleasant Hlil, N. C., 1 girl's coat, 9 dresses, 1 skirt, 2 pair socks, 1 hat, 1 pair bloomers, 1 sweater, 2 suits of boys' underwear and 1 boy's shirt.

Mrs. J. W. Harriss, High Point, N. C., 1 dining room suite—table, serving table and sideboard.

Mr. C. C. Muse, High Point, N. C., one chandelier for our "Gift Room."

Little Elvin Coble

Through other reports many of you have already learned of the death of little Elvin Coble, one of our seven-year-old boys. He was a bright, sunny-faced, happy boy and it was always a pleasure to meet him and to look into his face.

On Tuesday, May 6th, Elvin, together with other children, was playing on concrete steps at the school building. He fell and broke his nose and was knocked unconscious by the fall. Doctors set the nose and bandaged the face, and for two days he seemed to be doing well. Then pneumonia and meningitis both set in, and in spite of all that could be done our little one was called home about 9:30 on Friday evening, May 9th, 1930. We were all saddened by his going but we bow in submission to the will of an all-wise Father.

Funeral services were conducted from the boys' dormitory at the Home on Sunday, May 11th, at 2 p. m. by our pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, and the services were concluded by Rev. J. D. Williams, D. D., at Mount Pleasant Baptist Church, near Liberty, where the remains of little Elvin were laid to rest near the body of his father.

Thus, during a period of nearly 20 years, this Home has been called upon to mourn the loss of its second child. God has been gracious unto us in sparing the lives of our children and we praise His holy name.

Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON.

YADKIN ALUMNI TO BANQUET

On last Founder's Day a number of the former students gathered at High Point College and organized an alumni association. to be composed of former students of Yadkin College. It is now being planned that Yadkin College Alumni Association and the High Point College Alumni Association have a joint banquet in High Point College May 31 at 5 o'clock, p. m. All former students of Yadkin College, with wives or husbands, are urged to attend. This is a great courtesy the High Point College Alumni Association has extended to former students of Yadkin College and wherever possible the students of the college of other days should respond to this call and gather ourselves together for a good time and at the same time mingle with the youth and product of the present day college. The price of the plate is $1.00 and it is very important that all persons who plan to attend this banquet notify at once Mr. Z. I. Walser or the undersigned, both of High Point, N. C. Be sure to be with us and be sure to give us notice of your plans.

It might be of interest to all friends and students of Yadkin College to know that "Old Yadkin" is now doing service from its new steel tower. Come and see the old bell in the new home and once again hear the tones so familiar to so many of us.

Yours for a great banquet,

GEO. L. CURRY.

Thirty-nine farmers in Cleveland County have entered the corn-growing contest. Reports on the progress of this work will be made each month to County Agent R. W. Shoffner.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Greensboro, N. C.

—Bro. E. P. Sharpe, candidate for County Commissioner in Guilford, has for slogan, "Let's economize." Many voters appreciate the need of doing that very thing.

—Mrs. Z. M. Rea, of Charlotte, whose serious illness was recently noted, was buried at Yadkin College on Monday of this week, Rev. N. M. Harrison conducting the service.

—Attorney Long, of Graham, delivered the address at Tabernacle's memorial service last Sunday forenoon. In the afternoon those who died within the year were honored by sketches read by various ladies. This made an interesting feature. Rev. H. L. Isley is the capable and popular pastor.

—Calvary church will hold its second quarterly conference tonight and tomorrow night will have a social meeting on the lawn, with ice cream refreshments.

—Rev. C. W. Bates in his recent trip to Baltimore took occasion to visit some of the scenes of his ministry in his early days.

—Rev. William Douglas Mackenzie, president of the Hartford Seminary Foundation, has resigned, and has been elected president emeritus, after 27 years of service. He addressed our General Conference in Pittsburgh in 1908, representing the Congregationalists in the interest of church union.

—We thank Bro. Gurley O. Coble for a fine collection of peonies of different colors from his flower garden near Pleasant Garden. Bro. Coble has a fine taste for the beautiful and is willing to give the labor necessary to grow choice flowers. It was he that gave Calvary church her splendid lawn.

—The trustees of High Point College met on Tuesday and elected Dr. G. I. Humphreys, minister of the Maryland Conference, for president. Brother Humphreys is highly recommended by his attainments and achievements. We hope for him success. He is affable, genial, and we believe is prepared to appreciate the demands of the position to which he is now called. He will not find easy sailing, but he cannot expect that. Hard work, everlasting patience, invincible hope will be required. Let us pray for him and the college and lend a helping hand when we can.

A Better Day for Mother!

Since the electric range has been perfected, thoroughly tested, and proven, a new day has come for the mother and housewife.

Because of the absolute control of temperatures and other automatic features, and because of its simplicity, its absolute dependability and the certainty of results the electric range makes its possible for the housewife to spend much less time in the kitchen—it enables her to spend hours upon hours each week at other duties or in outdoor or other recreation. It enables her to spend more tiime with her children, gives her more time for church and social activities.

In addition to its other advantages the electric range, because the oven is thoroughly insulated, makes the kitchen as cool and comfortable in summer as any other room in the house. And the glistening, white enamel range adds to the attractiveness of the kitchen, too.

More than 13,000 housewives on our lines are today enjoying the comfort and joy that are assured with the installation of an electric range. Between 3,000 and 4,000 more will purchase ranges during our Eighth Electric Range Campaign, which began May 12 and will end June 21. During this campaign $10 down will put a range in your home and you will have 20 months to pay the balance. $10 allowance for your old stove. You can save $35 to $55 by purchasing your electric range during this period. Enquire at any of our stores.

The Way of Love

Strict Justice fills the measure full,
But not a drop does she give more:
A bit too much or one drop less
Would miss the mark of her nice score.

Injustice gives, but not enough;
She stops before the measure's full:
She has an eye to her own gain
In every deal in flax or wool.

Of Love we tell a different tale:
She gladly gives beyond due measure;
She fills the cup to running over
And finds in life the noblest pleasure.

Delinquent Tax Lists

They make painful reading. We feel that something is wrong when so much property is advertised for sale for taxes. In some cases it means only neglect on the part of the owner, the property being some outlying piece which had been almost forgotten. But in many cases it is the home which is advertised for sale. Delinquency may have been due to misfortune. In such cases it seems unreasonably harsh for the state to take the home. We doubt whether the men who spend the taxes appreciate the difficulty many people have in paying their taxes. If the officials of the state and counties were as economical as the average tax payer has to be, we believe tax rates might be reduced and public interests served just as well as now. There are officials who are too proud to be economical. Voters ought to be more discriminating in the choice of their officials. Every city and county needs a vigilance committee to discover and make known unfitness for office in those who are proposed. The people have to pay a penalty for choosing unfit men for public office.

What Should Drys Do Next?

Liquor champions have succeeded in throwing dust into the eyes of many people and have by their loud clamors caused some weak-nerved drys to tremble. But there is one thing they have not done: they have not changed the essential character of the liquor traffic. It remains and will ever remain inherently wrong. Because it is wrong it cannot be licensed, no matter how much revenue it promises to produce. Because it is an outrageous wrong-doer it cannot be ignored and allowed to pursue its destructive course unhindered. I pity the men who have fallen victims to drink because I have some appreciation of what they suffer. But I would not show true pity for them if I did not try to save their sons and neighbors from a like condition. Cannot the wets see that the drys are their best friends? Instead of trying to deprive them of a right and a privilege we are trying to remove from them a danger and a terrible evil. Philanthropy is the motive power of the prohibition movement and the method of the movement is the only logical and effective method. I see nothing for prohibitionists to do but to press forward. We cannot ignore the traffic. We cannot license it without sin. We must oppose it, prohibit it, stop it. Conscience demands this of us. Our duty to the young and the weak and the ignorant requires it of us. The battle is ours and we must fight it through to victory if it take years.

Last Week's Issue

Last week's issue of the HERALD was managed by Rev. N. M. Harrison, of Charlotte, N. C., to further the work of the Annual Conference Committee on HERALD Subscription Field Service, of which committee he is chairman. We most heartily thank him and his co-laborers for their words of appreciation of the paper's service and its ability to serve. Brother Harrison made some statements that we did not expect to see. We felt as Mark Twain did when he read in a newspaper an account of his death: "That report is greatly exaggerated." But we appreciate the "bouquet" with its rare exotic flowers and submit that the man capable of writing the first two editorials of last week has a most generous heart as well as a strong imagination. But Brother Harrison with the instincts and experience of a business man has insight into the real situation and is trying to tell our people that church papers do not come by magic or mere volition. We already have evidence that this special issue made an unusually effective appeal. We have hope that the work of the committee and of pastors and other friends will prove that one subscriber to each ten church members is indeed feasible. We believe there are numbers of first-class people in our church in North Carolina who do not read the HERALD because they have never begun to read it. This special issue through the sample copies sent out may catch the eye of some of them. Brother Harrison has personally incurred considerable expense in putting out this issue and deserves the thanks of the Annual Conference and the church in this state and district.

Importance of Church Janitors

I have just awakened from a horrible dream. I dreamed that I went to our church and found a service in progress with a houseful of people in attendance. This was gratifying, but as I approached the altar I was amazed and horrified to see on the floor a cartload of dirt and ashes and cinders, while as I walked I could hear half burnt coal crunching under my feet. I inquired for the janitor. Some said he was dead, some said drunk, and others said in jail. I could not endure the sight. I found a coal scuttle and a dust pan and began cleaning up. Some of the ladies present, moved by my example, found stubs of brooms and began sweeping. Soon the house was in confusion and the religious service was brought to an end.

This story has two morals; one for janitors and one for over-nice people.

THE CONFERNCE LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Our Conference Leadership Training School will be held at High Point College, High Point, July 12-19. This school will not be held simultaneously with the Pastors' Summer Conference as in former years. The pastors are holding their conference during the month of June.

It is necessary that we conduct a pre-registration campaign as we have done in former years. I have asked all pastors to appoint an agent in his church or churches and I am very anxious that this campaign be pressed from now until the school in July. We are asking a registration fee from every Methodist Protestant in the North Carolina Conference. If you do not expect to attend the school, register and help a most worthy cause. The registration fees will be the same as in former years. We are not raising the prices. So the fee for those below twelve years of age is 25c and the fee for those above twelve years of age is 50c Please send all registration fees to Rev. Fred W. Paschall, 165 Hillside Street, Asheville. N. C.

CONCLUSION OF THE WHOLE MATTER

After its straw vote on prohibition and much propaganda on both sides, The Literary Digest, as if ashamed of itself for its aid to the wets, concludes the matter apparently by publishing the following:

Intimate autobiographical touches color the letter of a Memphis business man, whose emotional hostility toward John Barleycorn is tempered with a frankly proclaimed partiality for the South's most famous beverage. Thus he writes:

For almost three score years I have lived on this drink-curst planet. Was born into a family where a social drink was always served to visitors. A mint-bed grew up each spring under the shade of a giant magnolia-tree. Mint-juleps were, are, and always will be my favorite beverage.

An uncle, scion of slave-holding ancestry, loved the flowing bowl, and for more than half a century kept his large family in a state of chronic poverty and, at times, distress and fear. A brother, model youth until he went to college, learned there to drink, gamble, and smoke cigarettes. This evil trinity ruined him.

I have seen three generations of human beings grow up, marry, and take their places in varying classes of society. Scarcely a single family of my acquaintance during these three generations has failed to furnish one or more victims to John Barleycorn. Gold-star mothers who have seen a son sacrificed to Bacchus far outnumber those in the late war who surrendered to Mars.

How any human being can remember the old days of the open saloon, the gambling dens, the brothels, and other hell-holes of iniquity that accompanied them, the staggering caricatures of brothers in the flesh that cluttered the streets and often polluted the thoroughfares, who has heard the moans of tortured wives, the cries of frightened children, the pleadings of agonized mothers and the prayers of interested friends and relatives, who has seen the poverty, squalor, and misery that follow in the train of a drinking fiend, can now cast his or her vote for a repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is utterly beyond me.

Seventy years ago, however, a whole section of this blessed Union sought to make human slavery a permanent institution. They beggared themselves and their posterity for two generations in an effort to defend States' rights, a subterfuge for the suppression of human rights. Today whole sections of society, under the pretense of defending personal liberty, seem willing to jeopardize the safety of a machine-built civilization by again flooding communities with a deluge of intoxicating liquors which the whole experience of mankind condemns as a scourge, equaled or approached in its devastating effects only by war, pestilence, and famine.

THE DEAN'S PRAYER

As the seniors were about to be invested ceremonially with caps and gowns in High Point College auditorium Monday morning, Dean Lindley offered the following prayer.

Our Gracious Heavenly Father, Lord of Heaven and earth, from whose loving hands come the many gifts so richly to enjoy, we acknowledge Thee from whom all blessings flow. In Thy mercy our days are given, and in Thy love the seasons move. The light of Thy care has marked our way in past years; in Thy providence have we come to this good hour.

Now we would offer unto Thee our tribute of praise. Accept, we pray, our hearts of gratitude; receive the spirit of thankfulness prepared in every soul. As the grateful child turns to its parent in joy, so we too, thank Thee, our Heavenly Father, for sending the opportunities so favorable to life and growth. May we ever be mindful of the homes from which we come; esteem those highly who love and toil for us, and honor all who have by word or deed encouraged us to press on in the quest for character and truth.

Let now Thy spiritual blessings, we pray, be upon these who today receive this mark of academic achievement. Send Thy light to lead them over the lands untried, Thy spirit to hearten in the hours of need, and Thy presence to make sweet the journey of life. And as these pass onward by others succeeded, sanctify their good influence in sacred memories that shall linger about the traditions of our school. Prosper Thou our labors here. And prepare a place for this institution, secure within the years that are to come, that working together with Thee we may be found useful in the upbuilding of Thy Kingdom in the earth, through Jesus Christ, Our Lord. Amen.

WANTED: RADIANT LIVES

By Rev. J. I. Conway, D. D.

Wooing others to the winsome Jesus' "Way" depends on personality more than propaganda. It is less like a loud-speaking radio than a warm, genial radiator.

General Booth never penned his ideal for the Salvation Army; but in Harold Begbie's "Twice Born Men" it stands out—not a new creed, but new lives glowing with love and radiant with the tenderness of God. Lives that burn and shine like St. Francis of Assisi, William Penn, Frances Willard, Abraham Lincoln, are lodestones.

Not to discount the sterling qualities in Cromwells, Luthers, Knoxes, that are like the courage of Jesus, yet it is His gracious loveliness that draws to him. It is not lives that flash and dazzle like diamonds, but lives that glow and warm, that men welcome most when they need cheer, championship. Glistening icebergs reflect the sun's rays, but a heartfire shining through a window on chilled wayfarers invites to grateful warmth and life.

Among flowers, the high-colored, showy hollyhock reminds least of Him who gave sympathy and shepherding to lost sheep—the widowed mother, the father of the dying girl, the shunned street wanton, the despised alien water-carrier, the hated little publican climbing a tree. The warm heart and enticing fragrance of the red rose or carnation of Mother's Day reminds most of Him who is "the loveliest among ten thousand."

The radiant life is like the radiant heater in a chilled room. We feel its glowing friendliness in our penetrating, our discouraged days. Jesus is the gentlest, loveliest, friendliest reality. The most potent preacher, always, is the radiant Christian life.

IMMORTAL

Die! no, God's children never die;
But after this brief life is spent
They live 'mid possibilities
Made perfect, and with power to grasp
The infinite. They live amid
The genial glowing fires of love,
Which wane not, but which brighter grow
Throughout the eternal ages—
That love which bears the signet, pure
And white, of Heaven's perfection.
There, with mind expanded, they do
Grasp the meaning of eternity.
Nor is this all: when the green sod
Hath hid from mortal eye the form
Of clay, they still live, by impress
They have made on lives of others—
Lives made purer by reflected
Whiteness of their character.
Yes, they live in thoughts which they have
Breathed and prayers which they have offered;
They live in pulses quickened by
The daring of their deeds, or may be
(I blush to say it) that they live
In hearts made timid by their own
Mean cowardice.
Then, if to live meaneth so much,
How should we strive to reach all that
Most high and holy is, nor count
Too great the cost of any act
Which bears us upward into that
Clear, upper ether of soul-calm
Which always seals the approval
Of our conscience and our God!

FOUR THINGS MONEY CANNOT BUY

One day a group of successful men were discussing at the luncheon table the purchasing power of money. "There's nothing that money will not buy," declared one of the men. The others pondered this in silence, but one voiced an exception, "Money will not buy health," he asserted.

"You are wrong," replied the champion of wealth. "There are many invalids who could regain their health if they had the means of employing specialists, or taking treatments at expensive sanitoriums, or living in more sanitary surroundings. In many instances money will buy health."

"Money will not buy happiness," said the first speaker.

"You're wrong again. Ask the average person what he needs to make him happy. He will tell you that all he wants is to be wealthy enough to work or rest when he pleases, to enjoy all the amusements that give him pleasure, and perhaps to travel or study. Money will buy happiness for millions of men and women."

So elated was this man at the ease with which he had disposed of his opponents exceptions that he leaned across the table and said triumphantly: "I'll tell you what I'll do. Write down four things really worth having that money cannot buy, and for each I'll give you my check for $1,000!"

The next day the same group met again at the luncheon table. The man who had been challenged handed the challenger a strip of paper. He read it in silence. Then he read it again slowly and thoughtfully, the rest of the party looking on with keen, but mute interest. When he finally laid it down, he took out his check book, wrote out a check for $4,000 and passed it across the table. This is what was written on the paper:

A Baby's Smile

You cannot purchase a baby's smile with coin or currency, stocks or bonds. To the soul that has so recently come from paradise, the most coveted things in this world have no appeal. A mother's kiss, a father's caress, a flower, a pretty trinket may win a baby's smile but you cannot bergain for it with gold.

Youth When It Has Gone

The mill will never grind again with water that has passed. All the wealth in the world cannot buy back the zest and joyousness of youth or the carefree happiness of maidenhood when maturity has blotted them out.

The Love of a Good Woman

Her love, like a baby's smile, cannot be bought with gold. Men may barter silver and gold and precious stones for a base counterfeit, but true love that lasts eternally is the most precious gift a woman can bestow. No man is rich enough to buy it; no man is too poor to possess it.

Entrance Into Heaven

Money will buy every material thing there is to be found in this world, but not a penny of it can be taken into the next and used to gain admission into a state of immortal bliss. The keeper of the heavenly gate is not susceptible to bribes. There, at least, money has no value.

THE NOBILITY OF TOIL

White collars are a real peril to national robustness. Too many young men want positions—not jobs, but positions—that will not soil their hands or their clothes. One reason why such a tremendous tide has turned toward the colleges since the war, say educators, is that youth has come to consider this an easy and pleasant route to prosperity without manual labor. An alarming proportion of college graduates become bond salesmen. Multitudes of boys choose these white-collar positions, at poor pay and with scant future, because of a sort of snobbishness which looks down upon overall jobs.

Our nation was not built by such. In new and growing countries, idleness is deemed a disgrace. Just as workers are the backbone of the social structure, so loafers are a recognized peril. The glory and dignity of honest labor are beliefs inwrought in the very structure of our New World. And the duty of work is an essential part of the Christian ideals in which the country is established. The Bible singularly stresses and exalts the duty of toil.—William T. Ellis.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

We did not intentionally leave an open date Sunday, but when we found we had, we took the day off and spent it with the family. This brief surcease from our usual Sunday work gave us a little much-needed rest. For the day's worship we attended two services which constituted part of the commencement program of Greensboro College for Women, and heard Dr. Franklin S. Hickman in two sermons. These programs were pleasing, and Dr. Hickman was highly rewarding.

The commencement season affords opportunities for many worthwhile things. Our regret is that we cannot attend more of these occasions. We are looking forward to the approaching commencement at High Point College -May 29—June 2. And perhaps we had as well do here what we intend to do in this letter,—urge our people to attend, and invite their friends to attend with them. Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of the General Conference, preaches the baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning. This will be in the First M. P. Church, High Point. Sunday night, the annual sermon will be preached to the senior class by the president, Dr. R. M. Andrews. This will be at the college, in Roberts Hall. On Monday, June 2, commencement day—at 10:30 a. m., Dr. Henry Lewis Smith, former president of Washington and Lee University, will deliver the commencement address. There are other interesting features of this commencement address. There are other interesting features of this commencement program, but we can not give them all here. We urge our people to attend this commencement, and see what we have at High Point, and get acquainted at first hand with the splendid work that is being done there.

Herald "Honor Edition"

Brother Harrison did a good job. We extend congratulations. It is most fitting to have the picture of the editor, for thirty-five years, fill the center place of the first page, and have him surrounded there with history so vital to himself and to the church, and in which he has played such a worthy part. He has proved a good subject for those who wrote of him, as their writings testify; and those who have borne their testimony to the value of the paper, give full proof of his good works during these thirty-five years that he has been editor, business manager, and publisher. Dr. McCulloch fully merits this "Honor Edition," and the fifteen hundred new subscriptions that Brother Harrison and his Committee are trying to secure. The campaign is creating encouraging interest, though only four charges -Asheboro, Charlotte, Calvary and Spencer—have secured their quotas. Other charges are running up, and lack only a few subscriptions of having their goals. The total number of new subscribers to date is 438. We expect to see some other charges listed in capitals very soon.

"Dollar a Member"

By action of the Conference Committee, appointed to promote this undertaking, next Sunday will end the time allotted for this special purpose. This does not mean that we do not expect more money for this project during the year; it only means that we are setting it aside, as a major project, in order to emphasize other phases of our conference programs. Up to date, 65 charges have contributed $6,126.56. In addition to this, there are pledges by some churches yet to be paid; and still other churches that have not pledged, but have paid some, and expect to pay more. We are asking pastors and directors to please present "Dollar a Member" again Sunday, and do two things: First, get all cash possible and send it in for the use of the college now. Second, get pledges for later payments, sufficient to cover the entire membership quota, if possible. There are some charges from which we are still hoping for full quotas: it would be highly gratifying if they could report this in full immediately after next Sunday. We shall be very grateful for all that may be done on behalf of "Dollar a Member" next Sunday—the closing day of this special undertaking.

June 23-27

This is the date of the Pastor's Summer Conference, changed by President Curry from June 16-20, for good reasons given by him in the announcement of last week. This is a well worth while annual occasion with us, and we trust that every pastor will plan to attend it this year. The fellowship, information, and inspiration that we will get there will enable us to go back to our various fields with new zest for work. Every one of us now, "starting to begin to get ready" for the Pastor's Conference.

A Good Layman Passes

Word has just come from Rev. C. E. Ridge, telling us of the passing of Brother Edley M. Ivester, of the Kistler church, Cleveland charge. He was eighty-one years of age, and had been for many years one of the leading laymen of Cleveland charge. He was active in all the interests of the charge, and very hlpful, we have been told, in revival meetings. Brother Ridge says of him, "He was one of the best men I ever knew." Our sympathies are hereby extended to the family and to the charge.

The Chief Business

One of the bishops at the Dallas Conference told the ministers that their chief business, when they got back home, would be to save souls. Of course the bishop was right, and surely the time is here when a new emphasis should be put upon this "chief business." Just "running the church" isn't enough. Unless we are saving souls, we are missing the purpose for which the church exists. And with the claim that sixty thousand churches in this country are not having one convert a year, it is certainly time that we were getting back to the "real business." The Pentecost movement is heading right; we trust that it may continue until the fires of a new evangelism sweep the church. Let our prayers for this be constant and united.

Sick

Sister Reynolds, wife of Rev. G. L. Reynolds, is a patient at the Clinic Hospital, Greensboro. She has undergone an operation, but is recovering well. She and her family will have our prayers. This is the second member of Brother Reynolds family to have a hospital experience this year, his daughter, Miss Inez, having just recovered from an operation at the Clinic.

THE GREAT UNVEILING

The veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom. It was not that the Most Holy Place had ceased to be holy; it was that every other place had become holy too. It was not the desecration of the temple; it was the consecration of the world. If I remove the mask from a dark lantern, I do not diminish the light in the lantern, but I dispel the darkness everywhere else. That is exactly what happened on that first Good Friday.

The Bible contains the evolution of two tremendous and companion truths. In the Old Testament, men slowly learn that God can find Man anywhere. Cain thought that he could escape from God by wandering a few miles over the hills into the land of Nod! Jacob fancied that, by crossing the frontiers of his native land, he could leave the Most High behind him! Jonah imagined that he could evade God by the simple expedient of crossing the sea! But, little by little, God taught men that though they take the wings of the morning, and fly to the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall His hand hold them! God can find Man anywhere!

But the New Testament contains the evolution of a still lovelier truth. The New Testament reveals the fact that Man may find God anywhere! The veil of the temple is rent! God is no longer confined to a particular place is hallowed ground. On the lonely hillside, on the open sea, in the busy market-place—there stands the Mercy Seat with its rent veil.

Speak to Him, thou, for He hears, and Spirit with Spirit can meet—
Closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet.

The veil of the temple is rent in twain from the top to the bottom! When the World's Redeemer overcame the sharpness of death, He, by that very act, opened the kingdom of heaven to all believers! Let us then pass boldly through the torn veil, and stand with faces unafraid in the Holiest of All, that there we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in every time of need.—F. W. Boreham in The Expositor.

THIS PERSONALITY

One of the interesting things about life is the way people find their level. For example, a boy was born in an Ohio town. But he was not destined to live there always. He had a talent, and that talent was bigger than his native town, and bigger than Chicago, where he settled after being graduated from Yale.

His talent was for finance, and it landed him in Washington as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury a few years ago. Poland needed financial counsel and this man was paged. A little over a year ago he became financial advisor to this republic, and a director of the Bank of Poland, charged with the oversight of the funds that were lent to Poland by the United States Government.

This sweep of life is one of the elements which make the stories of men like Joseph, of the Old Testament, Abraham Lincoln, and the thirty-first President of the United States so fascinating. Born in obscure communities, they advanced by the force of personality to high places.

There is something in us that makes us admire the man who lives up to the possibilities within himself. Often a boy or girl possesses talents that are hidden to parents and teachers. Even those who are closest to us are not able to understand us. We are, indeed, a puzzle to ourselves. But if a person is willing to submit to discipline, so that this infinite something which we call personality may be refined and developed in the proper direction, he will gloriously fulfill his mission on earth.

One of the delights in studying biography is to notice how men and women have become great characters—often from humble beginnings up through the stern and rigorous buffetings of life. The wife of Thomas Hardy, the famous English poet and novelist, has written that he managed to survive infancy by the skin of his teeth. "At his birth," writes Mrs. Hardy, "he was thrown aside as dead until rescued by her (a nurse) as she exclaimed to the surgeon: 'Dead! Stop a minute; he's alive enough sure." Such was the start in life that Hardy had, and what use he made of his powers!

If tombstones always bore truthful epitaphs, we might sometimes read words such as these: "Here lies John, son of William and Mary Smith, born January 3, 1825; died April 20, 1886. He might have made the world better by having lived in it, but he failed to stir up the gift within him. He was satisfied to eat three meals a day, to dress in the styles of his time, and to conform to the customs of his community. Yes his life was a tragedy. He did not heed the call to separate himself from the crowd and to be different; to strike his own stride in the spiritual life."

Nothing presents a finer, nobler challenge to youth than life itself. In various ways God is speaking to us and urging us to develop these personalities of ours to the highest degree. Into our hands is laid the free gift, full of mystery and potent for good. Let us lay hold on it prayerfully, purposefully, and hopefully. We may realize our own highest individuality through the personality of Jesus Christ.

LUTHER AND THE BIBLE

Luther said that he studied the Bible as he gathered apples. First, he shook the whole tree, that the ripest might fall, then he climbed the tree and shook each limb, and when he had shaken each limb, he shook each branch, and after each branch every twig, and then looked under each leaf. Let us search the Bible as a whole; shake the whole tree; read it as rapidly as you would any other book, then shake every limb, studying book after book. Then shake every branch, giving attention to the chapters when they do not break the sense. Then shake each twig by careful study of the paragraphs and sentences, and you will be rewarded, if you will look under every leaf, by searching the meaning of words.—A. C. Dixon.

ATTENTION, PASTORS

It is hoped that pastors will keep the Pastors' Summer Conference in mind and make every plan to attend. A fine program is being prepared and it is hoped that there will be a record-breaking attendance. More about the program will be given later. Remember the date, June 23-27. Come one, come all.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE BOY WHO SAVED JAMESTOWN

Chanco was running through the woods as fleet as a young deer, his mocassined feet seemed scarcely to touch the ground. Suddenly he dropped down and put his ear to the ground to listen. What could that noise be? Powhatan and all his braves including Chanco's own father were far away hunting, and this noise came from a different direction from any of the Indian villages, Chanco knew them all. The noise again. It sounded as if some one was cutting on great trees.

Chanco straightened himself and stole silently through the forest in the direction from which the sound came. The chopping grew louder and louder, there must be many axes going at the same time he thought. Chanco crept closer, keeping himself carefully hidden in the underbrush until he could see a small clearing made in the forest.

Chanco liked to watch them work, they drove their big axes with such force into the great trees until they fell with a crash, then the men cut them into logs. All the time they worked they talked to each other in some strange language he couldn't understand but they smiled and laughed a lot and from that he could understand that they were happy. His people didn't talk much and they rarely laughed. The men were away hunting or fighting most of the time, but Chanco didn't think it would be much fun to kill people.

Chanco settled down in the underbrush to watch the pale faces at their work. He wished he could understand what they were talking about. He rather liked these strange people. When he had gone with his father to Jamestown one of them had given him some beautiful beads and something to eat which tasted good and sweet. His brother had taken the beads away from him when he went home. He had heard his father and the other man talking about the pale faces taking away their land, but the woods were big and Chanco thought there was room enough for all.

As he sat there watching the men at their work Chanco wondered what they would do if he walked into the clearing. At last he decided he would try it anyway and stood in the cleared space. The men all stopped their work and looked at him, but they didn't look angry so Chanco didn't run away. The big man with the kind face spoke to him but he couldn't understand what he said, but when he smiled at him and held out his hand with something bright in it Chanco understood he meant for him to come to him. He went up and the big man gave him a knife with a blade that would fold up and showed him how to use it. He had never seen anything like it before. For a long time Chanco stayed watching the men at their work and when he traveled the long miles back to his father's wigwam he didn't tell anybody where he had been. Many times after that he slipped away and went back to the clearing where the white men worked. They were always kind to him and he helped them in their work. The big, kind man told him his name was Mr. Richard Pace and taught him to say it. They taught him many other English words which he learned quickly.

He found out that Mr. Pace was building a home for his family here in the woods. Chanco liked to see the house grow, it was so different and so much bigger even than the great chief's wigwam. When it was all finished Mr. Pace was ready to move in the wilderness. Chanco stayed on to watch them move. They had so many queer things, so different from what his people had. He wished he could live there with his white friends. He wished it so much that he called Mr. Pace to one side.

"Chanco want to stay here," he said.

"You mean you want to live with us?" inquired Mr. Pace.

"Ugh," grunted Chanco in the Indian fashion.

"What would your people say?" asked Mr. Pace.

"They no care, heap mo' children."

So Chanco came to live with his white friends and help them with the work. He loved them very dearly and they became very fond of him. He seemed more like a member of the family than a servant. He loved to hear them tell of the land across the great sea from which they had come in ships with white sails. He loved to hear about the God they worshipped and after a while he came to believe in him also.

Several years went by. Chanco grew to be a big, strong boy and could do as much work as a man. Sometimes he would go back to see his people, but he was glad he lived with his white friends.

One day he was cutting down some trees in the woods when he looked up to see his brother looking at him. Chanco wondered what he wanted, for his people didn't often come to see him unless they wanted something. Of course they talked in the Indian language as Chanco's brother couldn't talk English, but this is really what they said.

"What do you want?" Chanco asked.

"The Indians don't like having the pale faces come and take their land away from them, so now while there are only a few here and they think we are friendly we are going to destroy them all. Tomorrow night the Indians are going to kill every white person and you must help by killing Mr. Pace and all his family. If you don't we kill you. Remember." And the brother went away into the woods as silently as he had come.

Chanco stopped cutting and sat down on a fellen tree to think. What should he do? He couldn't kill the friends he loved, but he didn't want to be killed either and he knew his brother meant what he said. Of course he could run away and not say anything, but that would be almost as bad, for his friends would surely be killed. He sat very still for a while thinking. Soon he made up his mind what to do and went to find Mr. Pace and when he found him he told him what his brother had said.

Chanco knew that besides the people at Jamestown there were lots of others who had gone out into the woods to build their homes like Mr. Pace and he didn't see how he could ever warn them all. There wouldn't be time to go to all of them, besides he knew the Indians would be watching them.

That night after dark Chanco and Mr. Pace got into a little boat and rowed over to Jamestown. They had to be careful to row their boat so quietly that if any Indians were watching and listening they wouldn't even hear the oars. At last they reached Jamestown where they found even the guard asleep because they thought the Indians were friendly and wouldn't hurt them.

Chanco told his story and then he and Mr. Pace warned all the people they could and then helped the men make the walls of the town strong and see that the guns were ready. When the Indians came the next night none of the white people in Jamestown were killed, but lots of those who could not be warned lost their lives.

The people of Jamestown praised Chanco and told him what a brave boy he was, and after that Mr. Pace and his family loved the Indian boy more than ever before.

All of this happened long, long ago, but if you should go to Jamestown where the first white people made their homes in America you would see a little old church all covered with ivy. Inside the walls are covered with white marble tablets on which are many names. One of the tablets reads like this, "To the memory of Chanco, the Indian boy who saved the settlers of Jamestown in the dreadful massacre of 1622," and you would see that the people who knew about Chanco love him still for being so brave, even in the face of danger to himself.—Annie Sills Brooks in The Leader.

ONE RESULT OF TOO MUCH PRAISE

"I can sing fine, Virginia; why don't you play and let me sing?" said little Jean, aged four.

The two girls were in Aunt Mary's living-room where Virginia, a senior in high school, was entertaining the little daughter of a neighbor. Aunt Mary, working in the dining-room, had heard the remark and wondered how Virginia would reply.

"How do you know you can sing so well, Jeannie?" she heard the older girl laughingly ask.

"Oh—oh—h-h, just because everybody says I can. Mother does, too. She loves to hear me sing and she just has me sing all the time when we have company." Little Jeannie smoothed down her dress in supreme self-complacency.

"Of course our mothers love to have us do all the things we like to do if they are not wrong," answered Virginia. "But before we can sing really well we have to do a lot of hard studying and practicing, you know."

The little girl was silent for a moment or two as though somewhat crestfallen, but was soon telling other wonderful things that either she or Betty Jane, a younger sister, could do.

Commenting on the remarks to her aunt, Virginia explained what she thought of the matter: "I was just like that at her age, Aunt Mary, and that is the reason I have such a hard time with my music now. I grew up with the idea that I could sing beautifully, so when it came to the real work—practice and drill to learn to sing, to handle my voice as I have to in school—it was doubly hard for me because I resented being corrected or made to sing a faulty passage over and over. I try now to control myself enough to act decently when Miss Luallin tells me I am wrong, but just the same that rebellious feeling will bubble up within me.

"I think it just a shame for persons to compliment a child like Jean so extravagantly as they must be doing. She is such a sweet little thing and really has a nice voice, but she will be hurt a good many times in the future because of getting too much praise now. It is just as bad as if they had made her self-conscious any other way. Just think, Aunt Mary, what a time you have had trying to get all that nonsense out of my head. It has been hard on both of us. I surely am glad you have been kind and strong enough to do it for me, but it does seem too bad for people to make that sort of thing necessary."

"You are right," replied her aunt. "It seems to be a temptation on the part of friends and relatives to rave too much over children. Of course, it is a grave mistake."

As Aunt Mary put her work away she thought: "Jean's mother should know better, she is a college graduate. Surely she was taught to let children grow naturally—teaching them to sing if they have any talent just as incidentally as to eat properly and with as little self-consciousness, and encouraging them in so far as they really need it and no further."—Willis and Lenora Bailey in Reformed Messenger.

LITTLE BOY

Little Boy was playing in the yard. Mother was busy in the kitchen. There was so much to be done. "I'll call Little Boy to help dry the dishes," she said. She went to the window and called, "Come, Little Boy, and help mother." But Little Boy didn't want to stop playing. He didn't want to help.

He came slowly to his mother. His lips were out. He had a frown on his face. His mother looked at him. She saw his pouting lips. She saw the frown on his face. She was sorry. She shook her head and said sadly: "Mother couldn't use a little boy like that. Run back to your play."

Little Boy went out where his pet pigeons were. They were cooing. He stopped to pick up one of them. The pigeon looked at him and flew away. Then all the other pigeons followed and Little Boy was left alone. "I wonder why they didn't want me here," he said.

He whistled for his dog. Shep came running. But when he saw Little Boy's frowning face, he ran back. "Doggie don't want to play with me," he said. "Kitty, kitty, kitty," said Little Boy. Kitty listened but she thought Little Boy's voice sounded cross, so she hid under the steps.

Little Boy felt lonesome. He wondered why none of his pets wanted to play with him. "I'll go and stay with my mother," he said. Then he remembered how he acted about the dishes. He was sorry he had been cross. He would go and help mother now. He ran as fast as he could. "O, Mother, Mother," he said, "I'm sorry. I want to help you. Please, may I?" His face was bright and happy. His voice sounded sweet. Mother smiled and Little Boy smiled back at her. "Yes," she said, "I have left the dishes for us to dry together. Mother knew her little boy would be sorry and come back to help."

After the dishes were all dried and put away, Mother and Little Boy went out under the cool trees. Doggie and Kitty heard Little Boy laughing and came running to him. The pigeons listened and then flew down on the shoulders of the happy little boy.—Selected.

THE INCREASING APOSTASY

Many who claim to be teachers of Christianity ignore what God has revealed. They set aside the truth which God has made known and put in its place their own inventions and schemes to accomplish, what they term, the lifting up of humanity. When one meditates on the great riches of God in Christ Jesus and the love which passeth knowledge, when the Holy Spirit enlightens the eyes, the rejection of all this by professing Christians appears appalling. And the tide of this rejection rises. Voices on all sides declare that "revealed religion" must be doomed; "revealed religion" must be swept away to clear the path for the coming religion which man is to discover by his own ingenuity. This course followed by the boasting leaders of apostate Christendom verifies the statement of the Word of God: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God . . . he cannot know them."—Dr. A. C. Gaebelein, in his new Book, "Unsearchable Riches."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By J. T. BOWMAN

President C. E. Society, High Point College

JUNE 8: PRAYER IN THE LIFE OF LEADERS

Mark 1:35; Luke 6:12

(Consecration Meeting)

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Jesus at prayer. Matt. 17:1-9.
Tuesday—Moses' prayer. Num. 14:11-25.
Wednesday—Abraham's prayer. Gen. 18:17-33.
Thursday—Jacob's prayer. Gen. 28:10-22.
Friday—Elijah's prayer. James 5:17-18.
Saturday—Prayer by Paul. Eph. 1:15-23.

Suggestions

Someone has suggested a birthday party for this meeting—the church's nineteenhundredth anniversary. You might send invitations out to all members who have not been attending regularly. Try to get some member to bake a large cake (covered with white frosting). Place on the cake 19 candles. As the guest of honor invite the oldest Christian in your church, who will light the candles. Have several talks on various phases of prayer. Try to keep to the practical side of prayer.

The following hymns may be used: "Abide With Me," "Come Thou Almighty King," "Sweet Hour of Prayer," "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," "I Need Thee Every Hour," and "My Faith Looks Up to Thee."

Leader's Talk

From this Scripture some splendid lessons may be drawn. We get a glimpse into the life of our Master. Christ was so much in the habit of praying that in the darkest hours of His earthly life He instinctively turned to prayer where he found comfort and strength. He had a trying day before Him and so He prepares for the day by communion with His Father. It seemed that the desert was the only secluded place for Him to go and so, long before day, He was there alone in prayer to God, the Father.

From Luke 6:12 we find a matter of supreme importance to the future progress of the kingdom was at hand. The twelve who should become apostles were to be selected from His disciples. So, from His place of prayer He comes to make His choice of those who shall carry the burden in the days to come. Jesus felt the need of spending this night in prayer or communion with the Father during this crisis. This sheds tremendous light on our own need of prayer in the solution of the vexing problems which we must constantly face. What would happen if something of the same spirit of prayer would permeate the church which wears His name today?

Topics

1. The place of prayer in the life of the Church's Founder.
2. The place of prayer in the establishing of the early church.
3. The place of prayer in the growth of the early church.
4. The place of prayer in the church today.
5. The place of prayer in the church of tomorrow.
6. What prayer has meant to me.

Answer These Questions

1. How may me learn to pray?
2. Why should we pray?
3. Can one be a Christian without a prayer life?
4. How may we improve our prayer life?
5. What can we do to increase the prayer life of our society?
6. Why must leaders themselves be led by God?

Poetry

And so I sometimes think our prayers might well be merged in one;
And nest and perch and hearth and church
repeat "Thy will be done."

—Anon.

"PRAYER"

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered or unexpressed;
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast.

"Prayer is the burden of a sigh,
The falling of a tear,
The upward glancing of an eye
When none but God is near.

"Prayer is the simplest form of speech
That infant lips can try;
Prayer the sublimest strains that reach
The Majesty on high.

"Prayer is the contrite sinner's voice
Returning from his ways;
While angels in their songs rejoice,
And cry, 'Behold, he prays!'

"Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air,
His watchword at the gates of death,
He enters heaven with prayer.

"O Thou, by Whom we come to God,
The Life, the Truth, the Way,
The path of prayer Thyself hast trod;
Lord, teach us how to pray!"

IN APPRECIATION OF DR. R. M. ANDREWS

By the Trustees of High Point College

In the life of the Methodist Protestant Church, especially in North Carolina, Rev. Robert Macon Andrews, D. D., has taken an important part. As a progressive pastor and as President of the Conference he established and maintained a high standard of useful service. During his term as president he crystallized the sentiment in favor of the establishment of a college. As manager of the campaign for funds an amount of money was pledged and collected which was not only unknown in the previous history of our church in this state, but probably exceeded the undertaking of any other denomination, when our numerical strength is taken into consideration.

As chairman of the committee appointed for that purpose, he assisted in laying out the course of study, secured a faculty, and as president of the college he has directed its affairs from the time it opened its doors six years ago. The college has established a new record as to patronage; the faculty brought together has done excellent work, and, on the whole, the work of the institution has been unparalleled in the educational annals of North Carolina.

Having failed to receive the expected financial support, Dr. Andrews decided to offer his resignation as president of the college, which the trustees felt they could but accept. In doing so the board of trustees wishes to bear testimony to his intense devotion to every interest of the college, to his high character, to his broad-mindedness, and to the generous spirit with which he has dealt with those with whom he has sustained an official relation as president of the college.

His work in behalf of High Point College at the beginning of its history, and surrounded by difficulties, will be, in our opinion, better appreciated in the coming years.

RESOLVED, that a copy of the foregoing testimonial be spread upon the minutes of this meeting; that a copy be furnished to Dr. Andrews, to the "Methodist Protestant Herald," and to the High Point city papers.

S. W. TAYLOR,
J. NORMAN WILLS,
for the Committee.

DO IT TODAY

If you have a task
That ought to be done
But don't see the way,
Get on with the work,
Don't grumble nor shirk,
Do it today.

The bill that you owe
And daily forego,
But know you should pay,
Promptly clear off the debt
Before you forget,
Do it today.

The kindness you'd do
If you only had time,
But simply delay,
Resolve not to wait
Until it's too late,
Do it today.

The word of good cheer,
Optimistic and clear,
You think you would say,
Give a greeting worth while,
A hand-shake and smile,
DO IT TODAY!

GRENVILLE KLEISER.

—Two years ago Stanley Jones declined the office of bishop in the M. E. Church to continue in missionary work. Now Bishop Fisher of the same church resigns his bishopric to return to the pastorate. He says he had a dislike of administrative work. His area was in India where the spirit of self-government is growing. This also, he admits, had an influence in determining his action. He expects to become pastor in Ann Arbor, Michigan, seat of the University of Michigan.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

NOTICE TO AUXILIARIES

The report of the Finance Committee is published this week in the Herald, and we hope very much that you will accept your apportionment and begin now to send in money monthly. The treasurer has had very little work to do since Branch Meeting and she wants to get busy. So little came in last month on North Carolina budget that she didn't even send it off, for she doesn't like to write checks for smaller amounts than one dollar.

If every Auxiliary will raise its N. C. budget in full, the total N. C. budget will be met in full. If every auxiliary meets its New Century Service budget in full, and no more, our total N. C. S. budget will be more than $2,000 short. So let's everybody do what we are asked to do, and then some.

Let us begin at once on our budgets and then the load will not be so heavy at the end of the year. Please don't forget to send money monthly.

MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treasurer.

FINANCE COMMITTEE'S REPORT
At Branch Meeting, April 23, 1930

The Budget Committee begs to submit the following recommendations:

We recommend that the New Century Service be $9,000.00, and the North Carolina budget be $3,500, and that of this $3,500 the Children's Home receive 50 per cent, Bethel Home 20 per cent, Scholarship Loan Fund for High Point College 20 per cent, contingent, 20 per cent.

We recommend that since the Contingent Fund has been increased from 7 per cent to 10 per cent, in order to take care of the expense of the Branch, that the Departmental Secretaries and the District Chairmen present their expense accounts quarterly to the treasurer.

We further recommend that to take care of the cost of publishing the "Missionary Page" we appropriate $100.00 to the Methodist Protestant Herald, to be paid quarterly.

BETHEL HOME

We have a brand new radio, thanks to the good friends who attended the branch meeting and so generously contributed the money with which to buy it. Also to Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Little, of Charlotte, who secured a good bargain. Our radio is a R. C. A., five-tube, two screen grid set. We are delighted with it, and of course the family is enjoying the music it brings. Here's our best thanks, you wonderful friends. We thank God always for you.

Sincerely,

HOMER CASTO.

To Mr. Casto's thanks (and ours too) for the radio, I must add some "real" thanks for being remembered by "The Sisterhood" with a flower. It is a beautiful thought that I should be remembered in such an important meeting and words fail me when I try to express my appreciation. I do thank you.

DIXON-SMOTHERS-WILLIAMS REUNION

By permission of the editor I am taking this means of calling attention to the members of our family and their friends that the Dixon-Smothers-Williams family reunion will be held at Midway Church on Haw River Circuit on July 4, 1930, at 10:00 o'clock a. m. What program we have will begin at 10:30 a. m. We must be prompt with this, or make dinner late.

Picnic dinner on the grounds. All the family are urged to be present, and our friends are invited. Come and bring well-filled baskets. Suggestions for a brief program will be welcomed.

A. G. DIXON,
President of the Union.

A pastor writes that he has offered to pay for the HERALD for any family of his charge unable to pay.

—Former Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, ran ahead in the recent primary and bids fair to become governor again. The wets did not carry as they hoped, though they spent great sums of money on the election.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Bethesda.—We are having good attendance at Sunday school and all seem to be interested in the work. The men's Bible class have given us two program this month which we all enjoyed very much.

June 4th we are all expecting to motor over to our pastor's (Bro. Powell) home for our annual picnic. We are expecting a very enjoyable day and also to furnish our pastor with a good dinner.

Sunday, May 18th, Mr. Matthew Hinkle, of Lexington, was laid to rest in Bethesda cemetery. He had been a member of this church for many years.

We will have our annual "Home-Coming Day" Sunday, June 29th. We will have a children's day service in the morning, a picnic dinner at noon, and in the afternoon a home-coming service. We are expecting several good speakers, which will be announced later. We invite all who have left this community to come back on this day and enjoy the occasion with us.

The Ladies' Auxiliary met the third Sunday. We had a very interesting meeting and had one new member to join our society at this time. Although our meetings are not attended as they should be, we feel that we are doing good and could not get on without our society.

MRS. EVERETT CLODFELTER.

State Street, Lexington.—Last Sunday morning our pastor brought us a forceful address on the baneful influence of fear. This subject at this time was most timely. So many are so burdened with fear of the economic condition of things that their efforts are to a degree weakened and in many cases killed because of it. Surely this was one of the finest and most helpful sermons Mr. Hendry has delivered for us. There has been much favorable comment concerning it.

Many of our folks attended the home-coming service at Shiloh in the afternoon Sunday. All who heard the splendid address by Dr. Lindley and the welcome address by Mrs. Wiley Shoaf and the touching short talks by many who were members of Shiloh church and have gone to other places to live were helped and strengthened in their purpose to be loyal to the cause of Christianity and to the church of their choice. The music was under the direction of Mr. B. F. Sink, and was splendid in every way.

Plans are being made to begin the preparation of a Children's Day program some time soon.

The Missionary Society will meet Friday afternoon at the church, the new president, Mrs. H. C. Rodgers, presiding.

We are very proud of a male quartet who give us some fine vocal music almost every Sunday night. The members are Messrs. John Leonard, R. S. Foster, T. A. Blanton and Byron Craft.

Our entire congregation extend to the Craft family the deepest sympathy in their sorrow caused by the passing of little Hazel, aged about eight year, who was called one day last wek.

Mrs. R. W. Hethcox, of Aiken, S. C., is spending a few days in Lexington with friends and relatives. We were very glad to have her worship with us Sunday morning and evening. Mrs. Wilcox is pleasantly remembered here as Mrs. Harkey.

Mrs. C. L. Koonts will give a study on Pentecost at the Wednesday night service this week and each week up to the 8th of June.

Kannapolis.—Since our last report we have inclosed a new church auditorium. We held services in the new church Sunday. The attendance at Sunday school was the largest we have had, there being 114 present. At the 11 o'clock services our pastor preached a very appropriate sermon to a large congregation. The building is 30 by 50 feet, and is arranged so that we can add Sunday school rooms when we are able. Our people are all very enthusiastic and are giving of their means in order to have a more suitable place of worship. The time had come when we had to do something. The old building was inadequate to care for our growing Sunday school besides being badly in need of repairs.

We are planning to celebrate our third anniversary on Sunday, June 15. At this time we hope to have our former pastors present and especially Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Hendry, who were instrumental in organizing the church here. We hope to make this a red-letter day for Kannapolis church.

Union Grove, Mocksville Charge.—It has been some time since we have written to the Herald, but hope you will excuse us. Our reporter was a popular high school senior with many school duties aside from class work and Sunday school activities. Now that she is on vacation I send in the following report.

Our Sunday school attendance has not grown as we would desire it to in the spring, but those who do attend show much interest. We wish you could hear our Beginners' class render some of their programs to the Sunday School. We enjoy them and are looking forward to a good Children's Day prgram in the near future.

We were glad to have President Taylor with us the first Sunday evening in May. Although we had attended three services on the grounds during the day, we were not too tired to hear him. For his message was interesting, inspiring, and applicable to our church. We agree that a living, active church will bring lost sheep into the fold. And, friends, pray that we may have such a soul-stirring revival, such a series of meetings as will bring souls into Christ's kingdom. We need them. Rev. Mr. Hendry, who was with us in our meetings last year, showed a sincere interest in our people, and we are looking forward to having him with us this year. We are sure he will help us.

And our pastor, Mr. Ferree, has been helping us all along. Not only does he bring helpful messages in his sermons, but he visits in our homes, promoting good will and brotherly love. It is good to know his family, too, and have them worship with us. And, brothers and sisters of the Mocksville charge, we would love to know you. We realize that your own church duties probably consume much of your time on Sunday and that our church is some distance from your homes, but any time you can attend our services we shall be glad to have you. Some of you might find it convenient to come on the third Sunday afternoons when our preaching hour is at 2:30.

Concord, Saxapahaw Circuit—We have made no report for some time, but we hope we have made some progress. Bro. Whitehead has preached able sermons at all the appointments, which have been enjoyed. On the third Sunday p. m. our congregation attended the Eli Whitney commencement sermon which was preached by Rev. J. D. Williams. Many favorable remarks have been made about his sermon. The devotional exercise was conducted by Rev. W. M. Loy, and our pastor was present and dismissed the congregation.

Arrangement has been made for lumber to make some interior improvement in the church. We are hoping the work will be completed before our Children's Day. The committee was appointed to arrange the program but no time has been set for the exercise.

Miss Bessie Coble was appointed Sunday school secretary today to fill the vacancy made by Miss Willie Maie Ferguson, who was recently married to Mr. Paul Williams. Our best wishes go with them.

There will be no preaching service on the first Sunday morning as our pastor will be at High Point commencement.

Our community was shocked on May 20, when the news was spread that Miss Julia Pickard had passed away. Although she had been sick for a long while, the end was not thought to be so near. Julia was a most lovable young lady who endeared herself to every one because of her sunny disposition. She had just passed her 21st birthday. She was a member if our church and we shall miss her. Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved ones.

St. Paul.—Our revival meeting will begin June 1. Dr. J. D. Williams will do the preaching after Sunday. We are hoping and praying for a great meeting.

Oak Grove.—Trying to make a report stirs up and reminds of things various. We who write but little have excuse to wish for the editor to make close corrections. The pastor, Bro. Williams, served well Sunday, by preaching at 11 o'clock and then at 2 o'clock. Our people are well pleased with their pastor—and the "turn-out" and the attention was good—the children, too.

The meeting was called a memorial occasion—and Brother Williams managed and preached, and served well all throughout, and the meeting was an occasion to worship God and to serve the people. However, a reminder was, and is, that on such occasions there should be some deliberate expressions made by some of the congregation. Of course there was singing and praying by those of the congregation. The "dinner on the ground" made a sufficient "rest time" from the noon hour up to two o'clock. This safe rest time has made a reminder for this casual farmer to venture on some suggestion that may run into something of our long-cherished mutual rights. Mutual rights and the sociable belong together. Many things to remind come for "force of circumstances." A reminder is that a church can be compared to a family, and the Oak Grove family all need the special attention of the pastor on the regular Sunday of the month. All of us, and every family in the conference needs the Herald. Those who read closely are able to understand.

One of the original ideas was to help to urge for the use of good, safe literature, but the main "needy people" do not read the Herald. Reporters who sign their names to their articles do us "strangers" a favor, since it helps the interest, etc. Also, it is "on the line" to be able to locate a church and the people.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—We were very glad indeed to have Rev. F. L. Gibbs with us Sunday. He brought to us a wonderful message on the subject of "Why the Youth Should Share in the Work of the Church." He gave several reasons why youth should share in the work of the church. Mr. Gibbs came to us in the interest of the "Leadership Training School" to be held at Aurelian Springs this week. Mr. Gibbs is the dean of the school and also one of the teachers. We hope to have a large attendance at this school.

We noticed several visitors in the congregation Sunday, among them were Mr. Taylor Garrett and family, from Granville Charge. We are always glad to have visitors. Come again.

In our second quarterly conference Mrs. W. H. Neville and Miss Blanche Hardee were elected nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the parsonage on Tuesday afternoon, May 13th, with Rev. and Mrs. Fogleman as hostesses. Mr. Fogleman conducted the devotional service and Mrs. Fogleman had charge of the program. Miss Velma Hardy gave an interesting talk on the "Call of the Sick—Here." The writer read an article on the "Call of the Sick—There." The business of the meeting was transacted and there were ten members and five visitors present. We were dismissed by sentence prayers for our Bethel Home and our medical work in foreign lands. During the social hour we were invited into the dining room where we were served ice cream and cake. The preacher and his wife surely know how to make ice cream and cake, for it seems like that was the best cream and cake we ever ate.

Mount Pleasant, North Davidson.—The memorial service was held Sunday, May 25. A large number from far and near gathered to pay respect to their deceased ones. The cemetery was decorated very beautifully. We have one of the most beautiful cemeteries in the country anywhere around here.

At 11 o'clock our good pastor delivered a wonderful sermon. Bro. Powell's sermon was enjoyed by every one present. We had dinner on the grounds and following we had prayer and singing in the cemetery. Then we went back to the church where Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered the memorial address. It was a splendid talk and was enjoyed by all. We hope that we can be lucky enough again to have him speak to us. The Friedland chorus sang very beautifully in the afternoon service. We are always glad to have these good singers sing for us. The officers of the Memorial Association were elected for the coming year. W. D. Payne was elected president and E. S. Wellborn, secretary and treasurer. It was a good day for us. We are always glad when the fourth Sunday in May comes because this is "Memorial Day" for us.

I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.—Rev. 3:20.

"Behold a stranger at the door!
He gently knocks, has knocked before;
Has waited long, is waiting still:
You treat no other friend so ill."

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. We had 114 present last Sunday. We keep pressing onward. We hope in the future to have one of the largest Sunday schools in the state. Of course we had several visitors that perhaps will not be back until another year has passed. Among the visitors we had were Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Murphy and family, of Martinsville, Va. We are always proud to have these good people worship with us. They were among the most faithful members of our church until they left North Carolina to make their home in Virginia a few years ago.

We will have our preaching service next Sunday as usual and again the fourth Sunday at 11.

We regret very much tto announce the death of Mrs. R. L. Motsinger. She was the mother of five living children. Sister Motsinger was born April 13, 1854, and died April 13, 1930. It is very unusual for a person ti go to the eternal beyond on his birthday.

Funeral services were conducted at Mount Pleasant April 15, by Bro. Taylor, of the M. E. church, and Rev. H. L. Powell, pastor of the church. Interment followed in the church cemetery.

We are also very sad to report the death of Mr. Clay I. Hayworth. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Hayworth. Bro. Clay was only 36 years, six months and eight days old. He leaves two small children, Mabel and Mary Jane, to mourn his departure. He also leaves father and mother, and a brother and sister. Mr. Hayworth was laid to rest in the family plot at Mount Pleasant May 3. Funeral services were conducted by Bro. Leonard, of the Reformed church of Lexington, Rev. R. S. Troxler, of Shiloh, and Rev. H. L. Powell, pastor of the church.

Yet another has passed into eternity. Mrs. Audry Inez Murphy, aged 32, was laid to rest beside her three children who preceded her to the grave. She also leaves six children and a husband to miss her presence. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. R. S. Troxler, of Shiloh, Rev. D. R. Williams, of Pleasant Grove, and Rev. H. L. Powell, pastor of the church.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—Our work is moving along nicely. Sunday school is still increasing.

The second Sunday in May being Mother's Day, a special program was arranged which was very fitting. Our pastor preached a very interesting sermon at three o'clock to a very good sized congregation.

We are planning to have our Children's Day program and home-coming day here the second Sunday in June.

Mount Hermon, Mount Hermon Charge.—The Woman's Auxiliary is trying to raise the quota of Herald subscriptions for this church. Some definite work is being planned for each month.

Our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, preached an excellent sermon on Mother's Day. He paid very high tribute to mothers. Three young men from High Point College, Messrs. Whitehead, Holt and Roberson, were present and had a part on the program.

The annual memorial service was held the third Sunday. Mr. M. E. Yount, superintendent of public instruction of Alamance county, was the principal speaker. A large crowd attended. Many of our former members spent the day with us.

The Sunday school is planning to hold a Children's Day service some time soon. The program committee has begun its work.

The special revival services will begin the third Sunday in July.

First Church, High Point.—Much interest has been manifested by our congregation in the election of Dr. G. I. Humphreys, of Salisbury, Md., as president of High Point College and successor to Dr. R. M. Andrews, who resigned recently. Dr. Humphreys is a stranger to the majority of our High Point people, but a cordial welcome and a hearty co-operation await him here. No doubt he will soon feel very much at home in our midst. We understand that he will assume his new duties about June 1st. The board of trustees at their meeting last Tuesday also elected the faculty for next year, which will remain about the same with a few changes. Coach Jack Boylin resigned, as did Prof. T. C. Johnson. Prof.

Stanley Pugh has been awarded a fellowship at the University of Cincinnati, Ohio, and will spend next year at that institution. Mr. Floyd R. Garrett, A. B., class of 1928, will be the new librarian.

Commencement exercises at the college will open next Thursday evening with the rendition of the cantata, "Fair Ellen," by the music department. Friday evening the annual oratorical and essay contest will be held when three senior boys, Messrs. Ralph Mulligan, Clayton Glasgow, and Webster Pope, will compete for the Robinowitz medal, and three senior girls, Misses Lucy Nunnery, Annie Bell Thompson, and Grace Barnette, will compete for the S. L. Davis medal. At 5:30 o'clock Saturday evening, May 31, the Alumni Association will hold a business session and a banquet, in which the Yadkin College alumni will join. On Sunday morning, June 1st, the baccalaureate sermon will be delivered in the First church, High Point, by Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of the General Conference, and at 8 p. m. President Andrews will speak his farewell address to the graduating class in Roberts Hall. On Monday morning, June 2nd, at 10:30 o'clock degrees will be conferred upon the 54 members of the class and diplomas presented. An address will be made by Dr. Henry Louis Smith, of Greensboro, president emeritus of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., and member of the prominent and cultured family of Dr. J. Henry Smith, who was pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Greensboro, for 40 years, now of sainted memory.

Hearty congratulations are extended to the nine boys and girls of First church who are members of the large graduating class of 140, who will receive diplomas from High Point High School next Tuesday evening. These are the following: Misses Alma F. Andrews, Josephine J. Ferguson, Mary Reid Idol, Dorothy H. Kreiger, Margaret Poole, and Erestine VonCannon, Messrs. Kent K. Douglas, J. D. Koonce, Jr., and Alfred Moffitt. This will be the largest class in the history of the institution.

O. R. York has been appointed postmaster here for the third time, his record being the longest for many years. He was inducted into the office December 17, 1921, after the resignation of the late J. J. Farriss. Mr. York says his ambition now is to get a new postoffice building for the city.

The new census gives High Point a population of 36,741, which is a remarkable gain over that of 1920. She is pushing her neighboring sister of Greensboro with 53,525 a close second, who may well look to her laurels in the next decade.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. C. Robbins went to Richmond, Va., last week to attend the marriage of the latter's cousin, Miss Lucille Franklin.

Work on the new superintendent's house at the Children's Home is progressing rapidly, and it now presents an attractive appearance.

Miss Rosalie Andrews, eldest daughter of Rev. R. M. Andrews, is a most attractive and talented member of the class of 1930 of High Point College, who will receive her degree at the commencement next Tuesday.

Miss Mary Young, dean of women at the college, expects to sail from New York on a European trip June 13th, which will embrace most of the principal countries and a visit to Oberammergau to witness the Passion Play. She plans to be away the greater part of the summer. Her friends wish for her a safe and happy voyage. This trip will be a well-earned rest and vacation after a strenuous period of work for six years with college girls.

Twenty-six of the class of 54 graduates of High Point College next week are local young men and women, which fact shows that High Point is loyal and supports the College

Enfield.—Our various church organizations are progressive and we are expecting a greater progress throughout the summer months.

Mr. Auman continues to give us helpful sermons. Yesterday he preached a great and good one, using as his subject "Pentecost and Christian Fellowship." Though he is kept busy serving as chairman of First District, and also other offices of church work, he has a well prepared and forceful sermon ready for each Sunday.

On the third Sunday Rev. Lawrence Little, of the School of Religious Education of Duke University, preached for us. His subject, "Religious Training of Youth," was well expounded, and we greatly appreciated and enjoyed this message. However, our own pastor has been emphasizing the importance of this great task ever since he has been with us, and was instrumental in our having a daily vacation Bible school in our church last summer, which was the first one ever put on in our town.

The churches are uniting this summer and are making plans now to have a daily vacation Bible school begin June 16th. The training this Bible school gives is vital to the child, and it is important that the parents of our town have ther children enrolled the first day and urge them to attend every class. Let each member of each church have a part in the success of this great task.

Our Bible school recently put on a membership drive, the class being divided into two teams, Reds and Blues. The Reds having won were entertained by the Blues on Thursday night. Miss Ethel Clements as leader of the Blue team, assisted by Mrs. Eli Bellamy, prepared a program of stunts and games which provided lots of fun for both teams. Then came refreshments -ice cream and cake, which was greatly enjoyed and consumed by icy appetites. After singing a good-night song, three cheers were given Miss Clements, showing our appreciation of her as our hostess.

Our Junior Endeavorers were given a fish-fry in the Hut about two weeks ago which was greatly enjoyed by all and we appreciate the effort put forth by the social committee, and to them we give three cheers.

Mr. Auman is attending the Leadership Training School at Aurelian Springs High School, beginning today, May 26th. He has charge of the methods of missionary work. He offered free transportation to as many as four besides himself; hope that number at least will attend these classes.

Success to the Herald and its readers.

Moriah.—Our attendance is much better, both at Sunday school and church services. Had 97 at Sunday school and 175 for the 11 o'clock service yesterday.

Last Sunday we had a special service for the fathers of our congregation. Misses Mozelle and Dena Ross, Clay and Hall Ross, of Pleasant Garden sang for us. Our pastor preached a splendid sermon to the fathers. About 30 fathers were present.

Next Sunday, June 1, we will honor the young people. A very interesting program is being planned. Seats will be reserved for all young people or all unmarried people between the ages of 15 and 99 years. Remember the age limit and come. We hope to have not only young people from our church, but also those in the community and nearby churches worship with us next Sunday.

The ladies are ahead in the attendance contest in Sunday school.

We are climbing some in Herald subscriptions, but want to reach our quota right away. "We will if we can, and we can if we will."

C. E. seems to be lagging a little, but school is out now and we are looking forward and planning for a bigger and better society.

First Church, Thomasville.—I am happy to be back in the work again in the North Carolina Conference.

On Sunday, May 11, it was my privilege to be present and speak at the Mother's Day service which Rev. and Mrs. Peeler prepared. We enjoyed a good time todgether. The attendance was large and everybody seemed to be happy. After the servic Rev. and Mrs. Peeler and I were invited out to dinner with Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Connell. The delicious meal, the splendid hospitality and fellowship made the visit very pleasant.

The evening service was well attended by an appreciative and attentive congregation. We were happy to have Rev. H. L. Powell and Rev. H. W. Bell worship with us and take an active part in the service. We hope to have them with us often.

The people of this church have given me a hearty reception and have manifested a spirit of co-operation and sympathy which makes a new pastor feel at home and ready to go to work immediately. I have already learned to love these folk and I am happy in the opportunity of working with them. I see no reason why we should not get along nicely together.

The work in general seems to be progressing nicely. Everybody speaks very highly of Rev. and Mrs. Peeler and were sorry to give them up. I think they did a commendable work while here and were liked by all who knew them. We as pastor and people extend to them our prayers and best wishes in their new field.

A union service at our church on next Sunday evening, June 1, at 8 o'clock will mark the beginning of a series of pre-Pentecostal evangelistic meetings, held under the auspices of the three Mthodist Protestant churches of Thomasville. The idea was suggested by Dr. Maier and the plans formulated by a committee of the pastors and representatives of the three churches. We decided that there was no better way to observe Pentecost than to unite our forces in a meeting for the purpose of building up a spirit of co-operation in the churches, increasing the spiritual llfe of the churches and winning souls for Jesus Christ. Below is a schedule of the meetings:

June 1, at First Church, Dr. H. W. Maier, speaker.

June 2, at West End, Rev. Roy I. Farmer.

June 3, at West End, Dr. H. W. Maier.

June 4, at First Church, Rev. H. W. Bell.

June 5, at First Church, Dr. S. W. Taylor.

June 6, at Community Church, T. Glenn Madison.

June 8, at Community Church, Dr. A. G. Dixon.

The services will be held at 8 o'clock each evening. We solicit your prayers for the success of the meetings.

T. GLENN MADISON.

West Forsyth.—The work has been moving along as usual since our last report. We have had services at all six churches during the past four Sundays with the usual attendance and also the usual interest. The Lord's Supper has been administered at four of the churches during the past month. The people continue to remember the pastor and family with appropriat gifts, for which we are evry grateful. Those remembering us recently with gifts were Mrs. W. W. Whitman, Mrs. J. W. Masoncup, Mrs. Eugene George, and Mrs. J. T. Briggs, of Tabernacle church; Bro. Clinton Sprinkle, of Pleasant Hill church.

This writer wishes to expres his appreciation of the most interesting splendid issue of the Herald last week. Bro. Harrison always does things in an excellent manner, and he and his committee of the Annual Conference are to be congratulated upon their achievement and commended for their interest in the Herald subscription campaign. The pastors and people throughout our conference should rally to the support of the Herald. Its continuance is imperative to the further progress of the Methodist Protestant Church and its interests in North Carolina.

Our regular services were conducted at Harmony Grove last Sunday with a good attendance and splendid interest in the services. The Lord's Supper was administered and a good number of the members participated. We are glad to report the addition of one new member at Harmony Grove last Sunday. Mrs. G. R. Craft was received by certificate from the Home Moravian Church, Winston-Salem. She is the wife of Bro. Craft, superintendent of the Sunday school.

Our services next Sunday will be at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches.

C. B .WAY, Pastor.

Burlington, First Church.—We had a very good day at Sunday school and the other services today. Attendance in the Sunday school was 361, showing a gain of 48 over the previous Sunday's record. Offering amounted to $19.34.

The orchestra, made up of younger members of the school, is doing splendidly in their work; and we hope that each member of this group will be faithful in this work and keep the good music in our school.

Our church school will begin June 9th with Misses Maxine Taylor and Elizabeth Rogers as leaders. We hope that the parents of the children of the Sunday school will see that each child eligible will enlist for this imtant course.

Mr. George C. Smith, assistant teacher, taught the Baraca class today in the absence of Mr. C. C. Lindley, regular teacher. The lesson was well taught and we feel that we are to be congratulated in having both an excellent teacher and a very able assistant. Reports from Bro. A. E. Sykes are that he is improving, of which we are very glad.

The prayer meeting last week was conducted by Mrs. L. W. Gerringer, the pastors' wife, and the lesson she gave us was very helpful and inspiring.

The second quarterly conference will hold its session Wednesday evening, June 4th, at 8 o'clock and a large attendance of officers and church members is requested.

Bro. Gerringer has just returned from assisting in a meeting with Rev. Geo. L. Curry, High Point, and reports a good meeting.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its May meeting Monday evening, May 19th, at the Hut, with 34 members and one visitor present.

The regular business was transacted, including reports from the individual circles and the local treasurer. The main feature for the evening was a report from the Branch Meeting held at this church. This report was given by Mrs. Ed Ausley. It was very interesting and well prepared.

Mrs. L. W. Gerringer, president of the Burlington Auxiliary, was very much pleased with the way in which the Branch Meeting was conducted and the splendid co-operation that was given her by the members. She also read a letter which she had received from a delegate in which she expressed her thanks and appreciation for the good time that she had while here at the meeting.

A quilting party for the ladies was planned for next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Hut. Several new ways of making money were discussed, after which the meeting adjourned.

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

—We have received the subscription of A. A. Sain, Lawndale, and would like to know which pastoral charge should receive credit. Will those who send in subscriptions kindly indicate the name of the charge so that due credit may be given?

We thank Rev. N. M. Harrison for the cuts that have appeared in the HERALD the last four weeks, including this week.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Fritts

Susan Kathleen Hege was born November 21, 1863; died April 22, 1930. She was united in marriage to Mr. T. J. Fritts, October 11, 1883. To this union were born ten children. Her husband and one child have preceded her to the spirit world. She leaves to mourn their loss, three sons, C. L., J. W., and R. O. Fritts, all of Davidson county; six daughters, Mrs. Fred Shoaf, Mrs. R. W. Hege, Mrs. H. V. Swicegood, Mrs. Roy Myers, Mrs. W. J. Fritts, and Mrs. Addie Snider, all of this county; 38 grandchildren; one brother, Charles Hege; and one sister, Mrs. Sarah Jenkins, both of whom live in Davidson county.

Mrs. Fritts was converted in early childhood and joined Shiloh Methodist Protestant church. About twenty years ago she moved her membership to Mount Carmel M. P. church and proved a faithful member until her death. She was a quiet woman, but intensely loyal to her church; she was a devoted Christian; and she will be missed by the church and community. The esteem in which she was held was shown by the large concourse of people; and by the beautiful floral tributes brought by her friends and neighbors.

Funeral services were conducted at Mount Carmel M. P. church by the writer, assisted by Rev. C. Loy. Interment was in the church cemetery.

C. G. ISLEY.

Welborn

Mrs. Ruby Welborn departed from this life May 7, 1930. She was born May 26, 1896.

Surviving are her husband, K. Mitchel Welborn, and two children, Hazel and Lionel. Also three sisters: Mrs. Viola Clinard, of Irwin, Tennessee, Mrs. Pearl Phillips, and Mrs. Mary Ritch, of Charlotte, N. C.

She professed faith in Jesus Christ in early life and joined the First Methodist Protestant Church of Thomasville where she remained a member until death.

The funeral services were conducted at the First Methodist Protestant church Thursday afternoon, May 8, at 3:00 o'clock by Rev. J. E. Pritchard, pastor of First Methodist Protestant church, Asheboro, assisted by Dr. H. W. Maier, pastor of Community Church, Thomasville, and the writer. Interment followed in the City Cemetery.

E. O. PEELER.

Sykes

John William Sykes, age about 61 years, passed from this life May 3, 1930. While walking on No. 10 highway near his home at Cheeks Crossing, he was injured and he died instantly.

He was converted when he was a child and joined Chestnut Ridge church. About two years ago he transferred his membership to the Mebane M. P. church, and he remained a member there until death.

Mr. Sykes is survived by his wife and six children; two daughters, Mrs. C. E. Squire, of Mebane; Mrs. C. E. Davis, of Swepsonville; and four sons, Dewey, Thomas and Mangum Sykes, of Chek's Crossing; and Bryant Sykes, of Baltimore.

Funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon at Chestnut Ridge church, by Rev. W. M. Loy, pastor of the Mebane M. P. church, assisted by Rev. B. M. Williams, pastor of Chestnut Ridge church. The bereaved have our deepest sympathy.

REPORTER.

Hatch

On Wednesday morning, May 7th, just as the sun was slowly rising, death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Hatch and took from them another darling little girl, Lillie.

Lillie was about ten years old. She was loved by all who knew her.

She leaves to mourn her loss a father, mother, two sisters and five brothers.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at Chestnut Ridge church, conducted by Rev. B. M. Williams. Then the body was laid to rest in the churchyard cemetery, beneath a mound of flowers.

May God keep and comfort the dear father, mother, brothers and sisters.

A Tribute of Love

For the fourth time in eight months our church has suffered loss by death. This time in the the passing of Mrs. Mary Outterbridge, who was faithful to the church, hers preferably, where there was no conflict, any church. She was true to be present at all services Sunday and mid-week unless prevented by some good reason. She has been and will be missed in the choir where her fine alto added so much to the music. She was a fine character and truly, "To know her was to love her." She had her share of troubles but she bore them beautifully and it was a pleasure to be with her. For nearly four years she served her county as welfare officer, and did her work faithfully, giving her best willingly. It gave her much concern during her sickness that she could not be at her work; setting times when she might be able to work again. She was confined to her bed five months and to the dear sister, who was with her all the time, it was a heart-breaking task, knowing her disease was incurable; doing all she could to make her comfortable; and to be brave and cheerful in her presence.

She looked to her Father for endurance for the task and He supplied her. Mary made a brave fight for life, feeling that she would recover, but her Father whom she loved and served faithfully relieved her of the struggle and early Easter morning her spirit went to the God who gave it and she was at rest. On Monday her beautiful form was laid by the side of the fond husband of her young womanhood, under a profusion of beautiful flowers, surrounded by loved ones, friends and sympathizers to await the resurrection. May the God of Love and Peace comfort the children, sisters, brothers and loved ones who feel their loss so keenly is the wish of one who loved her.

Hyman

Something more than two months ago, Mrs. Helen A. Hyman passed to her reward. Mrs. Hyman, nee Miss Helen A. Braswell, grew up in the Speight's Chapel community. During her early married life, while living in Enfield, she was converted under the ministry of Dr. Wm. H. Wills. She was so happy in the new experience that, before preparing the morning meal, she hastened to the home of her neighbors and friends, Dr. and Mrs. Ben Whitaker, to tell them of her new-found joy and peace.

Her membership was at Speight's Chapel, where she lived during the latter part of her life as also the earlier part, with a period between at Enfield.

Mrs. Hyman was one of those quiet, unpretentious persons, always the same, always true, always loyal, in whom all who knew her had an abiding confidence. She loved the Kingdom, loved her church, was a spiritual pillar as well as a financial pillar, and faithful to the end. She was some of the salt of the earth.

She leaves one sister, Mrs. Joyner, of Raleigh; one brother, W. T. Braswell, of Whitakers; two sons, Forrest and Clifton, one daughter, Miss Maude Hyman, and four grand children.

The funeral was conducted in Speight's Chapel church by Rev. J. Clyde Auman and the writer, and the body laid to rest in the church cemetery.

The hearts of relatives and friends go out in sympathy with the family. The loneliness is perhaps felt most keenly by the son and daughter left in the home.

Cashatt

William Hosea Cashatt was born in Randolph county, June 17, 1852, and died at his home near Mitchell's Grove church in Guilford county, May 3, 1930.

October 10, 1880, he was married to Marinda Jane Varner. To this union there were born ten children, eight boys and two girls, all of whom survive except one—Nannie E.—who has been waiting his coming for about ten years.

The deceased moved to Guilford county in 1896 and settled near Mitchell's Grove church. In 1903, during the pastorate of the writer, Brother Cashatt and his entire family joined Mitchell's Grove. Of this church the deceased lived a consistent member to the time of his death as long as he was able to attend church. He bore his illness, which was long and painful, with great patience and Christian fortitude. He had during the past year commented on his departure and said he was willing to go. The wife has lost a true and faithful husband, the children a loving father, the church a good member, and the community a valuable citizen.

Let us meekly bow in submission to our Heavenly Father's will and say: "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed is the name of the Lord."

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. R. Hutton, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, and the writer, in the church of which he was a member. His body was then placed in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morning.

Sink

W. L. B. Sink, son of Phillip and Mary E. Sink, of Davidson County, was born October 10, 1849, and died May 13, 1930.

January 20, 1869, he was married to Miss Mary E. Stone and this union was honored with ten children, six of whom are dead. His wife died November 10, 1923. The deceased has four children living, 41 grandchildren, 54 great-grandchildren, and two great great grandchildren. The living children are Mrs. Mary J. Reece, Mrs. J. A. Robbins, J. P. and Daviel Sink, all of High Point. In addition to this large number of relatives, Brother Sink leaves a wide circle of friends who mourn because he has been taken. He also has one brother who lives in South Gate, California, and one sister in Lexington, N. C.

Our deceased brother made a profession of religion and joined the church in early life. He was a church worker all his life. He loved the church and always gave liberally of his means to carry on her work. "He was steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." English Street has lost one of her strongest pillars and most devoted members. He was class leader and was doing a fine work in helping to build up our mid-week prayer services. He was also assistant teacher of the Jennie Lee Philathea class. In short, whenever and wherever his church needed him, he was ready and willing to do his best.

Upon whose shoulders will his mantle fall? Surely from the large number of grandchildren there will be found someone who will rise up and carry on the work grandpa loved so well. We feel that a great man in Israel has fallen. Not great in the sense the world defines greatness, but great in the true meaning of the word.

"Servant of God, well done;
Rest from thy loved employ,
The battle fought, the victory won;
Enter thou thy Master's joy."

Tally

The funeral of William Jerome Tally was conducted at the Hope Methodist Protestant church at Bonlee May 15th by Revs. L. W. Gerringer, J. E. Pritchard, and A. O. Lindley. The two former ministers had assisted in revival meetings in Hope church and for several years had been close friends of the family. Brother Lindley, of course, is pastor of the church. The Masonic lodge of which he was a member had charge of the services at the grave.

Brother Tally lived for a great number of years at Bonlee where he was closely identified with the business and religious life of the community. He was a prominent business man. He was one of the best known and most popular railroad men of this section. He was connected with the Bonlee and Western railway, and the Townsville Railway Company. He was a native of Chatham county but in recent years he had lived in Greensboro, Thomasville and Winston-Salem. He was making his home in the latter city when he died.

For many years he was actively identified with the Hope Methodist Protestant church of Bonlee. Some years ago he transferred his membership to Grace M. P. church in Greensboro where it continued until the time of his death. He was a splendid citizen and a Christian gentleman of the finest type.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Minnie Hood Tally, one daughter, Mrs. P. G. Dunlap of Little Rock, S. C., and three sons, George W., Elmer A., and W. Raymond, all of Winston-Salem.

Brother Tally passed away suddenly at the home of Dr. R. L. Caviness, at Coleridge, Tuesday night. His death was due to heart trouble.

The body lay in state in the church from 9:45 to 10:45 the day of the funeral. A great host of sorrowing relatives and friends were present to show their respects and as an evidence of the high esteem in which Brother Tally was held.

All the sorrowing relatives have the deepest sympathy of their many friends in this time of great loss.

L. W. GERRINGER.

Resolutions

It is with sad hearts that we, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church, wish to express our grief in the loss of our beloved sister, Mrs. Vernon Coble, who departed this life March 18, 1930.

We realize in her passing that the church has lost a useful and consecrated member, the Woman's Auxiliary a faithful and efficient worker, and we as individuals a sincere personal friend.

Therefore be it resolved; First, That our Woman's Auxiliary and church hold in loving remembrance her inspiration and devotion.

Second, That the heartfelt sympathy of the church and auxiliary be extended to the bereaved husband, children and brothers, committing them in their hour of deep sorrow to the care and keeping of our Heavenly Father.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of the auxiliary, one sent to the family and one to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

MRS. C. A. SMITH,
MRS. MILTON CAUSEY,
MRS. R. L. JONES.

McDowell

On Sunday evening, May 18, as it was beginning to get dark the spirit of Mrs. Edith Alitha McDowell, beloved wife of Rev. W. F. McDowell, took its flight to the spirit world. Mrs. McDowell was a daughter of Rev. Henry Lewallen and was 76 years of age. She had been in declining health for some years, but just a few minutes before her going she was out in the yard. She went to her room and in a few minutes her family found her lifeless body on the bed, death evidently coming suddenly. She was a good Christian woman and had made a splendid companion for her husband and a good mother to her children. The funeral services were held in our church at 2:30 o'clock and burial took place in the Asheboro cemetery. President Taylor and Rev. Joel Trogdon will assist the pastor in the service.

She. is survived by her husband and by three sons, John, Ben and Joe McDowell and by two sisters, Mrs. A. C. Cox, of Asheboro, and Mrs. Robert Davis, of Randleman.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

MARRIED

Greene-McPherson

A wedding of much interest to relatives and a large circle of friends throughout North Carolina was solemnized in a quiet but beautiful ceremony last Friday evening at the home of the bride's parents on Hillcrest Drive, when Miss Elsie Greene became the bride of Mr. L. Holt McPherson. The officiating minister was Dr. S. B. Turrentine, president of Greensboro College, and the vows were spoken in the beautifully decorated living-room of the pretty home in the presence of only the immediate families. The bride and groom entered together from a side door, and stood before a bank of evergreens at one end of the large room.

The attractive and accomplished bride is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Greene of High Point, where she was reared. She was graduated from Greensboro College with the class of 1929, and is talented in music, having taught a private class here for more than a year.

Young Mr. McPherson is the older son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen D. McPherson, Woodrow Ave., and is a bright and talented young man of sterling qualities and much promise. He received the degree of A. B. from the University of North Carolina in June 1928, where he was prominent in many campus activities, and since that time has been news editor of the "High Point Enterprise." He is a member of the First Methodist Protestant church, this city. This marriage is the culmination of a pretty romance, which began in high school days, and extended over a period of eight years. This happy youthful pair begins their married life under most auspicious circumstances, and countless friends join in hearty congratulations and all good wishes for a joyous and tranquil life.

Clothing and Other Gifts

The Kistler Furniture Co., High Point, one new New Home Sewing Machine.

Mrs. R. S. Russell, High Point, 200 tomato plants, 5 little dresses and 3 little suits for boys.

Mr. H. A. Moffitt, High Point, 96 union suits of underwear for our boys. This is two suits each for all our boys not otherwise provided for. This is an annual gift by Mr. Moffitt. He also gave us 100 dozen buttons.

Mrs. W. P. Rickett, Hgih Point, one piano. A much needed instrument.

Mr. Hicks, High Point, a neighbor farmer, 200 tomato plants.

Mrs. S. O. Schaub, High Point, 200 tomato plants.

It so happens that all our gifts of this kind are from our High Point friends this week. We thank them, and we also thank those sending the above cash offerings.

Octagon Coupons

We keep receiving packages of Octagon coupons from various persons and communities for which we are thankful. It takes a great deal of patience to wait for a refrigerator which must come in this way. But we now have a bit over-half enough coupons to secure a large electric refrigerator. So if our kind friends will keep sending in the coupons in due time the refrigerator will be installed.

Our Needs

Our needs here are always many; but our chief need is for money with which to pay current bills. It is not very comforting to get occasional sharp notes calling us up short because bills have run too long. We do not blame the writers, but for one who is tender of heart it is certainly disturbing.

You asked us to come here, we have been urged and urged to take the children, and we are being urged and urged right now to take at least a dozen more, and we wish we could. But with our rooms crowded and with bills already back we hesitate. May the dear Father Himself lead into that which is highest and best for all of us.

Rain

We are praying and trusting that the dear Father will soon send the showers. Our fields and gardens need the refreshing so badly. Pray for us, and give for our benefit as liberally as he may lead you to do.

Yours in is service,

A. G. DIXON.

HOME COMING AT YADKIN COLLEGE

The annual "Home Coming" of all the old students of Yadkin College will be held at Yadkin College on Thursday, June 5, 1930. This wiil be the third home-coming to be celebrated there, and an unusually large number of students who have gone to school there from the year the college was founded until the year it was discontinued and everyone else who is interested in the old village, are expected this year. A picnic dinner will be spread on tables especially prepared for the occasion in the grove in front ot Prof. W. T. Totten's home. Everyone interested please come bring your basket and family and enjoy this event with us.

—Sheriff Braswell, of Richmond county (son of Rev. D. A. Braswell) is credited with seizing and destroying two carloads of liquor near Hamlet, N. C. The contents had been shipped from Charleston, S. C., to be delivered in Brooklyn, N. Y., as "moulders' clay." The cars were taken to a steep fill where the liquor was tumbled down the bank into a great bonfire. It is estimated that Brooklynites would have had to pay about a quarter million dollars for this supply of beverage. Mr. Braswell saved their money for them and saved them from many an ache and pain, but they will probably not thank him.

—Ghandhi, saint and political leader of India, is in jail or at least is held for observation, but his followers are causing much trouble to their English rulers. It is impossible to see whereunto this trouble will grow.

CENTRAL MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

The Central Ministerial Association will hold a picnic meeting at Midway Church, Haw River Circuit, on June 9. There wlil be no formal program, but it is hoped that every minister in the district will bring his wife and children also if he desires, and that we may have a good day of fellowship. Bring lunch and arrive well before the noon hour so as to make as complete a day as practicable.

Procession of the Self-Conscious

Lo here I come! If you would see
A man of strength just look at me!
I've had three drinks within the day
And dare a man to come my way!

And here I come, a man of means,
With stocks and bonds and mortgage liens.
If I keep on I'll own the earth
And be a man of matchless worth.

And here I come with wondrous store
Of ancient, median, modern lore:
There's not a thing that I don't know
That's found in books, as I can show.

And here I come with painted face
And every sign of truest grace.
My charms are plain enough to see
In step and form and lingerie.

Then comes a son of noble birth
Whose great-grandfather was man of worth;
He's full of pride as egg of meat,
And moves with strut along the street.

A handsome dude brings up the rear,
All dressed in style with greatest care;
Admires his form in looking-glass
As by the shops they chance to pass.

An Industrial Seminar

Greensboro has just had an industrial seminar to study the moral questions involved in industrial relations. The ministerial associations of High Point, Greensboro and Burlington joined in promoting this meeting and secured help from the Federal Council of Churches. Rev. R. J. Tamblyn, pastor of Grace M. P. Church, perhaps took the leading part in arranging for the meeting and presided. Several college professors of prominence read papers and ministers made addresses.

The great object was to bring about a true understanding of the ethics of business and a disposition on the part of all concerned to do the ethical thing. The sense of doing right in business is worth more than the consciousness of commercial gains. No amount of money or property acquired can begin to compensate for the loss of self-respect resulting from dishonorable conduct in business or social relations.

It is equally possible for employers and employed to do wrong. The church knows this and must not be expected to assume that the wrong in a case of disagreement is always on the same side. Laboring men should not charge the church with being always on the side of the capitalist and employers should not take it for granted that ministers will take stand against them in any controversy with their employes. The church if true to itself and true to the men involved can only take the side of truth.

Yet there are so-called friends of the laboring man or rather there are those who call themselves friends of the laboring man who assert that the churches are tools of the capitalists. Of course Christian men must resent such a slander. Yet it is surprising how many laboring men there are who seem to accept this false and insulting charge. The churches must clear themselves of such an imputation by revealing themselves in their true character as friends of all men and lovers of truth and justice.

In this seminar the history of the textile industry was traced, and the troubles of our time were shown to have had their counterpart in the last century. In one of Dickens' novels he describes a strike in a cotton mill which gives us a picture very like some we have seen in this country in recent years. We should profit by the history of the past and find a way around the troubles of former times. War is now out of date and strikes and lockouts should also be out of date. War is stupid and brutal. So are strikes and lockouts.

I should like to see an industrial seminar in which not only ministers and college professors speak, but also captains of industry and knights of labor. When all classes are ready to join together in an honest effort to find the truth, the truth will be found and class differences will cease to be offensive.

Reforming Circumstances and Reforming Character

With an older minister I was walking about the city of Fairmont, W. Va., and came to a village of miners. I was surprised and shocked to see through the open doors of their houses so much dirt and disorder. I seemed to be looking upon the abodes of pigs or cattle rather than those of human beings. I expressed my feelings in the remark that it is a pity for people to have to live under such conditions. The reply of the minister surprised me and set me thinking. He said: "These people do not want any better conditions than these; give them nice clean houses and in a very short time they would let them become like this."

I am now satisfied that he was right. It does little good to reform circumstances if you do not reform character. It is true that circumstances react upon character, but it is not true that circumstances predominate in the formation of character; material circumstances, I mean. Jesus had the true philosophy of reform and he put the emphasis where it belongs: he said, "Seek first the kingdom of righteousness, the kingdom of God." And he did not teach that this kingdom is to be found through the pursuit of material good. He regarded the supply of material needs as a secondary matter, and gave assurance that material needs will be met if we seek righteousness primarily in order of importance.

INFORMATION FOR PASTOR

China is a vast country with a population four times as great as the United States. If we could stand at some point in China and arrange for all of the inhabitants to march by in single file, the procession would never end, for by the time three-fourths of the people had passed by, a new generation would have been born, and the procession would go on forever.

China is an old country; some Chinese can trace their ancestry back in an unbroken line for thousands of years. The Chinese invented gun powder before we discovered it. They used block printing before we did. When our ancestors were savages, going about in wild animal skins, the Chinese had a wonderful civilization, great cities, laws and learned men.

But through the past centuries while other younger nations were forging ahead, China was living in the glory of the past—a great sleeping giant. Napoleon used to fear the day when China's great multitudes would awaken.

China is awake today—it has given up its ancient Imperial regime, and is a modern democracy. Within the last ten years it has put into effect changes that took centuries to occur in Europe. Four times as many children attend school in China today as ten years ago. With the abolition of girl slavery within the last few years, more people have been freed from slavery in China than negroes were freed in this country at the close of the war between the states. Other startling changes have and are taking place.

But China today is suffering from a terrible famine. In some parts of China they haven't had rain for four long years. Already more people have died of hunger than men were killed in the World War. Children are being poisoned by mothers made desperate watching their suffering. They prefer to see them die quickly than to suffer the long dawn out pangs of starvation. Many children are eating a mixture of chaff and clay. This has no nourishment in it, but helps for a time to still the awful pains of hunger.

John R. Mott says: "Millions of Chinese children are suffering and dying of hunger and disease."

One little ten-year-old boy was found by the roadside eating roots to keep himself alive. He said he would rather have the dogs eat him than to be so hungry and far away from home

Thousands of little boys and girls haven't a crust of bread to eat—poor, sobbing, dying youngsters.—A. L. Cox, State Chairman China Child Welfare.

THE POSTAL, W .F. KENNETT, EDITOR

Last week's Herald was edited by Brother Harrison and in the interest of the Herald. In this issue many things were said which were complimentary to Dr. McCulloch, everyone of which were deserved. Dr. McCulloch and I were born the same year and the same month. We attended the same public school and the same church, so I have known him almost as long as I have known anyone save my parents and I wish to endorse all that has been written complimentary of him. Dr. McCulloch is every inch a man and there are more inches to him than to the average man. Dr. McCulloch has literally given his life to and for the Methodist Protestant church. There are at least three reasons why the Herald should live and its circulation should increase. In the first place it should live and the circulation be increased because the interest of our church in North Carolina requires it. The High Point College has come into existence largely thróugh and by the labors of Dr. McCulloch and his influence as exercised by the Herald and its continued existence and interests is involved in the life and increased circulation of the Herald.

Let the Herald die and the college cannot live and prosper. Let it live and develope and the college will be greatly helped and its interests promoted.

Second, our people cannot be intelligent in church matters without reading the church paper. It is due them that the Herald shall be put into every home. They will by it be developed into stronger and more useful Christian men and women. Those of us who have read the Herald through all of its existence are very strongly attached to it. If the mail brings to us the Herald and other papers at the same time we read the Herald first. A Methodist Protestant home is not completed until a copy of the Herald has been placed in that home. In the third place it is due Dr. McCulloch that the Herald not only live; but that its circulation shall be largely increased. Since he has given his life to the church through the Herald and the college we should give to him in his declining years such a circulation of the Herald as will not only give to him a comfortable living, but will also enable him to accomplish more in his declining years than he did in his earlier days and now in conclusion, how shall this be accomplished?

It is up to our pastors to do this, or at least to do most of it. The pastor and the pastor alone has the opportunity and the pastors alone can accomplish this. It is not enough for the pastor or church to appoint canvassers—they can accomplish something; but they can not take the place of the pastor in this great work. The pastors should publicly call attention to the Herald and its importance and then follow this up by seeing and speaking to the people as the congregation disperses and finally to finish his canvass by going into the homes of his people and presenting to them, in the home, the importance and usefulness of the Herald. Many of the subscribers will thus be "hand picked." If all our pastors would take hold of this very important interest of our church with the zeal that the pastors of Asheboro and Orange charges have done this very important interest will soon be so stimulated as to give to the Herald a circulation that will quicken the pulse of the church in every department of her activities. This appeal should have appeared in the special issue of the Herald and Brother Harrison will please pardon the failure. The fact is the interests involved in thisquestion are so great that I have felt incompetence to handle it. My earnest prayer is that by this poor effort pastors may be stimulated to greater effort in securing subscribers.

GETTING IN ITS DEADLY WORK

Rationalism, or infidelity, masquerading under many disguises, is doing its deadly work on all our mission fields on all continents, and indeed, throughout what is called Christendom. Its most effective allies are the religious pacificists who profess evangelism, while always voting in support of Modernism.

Modernism is as surely an inspired religion as Christianity—with this indifference, that Modernism is undoubtedly inspired by the devil. Therefore the lusts of its father it will do. We have become familiar with its "methods" and "spirit." It has no compunction whatever in depriving evangelicals of their legitimate rights: it will steal their colleges and their churches, their missionary societies, their endowments of all sorts, and prostitute them to its own uses.—The Methodist, Philadelphia, Pa.

All Things Through Christ

Report of the Conference Treasurer for the Two Quarters Ending, April 30

The total amount raised for the first half of the conference year is $10,759.81. The college gets $6,126.61 of this (Dollar a Member) A. C. B. gets $895; G. C. B., $4,703.19; Superannuates, $35; Gratitude Gift Deficit, nothing. The G. C. B. is swelled by the Auxiliary credit of $3,138.21.

A comparison of this report with the first half of last year shows a shortage of this year of $913.64. This is accounted for in two ways. First, the Auxiliary credit this year is short of last year, $640.95; second, Easter came much earlier last year than it did this year, and evidently much more of the Easter offering is in that report than is in the report of this year. That is assured by the fact that the G. C. B. had a credit for the first half of last year of $2,043.06, independent of Auxiliary credits. The only explanation for this difference is that the Easter offering was in the report last year, and is not in this year. If that offering were in the report for this half of this year, we would most likely run some ahead of the first half of last year, despite the money depression that is on us. The college gets $1,633.86 more than it did for the first half of last year. We are now $1.07 ahead of the total amount received for the college during the whole of last year. Our receipts for A. C. B. are just $30.94 short of the first half of last year, and Gratitude received $402.91 short. That is to say, we received $402.91 for this purpose during the first half of last year, and nothing this year. However, with the explanations given, there appears to be about an even balance for the two periods. For the first half of last year, 82 charges had credits; this year, 79.

Pastors' Reports for Second Quarter

There are 92 charges in the conference. Reports are in hand from 65. These reports indicate the following:

Easter: 45 churches held the Easter program, as provided by the Board of Missions; 80 churches took an Easter offering, which amounted to $537.72.

College: 26 charges expect $2,568 more on "Dollar a Member."

HERALD: 17 charges expect full subscription quotas; 42 charges have not been fully worked. On quite a number of charges this is being done now. On 13 charges the subscription allotment is thought to be too large; on 42 charges it is not thought to be too large.

Finances: 59 pastors have received an average salary of $420. Pastors reporting less than for the same period of last year, 25; more than last year, 8; about the same as last year, 9. Nearly all reports indicate that the financial depression is affecting all receipts.

Tithers: 95 are reported by 26 charges.

Children's Home: 102 churches give monthly to the home.

General outlook: the majority of the reports indicate that this is good.

This survey of the field would have been completer, of course, if we had had reports from the other twenty-seven charges.

Pastors' Summer Conference—Leadership Training School

These are two important summer assemblies with us, and full preparation for them is being made by the official heads of each. We are not meeting together this year, as formerly. The Pastors' Conference meets June 23-27. The Leadership Training School will follow in July 12-19. We urge every one to fall in line and give full co-operation to those who are planning the programs for these assemblies. Brother Paschall is asking that pastors appoint registration agents in each church; we trust that this may be done at once, and that registrations may go on promptly and rapidly. Each one of these meetings will make a worth-while contribution to our year's work, and to the permanent development of the conference. Let us all do our best for their largest success.

High Point College Commencement

It was our privilege to hear Dr. Broomfield in a forceful baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning, preached in the First church, High Point, and to be at the college on Monday—commencement day. The large crowd that overtaxed the seating capacity of the college auditorium indicated the growing interest in these commencement occasions. Dr. Henry Lewis Smith was the commencement speaker. His address on Lee—Leadership was strong and pleasing. The fifty-five graduates this year made the largest class in the history of the college. Certificates were awarded to a large number in the commercial department, also. At the conclusion of the program, Dr. Andrews introduced the new President of the college, Dr. Gideon Ireland Humphreys, of Salisbury, Maryland. In a few well chosen words, Dr. Humphreys expressed his appreciation of the unprecedented success of the college up to this time, and his faith in the future growth and usefulness of the institution. He will enter at once upon his duties as president, and will move his family to High Point about the first of July.

Recovering

It will be gratifying to the many friends of Brother G. L. Reynolds and his family to learn that Sister Reynolds is recovering from an operation that she recently underwent at the Clinic Hospital, Greensboro. She will still have our prayers for her complete restoration to health.

Appointments

THAT BEST SUMMER CONFERENCE

That Summer Conference is shaping itself in a fine manner. Dr. Forelines is to be with us with his usual fine help. Dr. P. E. Lindley will give us a course of lectures along the line of work in which he has specialized. Dr. P. S. Kennett is to give us a course of lectures in church history. This as we know is Dr. Kennett's specialty. Dr. G. I. Humphries, the new president of the college, is to give lectures at the night services. This, as everyone can see, will give a fine line up of instructors and we can certainly expect great things. It is hoped to make this the very best conference yet. The big picnic dinner on the Children's Home grounds is to be Friday, June 27, at 1:00 o'clock. Our people from everywhere are invited to bring the big picnic dinners and have a plenty for all including every child and worker at the Home. Please fix this date in your calendar. The plans and the programs are now about arranged. Now the next matter of importance is to get the pastors and people to attend. Please make your plans to that end. Let every pastor be present for every minute of the time. More will be said next week.

A PERFECT DAY

Do hurry, my dear, we must not be late,
The bargain sale starts precisely at eight.
Don't stop for a thing, because rain or shine,
We must see the dentist at quarter to nine.
A full day ahead—let us make haste—
You know there isn't a moment to waste.
I must not forget the modiste at ten,
From there to the bookstall, let me see, then —
Oh, yes, at eleven we go to the club,
After that the masseuse for a vigorous rub.
Luncheon we'll plan to have about one,—
Ten minutes will do to keep on the run.
Again to the shops to search for antiques,
I've not bought a thing for over two weeks.
Don't let us forget that bridge is at four;
You seem to enjoy it, to me it's a bore.
We promised to call on the Highbrows at five,—
From there we will go for a forty-mile drive.
At six we can take a brisk walk in the Park,
Then hurry back home before it is dark.
Dinner at seven—we must not be late—
The opera begins at a quarter past eight.
Midnight for supper, and if we're not dead,
By two, I think, we should all be in bed.

* * *

My dear, you look tired, but surely you'll say
That this is the end of a perfect day.

CHRIST AND CHRISTIANS

He is the vine: they are the branches. Jno. 15:5.

He is the foundation: they are the superstructure. Eph. 2:20.

He is the bridegroom; they are the bride. II Cor. 11:2.

He is the bread: they are the partakers. Jno. 6:35.

He is the shepherd; they are the sheep. Jno. 10:11.

He is the body; they are the members. Eph. 5:30.

THE GREAT UNVEILING

The veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom. It was not that the Most Holy Place had ceased to be holy; it was that every other place had become holy too. It was not the desecration of the temple; it was the consecration of the world. If I remove the mask from a dark lantern, I do not diminish the light in the lantern, but I dispel the darkness everywhere else. That is exactly what happened on that first Good Friday.

The Bible contains the evolution of two tremendous and companion truths. In the Old Testament, men slowly learn that God can find Man anywhere. Cain thought that he could escape from God by wandering a few miles over the hills into the land of Nod! Jacob fancied that, by crossing the frontiers of his native land, he could leave the Most High behind him! Jonah imagined that he could evade God by the simple expedient of crossing the sea! But, little by little, God taught men that though they take the wings of the morning, and fly to the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall His hand hold them! God can find Man anywhere!

But the New Testament contains the evolution of a still lovelier truth. The New Testament reveals the fact that Man may find God anywhere! The veil of the temple is rent! God is no longer confined to a particular place is hallowed ground. On the lonely hillside, on the open sea, in the busy market-place—there stands the Mercy Seat with its rent veil.

Speak to Him, thou, for He hears, and Spirit with Spirit can meet—
Closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet.

The veil of the temple is rent in twain from the top to the bottom! When the World's Redeemer overcame the sharpness of death, He, by that very act, opened the kingdom of heaven to all believers! Let us then pass boldly through the torn veil, and stand with faces unafraid in the Holiest of All, that there we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in every time of need.—F. W. Boreham in The Expositor.

Many would-be reformers see the inconsistency of their philosophy with that of Jesus, and instead of abandoning their their own false view they reject the teaching of Jesus, calling him an impractical dreamer. We may not be surprised to see atheists and men of dissolute lives following in their train, but it is somewhat surprising to see ministers of the church founded by Jesus Christ and men and women who call themselves Christians advocating the views of these dirt philosophers.

If circumstances made men, we would expect to see the best men as a class coming from the homes of the rich, but it is not so. Jesus saw and said that a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things he possesseth. He saw and said that if any man would come after Him, he must deny himself and take up his cross daily. He taught self-denial as a means to virtue. Others teach self-indulgence as a means to pleasure. Jesus was everlastingly right and opposing teachers are everlastingly wrong.

—The opposition of a majority of the presbyteries of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of Amercia has defeated the proposal to allow women to become ordained ministers in that church.

THINGS OF VALUE DIFFICULT OF ACQUISITION

Anything of great value is obtainable only at the cost of sacrifice and struggle. On the contrary, things of little value may be had almost without effort. It necessitates no cultivation to grow a crop of noxious weeds and grasses, but it takes the patient plodding of the plowman to produce snowy harvests of cotton and the pendant ears of golden grain. One only needs to walk through the fields in the autumn and the beggar's-lice and cockle-burs will cling to him; but roses have to be plucked, and often in securing them, the hand is pierced by cruel thorns. Poverty is easy of acquirement, but it takes ardous toil and the practice of economy to amass a fortune. One needs to do nothing to be an ignoramus, but one must burn the midnight oil to be a scholar. It requires no striving to let life run riot in wickedness and make one's self a profligate; but to attain Christian character and sainthood is a task most difficult of accomplishment. The downward way is an easy way, but the ascent of the shining path of the just is like mountain-climbing. Only he who musters his strength and steadily perseveres may hope to scale the glory-crowned summit. How beautifully J. G. Holland has expressed this truth in his volume, "Bitter-Sweet":

"Thus is it over all the earth!
That which we call the fairest;
And prize for its surpassing worth,
Is always rarest.

"Iron is heaped in mountain piles,
And gluts the laggard forges;
But gold-flakes hide in dim defiles
And lonely gorges.

"The snowy marble flecks the land
With heaped and rounded ledges;
But diamonds hide within the sands
Their starry edges.

"The finny armies clog the twine
That sweeps the lazy river;
But pearls come singly from the brine,
With the pale diver.

"Wide is the gate and broad the way
That open to perdition,
And countless multitudes are they
Who seek admission.

"But strait the gate, the path unkind,
That lead to life immortal,
And few the careful feet that find
The hidden portal.

"All common good has common price;
Exceeding good, exceeding;
Christ bought the keys of Paradise
With cruel bleeding.

"And every soul that wins a place
Upon its hills of pleasure,
Must give its all, and beg for grace,
To fill the measure."

THIS PERSONALITY

One of the interesting things about life is the way people find their level. For example, a boy was born in an Ohio town. But he was not destined to live there always. He had a talent, and that talent was bigger than his native town, and bigger than Chicago, where he settled after being graduated from Yale.

His talent was for finance, and it landed him in Washington as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury a few years ago. Poland needed financial counsel and this man was paged. A little over a year ago he became financial advisor to this republic, and a director of the Bank of Poland, charged with the oversight of the funds that were lent to Poland by the United States Government.

This sweep of life is one of the elements which make the stories of men like Joseph, of the Old Testament, Abraham Lincoln, and the thirty-first President of the United States so fascinating. Born in obscure communities, they advanced by the force of personality to high places.

There is something in us that makes us admire the man who lives up to the possibilities within himself. Often a boy or girl possesses talents that are hidden to parents and teachers. Even those who are closest to us are not able to understand us. We are, indeed, a puzzle to ourselves. But if a person is willing to submit to discipline, so that this infinite something which we call personality may be refined and developed in the proper direction, he will gloriously fulfill his mission on earth.

One of the delights in studying biography is to notice how men and women have become great characters—often from humble beginnings up through the stern and rigorous buffetings of life. The wife of Thomas Hardy, the famous English poet and novelist, has written that he managed to survive infancy by the skin of his teeth. "At his birth," writes Mrs. Hardy, "he was thrown aside as dead until rescued by her (a nurse) as she exclaimed to the surgeon: 'Dead! Stop a minute; he's alive enough sure.'" Such was the start in life that Hardy had, and what use he made of his powers!

If tombstones always bore truthful epitaphs, we might sometimes read words such as these: "Here lies John, son of William and Mary Smith, born January 3, 1825; died April 20, 1886. He might have made the world better by having lived in it, but he failed to stir up the gift within him. He was satisfied to eat three meals a day, to dress in the styles of his time, and to conform to the customs of his community. Yes his life was a tragedy. He did not heed the call to separate himself from the crowd and to be different; to strike his own stride in the spiritual life."

Nothing presents a finer, nobler challenge to youth than life itself. In various ways God is speaking to us and urging us to develop these personalities of ours to the highest degree. Into our hands is laid the free gift, full of mystery and potent for good. Let us lay hold on it prayerfully, purposefully, and hopefully. We may realize our own highest individuality through the personality of Jesus Christ.

OUR STORY PAGE

ROBERT UNVEILS THE GLEAM

Robert Green came up the walk, whistling absent-mindedly. The store was all right, but it stifled him. He was not satisfied just to sell electric appliances. He wanted to work with them—find out all about them and what electricity could do.

The new semester was soon to begin at Polytechnic. No, he could not quite manage it this time—next fall maybe.

He shook off his thoughts as he entered the home, which, half paid for, was all his father had been able to leave when he had suddenly lost his life ten years ago.

"Hello, mother! Behind with your rocking?" he greeted cheerily as he tossed a generous share of his pay check into her rapidly rocking lap.

"How I hate to have you do it, son—no! no!—not all that!" remonstrated his mother.

"Aw, shucks, mom, all I have ever given you won't pay for the holes you darned in my clothes. The holes that helped to put your eyes where they are now. Why, mother, if you aren't mending my coat!" stormed Robert. "Straining your eyes when the tailor will do it for a few cents!"

"But you should be putting that money away for your tuition, Robert," answered Mrs. Greene, drawing her chair as close to the light as the position of the fixture would permit, as in gentle defiance of her scolding son she took up her work. "If I could only rent those two rooms—" she continued half to herself.

Robert had argued before and always fruitlessly, so he went thoughtfully upstairs without even hearing her last remark. The sight of his little mother straining her eyes and nerves to mend his clothes under the small, awkwardly placed gas light, troubled him.

"Hello Smithie, old scout!" he said absently-mindedly as his buddy smiled at him from a kodak print stuck in his mirror.

Suddenly he was afire with a big thought.

"That's the solution! Smithie, I crave your advice!" he gleefully announced to the speaking likeness in the mirror. "Maybe mother's eyes wouldn't be—if—" came his sober afterthought.

Soon he had broken all records made since his banister-sliding days in getting downstairs. Indeed, if he had not been so out of habit, he probably would have resorted to his former method.

"Good-bye, mummie," he called in his teasing, affectionate way and the door banged.

"Always like a happy little boy around the house," said Mrs. Greene fondly to the neighbor who had just run in. "You would never guess by his jubilant spirits the sacrifice he is making."

"But he is quite grown up for all his boyishness with you," returned her friend.

"Yes," agreed Mrs. Greene, "and I know that life is beginning to be serious. Since my eyes will not permit me to sew steadily, I have no income. He had counted on entering night classes at Polytechnic this semester, but the eye specialist has changed all that. Oh, it is terrible!" ended the unhappy mother, as tears came to her eyes.

"I know just how you feel," consoled the neighbor. "You are naturally an independent soul. But don't worry, there will be a way. Robert is deserving. There is always a way for those who want a thing bad enough."

"If I couldn't rent those two rooms—" continued Mrs. Greene sadly, ignoring her neighbor's philosophy. "But students are the only possibility and they demand good lights."

"Well, don't worry. You own your home. Robert is a strong boy and he will realize his ideals some day, you may be sure. A little responsibility now will keep them more vividly in his mind," admonished her friend as she bade her good night.

Robert brought Smithie to supper the next evening. They went poking mysteriously about the house, so that Mrs. Greene's curiosity was aroused, Robert talking excitedly all the while.

Something was in the air she was sure—a radio maybe. Well, she could not object, but he really shouldn't spend his money for that when he wanted school so badly. Queer that he did not take her into his confidence. But shortly came a telephone call saying her sister was slightly ill and would like to have her for a few days for company, mainly, as she would be alone all day. She forgot to wonder what Robert was up to as she prepared to go to her sister early next morning.

Quite happily, Robert met her at the station when she came home a few evenings later.

"Well, mother, you did get back on your birthday, didn't you? I was afraid you wouldn't," he greeted her affectionately.

"Why, I had forgotten all about my birthday! Robert never forgets, though," she said patting his arm fondly.

Bless the boy! She would find a large bouquet of flowers at home. He just would buy flowers for her birthday.

"Have you a match to light the gas?" she asked when they reached the gloomy house.

"Nope!" chuckled Robert, as a click flooded the hall with mellow light. "A bright and happy birthday, mother!"

"Why, Robert! Electricity! What—how—?"

"Smithie is in the business now, you know, mother. He got discounts for me and helped me plan it. And Aunt Lou very obligingly got sick—" ended Robert with a grin.

"Robert! Did you—? I didn't think Aunt Lou was very much under the weather," laughed his mother, good naturedly. "You dear, dear boy, to think of it and get everything in order before my return." And Robert found himself being hugged and kissed.

"We thought a wall outlet would be nice there, as that is where you sit most," said he, indicating a rosy-shaded lamp beside her favorite chair.

"And I accused you, in my mind, of having a radio up your sleeve," confessed his mother, overwhelmed with his unselfishness. "But Robert, you should not have done it. It has taken all you have saved for your tuition."

"Oh, that doesn't matter. I'll have enough by next fall. And maybe if we had had it before, my mother's eyes—" but he couldn't finish.

Mrs. Greene knew that it did matter and desperation wrung the mother's heart.

"No, Robert," said his mother, a few days later, refusing the regularly offered money. "I rented those rooms today—and the parlor we don't use, too! Those students were so enthusiastic about the lighting arrangement!"

"Why, mother! That is too much work for you. I won't have it," he said almost in anger.

"Nonsense, boy!" she answered excitedly. "I am strong, it is only my eyes that need rest. And anyway, Mrs. Blair and I have bought a vacuum cleaner together. I am going to serve breakfast, too. It will be so simple with the electric percolator and electric waffle iron which Uncle Ben so blindly sent me last Christmas."

"Why, son, your unselfish gift has given me a means to independence and made me far happier than you can imagine. So don't scold, Robbie," she pleaded at Robert's uncertain look.

Robert saw the old sadness which he had been unable to jolly her out of for weeks was gone. She looked the age she was instead of ten years more than she could lay claim to. He was glad of anything that brightened his mother's face, so he only said—what do you suppose?

"Well, mother, when do we eat?"—Lillion Trowbridge Harp in The Way.

RICHARD'S NOVEL VALENTINES

The weather-man had sent a rousing snow-storm as his beautiful valentine to the world, and Richard awoke that February morning to see all outdoors sparkling and glistening in the sunlight. Richard's first two thoughts were not very jolly; not at all suited to a day made for loving messages and cheery greetings.

"If I only had a new sled!" he sighed, as he looked out toward the long hill where the children coasted all winter. "And I haven't a single valentine to give!" This was indeed a painful thought, for Richard was an unselfish lad, and never once thought of how many valentines he was going to receive. "If I only hadn't broken Mr. Grove's window with my football," he sighed, regretfully, as he laced up his stout, new boots.

Suddenly into his mind popped a little verse his teacher had written on the board the day before:

I mean to be so good and gay,
So kind and helpful every way,
That folks will know it is a sign
I want to BE a Valentine.

But how under the sun and moon could anybody be a valentine? puzzled Richard as he stumped into the cozy kitchen. Valentines meant beautiful messages made of paper lace, gilt arrows, ruby hearts, and pretty pictures, with loving lines to top them off.

"Why, of course, you can't go out looking like a poster," laughed his mother, when Richard confided his question. "But if you do something kind and thoughtful, that says as plain as could be that you're fond of people, doesn't it? That's being a real live valentine."

Richard stood looking out of the window toward Aunt Betty's brown cottage with the old picket fence around it. The snow was deeply drifted, and unbroken by even a dog's track. "Aunt Betty has been gone a long time," he said in a tone that showed how fond he was of his neighbor.

"She's coming home this morning," his mother assured him happily. "I know she is tired, for she has been nursing a sick sister."

Richard pondered this thoughtfully. Too bad Aunt Betty had to come home tired and wade through snow, for her walks and lilac bushes were covered deep. Why! Richard gave a little start. "Lucky it's Saturday!!" he chuckled, as he went whistling outside with his willing shovel and began to be Aunt Betty's Valentine.

That little snow-shovel acted as if it were alive and enjoying Richard's secret. It kicked and pranced about in the snow like a one-legged colt, and in no time at all Richard had cleared his own walks. He crawled through a gap in the old fence where he and Aunt Betty visited back and forth. Such a big mound of nice clean snow suggested first a taste, next a snowball, and last snowman.

"I'll stand him at her back door to say 'Hello'!" decided Richard, as he worked and piled and puffed busily. He had a surprise when he was shoveling the big mound of snow. Something hard and shiny dropped from its snowflake nest into Richard's shovel. "Oh, won't Aunt Betty be glad!" exclaimed Richard when he saw what it was. Then he did a little jig when it occurred to him how he might surprise his kind neighbor.

So when Aunt Betty came home, the walks were clean and dry; and as she turned the corner of the house, there stood a plump little snowman smiling good-day. "Dear me!" said Aunt Betty, forgetting how tired she was. "It must be a snow postman, for there's a letter sticking up in his straw hat." A glance, then a delighted "And if it isn't for me! Sealed with a fine red heart, too."

Richard, hiding behind the old cotton-wood, laughed inside so hard it hurt. There was something hard and mysterious in the envelope, and when Aunt Betty opened it she exclaimed aloud, "Why, it's my gold thimble I lost last week!" To herself she added: "Richard must have found it, bless his heart! Couldn't have a nicer valentine, for this was mother's treasured thimble, and I could never replace it." Then she went inside, and she felt so much better she couldn't think of resting until she made a batch of Valentines for her small neighbor. Richard found them waiting for him at lunch—heart-shaped cookies, iced with pink.—Exchange.

LUTHER AND THE BIBLE

Luther said that he studied the Bible as he gathered apples. First, he shook the whole tree, that the ripest might fall, then he climbed the tree and shook each limb, and when he had shaken each limb, he shook each branch, and after each branch every twig, and then looked under each leaf. Let us search the Bible as a whole; shake the whole tree; read it as rapidly as you would any other book, then shake every limb, studying book after book. Then shake every branch, giving attention to the chapters when they do not break the sense. Then shake each twig by careful study of the paragraphs and sentences, and you will be rewarded, if you will look under every leaf, by searching the meaning of words.—A. C. Dixon.

I SHALL NOT PASS AGAIN THIS WAY

The bread that giveth strength I want to give,
The water pure that bids the thirsty live;
I want to give the oil of joy for tears,
The faith to conquer cruel doubts and fears;
I want to help the fainting day by day,
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

SAMPLE COPIES

Sample copies of the "Honor Edition" of the Herald have been sent to pastors, agents, Secretaries of Literature, and other workers. It is hoped that these will be used discriminately to interest those who are not subscribers. A great number of our good people have not formed the habit of reading the Herald, and, we feel, that many of them receiving a sample copy would see the value of the paper and become subscribers. If more copies are needed please advise us.

REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

The workers are just now catching the spirit of the campaign and getting into the harness. An agent from Mt. Hermon charge says: "We are just beginning, but we expect to get our quota." One church on Liberty and Siler City charge has secured its allotment and the pastor says the other church in a short while will report in full. Rev. B. M. Williams says: "Don't worry about Orange; we'll get ours." Not a discouraging note has been sounded either by pastors or agents. With such a fine spirit of co-operation on the part of pastors and workers we have high hopes for the campaign.

BUT DO WE REALIZE—

That Dr. McCulloch is carrying a heavy financial burden while we delay?

That the Herald is doing no personal good to those who do not receive it?

That other plans will have to be made for continuing the Herald if this campaign fails?

That a prolonged campaign adds to the trouble and expense of the Conference Herald Committee?

TO CHURCHES, SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

Hundreds of thousands of fellow human beings are now alive in China because of the practice of religious precepts by such as you.

Since February first, 1930, around ten per cent. of the organized religious bodies of this country have responded to the piteous appeal of the starving in China and have made up approximately twenty-seven per cent. of the $500,000.00 that has been contributed. Cabled to China February 1-May 15—$450,000.00.

Unchallenged is the positive assurance that no soldier or bandit has ever taken either money or food intended for famine relief. No relief undertaking in a foreign country has surmounted so many difficulties, shown more efficiency or attained greater per dollar results.

The need remains tragic. Will you help send another loaf?

AFFIRMATION

I'm strong and whole,
Serene of soul;
Affirm, believe,
And you'll receive.

Christ reigns today,
He lights my way;
His hand in mine,
I've faith divine.

I have no fear,
Since he is here;
In Love I dwell,
Now all is well.

I'm strong and whole,
Serene of soul;
Only believe
And you'll receive.

—"What times does the next train come in?" asked Edward, aged six, of the old rural station agent. "Why, you little rascal, I've told you five times before that it comes in at 4:44." "I know it," replied Edward, "but I like to see your whiskers wobble when you say '4:44'."—Successful Farming.

We thank Mrs. J. E. Stafford for ten dollars for five gift subscriptions to worthy families. We have asked Rev. J. R. Hutton with the aid of church officials to select those families from the Mount Pleasant community. We also thank Rev. Homer Casto for his donation of $15 in the name of Bethel Home.

JUNE 15: HOW GREAT LEADERS SERVED THEIR GENERATION

Acts 20:17-35; Eph. 3:14-19

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—A Great Priest. Gen. 14:17-24.
Tuesday—A Leader in Faith. Gen. 12:1-9.
Wednesday—A Maker of a Nation. Exod. 3:7-10.
Thursday—A Practical Dreamer. Gen. 41:14-36.
Friday—A Warrior Leader. Joshua 1:10-18.
Saturday—An Awakener. Matt. 3:1-12.

Suggestions to the Leader

Before the meeting give to different ones names of great leaders and in the meeting ask them to tell why these were great leaders and how they served their generation. Then in the meeting have several speakers tell what he or she could do to serve his or her generation if they were to choose an average life calling, such as a teacher, preacher, missionary, nurse, doctor, lawyer, author, housewife, farmer, engineer, scientist, poet, stenographer, and any others you might want to add.

The calling should be made as attractive and productive of good as possible and much real interest should be created.

It would be fine, to have "Follow the Gleam" sung by the society and "Lead Kindly Light" as a solo. Other suitable songs would be "Someone Is Watching Your Light," "There Are Lonely Hearts to Cherish," "I Would Be Like Jesus," "Jesus Calls Us," and "Fling Out the Banner."

Leader's Talk

It has been said that "Man's most interesting study is man." There is much truth in it. In this topic we have the privilege of learning how great leaders served their particular generation and how we may serve our generation. These leaders were human beings just as we are; their problems are our problems; their weaknesses are our weaknesses; and, thanks be to God, their successes may become a prophecy of our own success.

In Acts 20:17-35, the first Scripture lesson, we find Paul on his way to Jerusalem. His boat stopped for awhile at the island of Miletus and Paul sent to Ephesus, which was 30 miles away, for the elders to come down to where he was. He gives his farewell speech to these people with whom he had labored for three years. He sets forth an ideal program for the true minister of Christ. He reminds them of the "grievous wolves" which will come to destroy "the flock" after he is gone, and of their own responsibilities.

In Eph. 3:14-19 we have Paul's petition to the Father for the people of Ephesus. He asks for just those things which would best fit them to be of the greatest service. He asks for an ocean of blessings, that Christ may dwell in them, through faith and that they may be filled with the fullness of God.

Answer These Questions

1. Do you think the opportunities for service are as great as in former generations?
2. Is a non-Christian likely to be as great a blessing to his generation as a Christian? Why?
3. What do YOU owe YOUR generation?
4. Does the world owe you a living or an opportunity?
5. In what way are you your brother's keeper?
6. What leader of all would you rank foremost? Why?
7. Which of the Old Testament leaders do you esteem highest? Why?

Poetry

BE TRUE

Thou must be true thyself
If thou the truth wouldst teach;
Thy soul must overflow, if thou
Another's soul would reach;
It needs the overflow of heart
To give the lips full speech.
Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed;
Speak truly and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed;
Live truly and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.
—Horatius Bonar.

"So came the Captain with the mighty heart:
And when the judgment thunders split the house,
Wrenching the rafters from their ancient rest,
He held the ridgepole up, and spiked again
The rafters of the Home. He held his place—
Held the long purpose like a growing tree—
Held on through blame and faltered not at praise.
And when he fell in whirlwind, he went down
As when a lordly cedar, green with boughs,
Goes down with a great shout upon the hills,
And leaves a lonesome place against the sky."

BRO. FARMER WINS—HELP HIM WIN OUT

When the dust of the first lap of the race for the trip to the Berlin World's Christian Endeavor Convention and the Oberammergau Passion Play had settled, it was found that in North Carolina the Rev. R. I. Farmer, of High Point, was the winner. This makes him the sole state representative and enters him into Group D (of the states) for the final campaign which closes June 15th. At that time one from this group and four other persons in the United States or Canada will be awarded this trip as guests of the Christian Endeavor World Publishing Company.

Through these columns Mr. Farmer desires to thank those who have helped to make possible the victory in the state. Whether or not there shall be an official Methodist Protestant delegate in this World's C. E. Convention depends upon the co-operation given until June 15th. Inquiries have been made as to whether or not it is too late to help or how may it be done. It is not too late and the help assumes practical form in new or renewal subscriptions to the Christian Endeavor World at two dollars per year or two for three-fifty, or three for five dollars, either new or renewal. Renewals are always extended from date of expiration.

No doubt but that if all subscriptions which expire during the next year and all active Endeavorers who are not receiving this working tool of their craft would subscribe, Methodist Protestants alone would bring victory to their candidate. Why not enlist a club of readers and send the same to Mr. Farmer? He will bring back a worth-while message of inspiration from the great convention, the Passion Play and the travel.

AURELIAN SPRINGS LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

According to previous announcements, this school came to a close on Friday night of last week. There were 14 to receive credits. Every one seemed highly pleased with the results.

We were indeed fortunate to have Rev. F. L. Gibbs to have the school in charge.

EFFICIENCY BLANKS

I intended to get a new supply of Efficiency Charts when I went to the convention, but the supply was exhausted. New ones will be printed soon, incorporating a few changes recommended by the Education Committee.

Auxiliaries should work toward the standards in the old blanks until I am able to send but new ones, as the changes are small ones. I will send a blank to each Auxiliary as soon as I receive them.

REPORT OF SECRETARY OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

Read at Branch Meeting

The Department of Christian Education of our Branch is one of our new departments which have been added to our work with the adoption of the new constitution of the Board of Missions.

The Constitution says: "The Secretary of Christian Education shall furnish the Auxiliaries with information concerning the work and needs of our schools, summer conferences, student loan funds and other phases of the work as suggested by the secretaries of the Board of Christian Education."

As Branch Secretary of Christian Education, we have prepared in mimeograph form items of information about our colleges and leadership training program. These have been sent out each month along with other program material by our Secretary of Literature. Reports show that this material has been used by most of the Auxiliaries. I have taught in four Leadership Training Schools held within the Conference, teaching ten 50-minute periods in each school, making 40 50-minute periods in the four schools. In addition to the teaching in these schools, we have conducted worship periods each day in three of them.

Report blanks prepared by Dr. Stephenson and Mr. Little were used this year, these being sent to the Auxiliary Secretaries of Christian Education or to the Corresponding Secretary.

Reports received indicate that 48 per cent of the Auxiliaries had Rally Day observed in their churches this year; 50 per cent Young People's Day; 50 per cent receiving an offering for Rally Day and Young People's Day; two Auxiliaries presented their Annual Christian Education Program; 50 per cent of the Auxiliaries use the Christian Education material sent them each month; one church conducted a week-day school of Religion; 55 per cent of the Auxiliaries had delegates sent from their churches to the Leadership Training School; 50 per cent of the churches have students in High Point College; three contributed to the Student Loan Fund; 48 per cent contributed to High Point College; none had made a contribution to ministerial education.

Recommendations

1. That all Auxiliaries appoint a Secretary of Christian Education, the name and address to be sent to the Branch Secretary of Christian Education.

2. That the Secretary of Christian Education in the Auxiliaries be given at least five minutes on the program each month for the presentation of information regarding our educational institutions, our Leadership Training program, Student Loan and Ministerial education.

3. That the Branch Secretary of Christian Education provide in mimeograph form Christian Education information to be used by local Auxiliaries in ther monthly meeting.

4. That we recommend to the finance committee a special consideration of High Point Colelge.

5. That the Auxiliary Secretaries of Christian Education plan once a month a public Christian Education service.

6. That the Secretaries of Christian Education of the Auxiliary definitely encourage the following Christian Education activities:

(a) The proomtion of denominational Rally Day and Young People's Day.

(b) The sending of delegates to the Conference, district, and local Leadership Training Schools.

(c) The conducting of Vacation Church Schools.

(d) That she use her influence to encourage the young people of her church to attend High Point College.

(e) That she seek to inspire the church membership to raise their High Point College apportionment.

7. That the Secretary of Christian Education encourage financial support for ministerial education.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. H. W. MAIER, Sec'y.

FIRST DISTRICT

The District Rally the fifth Sunday in this month will be held at the Creswell church on the Creswell charge. In accordance with the suggestion of Brother Hethcox, we will use Saturday morning, before, to go. Then in the afternoon Brother Hethcox tells me that he is arranging a fishing party for us. The hour you are expected to arrive in order to have a part in this will be announced later. But the essential thing here is to let your pastor know as soon as possible if you expect to go. Saturday night there will be a special program in the interest of Trained Leadership and the next day and perhaps the following night wil be full of inspirational things which you will delight to have a part in. Brother Hethcox and his people have extended us a hearty welcome and we anticipate one of the very best Rallies which we have had. Watch the paper for further announcements.

J. CLYDE AUMAN, Chairman.

PIEDMONT PASTORS—ON TO MIDWAY

At the last meeting of the Piedmont Federation in Gibsonville, the brethren decided to meet June 9th at Midway on Haw River Circuit, and enjoy a preachers' picnic. Certain things were suggested that would likely be in the way, and would perhaps mar the day. Well, there will be no dark spots to that day, if the pastor of that church can keep them away.

As for the young children,—bring them. Four young ladies of Midway church will take care of them, and entertain them in a 15-acre oak grove, while the mothers enjoy the service in the church.

That famous Maxwell House Coffee, "Good to the last drop," will be served to those who want it. The church will furnish your coffee cup, spoon, and cream, if you want sugar and a saucer or drinking glass, bring that along, for we can't get those so easily.

Plenty of good water will be on hand, and easy to find, and easier to drink. So do not hesitate to bring the children, or your well-filled basket with good things to eat.

Now, how to get there—Those south and west of Greensboro, come from that city on Highway 70. At the top of the hill, after crossing Reedy Fork Creek at Hardie's mill, the Brown Summit road forks to the left, a little tar road taking you through that little village. Cross the railroad at the station; about 200 yards north of the church take the right hand road at the tobacco barns. Following this road to the second cross road, you then turn left, and in a few minutes you arrive at the Midway church, a beautiful brick structure located in a large oak grove. Those people coming from east of Gibsonville, take the Friedens Church road there, coming to Brown Summit via Union Store cross roads, and at Brown Summit follow the route given above.

I hope that all the brethren in this district will come to this meeting, and enjoy an outing in this great old churchyard. I am looking forward to your coming, SO COME ON, BRING YOUR LAUGHS AND SMILES, AND LEAVE BLUE MONDAY GROUCHES AT HOME.

J. L. TROLLINGER.

—Calvary's pastor and choir were called to the broadcasting station for an early morning service on Tuesday of last week.

—Calvary church has a member in the graduating class of High Point College, Miss Huldah Dixon, daughter of Bro. A. C. Dixon. She has our congratulations.

—President S. W. Taylor preached a fine sermon last Sunday night to the graduating class of Curry High School, Greensboro. Among the 31 members of the class are his daughter and his older son.

—A Greensboro woman laid a lighted cigarette down. Her little boy about a year old picked it up and thrust the lighted end against one eye-ball, causing injury to the sight that may be permanent. Unfortunate infant!

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Oak Grove, Cleveland Charge.—The Memorial services were held Sunday, May 24th. Rev. C. E. Ridge, the pastor, preached the forenoon sermon. In the afternoon the program consisted of singing, and short talks by the people. The graves were beautifully decorated, and a large crowd attended.

The Sunday school is progressing nicely under the leadership of Mr. P. S. Gettys. We have a very large enrollment, and a fairly good attendance . Everybody come to Sunday school and bring some one with you.

Our C. E. Society is doing splendid work. Services every Sunday evening at seven-thirty. We invite you to attend, and see for yourself what we are doing. We also welcome new members.

ASS'T REPORTER.

Draper.—Our meeting is in progress and Brother Bethea is at his best. Some have professed. Three have united with the church.

This morning Brother had to return to his work to fill his Sunday appointments.

W. T. TOTTEN.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—On the second Sunday night Pastor Smith brought us a wonderful sermon using as his subject "Mother," we feel sure every one present enjoyed this sermon. Also the duet which was rendered by Mrs. Smith and daughter was very touching.

Some of our young people are taking the course in the Training school which is at Aurelian Springs this week, under the teaching of Drs. Gibbs and Johnston, also Rev. J. C. Auman. We regret that more of our young people did not take this course.

Mr. M. J. Morris was called to Norfolk, Va., last week on account of the death of his brother, Mr. D. F. Morris.

Our hearts were made sad on Saturday, May 24th, when the news came to us of the sudden death of one of our good members, Mrs. John Morris. She had been a faithful member of Corinth church for a long time and was indeed a good Christian woman. She leaves to mourn their loss two daughters, one son, and one adopted son that she raised from a tiny baby. Her husband preceded her just seven months. The funeral was held at Corinth church Sunday p. m. at 3 o'clock, by her pastor. The church would not hold all present. The body was laid to rest beneath a mound of flowers which shows the deepest sympathy goes out to the loved ones in this hour of sorrow.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS.

Lineberry.—The Ladies' Aid of Lineberry M. P. Church held its regular monthly meeting Saturday afternoon, May 10, at the home of Mrs. Walter Lax. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. W. A. Frank. Song, "Wonderful Words of Life." Scripture reading, Luke 4:1-10, by Mrs. Van B. Wood and prayer was offered by Mrs. Nen Loflin. The secretary, Mrs. Whit Wood, called the roll and collected dues; nine members answered to roll call, five visitors were present.

Our Aid Society has collected through fees, aprons and Sunday egg money a total of $65.04. Have recently purchased carpet for the pulpit and matting for aisles of our church and shades for protection of piano, have also oiled church floors, which adds greatly to the looks of our church. Total cost of same, $51.97. Have donated $8.76 for the benefit of sick people, leaving a balance in treasurer of $4.31. Meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. Whit Wood in June.

After the business hour a social hour was enjoyed, the hostess served sandwiches, cake, pickles and hot coffee which was enjoyed by all.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Smith Sunday, a daughter.

MRS. VAN B. WOOD, Reporter.

Knob Creek, Fallston Charge.—The memorial service was held Sunday, May 25. A large number from far and near gathered to pay respect to their deceased ones. Many friends and relatives were there that had not attended for a long time. Rev. J. M. Morgan delivered a wonderful sermon; dinner was on the ground and was enjoyed by a great number. The Deal Chorus sang very beautifully in the afternoon; there being such a large crowd and the church so small they occupied the school auditorium.

Our pastor's wife has been sick, but is improving.

Miss Pearl Gantt has been sick, but is improving.

Our superintendent, T. P. Deal, has been sick, we are sorry to report.

W. W. Richard is just alive. May God bless those in trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Goodman from Raleigh visited his mother and brother last week-end.

Miss Elvie Richard and Miss Ethel Moorman, from Monganton, visited home folks last Sunday. Both are Sunday school girls.

Sunday school is moving along nicely.

REPORTER.

Henderson.—The Protestant churches of Henderson have just closed a home visitation evangelism campaign, from which many good results have been obtained. Among these good results for us has been a marked increase in the attendance at Sunday school and the regular church services; also at the mid-week prayer services. While only two members have been received thus far as a result of these special efforts a number of others have expressed a desire to unite with us and we are eexpecting many of them to do so in the near future.

Mrs. A. E. Smerdon recently presented to the church a baptismal font, one of the most beautiful that we have ever seen, in memory of her husband, the late A. E. Smerdon, who was for a number of years a faithful member of the church. Mrs. Smerdon has the thanks of the entire membership for this useful and beautiful memorial.

The Brotherhood of the church is holding regular monthly meetings, with a supper served by the women of the church and an interesting helpful program. This organization is meaning and will continue to mean, we are sure, much to the men of the church and congregation. W. R. Trogdon is president and T. J. Evans is secretary.

Miss Agnes Harris has been appointed Herald agent by the pastor, and we hope that our church will soon reach the quota set by the committee. We believe in the Herald and would like very much to have it visit every home in the church weekly.

The official board at a recent meeting voted the pastor a two weeks' vacation. This vacation will be taken the first of July, including the first and second Sundays. We thank the brethren for their thoughtfulness and hope that the little "time off" will help us to render better service upon our return.

Our Vacation Church School will be held this year the last two weeks in July, under the direction of Miss Maxine Taylor. Miss Taylor is a member of the Henderson High School faculty and is being employed during the summer months by our Board of Young People's Work. She is an efficient worker and we are glad to have her conduct our school. Miss Elizabeth Fox, who directed the school last summer, asked to be relieved of this responsibility this year, but has kindly offered her services as an assistant in the school. Miss Fox is superintendent of the Beginner' Department of the Sunday school and is choir director, in addition to being a good worker in the Philathea class and Woman's Auxiliary.

All in all, we feel that the general work of the church is in good condition, and there are many things for which we as pastor and people should be thankful.

R. A. HUNTER.

State Street, Lexington.—Last Sunday was one of our best days in many respects. A large and enthusiastic attendance at Sunday school enjoyed the splendid music furnished by our orchestra, and another very pleasing feature was having the Men's Bible class of Erlanger visit us.

There was no preaching at the 11 o'clock hour, this being Mr. Hendry's day for morning service at Elbaville. In the afternoon a joint session of the Elbaville and State Street quarterly conference met at State Street church. There was good attendance from both churches and business and plans for the future and all matters discussed were pleasantly handled and a most profitable and enjoyable coming together marked the afternoon.

The evening service was a very good one. Special music by the choir and the men's quartet was very much enjoyed.

Last Wednesday evening was the regular church fellowship evening. A social period and sandwich spread preceded the worship program.

The Men's Bible class has outgrown its quarters and now meets in the basement.

Our pastor has been on the sick list for the past day and night, but hopes to be out again soon. We are wishing for him a speedy recovery.

REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—The largest congregations during the present conference year were present at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday, and the attention was good. Rev. A. F. Ingler, of Massachusetts, a Baptist minister and a member of the Erickson evangelistic party, was present at the Baltimore church and took part in the service. He remained until that night and preached to a fairly large congregation.

At Stony Knoll we found the largest congregation we have had there this year. Some of the members who had not been present this year were there. The revival meeting at this church will begin the first Sunday in July, with Rev. M. P. Chambliss, pastor of Moriah charge, near Greensboro, the pulpit help. Bro. Chambliss was the help in a revival meeting at Stony Knoll two years ago and the people will be glad to have him with them again.

Rev. S. W. Taylor, D. D., president of the North Carolina Annual Conference, will be on West Forsyth Charge next Sunday. He will preach at Tabernacle church at 11 a. m. and at Union Hill church at 3 p. m. We trust there will be a large congregation at each service.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Enfield.—The Halifax County Sunday School Association is meeting in Enfield next Sunday with all the churches in town cooperating in the sessions. The sessions will be held at the Methodist church.

There will be no services at the Methodist Protestant church next Sunday and the members are requested to attend the sessions of the Sunday School Convention.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman.—We are planning to give our Children's Day program June 8, at 7:30.

The third Sunday will be Home-Coming Day. We are expecting a goodly crowd on that day. Our revival also begins the third Sunday with Rev. J. D. Williams, of Liberty, preaching.

Our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, has been very ill, but is some better at this writing. A large number of friends have called at the parsonage to express their sympathy and the wish that he may soon be restored to health.

REPORTER.

Gibsonville Church.—The revival meeting closed on May 20. Seven united with the church as a result of the meeting.

The Young Ladies' Bible class will hold its regular monthly meeting on Thursday evening of this week with Miss Georgie Clapp. All members are requested to be present.

There will be a C. E. Rally held in the church auditorium next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. A special program is being planned. Every one who is interested is invited to attend. If you are not interested, come anyway. Rev. N. G. Bethea will preach at 8 o'clock following the C. E. meeting.

REPORTER.

Mebane.—We are working in our usual way. The Sunday school is doing well under the splendid leadership of our superintendent, J. E. Foust. The Ladies' Aid met Tuesday with Mrs. J. W. Nicholson, Mrs. Geo. Wyatte and Mrs. George McCauley as hostesses at the home of Mrs. Nicholson. A good attendance and good program. At this meeting officers were elected for the new year. Plans were made for the meeting to be held soon.

The circles of the Woman's Auxiliary met Monday night. This is the most active organization in our church. The five circle leaders are very enthusiastic missionary workers and their circles prove this by their accomplishments. The Mission Band is doing good work with Mrs. Geo. Dodson and Mrs. F. K. Smith as leaders. Each circle is trying to gather the most Octagon coupons for the Children's Home. This contest has been on since last meeting.

The Mebane High School closed this past week. Dr. P. E. Lindley, of High Point College, preached the sermon. Dr. Lindley, in his usual manner, preached a splendid sermon. We were indeed proud to claim him as one of our very own. Our church has just cause to be proud. Our children have always done as well and sometimes better than others; this year was no exception. We had two in the graduating class, Lucile Clayton and Billy Williams. Margaret Wyatte won the medal for scholarship in elementary grades. Hildred Loy won the medal for scholarship, attendance and deportment in the fourth grade. Harlan McCauley, one of our boys in the 10th grade, has neither been absent or tardy for seven years. We had two graduates from High Point College, Miss Grace Barnette and Miss Edna Nicholson. Miss Barnette was salutatorian of the class and received her A. B. degree. Miss Nicholson received her B. S., having finished her course in piano.

We are indeed proud of our young people and of their achievements along educational lines. Miss Bessie Barnette will enter High Point College this fall. We bespeak for her good work and hope we may have others there.

Mount Carmel.—Who is not helped by the good some one else does? Doesn't it do you good to know that so many people are working to build up God's kingdom? And do you know that the kingdom is reached through work and prayer? "Four Essential Things Every Christian Should Know," was the subject of the inspiring sermon brought to Mt. Carmel Sunday by Rev. C. G. Isley.

Jesus tells us we are Christians and every Christian should know the Bible. This wonderful Book should be put first in the minds and hearts of every one. Without the Bible and its teachings we are lost and can do nothing. We should get the teachings of Jesus scattered so that it will reach the ears and hearts of all. Every one should pray; it is through prayer that we are saved. Prayer is the Christian's sincere desire. Pray, believing, for God has the power to save.

Rev. Mr. Isley has been faithful in his appointments and has given his time unceasingly to the various church duties. May we all be workers for Jesus and give our time to help some one else.

BEAUTUS WAITMAN, Reporter.

Mt. Pleasant Church, Mt. Pleasant Circuit— Annual memorial services were held here Sunday morning, June 1. A short service was held beside the cemetery, and flowers were placed on each grave by the children of the Sunday school.

At the 11 o'clock hour the pastor, Rev. J. R. Hutton, preached a sermon on the subject of "Conversion."

Special music was furnished by the Tabercle quartet and a quartet of girls from the local church, composed of Misses May Smith, Ruby Smith, Rebecca Woody Causey and Lillian Smith.

We are glad to have back with us some of our young people who have been away doing school work at various places. Among them are: Condon Coley, who received an A. B. degree at Elon College this spring; Miss Edith Causey, a member of the Eli Whitney school faculty; Miss Rebecca Mae Causey, a student at N. C. C. W.; Miss Jo Amick, a member of the faculty in Alamance County; Miss Margaret Causey, who taught in the western part of the state during the past school term.

Mrs. Roscoe C. Causey is able to attend church services again after having recently undergone an operation for appendicitis in a Greensboro hospital.

MRS. T. WORTH TROGDON,

Weaverville.—Having been asked to report for the Weaverville church, I am glad to say we are showing a marked improvement. Our pastor, Rev. T. E. Pierce, recently closed a series of revival services. A good number gave their hearts to God and a general reconsecration took place.

The Sunday school is coming along fine, adding many new members to its roll. This is largely due to the hard work of our Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Frank Edwards.

The Christian Endeavor reports 22 members and 18 honorary members. Every one always seems eager to be put on the program. We find no trouble getting leaders for our society. The young people who are trying to make the young people's societies fill the needed place in the church should be commended for it.

This is one church where every one stays for preaching, young and old alike. Our membership is small but always on hand for every service, turning out as a usual rule 100 per cent.

The mid-week prayer service is no exception, as the young people all turn out with the older folks to hear the inspiring talks by our pastor. We count ourselves fortunate in having this great man of God to work with us. He is working hard to improve our Western North Carolina work, and we solicit the prayers of all Christian people that we might make a creditable showing for God up here.

ADRIAN THOMPSON.

Lexington.—Our work is going along nicely. The Sunday school is still on an upward trend, there being 227 present today.

This morning in our Sunday school it was decided that the school would have a picnic one Saturday, June 14. The picnic will be at a picnic ground 11 miles south of the city on the High Rock lake. Each family will prepare a basket to take along and a real good time is expected for all.

Our church work as a whole is doing well. On Saturday night of the past week the Ladies' Aid Society put on a supper at the church which was very well attended and all seemed to enjoy the occasion very much.

Today being the first Sunday our pastor went to Mount Carmel church to preach at the morning service.

We had our regular preaching service at 7:45 o'clock this evening with a good crowd in attendance. The pastor delivered a very forceful sermon, his subject being "Why I Am Not An Infidel." He brought out some very interesting facts on the proof of a Divine Being as a Creator and Ruler of the universe.

We were very fortunate in having several special numbers brought to us in the evening service by a newly organized quartet known as the Sunshine quartet, composed of Mrs. B. F. Everidge, Miss Alpha McCain, Miss Gladys McCain, and Mrs. W. L. Aron. We are very glad to have this quartet in our church, for good songs put a new interest in the church service, and we wish them much success in their good work.

PHONSE BEAN, Reporter.

Roberta Station.—Mrs. Fannie Mason, one of the oldest members of our church, is very sick. We hope and pray for her hecovery.

There were present with us Sunday a colored quartet from Kannapolis, who did some fine singing.

Attendance was also fine. We had present Sunday 330. The young ladies present numbered 74. That was fine. Mrs. John Peninger is teacher of this class. We are proud of her and we feel she is proud of her class.

There were several visitors present. All the visitors are welcome and we want you to come again.

Children's Day will be observed on Sunday night, beginning at 7:30 p. m. All are welcome to come. There will be preaching Sunday morning at 11 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. Robert Short. Sunday school at 10 o'clock.

James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Z. D. Cochran, is out again after an operation on his chin for a boil.

ELMA MILLER, Reporter.

Davidson.—Our second quarterly conference has become history. The officials of each church were there in goodly number. The financial reports from all churches except two were in excess of last year. The total amount was above last year. Bros. P. L. Walker and our young and efficient superintendent of Sunday school and leader in C. E. work, are the nominees for delegate to Annual Conference.

Miss Kate Frank has been elected president of C. E. Society to take the place of our peppy leader, Miss Bruce Smith. Two weeks ago our C. E. Society held an oratorical contest on the "Essential Qualities of Leadership." Our young Bro. Hoyt Wood was the winner. A book, "Bright Angel Trail," was the prize.

Those receiving honorable mention were Mrs. Whit Wood, Miss Flada Smith and others. Prof. Angel, from Denton, one of the judges, said that he always enjoyed coming to Lineberry, but that was a time when he wished he had not come, the contest being so close. The C. E. Society is doing a great work at Lineberry church. They will hold services at Pleasant Grove church the third Sunday night in June. REPORTER.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—On the first Sunday in June Rev. C. L. Spencer took for his text Malachi 3:8: "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings."

This subject was explained thoroughly. He took, first, time: We forget that we are responsible to God for our time, and certainly one-seventh of it belongs to Him. Lost time is never to be regained. May we go to Sunday school and church and so keep the Sabbath holy. Our pastor next spoke of service. When we think of that word we are reminded of this verse of Scripture: "In as much as ye did it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto me." There are many daily duties we can render. Let's not be slothful, but faithful, servants. Keep our lamps trimmed and burning.

Then money; one-tenth of it belongs to God, so we should be careful how we spend our money. Lay aside some for religious purposes.

A pageant, "Lovest Thou Me?" was given by the Woman's Auxiliary Sunday night. A large crowd was present and afterwards said they enjoyed it very much. The collection was $11.00.

We had the pleasure of having Mrs. Hammer and also Mrs. Bates with us in our society at last meeting. We were very glad to have them. REPORTER.

First Church, Burlington.—This church will celebrate its 38th anniversary next Sunday. Dr. S. K. Spahr will preach at the 11 o'clock hour and Dr. R. M. Andrews at the evening hour. All members, former members, former pastors, and friends are invited to worship with First church that day.

We are planning also to combine with this anniversary the celebration of the nineteen hundredth anniversary of the first Christion Pentecost.

We are expecting large congregations and profitable services. Come ana enjoy the day with us.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

First Church, High Point.—Incident to the sixth annual commencement exercises of the local college, the people of High Point as well as hundreds of the friends and relatives of the student body, have been privileged to enjoy two splendid treats in as many days, when Dr. John C. Broomfield, president of the General Conference, in a masterly and impressive message on the text from Psalms: "I will hear what God, the Lord, says," delivered the Baccalaureate sermon to the graduates of 1930 on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock in First church before an audience that overflowed the huge auditorium, a large number being seated in the gallery; the other having been the Baccalaureate address on Monday morning in Roberts Hall by that eloquent exponent of old-time Southern oratory and ideals, Dr. Henry Louis Smith, president emeritus of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., who has lately come to Greensboro to make his home. In marked contrast, yet very similar, were these two addresses, the one by a vigorous self-made native Scotchman, who came to America when but a boy, and grew up as an example of the democracy of this virile young America; the other, the son of a long line of ante-bellum Virginia aristocracy, which is proud of its many ministers of Presbyterian faith and large number of dstinguished educators and orators. Dr. Broomfield said in part: "Young graduates of the college, you recall the many years of your school life in which you have been seeking to meet the need of an education in your life. Education means the introduction of control. 'He that ruleth his own spirit is better than he that taketh a city.' In recent years we often hear a new phrase, 'the revolt of youth.' Youth has been revolting against old established ideals. It has come to be not only the revolt of youth, but that of all ages and classes. Last Sunday morning I was preaching in the First Methodist Protestant church of Seattle, Washington, and I have traveled across the continent this past week to speak to you today. The conversations to which I have listened on that long journey have been quitee different to those of 25 years ago. If I were asked to describe present-day folks, I would say that they are very much at sea, and, young graduates, I warn you that you are going out into a disturbed world. A conflict is on between things and truth, material things rather than those of the spirit. You are going to discover a conflict between nationalistic affairs and a world at peace. I recently saw a picture of Gold Star mothers kneeling in sorrow at the graves of their sons in France, underneath which were words to this effect: 'These boys died in vain.' In the conflict in which you will find yourselves, you will need a compass to guide you. I come to suggest to you a supreme moral support. When the Supreme Court of the United States speaks, everybody keeps quiet. So I bring to you your own Supreme Court, 'I will hear what God, the Lord, says.' I want you to review with me four periods in David's life, the first period when we choose our life work. In a recent survey of high school graduates in Illinois, it was found that 95 per cent of them had come to the hour of their graduation without deciding what they wanted to do in life. The second period is the trying one of preparation. David had a hard row to hoe. You will be tempted to take short cuts to success. God bless the young women who say: 'Jim, you'll be ten years on the way, but I will wait for you.' The third period is the day of responsibility and control. If you want to learn about David's regret for yielding to the beast, read Psalm 51, when he cried out in great agony of soul, 'Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me.' The last period is the response of obedience to the voice of God. Sense God in nature; go out at night and learn Him in the myriads of stars, in a gorgeous sunset, in the whispering wind at eventide, in the songs of countless birds, the billows of the ocean, the majesty of a storm cloud, the beauty of countless flowers all about you. I want to congratulate you that you are standing on the shoulders of all who have come before you, and you are a part of all the past. If you have anything that anybody else needs, give it; in other words, the supreme happiness lies in a life of devoted sacrificial service.

At 6:45 p. m. Sunday Vesper services were held by the Senior class for the last time, and at 8 o'clock they listened to a touching and feeling farewell sermon by Dr. R. M. Andrews.

On Monday morning the academic procession formed in Woman's Hall and moved with stately tread to Roberts Hall auditorium. It was an impressive and dignified scene, the faculty wearing vari-colored hoods of different rank and degree, and the 54 Seniors, 29 young men and 25 young women were garbed in the classic Oxford gowns and caps. The orchestra played "The Priests' March" from Athalia. The invocation made by Rev. R. I. Farmer, pastor of First church. The Girls' Glee Club sang two beautiful numbers with Miss Margaret Sloan directing, "Neptune" and "The Evening Shadows." President Andrews introduced the speaker of the hour in a brief eulogy, and Dr. Henry Louis Smith arose and delivered the address, taking as his subject, "America's Call to Lee's Leadership." He said that on the historic campus of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., where Robert E. Lee devoted the closing years of his life and where he lies buried, and where Dr. Smith himself spent 20 years as the guiding hand, two graceful statues of Washington and Lee are seen and above them are intertwined the vivid colors of Old Glory, the Stars and Bars of the Confederacy, and above them, the starry flag of England which knows no Gettysburg, Appomattox, or Waterloo. He said to the young graduates that post-war vices are undermining the old established ideals. It may well be your life work to saturate your work with Lee's ideals, first in his non-sectional character in which were blended Puritan courage and Southern bravery and chivalry; second, in his personal life of purity; third, in his marvelous progressiveness; and fourth, in his response to the call of a new age. You face a nation in need of Lee's ideals. In church we see loyal members who keep their church services free from all mention of dirty civics, bootleggers, and red-light districts. In the last 12 years we are building a high school nearly every 48 hours, but never also have our jails, penitentiaries, and reformatories been so overcrowded, and in North Carolina there are more murders to the per capita of population than in Chicago. Isn't it time for us to ask what is the matter with our modern education, and time to get to work to make our civilization better. Real greatness is measured by spiritual things, and with my plea for a better America, I pray that the lofty sense of honor and dignity of Lee be revived, and that the love of God and man purify our American wealth, income, and institutions. A most interesting feature of the exercises was the presence upon the rostrum of the new president of the college, Dr. Gideon I. Humphreys, late of Salisbury, Md., who was introduced ot the audience and made a pleasing short address. His manner is very prepossessing, and he made a favorable impression on the audience.

Congratulations are extended by his large number of friends to our Director of Religious Education, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, upon completing the course at the college and winning his degree; also, to two other members of this class, who are our own First church members, Miss Rosalie Andrews and Mr. Charles C. Robbins, Jr.

Among the large number of out-of-town visitors, who came to hear Dr. Broomfield last Sunday, we were pleased to note Dr. and Mrs. S. K. Spahr, Mr. and Mrs. J. Norman Wills, of Greensboro, and Mr. and Mrs. Clifton L. Whitaker, Gastonia, who were guests of his mother at the college.

Mesdames L. J. Diffee, F. M. Pickett, H. A. Moffitt, and R. B. White formed a congenial party, who sailed last Saturday from New York on S. S. Coronia for a tour of Europe. They expect tot be absent two months. Misses Mary Young and Bessie Siceloff will follow on June 13th.

The Executive Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary held its monthly session at the church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Plans for the Vacation Church School are being made, and contributions solicited for this worthy purpose.

Attendance at Sunday school May 25 was 342.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Kimery

Haw River church: of the Glen Raven-Haw River charge, recently lost one of its best and most loyal members in the death of Mrs. Mary Myrtle Kimery. We do not understand why one so faithful as she was taken away so early in life, being only thirty-four years of age. Yet we know our Heavenly Father doeth all things well.

Mrs. Kimery leaves to mourn her loss a husband, Mr. Preston Kimery, and five dear children, the youngest being twin boys about two years of age.

While it is true that she is missed very much in the church and community, yet we are sure the loss is felt most keenly in the home.

To the husband and children we extend our deepest sympathy and pray upon them God's richest blessings.

Sharpe

Mrs. Grace Piper Sharpe, born December 2, 1885, departed this life May 21, 1930. She was married to J. W. Sharpe seven years ago and had proven herself a devoted wife in every respect. Two more faithful ones to the best interests of the church could not be found anywhere.

When but a girl she professed faith in Christ and joined Providence Christian Church, but after marriage cast her lot with her husband and became a member of the Methodist Protestant Church and transferred her membership with her husband to Fountain Place, from First Church, when the former was organized, becoming one of the charter members.

Mrs. Sharpe was superintendent of the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society and teacher of the Junior class of girls in the Sunday School. These children were very much devoted to her and served as the flower carriers at the funeral. She was also a leader in the Woman's Auxiliary and in fact nothing was undertaken at the church that she was not a willing helper. During our recent revival she only missed one service though she was not able to be there. On being asked by her pastor just before the meeting began what her faith was in regard to it, she readily replied: "We are going to have a good revival." We did and no doubt it came in part in answer to her prayers.

She will be missed in her home, for she made it a happy place. God bless the bereaved husband and the little babe left behind. We will miss her for she did everything she could to make him happy. Such devotion as they manifested at all times. Always together in their place at church. She will be missed in the church. Quiet and unassuming, yet always ready for any good word and work.

She will be missed in the community, for the large concourse of friends attending the last rites testified to the high esteem in which she was held. The floral offerings were many also, more than could be placed on her grave.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, the writer, assisted by Rev. Fogleman and White of the Christian Church. Interment was made at Belmont Cemetery where we laid her body to rest covered with beautiful flowers to await the Resurrection Morn.

Pickard

Miss Julia Carroll Pickard was born in Orange county, May 7, 1909, and she passed from this life May 20, 1930. Miss Pickard had been ill for more than two years.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Pickard. Besides her parents, she leaves two sisters, six brothers and a host of friends to mourn her death.

Miss Pickard was a member of Concord church. She was a Christian young lady. During her affliction, she was always cheerful. She had a kind word for everyone. Her home and her community has witnessed a great loss, but she has witnessed a great gain.

The funeral service was held at Concord M. P. church, Rev. H. L. Isley, a former pastor, was in charge of the service.

Rea

Mrs. Sallie Hanner Rea, born February 22, 1860, departed this life May 17, 1930. She was the oldest child of Rev. and Mrs. R. R. Hanner, who was a minister of high standing in the Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina.

The influence of the good home, in which she was reared, was early evidenced in her life. When just a child she united with the church of which her father was pastor.

Her early education, outside the home, was received in the public schools of Randolph and Guilford counties. Then she attended Rutherford and Yadkin colleges, the latter institution a school of her church, which has since become extinct. After leaving school she taught in the public schools for a while, principally at Matthews, N. C.

In December, 1881, she was married to Z. M. Rea, of Yadkin College. To this union were born four children, two of whom died in infancy. Those surviving are: Mrs. B. W. Terrell, Greensboro, N. C., and Vern Rea, Norfolk, Va. There are two grandchildren: Margaret and Rae Terrell, Greensboro. She is also survived by her husband, and one brother, W. T. Hanner, Julian, N. C.

The teaching of her parental home was never forgotten. Wherever she went she not only took her church membership with her, but found her place in the church and community life, and became a leader in both.

Her most distinctive church work, however, was done at Grace church, Greensboro, where she was a promoter and organizer of the Woman's Missionary Society; and at Yadkin College, where she helped to organize the Methodist Protestant church, and contributed and secured funds for the erection of a church building.

Nine years ago she moved to Charlotte, and united with the First Methodist Protestant church of that city. Here, too she was active in the work of the church, until three or four years ago, due to failing health she could not be as regular in her attendance.

Funeral services were conducted at the home in Charlotte Sunday afternoon, May 18th, by the writer, assisted by Rev. E. A. Dillard, of the Presbyterian Church. Interment took place at Yadkin College Monday noon. Rev. G. H. Hendry assisted in that service.

Crawford

James A. F. Crawford was born October 6, 1851. He died April 26, 1930. He was 78 years, 6 months and 20 days of age when he passed to his reward.

In 1875 he was married to Matilda Ferguson. Only two months before his death, she had passed to life's other side. Mr. Crawford leaves behind six daughters and four sons. These with a large number of friends mourn his passing.

In early life he was converted and joined Orange Chapel church. He was a very faithful member. He held some important office in the church during his life.

The funeral was held at Orange Chapel. The pastor was assisted by Rev. L. W. Gerringer.

T. J. WHITEHEAD.

Perry

William E. Perry, born April 30, 1851, died April 30, 1930. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma Perry; daughter, Mrs. W. A. Glenn; son, Mr. E. P. Perry; sister, Mrs. Lizzie Quakenbush, 13 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. He was a faithful member of Center M. P. church. His funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by L. W. Gerringer and A. O. Lindley. His body was laid to rest in Center cemetery.

J. A. BURGESS.

Markland

Julius Oakes Markland, son of Matthew and Annie Zimmerman Markland, born August 28, 1860, departed this life May 7th, 1930.

In early manhood he was happily married to Georgana Sidden. To this union were born 11 children: Louise and Clarence, of Advance; Mae and Julius, of Winston-Salem; Rad, of Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. E. E. Mason, of Miami, Fla.; Mrs. J. K. Branson, Thomasville; Mrs. R. K. Wyatt, of Winston-Salem. Three died several years ago. There are 19 grandchildren.

At an early age he was converted and joined Elbaville M. P. church. All during these years he had lived a consecrated Christian life. Faithful to his church, always ready and willing to do everything he could to advance the kingdom of God.

He was a kind, loving husband, a devoted father, good neighbor, and will be greatly missed in his community.

The funeral was conducted from Elbaville church May 8th by Rev. G. H. Hendry, the pastor, assisted by Rev. E. Myers, of Spencer. The body was left resting under a mound of flowers in the Elbaville cemetery.

High

April 24 in a Richmond hospital Mr. David W. High passed away at the age of 75 years. Bro. High was a member of Philadelphia church, Greensville charge. He had given 50 years or more to the church and was classleader at Philadelphia for a long time, and rendered good service to the church as a Christian man, and his influence as a Christian will live long in the hearts of those who knew him. He lived near Triplet, Va., and his body was laid to rest in a family burying ground near that place.

He leaves his wife and one brother. They have the sympathy of the church and community.

Bro. High will be missed at church. May the Lord, who does all things well, raise up a man to take his place.

A short funeral service was held at the grave by the writer, assisted by Rev. E. G. Cowan. Many of his friends were gathered at the grave to pay their last tribute of respect to the life of this good man.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Johnson

Nancy Louella Johnson was born August 4, 1867, and died May 1st, 1930. She professed faith in Christ in early girlhood and joined the Christian church at Shady Grove in Montgomery county; later she moved her membership to Chapel Hill M. P. church and lived a consistent Christian life till death. Her husband preceded her to the better world something over four years ago.

She leaves five sons: Rufus, Jonah, Jasper, John and Niven, and three daughters: Effie, Louise, and Grace, and 16 grandchildren, two brothers and two sisters and a number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. Mrs. Johnson was a kind and affectinate wife and mother and always had a kind word and a smile for everybody.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. J. W. Hulin, assisted by Bro. W. D. Reed and Mr. Wagoner.

MRS. P. L. WALKER.

Drye

On May 19th our community was saddened by the death of Mr. R. A. Drye, age 79 years one month and 13 days. He had been in failing health for the last few months; he died in the Presbyterian hospital where he had gone for treatment. He was one of the oldest members of our church, he was always faithful to be at church. His seat in our church is vacant and cannot be filled, for he always had a pleasant word for everybody. From the largest down to the least, expected Grandpa Drye, as we called him, to be there. If we ever wanted a favor we went to Grandpa as he was always ready and willing to do what was asked of him. He loved his pastor, church and his neighbors. He leaves to mourn his death, his wife, one son, 19 grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

The funeral was conducted the 20th of May at Stallings church at 3 o'clock by Pastor Joyner, assisted by a former pastor, Rev Robert Short, of Roberta. Interment was in Matthews cemetery. The floral offerings were beautiful. We extend our heart felt sympathy to the family.

MRS. M. L. STALLINGS.

A Tribute of Love and Respect

The members of Mizpah Methodist Protestant church offer a tribute of love and sympathy to Mrs. Lizzie Wheeler Fowlks in this her hour of sore bereavement, in the death of her beloved husband.

We extend to her our deepest sympathy, and point her to Him who comforts the sad, and heals the broken-hearted.

We bow in humble submission to God's will. May the blessing of our All-Wise Father rest abundantly upon her, and may the Divine Comforter guide her through life's pathway.

Whitman

Mrs. Carry Veola Whitman departed this life May 12, 1930. Her age was 30 years, 11 months and 14 days.

In early life she professed faith in Christ and united with Union Hill Methodist Protestant Church, near her parental home in Yadkin County. Her profession was a bright and definite one which was followed by a devoted and loyal Christian life. After her marriage she transferred her church meembership from Union Hill church to Pleasant Hill Methodist Protestant Church with her husband.

On September 8,1918, she was united in marriage to Hobart Whitman. To this happy union were born two children, a daughter, Nora May, and a son, Clinton.

Mrs. Whitman had been in failing health for the past five or six years, and all that was done for her recovery seemed in vain. She bore her affliction with patience and a seeming cheerful spirit. The ravages of disease impaired her health and took her strength by degrees until she was forced to give up her work in her home and her church.

In addition to being a faithful and consecrated member of Pleasant Hill Methodist Protestant Church, Mrs. Whitman did a splendid work as teacher of the boys' class in the Sunday school, and was devoted to the work of the class until her health forbade her continuing to impart religious instruction to those boys who learned to love her as their beloved teacher. The good impressions made upon the minds of those boys by Mrs. Whitman will remain with them through life.

We are able to say truly that this woman, whose soul has gone to join the innumerable hosts of the heavenly kingdom, was a good woman in every sense of the word. From her early Christian life she maintained the habit of daily prayer to God, kneeling beside her bed each night in prayer. The comment by members of her family, by relatives, by neighbors, by friends and by every one is that she was a good woman.

Her departure from this life of pain and

ICELAND TO CELEBRATE

Senator Peter Norbeck, of South Dakota, has been selected to head the American delegation to attend the one thousandth anniversary of Iceland's statehood, to be held on June 26. Representatives of every parliamentary government have been asked to attend.

This celebration should be of especial interest to Americans, as Leif Ericson is conceded by many historians to have discovered the main land of this continent 500 years before the attempted trip of Columbus to India when he touched upon some islands off the American coast.

The House of Representatives has appropriated $50,000 for the presentation of a statue of Ericson to Iceland.

Clothing and Other Gifts

In reporting a donation some weeks ago from Shiloh, Randolph, we overlooked reporting a box of toilet soap, one dozen cakes presented by one of the Sunday school classes of children. Pardon us and please accept our thanks.

Mrs. Carrie Baker, Rose Hill, Kansas, 3 quilts.

All gifts are appreciated.

Octagon Coupons

Several have recently brought or mailed to us nice lots of coupons. We thank you. We now have 64,000 coupons; but it takes 126,000 to get a large-sized refrigerator. With your help we will keep accumulating them until there is a sufficient number in hand.

We thank you for all your help and beseech you to keep it up during these summer months. If you note specially the amounts being contributed by the Sunday schools and churches during the last few weeks you must be wondering how we are living. Truth to tell, our children are not getting very much to eat these days. Then, too, school is out and the sewing room work for the summer and fall must be done, and yet there is no cloth in our storage room with which to make the needed dresses and suits. If somebody does not donate it then we must buy it, yet we haven't the money with which to buy. Please help us out all you can. There are three ways to do that:

1. Secure good offerings during June and July from each Sunday school.
2. When the offering is taken see that it comes direct to us.
3. Donate materials.

We thank you, and may God bless you.

Yours in His service,

The Mystery of His Sufferings

4 MACH EMS—

Amazing scenes are brought to view
In that one perfect human life.
We never dreamed He'd have to do
With evil powers in mortal strife.
But pierced with sorrow's keenest pang,
His cry of pain on night air rang.

In Pilate's Hall again we're shocked
To see the marks of bloody scourge,
To hear the gibes of those who mocked,
And know that men His death would urge.
The world's true man and perfect saint,
Now crowned with thorns, at last grows faint.

But mystery grows when He's led out
To painful death on dreadful cross.
He had no sin, without a doubt
His death would bring the greatest loss.
But He shrank not from deadly blow,
He freely died, He'd have all know.

The meaning of His pain and death
Is found deep down in human soul:
For man in whom God breathed His breath
Is down with sin and must be whole.
That darkest problem, man's iniquity,
Explains redemption's glorious mystery.

What Is the Holy Catholic Church?

We are in receipt of a letter from an esteemed brother who has been attending Sunday School in Calvary church. He confesses that he has had thought of uniting with this church, but is deterred by the fact that he cannot accept that part of the Apostles' creed which declares, ''We believe in the Holy Catholic Church.'' He understands this to mean, ''We believe in the Roman Catholic Church.'' He is not alone in this interpretation. Some church members become silent when that clause is reached. They do not believe in the Roman Catholic Church, and they will not say ''we believe in the holy catholic church.'' This is an unfortunate misunderstanding. No true Protestants believe in the Roman Catholic Church, but all true Protestants, all Christians including those that are Roman Catholics, believe in the holy catholic church.

What is the holy catholic church? That word ''catholic'' simply means universal, general. There are local churches and there are national or denominational churches, and there is the universal church which includes all real Christians in all the world. This universal church constitutes the body of Christ. He lives in it and animates it. Because He does this we believe in it. We call it a holy church because its members have set themselves apart to holy living and have been cleansed from sin by the Holy Spirit. We have no thought of sanctioning that great ecclesiastical organization known as the Roman Catholic Church. It does not enter into our minds at all unless it comes in by the power of association of ideas.

Some Christians in repeating the Apostles' creed substitute the word ''Christian'' for the word ''catholic.'' In fact, our General Conference some years ago made this substitution in our Book of Discipline, but a later General Conference changed back.

Some Christians have similar trouble with the resurrection of the body. They believe in a future life, but do not believe that we will ever take up again the material bodies we have laid down. They can recite most of the Apostles' creed with us, but become silent while others say, ''We believe in the resurrection of the body.''

There can be real communion of the saints without absolute uniformity of belief in every detail.

Causes of Hard Times

There has been much speculation regarding the hard times felt in many communities. What are the causes? The causes may vary with communities, but we believe two of the most common causes to be extravagance in living and speculation in investments. Many people have been investing too heavily in luxuries; in their houses, in their furnishings, in their means of transportation. They have bought on the installment plan and have overtaxed their income. They have made it impossible to pay for the necessaries and luxuries, too. Their diminished purchasing power has disastrously affected the market and merchants have suffered. Then the gambling spirit has caused others to waste their means in their effort to get much for little. Perhaps another cause is over-production in some lines. More goods than are needed have been manufactured and more houses than are required have been built.

We are told that Virginia banks have more money than they know what to do with, while in some other parts of the country money is very scarce.

Lack of foresight, lack of moderation, and greed of gain explain many of the world's troubles.

Misaccenting the Truth

The truth may be preached with a misplaced emphasis. The important may be made to appear unimportant and vice versa. It is a great art to set religious truth forth in such a way as to reveal the relative importance of its various parts. Of course all truth pertaining to religion is important. For this reason the preacher should beware of stressing some parts of the truth and ignoring other parts. All must be presented in their true proportion. One occasion calls for emphasis upon one theme and a different kind of occasion will call for emphasis at another point. The preacher called to preach in a warm

"BREAK THE LAW" PROCLAMATION OF WETS AROUSES CRY OF "TREASON" AND DEMAND FOR PUNISHMENT

Open defiance of the law urged in the latest nationwide propaganda of the wets has resulted in the branding of this ''Break the Law'' proclamation as an act of treason and a demand for punishment for those responsible for this attempt to incite the American public to show their contempt for law and order.

The cause of this new conflict was an article written by Corey Ford, which later was used as a basis for national advertising. In this article he said:

''Personally I should like to call on every free-thinking American of my generation, and every American of the older generation who can think at all, to break this law; break it repeatedly; break it whenever he can. Drink what you please, when you please. Urge others to drink. Don't betray the bootleggers who are smuggling liquor for you. In every way possible flaunt your defiance of the Eighteenth Amendment. Render it inoperative. Ignore it, abrogate it, wipe it out. Whilst it stands there, let it be disobeyed.''

As a challenge to what it characterizes as a national incitement to anarchy, the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation, through its president, Charles R. Jones, asked for the sentiment of prominent men in every walk of life. Practically the concensus of opinion was that this attempt to urge American citizens to break the law was nothing short of treason.

Here are some of the statements sent to the Prohibition Foundation:

United States Senator Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota—''It is the most anarchistic declaration I have ever seen in print. Certainly no right-minded citizen can seriously approve the arguments in this article.''

United States Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington—''I am not sure but what the placing of such an advertisement in a newspaper might be in violation of law as an act that abets and encourages the commission of crime, and for that reason I have referred it to the U S. attorney general for his attention.''

United States Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas—''The article by Corey Ford embodies a policy of thought and action which would mean the destruction of all that has been achieved for freedom and progress throughout the past, a policy leading to anarchy, barbarism and chaos.''

Dr. Harvey M. Wiley—''Prompt and vigorous action should be taken against this, which is nothing less than a second 'Whiskey Rebellion.' George Washington made short work of the first, and I hope that President Hoover will make equally short work of this one. A term of 15 or 20 years in jail and fines of $10,000 or $15,000 would be a proper answer to such treasonable utterances.''

Robert Treat Paine, great-great-great-grandson of Robert Treat Paine, signer of the Declaration of Independence—''Such sentiments are calculated to impair American civic integrity. So brazen and despicable are they in their betrayal of the country's laws that even Scarface Al Capone might well object to these Corey Fords being grouped as 'Caponsitas'.''

Congressman M. C. Garber, of Oklahoma—''Publication of such law breaking propaganda should be proceeded against in the United States District Court by injunction proceedings, and any United States District Attorney who fails to take action after such disloyal utterances have been called to his attention should be dismissed from the public service.''

J. Stanley Durkee, pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn—''Anyone who calls upon the public to flaunt or break the law is a traitor to the American government.''

Willis J. Abbott, journalist—''It is a positive and unblushing advocacy of anarchism, as absolute an assault upon an established law as anything ever said by the anarchists who were hanged in Chicago nearly half a century ago.''

Bishop William F. Anderson of the Methodist Episcopal Church—''I regard this article as seditious and traitorous.''

Bishop James E. Freeman of Washington—''To advocate disobedience of the law is a grave offense, and such an attitude, if widely observed, would threaten the very security of government itself.''

HAVE A MENTAL HOUSECLEANING

At the close of each day, critically examine your thoughts and acts and note wherein you have done well or otherwise. Daily self-examination will enable you to remedy any defects in your personality. The ledger of your life is a more important matter than your bankbook. What you have added to the credit of your character at the end of the day is of vastly greater value than the number of dollars you have accumulated. What you have carried to the credit of your soul at the end of your earthly life will count for more than accumulated lands and money. Have a mental housecleaning every little while. Look into the corners of your mind and clear out accumulated mental rubbish. Be vigilant and thorough in eliminating every useless thought.—Grenville Kleiser.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY AND PRIVILEGES

Waste no time over vain regrets, losses, or disappointments. Be grateful for present opportunities and privileges. Bend your mind and energies to the work that now lies before you. The remedy for worry, anxiety, and fear is to have new interests and responsibilities. Today offers you ample pursuits, pleasures, and problems to engage your best powers. Take all reasonable measures to avoid repetition of past mistakes, plan intelligently, and be hopeful of the best results. Be a sensible optimist, realize your immense resources, carry yourself confidently, work industriously, and be assured all will be well with you. Keep your mind open to truth. Right thinking always yields a harvest of right results.—Grenville Kleiser.

If any of the brethren have any Journal money, the Secretary would like very much to have it. Payment for the 1929 Journal is long overdue—about as long overdue as the Journal was late getting out. He cannot pay the bill until the brethren send in the money. There are no funds available to take care of the account. And the printer needs the money. Thank you.

MENTAL POISON

We frequently pick up the daily newspaper and read of a person poisoning himself. Nearly every person that attempts to take poison dies, or at least, leaves his system in such a condition that he will no longer enjoy good health. Poisoning is very eccentric in its results when compared with the results of good foods which nourish the body Physically speaking, there is a difference of life and death.

Only insane people or people who are tired of living prefer death. Life has a priceless value to the average man.

No, we seldom see in black and white where a man has injured his character by attending a "dirty movie, by playing bridge; by gambling in stocks, yet he is, slowly but surely, poisoning his brain and his character. He is putting his name in the trash pile of low-minded society that is stooped and polluted with sin. He is no longer enjoying the good "health" of a pure conscience. If he takes a large dose of this "mental poison," he will be shunned by his friends who have not yet taken the "big dose." A little dose may be covered up. Maybe its effects will not betray him, but a big dose always brings its disastrous results, death—spiritual death. Preachers and professors have tried it and have met the sad end.

Likewise, there are certain foods such as church organizations and good books that nourish the mind. Are these not as easy to attain? Which will a man enjoy most in the long run, attending church or attending the movies?

It is the bright colored, spectacular things of life which appeals to the average person. This world is growing and becoming so fast that men no longer find contentment in religious works or any other kinds of work unless they have "fast life in them."—Selected.

ALONE WITH GOD

Let alone! What different sensations those words conjure up to each of us. To some the spell loneliness and desolation; to others, rest and quiet. To be left alone without God would be too awful for words, but to be left alone with Him is a foretaste to Heaven. If His followers spent more time alone with Him, we should have spiritual giants again.

The greatest miracle of Elijah and Elisha took place when they were alone with God. It was alone with God that Jacob became a prince. Joshua was alone when the Lord came to him. Gideon and Jephthah were by themselves when commissioned to save Israel. Moses was by himself at the wilderness bush. Cornelius was praying by himself when the angel came to him. No one was with Peter on the housetop when he was instructed to go to the Gentiles. John the Baptist was alone in the wilderness, and John the Beloved alone in Patmos when nearest God.—Selected.

GOD'S WAY

God knows just when to withhold from us any visible sign of encouragement, and when to grant us such a sign. How good it is that we may trust Him anyway! When all visible evidences that He is remembering us are withheld He wants us to realize that His Word, His promise of remembrance, is more substantial and dependable than any evidence of our senses. When He sends the visible evidence we appreciate it all the more after we have trusted Him without it. Those who are readiest to trust God without other evidence than His Word always receive the greatest number of visible evidences of His love.—C. G. Trumbull.

"GOD IS LOVE"

"My text this morning can be found almost anywhere, if not in words, in thought. The words are few and simple but carry with them a world of meaning, 'God is Love.'

"Perhaps no words have ever carried to the lonely, discouraged heart such comfort as these words.

"In the Scripture lesson the parable given by our Savior of the Prodigal Son bears its real meaning expressing the love of the father for the wayward son.

"God being the maker of this world, we find all through it the expressions of His nature. If we read or write the message, we find that it brings us the message of love. The gentle rain of winter and the bright sun of summer bring to us a message of love. From the fragrance of the tiny wild flower to the trees bending with ripened fruit leaves us no uncertain message.

"God's love is seen in providence, though sometimes when near at hand, a little hard to read but when seen through the years of the past God brings blessings from man's blunders and mistakes.

"God's word from Genesis to Revelation tells us of God's love to man but to see it in its fulness is the gift of the Son of God to redeem fallen, sinful man. As we see the life of Christ among men, we see the Father's love.

"From this boundless shore we find a personal touch, God's love to man but to see it in its fullness is the gift of the Son of God to redeem fallen, sinful man. As we see the life of Christ among men, we see the Father's love.

"From this boundless shore we find a personal touch, God's love for the individual testified by hundreds of thousands. God is Love!!!"—Selected.

WHERE THE STAR STOPPED

"The star went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was" (Matt. 2:9). I admire the manner of this star. There are remarkable "stars" in the theological sky at present; they have led men to Jesus, so they say, and now they lead them into regions of yet undeveloped thought beyond. The Gospel of the Puritans is "old-fashioned"; these men have discovered it is unsuitable for the enlarged intellect of the times; and so these "stars" would guide us farther still. To this order of wandering "stars" I do not belong myself, and I trust I never shall. Progress beyond the Gospel I have no desire for. "God forbid that I should glory, save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."—Charles Haddon Spurgeon in The Advent Witness.

LIVING IN THE HEIGHTS

I once climbed up to the magnificent fortress of Salsaberg, which overlooks wide leagues of emerald plains with the snowy Tyrolese Alps in the background. It is one of the most enchanting outlooks in all Europe. But while I could enjoy the splendid prospect only for an hour, I found that hundreds or more people were living up there. So it is with a soul that has been redeemed by the blood of Jesus, and has repented of sin, and been regenerated by the Holy Spirit, he has got into a new position, breathes a new atmosphere and has a new outlook. He lives up with God. This is the true higher life. The morning sun of God's favor shines on him, and at evening it is still light. There is such a thing as keeping our heads and our hands busy in all the useful activities of life and yet having our hearts dwelling "in fellowship with the Father and his Son Jesus Christ."—T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

OPTIMISM EVANGELISM

The President's Letter

All Things Through Christ

West Forsyth

June 8, Sunday.—Two churches on this charge were visited on this date,—Tabernacle in the morning, and Union Hill in the afternoon. At the former church quite a number of persons from the Pleasant Hill congregation were present, and participated in the service by singing two special selections. Each of these churches runs a Sunday School. We arrived at Tabernacle in time to meet with them in their school. Among other worshipers at this church, we were glad to note the presence of Brother W. F. Grabbs. He will be recalled by HERALD readers as a regular and interesting contributor to its columns. Brother Grabbs is well advanced in years, but sufficiently strong to walk three miles to worship in this service. The Union Hill church is in Yadkin County, about one mile from East Bend. Plans are on for giving this building a new coat of paint. We commend these congregations for the well kept condition in which we found their churches. Keeping the church building swept, dusted, and clean is a way by which some persons in each congregation can render acceptable service unto the Lord. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed at each of these appointments. We found Brother Way, the pastor, active and zealous, and with a good grip on his work. The people speak commendingly of him, and he has their co-operation. One handicap of this charge is the small salary; we trust that this can be increased. There should be also a larger circulation of the HERALD. The pastor is working at this.

Thomasville

We were here at the Community church Sunday night, in a union service of all of our Thomasville churches. These services had been in progress for a week or more, and with good results. The attendance at this time was good, and a spirit of worship and earnestness was in evidence. The three pastors of our churches here were present, and in addition, Brother and Sister Powell, of the North Davidson charge. The purpose of these meetings was to emphasize the meaning and the need of Pentecost, and to strengthen the bonds of fellowship between these churches. We were glad to be with them in this closing service, and to share with them in the spirit and the purpose of these meetings. We have favorable impressions of the condition of each of our Thomasville churches.

It was a pleasure to be on each of these fields, and to have the fellowship of the pastors and their families and the people. We are especially grateful to Brother Way for conveying us over to Thomasville, and likewise to Brother B. K. Milloway, of the Winston church, for taking us in his car to our Tabernacle appointment.

Chinese Relief

Some time ago we called attention to the distress prevailing in certain districts of China because of famine, and urged our people to make offerings for the relief of these dying millions of young people. A small amount has been sent to Dr. Brown for this purpose. Let us see to it that this is increased. The need is urgent. "But whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him."—(1 John 3:17).

Picnic

The pastors of the Central Federation, with their wives and children, met at Midway church, on Haw River charge, for a picnic, on Monday, June 8. The day was beautiful, the fellowship refreshing, and the eats ample and appetizing. A number of pastors and their families were not present, and were missed. Those who could attend, enjoyed the day. We are grateful to Brother Trollinger, the pastor, and to the people of Midway church for the use of the church and the grounds, and for their concern and efforts for our pleasure. The meeting in September will be held with the President of the Federation, and his wife, at their home in Thomasville.

The Budgets Now

Up to this time practically nothing has been said about our budgets. Everybody has understood this because we were under the necessity of giving "Dollar a Member" the right-of-way. That undertaking has not been completed, but we have done practically all toward it that we can for the present. More will be done, of course, before the year ends. But now we must put our budgets on the main line, and begin pressing collections for these purposes. The necessity for this will be emphasized when we recall that less than one thousand dollars has been paid to date on the A. C. B., and only about half that amount on the G. C. B. (I am not including now, credits from the Woman's Auxiliary). There is much yet to be done on our budgets, and we are to remember that they now constitute our major financial project.

"Have Faith In God"

This was the encouraging word of Jesus to his disciples. He was to leave them soon, and he knew that they would encounter many difficulties in doing the work that they had been in training for, and that he was now about to commit to them. To prepare them for these experiences, and to keep them courageous in the presence of all difficulties he said to them, "Have faith in God"; for the power that blasted the fig tree would be sufficient for them against every difficulty that challenged their progress. This is equally our assurance today. To every pastor and every church, facing deterring problems, whatever they may be, there is still His word, "Have faith in God." In the midst of this financial depression, this word is our refuge; for our college, our hope is here. For every need that we have, spiritual and material, both as individuals and as a church, faith in God is the victory.

Appointments

June 13, Friday.—In special program at Concord church, Saxapahaw charge. Hour, 730 P. M.

June 15, Sunday.—Alamance charge, Bethel and Rock Creek churches.

June 23-27.—Pastor's Summer Conference.

June 29, Sunday.—Bethel church, Flat Rock charge, in district rally.

July 6, Forsyth charge. (Subject to approval of pastor).

July 12-19.—Young People's Training School.

July 27, North Davidson. (Subject to approval of pastor).

"And this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

Fraternally yours,
S. W. TAYLOR.

NOTHING BUT GOD

When Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker, of the City Temple, London, visited the United States after the death of Henry Ward Beecher, it was his custom on the voyage to New York, to place his steamer chair at the bow of the vessel, and sit in quiet meditation, looking out over the vast stretch of the ocean. One day, as he was thus occupie ddeep in thought, a rather light-brained young man approached him, and flippantly said, "What do you see, Dr. Parker?" Without raising his eyes, the great divine made answer: "Nothing—nothing, but God!"

With this incident in mind, I jotted down the lines which follow, as I sat on the deck of a steamship plowing its way over the seas:

"NOTHING BUT GOD"

What do you see in the blue expanse,
The stretch of waters that leap and dance,
The bending sky that hems the rim
Of the soft horizon, distant and dim?
"Nothing! Nothing!—
Nothing but God!"

What do you see in the star-lit sky,
The fathemless depths that meet the eye,
The sun, and the moon, and the stars that glow;
What do you see, and what do you know?
"Nothing! Nothing!—
Nothing but God!"

What do you see in the prairie wide
That mocks mankind in his insolent pride?
What do you see in the waving grass?
What in the sage-brush as you pass?
"Nothing! Nothing!—
Nothing but God!"

What do you see in the mountains high,
Piercing the roof of the vaulted sky?
What do you see in the evening glow
Tinting the peaks of endless snow?
"Nothing! Nothing!—
Nothing but God!"

THE POWER IS OFF

Some time ago we were attending an Annual Conference in another State. The congregation had assembled and the Bishop was ready to begin the devotional service. He announced the hymn and the organist seated herself at the organ and struck the keys. There was no sound and she turned to the Bishop and said, "Bishop, the power is off."

"Bishop, the Power Is Off!" That is one trouble with many churches and many church members. We have our equipment and it is up-to-date, with all modern advantages, including a big mortgage. We have the latest machinery and we are in style and up-to-date, but in too many cases "The Power Is Off!" When we start to strike the music of Heaven there is no sound. The keys of the heart give forth a dull thud, instead of a spiritual refrain. In too much of our preaching and too much of our teaching and too many of our programs, and too much of our practice we are like that woman at the organ,—"The Power Is Off!"—Richmond Christian Advocate.

WHY THE "NEW BIRTH" IS A NECESSITY

Why must we be born again? Because Christ came to establish a Kingdom upon earth, the citizens of which must have a higher style of life than the natural. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." By the natural birth men enjoy a life adapted to the natural world—to its civil and social and physical condition. But Christ's Kingdom "is not of this world." It is spiritual. "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit." "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." Here is Christ's Kingdom, or, if you please, His Church; and man must undergo a spiritual birth, producing a spiritual life, in order to enter into it. And this is not an arbitrary arrangement, but an obvious necessity; for only thus can he be assimilated to the nature of that Kingdom. Only thus can he become adapted to its conditions.—Bishop E. M. Marvin.

AND IS KIND

There are quite a number of new translations of that great chapter, 1 Cor. 13, and some of them throw new light and meaning into it, but there is one phrase in the old rendering that we do not like to miss. It reads, changing the one central word to its real meaning, "Love suffereth long, and is kind." We would like that to stay for it does hold up before us in such beautiful, clear light the wonderful, alluring, inspiring ideal of Christian living. To be tried and not get impatient; to be injured or ill-treated by a friend or by some cruel circumstance in life and not get indignant or bitter or revengeful; to suffer and suffer long and yet be kind and strong sympathetic and thoughtful for the other fellow—how fine and Christian and splendid and hard that is! And yet the great apostle, without any apology or modification, holds up before us that great achievement and tells us what we ought to be if the love that is born of Christ has right of way in our life.

revival meeting who spent the hour denouncing the sin of bicycle-riding failed to measure up to the occasion. When a preacher realizes his responsibility for souls and lives he will be very anxious to present that part of the truth that will help most mightily to produce the desired effect upon those who hear. The preacher eager to help his hearers will go into the pulpit or into his study with the prayer for divine guidance in the selection of his theme and the presentation of his message.

In living as well as in preaching we may misplace the emphasis. The Pharisees did it when they paid tithes of mint, anise and cummin and neglected the weightier matters of justice and mercy. A well-ordered human life will exhibit a due regard to all the requirements of the divine laws.

ADVICE OF A GODLY MINISTER

Luther spent his best three hours in prayer. If Satan can only make a covetous minister a lover of praise, of pleasure, of good eating, he has ruined his ministry. Give yourself to prayer, and get your texts, your thoughts, your words from God.—Robert Murray McCheyne.

LETT LINCOLN'S RIDE WITH THE AIR MAIL

"Airplane Lett!" called Mrs. Lincoln from the kitchen door. "Right over the barn."

Lett dropped his axe and came quickly to the barn door. Looking straight up into the air, he saw a large monoplane circling slowly over the fields.

"Why, mother!" cried Lett. "I believe it's going to land!"

It certainly appeared that way, and as the astonished boy watched the machine, it straightened out for a ground run and dropped neatly to the earth.

By the time it had come to a standstill and its pilot had climbed out of the cockpit, Lett was on the spot to meet him.

"Young man," said the aviator. "I want you to take me as quickly as possible to Dr. Lincoln's house. It's around here somewhere, isn't it?"

"Dr. Lincoln?" repeated Lett, in surprise. "Why—he's my father. There is his house right there."

"Good," said Captain Lee, with great relief. "Then perhaps I can get the medicine back to Bancroft Field in time to save Jim's life."

He started off for the house, Lett half-running to keep up with his lengthy strides.

"Anything wrong?" asked Lett.

"Not with me," was the reply. "But last week an airmail plane was lost in the hills two hundred miles south of here. Yesterday the plane was discovered, and Jim Barnes, the pilot, is dying in a lonely log cabin three miles from the Bancroft Airport. That is, he will die unless I can bring back to his bedside a certain medicine which they say was discovered by your father."

"I know," said Lett. "But my father isn't at home."

"He isn't at home?"

"No. He's away to a doctor's meeting and we don't expect him back until tomorrow. But I can get you what you want."

"But they need the doctor too!" objected the aviator.

"Maybe I can go. I know how to give the medicine."

Captain Lee looked at the boy sharply.

"You're not afraid to fly?"

"I never have flown," Lett admitted, "but I'm not afraid."

"Another question," continued the airman. "Can you ride horseback?"

"Ever since I was two feet high."

"Then I don't see why you can't do it. Let me talk with your mother."

While Captain Lee was explaining the situation to Mrs. Lincoln, Lett was putting on a sheepskin jacket and buttoning the collar way up over his ears. He jammed an old football helmet over his head and tied the strings under his chin. In his father's office he found the medicine that was needed, and wrapping it in absorbent cotton, stuffed it carefully into his pocket.

The telephone bell rang just as he was leaving the room.

"Long distance," was what he heard as he pushed his helmet aside to get the receiver to his ear. This is Bancroft Field calling Dr. Lincoln. Is Captain Lee there?"

"Yes," answered Lett. "What is the matter please."

He listened with amazement as the voice on the other end of the line gave its stirring message. Then he dropped the receiver and ran out into the yard.

"Captain Lee," he cried, excitedly. "Jim Barnes has two hours to live! Can we make it?"

"We've got to," replied Captain Lee. "Good-bye, Mrs. Lincoln, and don't worry."

It was the work of but a moment for Lett to kiss his mother and then strap himself in the airplane. Captain Lee started the motor, then he too clambered into the cockpit and took his place at the controls.

"Now, hold on," directed the aviator, grimly. "We're going to ride like the wind!"

They did.

Lett's first airplane ride was a record-breaking race with death. The roar of the engine almost deafened him. He heard the wind howl through the rigging. He felt plane collide with solid cushions of air, buffeted by them like a ship at sea is buffeted by waves. He sank with the plane into sickening pockets where there was no air—but through all the hazards of the sky, Captain Lee drove the machine at top speed.

Without speaking, Captain Lee pointed to a group of white-roofed buildings just ahead. Lett understood without being told that was was the air port.

"We're going to make a drop landing," shouted the pilot. "It may jolt you a little, but it won't hurt."

The drop landing, however, was too hurried—was too much of a drop for the wheels and their rigging to stand the strain. The plane hit the ground heavily, bounced high into the air, then crashed down against the earth with a terrific thud.

"Get out of the wreckage," shouted Captain Lee. "Before it catches fire!"

Both the pilot and the passenger unbuckled their belts and crawled out of the smashed plane. Lett was badly shaken but not hurt. His first thought was for the serum, but by the same lucky chance that had kept the plane upright the bottle of precious fluid had not been broken.

"I think my leg is broken," moaned Captain Lee, as he tried to stand upright. "Don't lose a minute, Lett. Save Jim's life!"

Lett started off on a run toward the main buildings of the air port. At the door of the executive offices he found two horses and an anxious aviator.

"Yes," panted Lett "And I'm here in the doctor's place."

"Then jump on the white horse and follow me. Barnes is three miles away on the side of Bleak Hill and there are automobile roads leading to the cabin."

Lett jumped on the horse and away he went at a gallop. The path was rough and the riding hard, but up there among the trees and the rocks a human life hung in the balance.

"Are we too late?"

Anxiously, Lett peered into the face of the man who had met them at the door of the log cabin.

"He still lives," was the answer. But I believe you are too late to save him."

"It is never too late to try," said Lett. "Now will you get me some hot water, and a clean rag. Bare his arm. I am going to stick a needle into his veins so that I can inject some of this serum."

Quickly, almost as expertly as his own father, the young boy pumped the life-giving fluid into the veins of Jim Barnes, air mail hero.

A change came over the patient almost at once. He seemed to breathe easier, to relax his taut muscles. The pain went out of his features and shortly afterwards he opened his eyes.

"It is a miracle!" whispered the mountaineer, awe stricken.

"He will get well," said Lett, calmly.

"His reaction has been all that it should be."

And Jim Barnes did get well. In two months' time he was again flying mail for the United States government. But he never passed Bancroft Field without going two hundred miles out of his way to wave at the boy who had saved his life and to drop from the sky a message of friendship!—Selected.

THE LIFE OF THE PARTY

"Did you have a good time at the party, Eunice?"

A sigh was her reply.

"But why didn't you, my dear?"

"Well, you see, Mother, I can never think of a good joke nor an appropriate story; I can't remember the games and have to learn them all over again, and you know I never could originate one to save my life, and there's Hazel Harkness—why, you should hear her; she just says one funny thing after another, Mother. She's the life of the party."

"But did you laugh at the amusing things Hazel told and did?"

"I never laughed so much in my life. Yes, I guess I had a good time, but I do wish I were more entertaining. All I can do is to laugh when there is a joke with a catch in it, I am always the one who bites."

"What a dreary party it would be if girls like you were not there!"

"Why, Mother, we never do a thing but just laugh and show that we are highly entertained."

"You are one of the audience, Eunice, and an appreciative audience is three-fourths of the entertainer's capital. Now, if you look bored—"

"O, Mother, I forgot to tell you, Annice wasn't invited, and some of the girls say they never intend to invite her again. She just looks so bored, just as if she were accustomed to some so much finer that she is wasting her time with us; and Hazel is never amusing when Annice is present—says she feels as fi someone were holding a wet blanket over her mouth. Too bad, isn't it? But perhaps our fun does bore Annice; she is accustomed to such big things in the city, you know, that we must seem terribly amateurish. But since she has to spend her summer at home, I'd think she'd try to be one of us."

There was a succession of parties and teas in the following two weeks in honor of a visiting girl; and Eunice went to all of them, repeating the same experience: She was highly entertained by the others and appreciative of their attention to her, their wit, their initiative in staring games, and the refreshments they served, always admiring, always joining in, no difference if the game was to her liking or not, and always regretting to her mother that she couldn't be more entertaining herself, forgetting that as an audience she excelled.

At the last party Hazel proposed a secret vote of the most popular girl in their crowd, the ballots to be collected by Alice's little sister, and counted by her, much to the delight of the ten-year-old child. Eunice voted for Hazel, regretting that she couldn't cast ten votes for the girl whom she so much admired. But when the little girl, with a proud air of secrecy, had counted the ballots she stepped forward and put a crown made of early spring flowers on Eunice's head!

"Me—me," stammered Eunice, "me my head! My—say, girls, there is some mistake here. The crown belongs to Hazel, for what would we do without the life of the party?"

"It belongs to you!" the girls cried, the voice of Hazel sounding the loudest. "Whatever would we do without our Eunice, who is always so sympathetic and so nice and who just fits in?"—Selected.

SACRIFICE

People talk of the sacrifice I have made in spending so much of my life in Africa. Can that be called a sacrifice which is simply paid back as a small part of a great debt owing to a sacrifice which brings its own best reward in our God, which we can never repay? Is that a sacrifice which brings its own best reward in healtful activity, the consciousness of doing good, peace of mind, and a bright hope of a glorious destiny hereafter?

Away with the word in such a view, and with such a thought! It is emphatically no sacrifice. Say, rather, it is a privilege. Anxiety, sickness, suffering, or danger, now and then, with a foregoing of the common conveniences and charities of this life, may make us pause, and cause the spirit to waver and the soul to sink, but let this only be for a moment. All these are nothing when compared with the glory which shall hereafter be revealed in and for us. I never made a sacrifice. Of this we ought not to talk when we remember the great sacrifice which He made who left His Father's throne on high to give Himself for us. (Hebrews 1:3.)—David Livingstone.

TO DIE IS GAIN

Nature sees the body dead—
Faith beholds the spirit fled;
Nature stops at Jordan's tide—
Faith beholds the other side;
Nature hears farewells and sighs—
Faith hears welcomes in the skies,
Nature mourns a cruel blow—
Faith assures it is not so;
Nature never sees thee more—
Faith but sees thee gone before;
Nature tells a dismal story—
Faith has visions full of glory;
Nature views the change with sadness—
Faith contemplates with gladness;
Nature murmurs—Faith gives meekness,
"Strength is perfected in weakness";
Nature writhes, and hates the rod—
Faith looks up and blesses God;
Sense looks downwards—Faith above;
Sense sees harshness—Faith sees love.
Oh! let Faith victorious be—
Let it reign triumphantly!

BUT ONE REMEDY FOR SIN

Dr. Paul Scherer, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity, New York City, declared in a recent sermon that there are "too many alibis for sin." That is true. Men try to explain away and get rid of sin by almost every possible process except the one effective way, which is to recognize its true nature and repent of it. Dr. Scherer well says: "Only the Cross of Christ is a real remedy for sin."—Selected.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

FIVE DOLLARS THE PASTOR

The expense of the Summer Conference for each pastor will be just five dollars ($5.00); $1.00 for registration and $4.00 for meals. Could not some layman or laywoman on each charge be found that would take the responsibility of finding $5.00. Please, some person or persons get busy and find this amount for your pastor so that he will not have to look for this needed expense. Pastors will sleep in the college dormitory and take meals at the Children's Home. The sleeping quarters will cost nothing, gift of the college. Thanks. The meals will cost $1.00 per day. This is reasonable enough. There is just one condition and that is the home must know who is coming and when. We understand that the Home is not a boarding house and to give us this accommodation we must be willing to share our part by telling just when we will be there. There are plenty of rooms and ladies can have the privilege of attending the conference and have the same advantage as do their husbands. Come, ladies, and sit in and share the good things of this the best conference yet. We will not forget the time. Monday night, June 23, to Friday, June 27. Friday is ladies' day and the big picnic dinner on the grounds of the Children's Home. Everybody come with a big dinner. Let's care for all the people at the Home, workers as well as every child. Report your intention of attendance to Rev. A. G. Dixon, D. D., or the undersigned.

GEO. L. CURRY, President.

PLEASANT GROVE LADIES' AID

The Ladies' Aid held its regular monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon, June 4, at the home of Mrs. J. E. Cecil. The devotional exercises was conducted by Mrs. Vivian Cecil. We had 16 members present and two visitors. Our collection amounted to $24.97. After the meeting delightful refreshments were served by Mrs. Cecil, Mrs. Lawrence Darr and Mrs. Charles McManus.

Our next meeting will be held jointly with the Brotherhood in the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Kennedy.

MRS. CLYDE PAYNE, Reporter.

A REQUEST

Let me ask the good singers of Pleasant Hill to give a song service at Tabernacle, say next first Sunday at 2 o'clock, let me be in, not to sing, but I have some safe temperance stories to tell. I'm safe too, and our church authorities please encourage this effort.

This is much of a venture, and I would urge for the encouragement. W. F. G.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

President C. E. Society, High Point College

JUNE 22: HOW JESUS MADE LEADERS OF HIS DISCIPLES

Mark 1:17; 5:18-20; 6:7; Acts 1:4,8

Daily Bible Readings

Monday, Teaching them to pray. Matt. 6:9-15
Tuesday, Lesson on Living. Matt. 5:21-26.
Wednesday, A time of testing. Matt. 10:1-15.
Thursday, Teaching by example. John 13:1-15.
Friday, Promise of help. Matt. 10:16-20.
Saturday, Giving the Spirit. John 20:19-23.

Suggestions to the Leader

Several days prior to the meeting you might get two Endeavorers to prepare descriptions of the men whom Jesus called His disciples. The first will describe these men as they were before the great change took place in their lives—before Christ called them as His disciples. The other will show the mighty transformation which took place as they lived with and under the influence of Christ. Show how he molded and reshaped their lives for service in His kingdom.

This might be called a "how" or a "transformation" meeting. You could place the following on the blackboard:

How Jesus taught leadership.
How Jesus exemplified leadership.
How Jesus showed faults in leadership.
How Jesus promised power for leadership.
How Jesus praised attempts at leadership.
How Jesus pictured rewards of leadership.
How Jesus led His Disciples in leadership.

Leader's Talk

This is the third of a series of four lessons on the subject of "Leadership." As we study this topic we shall be reviving the school of Jesus for leadership training. The first such school was when Jesus walked and talked with the twelve disciples and showed them how to take up the work after He was gone. It was a school without text book—where the Master was both teacher and textbook. Jesus had a great task to perform during the short space of three and one-half years but he bravely faced and accomplished the work. He was optimistic and trained leaders by trusting them. Leaders must have visions and be fully surrendered. Jesus warned His Disciples of the causes of failure and gave them power to perform their work. He trained them in prayer and to do by doing. His organization must have a trained leadership..

Topics

Give these three topics to three persons, asking for at least a three-minute talk:

1. The faithfulness of the early disciples.
2. The great Leader, Jesus Christ.
3. The privilege of following Jesus.

Answer These Questions

1. What do you believe to be the chief characteristic of a true leader?

2. Were Jesus' disciples ignorant men at the close of His ministry with them?

3. What is true education and how does it train for leadership?

4. What did Jesus remove from the lives of His disciples?

5. What did Jesus add to the lives of His disciples?

Suitable Songs

"More Like the Master," "Jesus Calls Us," "Where He Leads I'll Follow," "Open Mine Eyes That I May See," and "If Jesus Goes With Me."

Quotations

"A man may call himself a Christian, but the measure of his Christianity is the occupation of his mind and heart with Jesus."—Maclaren.

"John 13, which tells how Jesus washed His disciples' feet, shows the Master serving. There is the key to leadership, service and humility."—Anonymous.

OBEDIENCE

I said, "Let me walk in the fields."
He said, "No, walk in the town."
I said, "There are no flowers there."
He said, "No flowers, but a crown."

I said, "But the skies are black;
There is nothing but noise and din."
And He wept as He sent me back—
"There is more," He said; "There is sin."

I said, "But the air is thick,
And fogs are veiling the sun."
He answered: "Yet souls are sick,
And souls in the dark undone!"

I said, "I shall miss the light,
And friends will miss me, they say."
He answered, "Choose tonight
If I am to miss you, or they."

I pleaded for time to be given,
He said, "Is it hard to decide?
It will not seem hard in Heaven
To have followed the steps of your Guide."

I cast one look at the fields
Then set my face to the town.
He said, "My child, do you yield?
Will you leave the flowers for the crown?"

Then into His hand went mine,
And into my heart came He;
And I walked in a light divine,
The path I had feared to see.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

A TREAT FOR US

Mrs. Hammer informs us that Rev. Paul Warner is expected to speak at the Pastors' Summer Conference Thursday evening and Friday at 11:45. Friday has been set apart as "Ladies Day" and this is an unusual opportunity to set forward the Women's Work by getting ourselves to High Point and getting all we can for ourselves and our churches out of this occasion. Mr. Warner is fresh from the foreign field, Japan, having been called home even before his time had expired because of his father's illness. Mrs. Hammer is very anxious that we make the most of this occasion.

Be sure to read the article by Rev. Geo. L. Curry, printed in this issue. The article is headed, "Five Dollars the Pastor," but it concerns us as well as pastors.

YARBOROUGH CHAPEL CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

On Sunday evening, June 8th, our society held a very interesting meeting with Lloyd Wilson as leader. Mr. C. B. Haynes, professor of the high school, made a very helpful talk on the topic, "Prayer Among Our Leaders." Special music was rendered by Miss Edna Lamb and Mr. Hugh Watson. The attendance at this meeting was very good, about sixty-five being present.

Quite a bit of enthusiasm is being shown in our society. We have divided the society into two groups with Miss Lois Watson and Mr. Lloyd Wilson as captains. Points are given for participation in the meeting, offering, attendance and new members. We are glad to report twenty-six new members for the past two meetings. We are very glad to have a number of the young people from the Methodist Episcopal and Baptist churchees meet with us.

A most enjoyable social was held Friday evening. After a truck ride of about twenty miles to Glens Springs, a delightful picnic lunch was served.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Why Not.—Our meeting at Seagrove began the third Sunday night, with Dr. S. W. Taylor in the pulpit. He preached a masterful sermon.

Rev. Edward Suits was with us from Monday night to the close; the following Sunday night. The attendance and interest throughout was good. Everybody, I think, was pleased and edified with Bro. Suits' able and biblical dicourses. There were three conversions, and one accession. I think that two more will join next appointment.

All day services were held at Pleasant Hill last Sunday. A good attendance was present.

At Fairgrove at night a larger congregation than usual was present. This church has paid thee superannuate assessment in full. The check went on to Dr. Brown this week.

Bro. L. A. King of Fairgrove church is in eastern N. C. in the potato belt serving as shipping clerk. When his work there is over, he will be transferred to the sandhill peach orchards.

Bro. Jack Presnell and Sister Presnell, who were real sick for some weeks are much better.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Liberty.—Our pastor, Rev. J. D. Williams, has been quite sick, but is better. Rev. W. M. Pike preached for us the fourth Sunday in May. We enjoyed hearing Bro. Pike preach very much, but are sorry our pastor was sick.

Our Sunday school is very good, attendance last Sunday 124, collection $4.27.

Circle No. 1, Mrs. J. W. Curtis, chairman, met with Mrs. J. A. Clapp as hostess Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was in charge of Mrs. A. J. Brower, and the topic for study, "Care of the Sick." After a short business session the hostess served refreshments .

Circle No. 2, Mrs. T. A. Shepard, chairman, met with Mrs. J. E. Cox Thursday afternoon with a large attendance. Mrs. J. E. Cox was in charge of the devotional, Mrs. J. D. Williams program leader. Study for afternoon "Care of the Sick." Talks and papers were read by Mrs. Clarence Highfill, Mrs. Boyd Reitzel, and Mrs. T. A. Shepard, Mrs. J. B. York, question box leader.

Both circles are working hard this year, trying to finish paying for furniture in our parsonage. We are indeed proud of both our parsonage and furniture.

Christian Endeavor every Sunday evening at 7 p. m. Prayer meeting every Thursday night at 8 p. m. Come out to these meetings; you are missing a wonderful service. The County S. S. convention will be held in our church on the fifth Sunday in June, we hope all superintendents of the different departments will have a report at this time.

REPORTER.

◆

Baltimore, West Forsyth Charge.—We are very glad indeed to see the growing attendance at Sunday school, and we hope it will continue to grow. On last Sunday we had one hundred and thirteen present with one hundred and forty-six enrolled.

The collection at Sunday school was $1.42, while the offering at the preaching service amounted to $2.87. We are very thankful for the offerings.

We have been enjoying some fine sermons by the singing evangelist, Rev. Mr. Engler, who conducted the singing for the Erickson revival which was held in Winston-Salem recently. He preached last Saturday and last Sunday night, and will also preach next Thursday night. We are very glad to have had the opportunity of hearing him and having him with us.

On last Saturday night we enjoyed some fine singing by a male quartet from Winston-Salem.

The wonderful sermon last Sunday morning by the pastor was enjoyed by an unusually large crowd. He preached from the text, "Sin When it is Finished Brings Forth Death." He gave a brief account of the origin of sins. He pictured sin in its awfulness, then gave the only remedy we have for sin, which is the redeeming blood of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. I am sure that many went away with a new purpose in their hearts of living closer to the heavenly Father which taketh away the sin of the world.

The Yadkin County Sunday school convention will be held at Baltimore church on the fourth Sunday in July or rather Saturday night and Sunday. It is the same date as our revival meeting but it was decided to do away with the Sunday afternoon preaching service. Thus we decided we could have the convention and meeting the same date without any serious complications.

The township Sunday school convention will be held at Enon Baptist church on the first Sunday in July.

The Women's Auxiliary has completed its organization and will hold its first meeting next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. All members are requested to be present.

The Christian Endeavor Society is holding its meetings each Sunday night at 7:30. The members are all taking great interest in the work, but the children seem to be especially interested.

West Forsyth.—President Taylor was with us at Tabernacle and Union Hill churches last Sunday and we had a good attendance at each service. We were delighted to have members of the choir and girls' chorus of Pleasant Hill church at the Tabernacle service Sunday morning. They rendered two splendid selections just preceding the sermon by Dr. Taylor. "The Church At Its Best," was the theme of the sermon and I believe all who heard the sermon, especially Methodist Protestants, were greatly edified and encouraged by the timely discourse on the purposes for which the church of the Living God exists. We were glad to have Bro. W. F. Grabbs, of King, worship with us in the service.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock we were at Union Hill for the regular appointment at that church. A fairly large congregation was present for the service. Dr. Taylor delivered a most helpful and edifying sermon, using as a subject, "Seeking to Establish the Kingdom of God on Earth." The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered at Tabernacle and Union Hill churches by Dr. Taylor, assisted by the pastor.

The two churches on the charge visited by President Taylor enjoyed very much his able sermons and his timely exhortations concerning the general work of the charge and the financial obligations of the charge which were stated by the president at each appointment. The pastor and family were delighted in having Dr. Taylor as their guest at the parsonage during his visit to the charge. We accompanied him to Thomasville late Sunday afternoon where he was to preach in Community Church Sunday night.

This pastor was called to Lexington Wednesday of last week to assist in the funeral services of Miss Maggie Swing, an aged woman who was a member of the Baptist church and an acquaintance of ours for the past several years. Rev. C. G. Isley, pastor of the South Lexington church, and two other Lexington pastors of other denominations also took part in the services.

The condition of Bro. W. L. Doub, member of Baltimore church on this charge, who has been in poor health for the past year or more, remains about the same. He is confined to his bed for most of the time. Mrs. Doub, his faithful wife, tenderly cares for him and gives him all the attention that a loving and devoted companion can give.

While in Lexington last week the writer and wife called at the home of Rev, and Mrs. Atlass Ridge. We found Mrs. Ridge ill and bad been confined to her bed for five weeks. We gave her words of comfort and hope her condition will improve rapidly. She indicated a slight improvement of her condition at the time of the visit.

Our appointment for next Sunday at 11 o'clock will be with Pleasant Hill church.

Henderson.—The first meeting of the Auxiliary, after the Branch meeting, was held May 19th. The vice-president, Mrs. Edison T. Hicks, presided. The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. S. R. Harris. The reports were given by the various officers showing a good beginning for the next year's work. During the business period the auxiliary voted to give five dollars ($5.00) to our secretary of literature for the purchase of necessarw materials for all departments. Mrs Hicks read the requirements of the Efficiency chart and we are hoping to meet them this year.

The members of the auxiliary were invited to attend the meeting of the Vance district of the auxiliary. which was held at Mt. Carmel church Thursday, May 22nd.

Mrs. F. R. Harris gave two splendid reports at this time. One from the Branch meeting at Burlington, and the other from the Convention held in Baltimore. These glowing reports of things already acomplished, and the urge and need of more to be done for our Master, we were determined and inspired to push forward in this work of helping to establish the Kingdom of God in the hearts of all men.

The names of the various state secretaries were given to the local secretaries and work under the chairmen is expected to begin at once.

The meeting was dismissed by prayer.

The Vance district of the Woman's Auxiliary of the M. P. Church was held at Mt. Carmel church, May 22nd. Mrs. C. W. Bates, of Greensboro, chairman of the conference auxiliary, and Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, president of the North Carolina Branch, were the speakers for this meeting. The morning session began at 11 o'clock. Dinner was served on the grounds at midday and the afternoon session began at 1:30. This meeting was very instructive and inspiring and much good will be accomplished through the help and information given by the good women.

The Philathea class was delightfully entertained at the lovely home of Mrs. Clifton S. Finch on Tuesday night, May 27th. Miss Lucy Taylor, president of the class, presided. Mrs. Annie Mae McIntosh had sharge of the devotionals for the evening. Following the general routine of business the class discussed the plans of sending a delegate to the annual Philathea-Baraca convention to be held in June, at Montreat, N. C. No definite action was taken. The reports from committees were most pleasing. Flower committee reported flowers sent 17 times. Relief visits made 25 times. $20.00 sent to Children's home, High Point, N. C. Sick members remembered by cards and calls, five. During the social period a menu contest was enjoyed and Mrs. Clarence Finch, winner of the contest, was presented a lovely corsage. The hostess then served a delicious ice course.

On Wednesday evening June 4th, Circle No. 4 held a birthday social for all members of the church. They were welcomed at the door by Mrs. H. A. Jordan, chairman of the circle, and Rev. and Mrs. R. .A Hunter, and Miss Ruth Cunningham. The program was composed of a number of readings and vocal selections. Also a violin solo by Miss Frances Woodlief. A large number was presnt and greatly enjoyed the splendid program. During the evening ice cream and cakes were served by members of the circle.

First Church, Burlington.—Today was Home coming and Anniversary day with us. This was the 38th anniversary of First church. The roll call of charter members was taken and five were present to answer to their name. Four of these are still members of our church. Nine members are still living and a number have passed to their reward.

Attendance in the Sunday school was 401 and offering amounted to $27.41. It was indeed inspiring to see this large congregation of Sunday school folks.

Dr. S. K. Sphar, of Greensboro, delivered the sermon at the eleven o'clock hour, which was indeed helpful and practical. We were glad to have this consecrated man of God to preach for us and welcome him back.

Around forty-five of the younger members of the school have registered for the Church school to be Monday, June 9th. Miss Maxine Taylor has arrived to lead the work, assisted by Miss Elizabeth Rogers of First Church. A complete faculty of teachers have been secured and we anticipate a very successful school. Let each child in this community take advantage of this opportunity to learn more of the Bible and the work of the Kingdom and enroll in the work.

Among the items of business disposed of at the Second Quarterly conference, which was held Wednesday evening, June 4th, was the nominating of two members to be voted upon for delegate to represent the church at the Annual Conference to be held in Albemarle early in November. Those named as nominees were: J. G. Rogers and J. Cuury Isley.

The Baraca class was taught by Mr. Lindley, regular teacher. The lesson, "Gethsemane, and Jesus in the Shadow of the Cross," was well taught. There were 79 present.

Concord.—Large congregations were present at all services here Sunday. At the morning hour our special meeting began. Our pastor, Rev. G. F. Millaway, is doing the preaching himself and is giving us some good preaching. For his subject Sunday morning, Mr. Millaway used, "Pray for It, Work for It, Expect It," and at night, "Preparation to Teach Transgressors." At this service seven people were reclaimed.

The S. S. attendance was 310.

Mr. N. J. Miles, formerly of Enfield, but now of Shelby, who was visiting friends here was present, and sang "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer," as a solo, in the Sunday school. Mr. Miles is pleasantly remembered here, he having directed the singing for us in revival meetings.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Burris will regret to learn of the death of their little daughter, Edna Earl, age 3 years, who died on May 7th after an illness of about two weeks with pneumonia. Edna was a sweet child, and was a member of the beginners' department in Sunday school and was loved by her class and teachers. Funeral services were held in the church on the following day and were conducted by Mr. Millaway. The sorrowing parents and loved ones have our deepest sympathy. Edna was a grandchild of the late Mr. W. H. Scarboro, and Mrs. Scarboro.

Asheboro—Yesterday was known as Recognition Day in our church. A the 11 o'clock service the names of all our graduates from the city school, from various colleges and our prize winners, etc., were called and these young people stood. The pastor read the following:

Lucille Lowdermilk, graduate Asheboro High School; Ramond Crotts, graduate Asheboro High School; Louise Swaim, graduate in music, Salem College; Ultra Lowdermilk, finished commercial course in Asheboro schools; Fern Way, finished commercial course N. C. C. W.; Edith Brower, finished commercial course King's Business College, Greensboro; Lucy Clyde Ross, winner in county-wide music contest, winner in Live-at-Home essay contest, grand honor roll Asheboro High School, winner of prize for most improvement in the technique in music in Asheboro school; Eldon Cox, winner of scholarship prize Asheboro High School, grand honor roll Asheboro School; Eleanor McCain, winner in county-wide music contest; Jaqueline Grimes, winner of prize for most improvement in music in the beginners' department Asheboro schools.

After reading this the pastor extended the congratulations of the church to these young people, then the congregation stood with them in brief prayer for their continued success.

Our Sunday school is still going strong. The average attendance for the month of May was 284, which was just about 100 more than the average for last year.

From the 10th of May until June 2 the pastor either conducted or assisted in eight funerals. None of these were members of our church, though Mr. Cephas Bowman was a former member of our Sunday school and at one time was a teacher of the men's Bible class.

Yesterday Mr. J. W. Wolff, the assistant teacher of the men's Bible class, taught the class, as he frequently does, remained for church service, and this morning had a stroke of paraylsis and is completely paralyzed in his left side.

Our nominees for delegate to Conference are W. B. Lamb and Robert Lloyd. Either will make a good delegate.

Next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock the choir will render an hour of music. We are having the service at 7 o'clock so that people of other churches who wish to attend the service can do so without missing the services at their own churches.

While we reached our goal for the Herald some time ago we have not given up the effort and we are hoping to have another batch of subscriptions to send in tomorrow.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Elbaville, State Street.—Attendance at Sunday school was very good. But due to a funeral and sickness several were absent. At eleven o'clock Rev. G. H. Hendry delivered a wonderful message taking scripture lesson from the book of Jonah. Subject: "Jonah at Nineveh."

Second quarterly conference was held at State Street Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Our revival meeting will begin the first Sunday in July and continue through the week.

The painting of the church is now on the board of "Competition."

Our singers' training school is making much progress and much success is being made. We are still hoping for greater results. We have purchased four dozen new Cokesbury song books for the benefit of our young people who are training themselves to sing, and for our regular church services.

Christian Endeavor which is now almost one year in service is still progressing and large crowds of young people are coming to worship with us.

About three weeks ago another one of our older members, Mr. J. O. Markland, passed to the great beyond.

Sometime ago at quarterly conference Mr. T. F. Bailey was elected trustee, taking up the work of the deceased U. A. Orrell.

With best wishes to the Herald. We desire the prayers of all Herald readers for greater work in the kingdom.

STELLA BAILEY, Reporter.

Connelly Springs Charge.—There has not been much reporting from this charge, but this is not a sign that we are sleeping or have no interest in the Conference program and kingdom work. We are working on the Herald campaign; we are not having the success that we would like. This, we believe, is due to the financial condition here, but we are hoping to secure our allotment. I don't see how we can do without the paper.

Last Sunday was a good day for us, although it was a hard day. We received four members into the church and drove 50 miles to baptize three of them. We rejoice to see these fine young people come into the church. We gladly welcome them into our fellowship; namely, Miss Roxie Faw, Stella Faw, Daisy Baker, and Bro. and Sister Bouy Tomlinson. May the Lord bless them and may they be a blessing to the church.

Our church and community has been saddened by two deaths. Coney Childress was thrown from a car and was killed. He was 22 years old and leaves a widowed mother and several brothers and sisters to mourn their loss.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Horas Zimmerman was laid to rest in the Shady Grove burying ground a few days ago. May the heavenly Father bless and comfort them in their bereavement.

The work is moving along nicely in a general way. We will observe Decoration Day at Burke's Chapel the third Sunday in June; we invite everybody to come.

Children's Day will be observed the fifth Sunday at Shady Grove; come and hear the children.

Pray for us. L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

Glen Raven-Haw River.—Our work is going very well these days at both churches on this charge in spite of the time for the usual "summer slump" in attendance. Last Sunday we had 224 present for Sunday school at Glen Raven. Our record attendance at the first of the year was 148, now the new record is 224. We are very proud of this record and the interest that is being taken in our church work in general. We also have a splendid Sunday school at Haw River; however our attendance is not so large. But we can not expect it since that very small village has four churches in which Sunday school is conducted at the same hour.

Our C. E. societies at both churches are very active and each meeting is well attended by groups of young people, as well as many adults, who are very eager to gain practical experience in Christian work, and learn more about the Scripture in its relation to living. We feel that our Christian Endeavor societies are helping to develop a leadership which in the near future will lead our churches into a much greater and broader field of service than they are in at the present.

Our special revival will begin at Glen Raven the third Sunday in June. Rev. C. G. Isley, of Lexington, will be our pulpit help and the public is invited to come and hear his splendid preaching. Services will begin at 7:45 p. m. every evening for about ten days. Pray for us that we may gain souls for our Savior and make His church stronger.

O. C. LOY, Pastor.

◆

Seagrove, Why Not Circuit.—Our revival meeting began the third Sunday night in May and closed the fourth Sunday night. Our pastor, Rev. W. H. Neese, was assisted in this meeting by Rev. Edward Suits, of High Point, who delivered some splendid messages. We believe much good was done although the visible results were not what we had hoped for. There were three conversions and accessions to the church; we think there will be more later. We were glad to have with us the last night of the meeting Bro. Suits' wife and daughter. We hope they all will come this way again.

We are having a splendid Sunday school, with an enrollment of 83.

The Ladies' Aid Society gave an ice cream social last Saturday night for the Sunday school and the members of the Aid and their families. About 80 were present and were served about eight gallons of cream, which was greatly enjoyed. This was held at the church.

The Why Not Circuit Rally will be held at our church the first Saturday in August. We are hoping for a large attendance and a good program that day.

The County Sunday School convention will be held at the school auditorium the 14th and 15th of August.

Our Ladies' Aid Society will meet with Mrs. J. R. Latham Wednesday night, June 11th.

The Junior class will conduct the opening exercises of our Sunday school next Sunday. Last Sunday the Primary class opened Sunday school by singing and repeating the Lord's Prayer in concert and one of the members of the class read the lesson.

North Davidson Charge.—We are moving on nicely; good congregations; S. S. bulletin board shows increase over same date last year at all the churches. I feel a great work is going on for our Master's kingdom.

The memorial service at Mount Pleasant has been reported. This was indeed a great day for the church and friends who live in other parts and have loved ones sleeping in the beautiful cemetery, which is so well kept by the Memorial Association there. It must be, and I know is, a great pleasure for these friends to come back to the old home church and community and visit the sacred spot so well kept and beautiful where the ashes of mother, father, and loved ones sleep.

Home-Coming at Bethesda. On the fifth Sunday in June will be the annual Home-Coming at this beautiful, historic old Methodist Protestant church, situated in one of the finest communities to be found anywhere. No more substantial and loyal people to church and kingdom of Christ are to be found. From this community have gone many of her fine sons and daughters to bless every community where they live and they are found in all walks of life; some preachers, teachers, etc., This community is noted for piety and Godliness. We want to see all the sons, daughters, ex-pastors and friends come back and spend this glad day with us. There will be several noted speakers. All-day service. We shall be so happy to see you. Come one, come all. A hearty welcome awaits you by the church and pastor.

H. L. POWELL.

Shiloh.—The Sunday school enrollment has reached 376—not so high as it was the last year. Let's not go to sleep on the job, but be just as wide awake and busy in the Master's kingdom as ever, and continue to be busy until Christ reigns in every heart, home and country. We want to grow not only in numbers, but also in power and grace of our Lord Christ.

Our C. E. Society is still very much alive and active. There were more than 50 present at the first June meeting. They are expecting to number 100 before the end of the year, and we believ thy will do it.

Bro. Jo Roach came and took one of our very finest girls out of our community; but Bro. Curtis Leonard, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Leonard, went over to Lexington, found one of the best and sweetest girls in town and brought her home as his bride. So things have been evened up. Curtis Adam Leonard and Edna Bowers were married at 8 a. m. on Monday, June 2. They went by automobile to Washington and other interesting points. They are now at home on West Fifth avenue, Lexington, N. C.

On June 1 our pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, preached a great sermon from the text: "Lord, are there few that be saved?" So faithfully does Bro. Troxler bring us the Gospel truths that we hope he will be with us many years.

Mrs. Carl Berrier and children are visiting at the home of Mr. W. J. Berrier. We were glad to have them at S. S. Sunday.

Let everyone be thinking about and praying for our revival meeting, which is only two months distant, that God may reap a bountiful harvest of souls.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF.

Bess' Chapel.—The C. E. Society is making good progress. We met April 6, 1930, and elected officers as follows:

President, Mr. Connie Eaker; vice-president, Miss Estelle Bess; secretary, Miss Julia Beam; treasurer, Miss Anis Hull; correponding secretary, Miss Hessie N. Bess; reporter, Miss Taltha Foster.

We also have a junior class in which Mrs. Connie Eaker has charge.

Our society has increased very much. We have a very good number on roll. All are glad to take part and it makes the society more interesting.

The C. E. Society are buying some new lamps for the church. Miss Edna Dellinger bought one and gave it to the church..

The church is also making good in its work. We are now trying to complete the church. Several of the members gave some timber while others gave labor. We have already taken in 25 new members into the church this year and we are hoping it to be the will of God that we receive more.

The Sunday School is also making good. Our roll is increasing. We now have on a contest between the Boys' class and the Girls' class. One side is the blue and the other is red. We are hoping that by the help of God our good work continue. And may God bless us and help us to keep the work going.

First, Winston.—Pentecost—that sacred season of the year in which all should be drawn closer to their Maker and Master. A short message was delivered by our pastor Sunday morning on Pentecost—its meaning. The choir gave two special numbers which were very effective. The usual communion service which is held the first Sunday in each month was held this Sunday with the Pentecostal message. A large attendance there was at church school and a goodly number for the morning worship also.

Our pastor and his wife were back Sunday after a brief absence. He helped in a revival meeting at his home church. This surely must have been a very happy time for him, to go back home and help bring the unchurched and unsaved into the Kingdom and into the church. Although he was absent in person we feel sure he was with us some in mind. For the morning worship on the Sunday of the absence of our pastor and Mrs. Surratt, Mr. Lumpkin, from the Baptist hospital, brought us a good, and vital message. In the evening, Mr. Grant, from the Goodwill Industries of North Carolina, was with us.

The Workers' Council will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday night at the church. Supper will be served at 6:30 as usual. Following this a short session of fun and then business of the council will be taken up with a worship service immediately before.

The juniors? They're going on a picnic Wednesday afternoon so is the rumor. We hope they'll have a great, big, jolly, good time. The junior department is under the supervision of Mrs. H. I. Surratt, and one can readily guess it's a great department. The hearty co-operation of children, teachers, and superintendent is enjoyed in this group. They seem to be a successful bunch of youngsters, always ready "to do something."

The other departments are improving. The primaries are full of life and are as sweet as they are small. They are small, most of them. but however they have great big ideas of what they are going to do some day. The primary department is one of the biggest in the Sunday School. The teachers are fine.

The beginners and cradle roll are almost babies but nevertheless they enjoy the stories and exercises taught them by their teachers.

The young people's department has purchased a piano recently. They are working and scheming—payments are coming due. A husky bunch never gets behind, though.

The Baracas and Philatheas were in a contest—it ended in a tie, so they decided to go a little further—no one knows which will win.

The Bible cass is a happy one. Bro. W. N. Pegram has taught this class for quite a while and it is enjoyed by all the members.

Winston church hopes to have several delegates to the Summer Conference at High Point this year, we hope all the others will, too.

Rockingham.—We are on the climb at this time. Our Sunday School attendance and collections are very good. Our excellent superintendent, Brother W. F. Hudson, makes a splendid short talk each Sunday that always arouses the interest of the people.

We are continuing the class programs each Sunday in our school which is very interesting. Last Sunday it was the Card class' time to give the program. Miss Nettie McLean, teacher of the class, had trained two of the little girls to sing a duet, "Jesus Bids Us Shine." It certainly was fine and just to think it was the small children of the Card class.

Our faithful pastor has been delivering some excellent sermons to us. June 8th, his subject was "Follow Me." This sermon was very inspiring.

We have held a twelve days' meeting. Rev. John Anderson, of Albemarle, was the pulpit help. Brother Anderson brought to us some wonderful and inspiring sermons. The church as a whole was greatly revived and some unusual people reached. We appreciated Brother Anderson more than tongue can tell and wish he could have been with us longer. We hope he will come back again.

On the first Sunday of the meeting seven applied for membership in our church. The last night there was another one or two. We have nine new members. The majority of these desire to be baptized by immersion. We will have this baptizing on next Sunday afternoon at dam No. 4 about 3 1-3 miles out from Rockingham.

Pray for us that we may have progress in the service of the Master.

BIRDIE CONNELL.

Fairgrove.—The Ladies' Aid of Fairgrove church, Why Not charge, held its meeting on Wednesday afternoon, June 4, with Mrs. M. A. Cagle. Most of our members were present, and we had a very successful meeting.

The house was called to order by the president, Mrs. L. E. Cagle. A song, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" was sung by society. Mrs. E. W. Auman then read the thirteenth chapter of Corinthians for the scripture reading, which was followed by prayer from Rev. Mr. Neese.

During the business part of our meeting two new members were received into our society; namely, Mrs. A. C. Lowdermilk, and Miss Susan Lowdermilk. We are always glad to obtain new members for our Ladies' Aid; and in order to secure other new members, it was decided to divide the society into two parts and put on a campaign to see which side could secure more new members, the losing side to entertain the winning side. Following the decision we discussed the quilt which the society is making for the parsonage. Each members it to obtain twenty names for the quilt at 10c per name. This money is to be used for better ligting our church, and for general church improvements.

The society adjourned to meet with Mrs. R. R. Auman the Wednesday following the first Sunday in July.

Following the meeting, delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

Our Aid is working very enthusiastically, and has already helped to pay for several improvements on our church. We have a total of eighteen active members and ten honorary members. We are very grateful to our pastor, Mr. W. H. Neese, and his wife, for the help and interest they give us in our work.

Orange Charge.—The S. S. is increasing, we have around 140 on the roll now and every one seems to be interested.

We are preparing our Children's Day program to be held the fourth Sunday in this month at 11 o'clock. There will be dinner on the grounds and services in the afternoon.

The Woman's Missionary society held its June meeting at the home of the president, Miss Nannie McAdams, with about twenty members present. A free-will offering was taken at this time. We were pleased to have with us Mrs. H. C. Nicholson of Mebane, who gave us a splendid talk on the work. After the meeting refreshments consisting of cake and cream were served by Miss Grace McAda and cream were served by Miss Grace McAdams and Kathleen Gill. The July meeting will be held the first Thursday in July with Mrs. Frank Cook.

The ladies will give a play next month, the proceeds of which will go towards raising our budget.

We are also expecting to serve the Kiwanians supper July 8th at this church.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit.—Yesterday we had our Children Day service. The exercise was good, the children did their part well, and we feel very proud of them. Every one seemed to enjoy the exercise so much.

Much thanks is due those who prepared the program and those who trained the children.

A word about Home-coming Day. We think it was a wonderful success. Those absent mised a treat.

Rally Day will be held at Concord church the fifth Sunday in this month.

Our revival meting will start the fourth Sunday in August. Rev. R. S. Troxler will be our pulpit help. Readers, pray for us, that much good will be done in this meeting.

Hope to get our literature for our Woman's Missionary auxiliary some time soon.

Caroleen.—The revival meeting which began here the fourth Sunday in May, closed June 8th. We all felt that the revival was a great need to our people. There were around 35 or 40 reclamations and conversions. with 11 new members added to our church roll.

Our Sunday school has been moving along very nicely with an average of 127 in Sunday school.

We have been doing some spring cleaning which was greatly needed. We have bought new carpeting for the aisles which has added much improvement to the church. Several other small needs have been met.

We have all enjoyed having Rev, and Mrs. Lowdermilk with us during the past two weeks. Mr. Lowdermilk conducted the revival meeting himself, and we were sorry that Mr. Ridge who was helping in the singing had to leave before the meeting was over.

The second quarterly conference was held in May. The nominees for delegates to the Annual Conference are: S. C. Gate and F. O. Upton.

Our church has been supplied with 125 new song books. We feel sure they will help out so much. We all believe in spiritual singing.

Denton Charge.—We closed our Denton revival services Wednesday evening, June 4. Rev. H. F. Surratt was our pulpit help, and did some excellent gospel preaching. There were several professions during the meeting and last night four joined the church, Banks Morris, Othel Surratt, and Exell Surratt joined on profession of faith. Professor Grover L. Angel joined by certificate. We welcome these new members into our Denton church.

Sunday morning we filled our regular appointment at Canaan with about an average attendance. In the afternoon at Piney Grove we turned the service over to some Christian workers and singers from High Point and Thomasville. The Chisholm sisters from Thomasville sang several heart stirring duets. Several of the evangelistic club made good talks, etc. We had a good service. We feel that the work of the Kingdom on Denton Charge is moving along about like usual.

Last Friday we closed a four weeks vacation Bible school at Denton. We enrolled 74 during the school, with an average attendance of almost 50. The last day of the school 44 were given certificates for regular attendance and work done during the school. Kemp Morris, Golden Morris, Gertrude Bingham and Helen Cranford were each given a Bible for memorizing more scripture than any one else in their departments. We wish to thank each teacher and leader who has made this school possible.

Union Chapel, Granville Charge.—Pastor Spencer delivered a powerful sermon on Stewardship the fourth Sunday morning. He referred to stewardship of life and of time but he emphasized the stewardship of money or possessions. I think this sermon well worth repeating because it is a surprise to many people to know how much Jesus had to say on the matter of property or money, and on stewardship.

The May meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary met at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Spencer. The meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. Owen Edwards. Mr. Spencer conducted the devotionals. A report of Branch meeting was read and Mrs. L. E. Barnes gave a report of district meeting which was held at Mt. Carmel church. Miss Lillian Van Dyke read an article on ten works in Japan. The question box was also conducted. The regular routine of business followed and fifteen members responded to roll call.

Preparations are being made for Children's Day service which we have planned to observe the fourth Sunday morning. Miss Thelma Stone is training the children.

The members of the C. E. Society had a social last Wednesday evening given on the church lawn. Ice cream and cake were served.

The fifth Sunday rally will be held at Union Chapel June 29th. Everybody is invited to come and bring a lunch which will be served picnic style.

Democrat.—Having been appointed by the president to fill the place of a pastor, I am happy to say that the people have received me well. They have taken me in and made me feel at home among them. My associations have been pleasant and I find it a pleasure to work with such a people. A faithful attendance is on hand for each service. This charge was without a pastor for about half the conference year and I find them somewhat scattered. This is not as bad as I expected under conditions of that kind.

At Democrat church a few of the members have gone with the Presbyterians. My first appointment I only found three present but at our last service we had twenty-three there. We are going to start Sunday School there right away. The Mountain Valley church is talking of consolidating with Democrat church. This would be a great help to both as they are not very far apart. They could have a better organized church and more services.

With the Pleasant Gap church things are different. We have an organized Sunday School with thirty-three on roll and a gradual improvement is expected. We also have a mid-week prayer service and a good attendance is to be expected here.

Pensacola church: I have only filled one appointment there so far but was gratified in seeing a large congregation present. We are aiming to organize a Sunday School and Christian Endeavor in the near future. This was once a strong church and I believe we will get back to that point.

Paint Fork church: I don't know just what the possibilities are at this church since I have not had the opportunity of talking with the members. I have preached there twice but so far our people have not turned out. This is a union church partly owned by the Baptists who always turn out well for every service and treat me as if I were their own pastor. I feel that the Methodists will turn out and do their part as they do in all other cases.

Considering the whole circuit there is much to be done and room for much improvement, but I believe that much prayer and hard work will cause this circuit to show a marked difference this year. We are holding the banner of Christ high up here and I know if we do our part the Lord will do his and in that way make a creditable showing for the Methodist Protestant church.

Albemarle.—Pastor Anderson and family returned Friday from Atlanta, Ga., where they spent the week with relatives.

Revival services will begin at our church next Sunday morning and will continue for a week or ten days. At this writing, final arrangements have not been completed in regard to an assisting preacher. Prayer meetings will begin Wednesday night and continue throughout the week, preceding the meeting. May we all be much in prayer for the success of this meeting.

Miss Ruth Green, accompanied by Miss Inez Harvey, is spending their vacation in Washington, D. C., and other surrounding points of interest.

The two circles of the Ladies' Aid Society held their quarterly joint meeting May 6th at the church, being entertained by the members of the Lucy Hatley Circle. The meeting was presided over by the general president, Mrs. Arthur Furr. There were 15 members of the Snotherly Circle, and 19 of the Hatley Circle present.

About 650 Octagon coupons were brought in at this meeting and turned over to the secretary to be sent to the Children's Home.

It was voted that the society donate $200 toward the retirement of a note due by the church.

The Treasurer's report was very encouraging, showing that $77.22 has been raised by the Cam Snotherly Circle, and $121.60 raised by the Lucy Hatley Circle during the last three months.

After the business session, an interesting program was rendered by members of the Hatley Circle, consisting of readings, vocal and instrumental musical selections. The entertaining committee are to be commended for this splendid program.

During the social hour, delightful refreshments were served in two courses, the first course consisting of chicken salad with saltines and iced tea, followed by delicious pineapple sherbet.

The next joint meeting will be held in August, with the Cam Snotherly Circle entertaining.

Matthew Chapel, Greensville Circuit. — On first Sunday evening, our pastor gave us a good sermon, "A call for service." May we all be more determined to do more for Christ, and not become a flat tire through the hot summer days.

Our Christian Endeavorers have been going fine, and we would be very glad to have others to come out and join us. The society has planned a social Saturday night, June 14th, come and have a good time with us.

Interest and attendance are very good in our Sunday School.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. E. G. Cowans has been very ill for the past week.

We were glad to see so many out to our C. E. meeting Sunday night, we had from babies on up to some of the oldest people of the church out with us. E. L. Edwards led the meeting. After the program the church's 1900th birthday anniversary was celebrated.

We are expecting to have a new floor put in our church in the near future.

Weaverville church.—As a direct result of our recent revival services we had four to join our church and others are expected to follow. Last Sunday night, June 8, our pastor, Rev. T. E. Pierce, preached a stirring sermon, which was a great treat to those present.

The Sunday School is coming along fine and Mr. Frank Edwards, the superintendent, is very optimistic and believes he will have an even greater Sunday School than we thought possible. The other branches of the church are coming along nicely and that is much to be thankful for.

First Church, High Point.—Garland McPherson, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen D. McPherson, Woodrow Avenue, will go to Chapel Hill next Tuesday to receive his A. B. degree from the University with his classmates, although he completed the work for this degree March 15 after studying three and two-thirds years. Young Mr. McPherson is a product of the local high school, and the assistant principal, Mr. Henry Grady Owens, says that he has made an enviable record in scholastic marks, and in the positions of trust and responsibility that he has held among the student leaders both in high school and on the campus at Carolina. He has been an earnest and dependable pupil, and during his senior year in high school he was business manager of the official newspaper, "The Pointer." Apparently this experience was a good preparation for the extra-curricular activities in which he engaged in college. During his freshman year Garland managed the "X-Hi-Y," publication of the Friendship Council; the following year as a Sophomore he took care of the business affairs of the "Carolina Magazine;" in his Junior year he was treasurer of "The Carolina Buccaneer," the official comic monthly; and this year, his Senior, he has managed successfully the Y. M. C. A. publication. In his Junior year he was also one of the Commencement debaters from the Dialectic Senate. The positions he held in that old historic organization range from clerk through treasurer to president. Moreover, he has been treasurer of the N. C. Collegiate Press Association, and for some time was engaged by the New York State Tax Commission to do research work on the North Carolina Tax Laws. His host of friends among First church people, in the city, and in different sections of the state, extend hearty congratulations on the splendid record he has made.

On last Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service the Woodmen of the World and its Women's Auxiliary were special guests at our church, and occupied reserved seats in a body in the center tier of pews. A quartet of young men from Winston-Salem sang a beautiful number, and prayer was led by Dr. Moses H. Parker, head of Playgrounds of America. Rev. R. I. Farmer then delivered an eloquent and impressive sermon appropriate to Pentecost, or Whitsunday, on the "Spirit of Truth" from John 14. He said that it is a happy privilege to celebrate the birthday of the church, the coming of the Holy Spirit of Christ, when there came into that group a mighty, rushing wind and cloven tongues of fire. In my reading late I came across these impressive words of William E. Gladstone: "I am rather painfully impressed that the seen world is gaining over the unseen." The Holy Spirit is the inner working of God in humanity. Pentecost was a visible manifestation of God. He came to be the spirit of progress, to bear testimony to the living God. Petecost is not a day, but a season. What we call reticence should be branded as creeping paralysis. It is appalling that so many so-called Christians act as though Jesus never lived. When Pentecost came, a new religion was loosed. Old barriers have been broken down, and Whitsunday makes us new creatures in Christ. Religion was loosed at Pentecost to those who were fit to be leaders. "Whosoever will may come and drink of the water of life freely." The Holy Ghost came just once, but it is here to bring us to go out and do the will of God in our little niche in the world.

The annual recital of the piano pupils of Mrs. Minnie Pickett Harrell will be given Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the assembly room, to which the congregation is most cordially invited. The work of these young people and children is of a high order, which shows the result of the patient and proficient training of their splendid instructor. Awards and prizes will be given for excellence and faithful practice.

The Fellowship Supper meetings, which have been interrupted for various causes, will be resumed Wednesday evening, beginning at 6:45 o'clock, and the minister will speak on the message, "After Pentecost, What?"

There will be no C. E. meeting at the usual hour on Monday evening, but the Endeavorers and their friends will go to the Municipal Lake at Jamestown to enjoy a picnic supper and meeting Tuesday evening. Miss Marjorie Welborn, assisted by a committee, will manage the affair. The group will leave the church in cars at 6:15 p. m.

A unique program for Children's Day is being prepared for presentation on June 22, in which a large number of little folks will appear.

A number of our young people are planning to attend the N. C. Christian Endeavor Convention at Winston-Salem June 24 to 26 in the historic Home Moravian church. This promises to be the largest and best convention in the history of Christian Endeavor, and many notable speakers from a distance will appear on the program.

The numerous friends of little Miss Dorothea Andrews, third daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. M .Andrews, will be happy to learn that she is recovering nicely from an operation for appendicitis last Thursday at High Point Hospital.

Congratulations are being extended by many friends to Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Shaw upon the arrival in their home of a baby daughter last Sunday.

Miss Willie Davis, student at N. C. College for Women, and Robert Davis, who is a student at the University, have returned home to spend the summer vacation with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Davis.

Principal L. R. Johnston, of High Point High School, will teach at Duke University Summer School again this year.

Miss Helen Johnson, who has been a member of the faculty of Henderson, N. C., City Schools, is at home for the summer.

The congregation is delighted to receive four new additions to membership by letter last Sunday morning following the sermon: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Elkins, the latter being the former Miss Edna Dexter, both of whom are helpers at the Children's Home; Mr. Vernon Kanoy, of the College, and Mrs. Harrison Gurley, Centennial Avenue extension.

WHEN YOU ARE SICK IN YOUR IMAGINATION

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Joe Benton, the able philosopher of Benton Heights, "there is a lot in faith healing. I know what it can do for you. It cured me of heart disease."

Mr. Benton was giving a confidential interview to the Journal and Judge W. O. Lemmond as the three met on the corner this morning. Mr. Benton is one of those men who has his own ideas about everything and in about 99 shots out of a hundred he is right. He generally has the right sow by the ear.

"Lots of people are cured by faith. It doesn't cost them anything and it helps them a lot. When I was in my fifteenth year I became subject to pains in the neighborhood of my heart. One of our neighbors, an old man, had died of heart disease and I heard a good deal of talk about it. My pains got worse and I was sure I had heart disease. My mother thought so, too. She kept me pretty quiet and I did not work any for a year.

"At last I went to my mother and told her that I thought I was likely to drop dead any time and she said I must go to a doctor. She told me to get a mule and ride very slowly to Monroe and see Dr. Ramsey. I never let the mule get out of a walk. I finally got to town, slipped gently off my mule and hitched him in the rear of Dr. Ramsey's office where Sam Hart's store is now.

"I went in and Dr. Ramsey asked me what I wanted. I told him I had heart disease and thought I ought to have some medicine. He wanted to know who told me I had heart disease and I told him I knew it myself, and described my symptoms and said I had not worked in a year.

"'You run up those steps just as fast as you can and then down as fast as you can, and then come in here and I'll look at you,' he said. I told him it would kill me but he said go ahead anyway, and I did. I thought I was going to die anyway and it didn't make any difference.

"After I had run up and down the steps, he examined my heart and said that it was as good a heart as anybody ever had and that the pains came from some nerves across the chest and for me to go on back home and go to work, the harder the better, and the pains would leave.

"Well, I never felt so good in my life. When he told me my heart was as good as anybody's I was hapy. I felt like a new person. I got on my mule and cut out for home and I didn't let him walk either. I was no longer afraid of jolts. I never had any more heart disease. Yes, sir, when you are sick in your imagination, faith cure is a fine thing. It will cure you."—Monroe Journal.

ON THE MARK

Mark Twain, at a publisher's dinner in New York, talked of his reporting days in Virginia City.

"We were trying a horse theif one day," he said, "and all of a sudden the big, burly scoundrel pulled off his boot and threw it at the judge. It was a heavy boot, too. It was studded with hobnails . . . I am still rather proud of the way I wrote up that little incident, doing it neatly, and at the same time getting back on a rival reporter whom I disliked. I got it all in one paragraph—something like this:

"Suddenly the blackguardly thief, pulling off his boot, hurled it with all his might straight at the judge's head. This desperate act might have been attended with most disastrous consequences, but fortunately, the missile only struck a reporter, so that no harm was done.'"

A BEAR STORY

Little Mary, given to excessive imagination, seeing a red calf in the orchard told her mother that there was a big red bear out in the orchard. The mother aware of Mary's besetting sin, said: "Now, Mary, you know well enough there is no bear out there, and you better go right into the closet and ask God to forgive you."

Mary did as she was told and soon came out smiling and said: "Mother, it's all right; God said he thought that calf was a bear, too, the first time he saw it."

DRY HUMOR

A French sentinel in Algeria had for a colonel a very tall, lanky, round-shouldered man. This round-shouldered colonel one night was making a quiet inspection. Passing the sentinel, he found, to his rage and indignation, that he was not challenged. So he returned to the man and roared:

"You didn't challenge me!"

"No, sir," said the sentinel, saluting.

"Well, why didn't you?" the colonel demanded.

"Excuse me, sir," said the sentinel, "but I thought—I beg your pardon, sir—I thought you were a camel."

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. M. P. Efland, Efland, N. C., 7 suits for small boys and 1 suit for large boy.

Mrs. J. W. Thacker, High Point, a nice quantity of fine head-lettuce.

Through the kindness of Mr. J. E. Hardin, Greensboro, N. C., the Revolution Print Mills gave us 100 yards of prints for boys suits, and 50 yards of dress goods; and the Asheville Cotton Mills sent us 100 yards of cambray for boys shirts.

The Virginia Cotton Mills, Swepsonville, 23 yards of dress goods.

We are profoundly grateful for these gifts of money and materials. May the dear Father abundantly bless all the givers.

We are now specially in need for materials for dresses for our larger girls.

Octagon Coupons

We are still anxious to get all the Octagon coupons possible, as we need about 68,000 yet to enable us to secure a large refrigerator. Thank you for your help.

Superintendent's Cottage

The promised cottage for the superintendent and his family is nearing completion, and will be occupied within about two weeks. This has for a long time been one of the outstanding needs, and now that this is filled we will tackle other needs one at a time.

The $5,000 willed the Home by the late Benjamin N. Duke made this cottage possible. So there will be no debts for anyone to clear up.

Stand By Us

Please let every Sunday School and church and C. E. Society stand by us closely during these days. We know you will, and may the Lord bless you.

Yours in the Master's service,

A. G. DIXON.

Escaping Life-Long Responsibilities

Methodist bishops are elected for life. After years of service they in some cases grow weary and wish for release. Bishop Fisher with diocese in India was one of these. Too, he had an informal call to the pastorate of a church in the university city of Ann Arbor, Mich., which looked attractive to him. The law of his church provided no clear way from his high office back into the regular ministry, but he made a way so far as escaping the episcopacy is concerned. How to get into the pastorate in view might be more difficult, as appointing pastors is a matter for episcopal action. But he knew he could get out of his bishopric, and he did it by writing the Board of Bishops that he did not intend to exercise further the episcopal office in any degree. The bishops therefore had to make other provision for the episcopal work in India, but they referred the matter of resignation of the episcopal office to the General Conference. Whether Mr. Fisher becomes pastor of the Ann Arbor church remains to be seen. It is reasonably certain that practically he is out of the episcopal office and will stay out.

In the recent General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, it seemed probable that Dr. Forney Hutchinson would be chosen bishop. To prevent his election he requested those disposed to vote for him not to do so. He said it could not be known without trial whether he would fit the office or not. He admitted that he might accept a four-year term, but said that he could not find it in his heart to accept for life a position for which he was by no means sure that he was fitted.

When episcopal responsibilities become so formidable that nobody will stay in the bishop's office or go into it, the office will have to be abolished or much modifide. At the present time there appears no scarcity of aspirants.

New President of High Point College

Rev. G. I. Humphreys, D.D., of Maryland, who comes to us an honor graduate of Western Maryland College, with ripened scholarship through years of study, with heightened zeal for saving men through years of work in important pastorates, with experience in administrative work as President of the Maryland Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, and with the will to help us in the great problem of making High Point College a permanent and powerful factor in the work of Christian education. We bespeeak for him the earnest and persistent co-operation of every member of the Methodist Protestant Church in the North Carolina District.

In Service for Life

While men shrink from undertaking for life some forms of service, every one understands that when we enter true Christian service we place no time limit. Our powers may fail and we may become unable to serve as formerly, but we must still have the will to serve according to our ability and opportunity. It would be painful to think of ceasing to serve in the service of God. Instead of longing for the time when we may serve less we hope for the time when we may serve more. So delightful is the service of God.

—We are asked to write 75 words to fill this space. Of course we must select the words according to some logical rule or principle. It won't do to take words in the dictionary order though dictionary words have been most carefully arranged. We will begin with "unintelligibility,"—a famous word in Webster's Blueback Spelling Book. . . . The column's full!

FLOWERS AND LIVING

By Rev. Luther K. Long

Just recently there died a woman whose experiences emphasize several important matters of life.

She was never very strong, physically. Yet she successfully passed through high school and college. She leaves two daughters and two sons, all of whom, also, passed through high school and college—some of them having done additional study at home and abroad.

Her husband followed one of the less well-paid professions. Notwithstanding the fact that the income was at times inadequate, the children were always clean and adequately nourished; and they were comfortably—even attractively—clad. With her own hands she did much sewing, crocheting, and embroidering—thus adding to the comfort and beauty of the children's clothing. The walls of the home were largely hung with pictures of her own painting in both oil and water color; while the table was generously set with China decorated by herself.

She had traveled to and from the Pacific coast three times, besides going on innumerable shorter journeys. She had welcomed into the family a son-in-law and two daughters-in-law; and her heart had been gladdened by the arrival of three granddaughters and three grandsons. To these grandchildren she had read and told many stories, even as she had done in the case of her own children.

How had she been able to do all these things, in spite of the fact that she had never been in robust health?

Of course, several things contributed to the results. She never worried. The children were taken as a matter of course. They were early trained to help themselves, to help their mother, and to help each other. This relieved her from much lifting in the care of them, and saved her many steps. This system of management permitted her to have, as a rule, a short sleep each afternoon.

While all these things helped, the greatest thing—aside from religion—the thing that had most to do with sustaining her, was her love for flowers.

She had made the study of botany one of her major interests in school; and the cultivation of flowers was one of her major activities throughout her whole life. The names and habits of multitudes of plants were familiar to her. The care of indoor plants came natural to her. The waterings, the stirring of the soil in the pots, the wise application of fertilizers, the shiftings from window to window to get the right light, the little pettings that plants so much appreciate—all these were attended to carefully in due course of time.

This activity with flowers furnished frequent occasions for her to go to the windows, to pass out onto the porches, and into the front yard and the side garden. This took her into the sunshine and fresh air, and opened her eyes to interesting views beyond, and furnished the mild outdoor exercise so conducive to improved health.

Sociability and neighborliness were also promoted. The flowers furnished the occasion for much conversation. Friends admired their beauty and fragrance and were often given cut flowers, seeds or cuttings. Thus there was always plenty of conversation—gossipy and helpful—without the least bit of gossip.

We may be sure that so long as God gives to the world children, birds, and flowers—and the good taste to appreciate and enjoy them, and the generous disposition to share one's interest in them with others—there will be found plenty of activities in life that will be satisfying.

LACK OF EDUCATION

Among the many factors responsible for crime and its recent alarming increase, none can take the lead over ignorance resulting from lack of education. A study of local conditions in this respect bears out our contention. A survey made here within the past two months shows that out of a total of 2,334 subjects, 544 never attended school for a single day, although of the latter number, 125 now claim that they are able to read and write after a fashion. And of the remaining subjects included in this study, by far the larger percentage finished only the lower grades in school and many of these may be classed with the illiterates. Among the older prisoners, this unlettered condition may be somewhat understood for many of them grew to manhood at a time when it was difficult to acquire even the rudiments of an education. But since the present population of the prison is made up principally of mere boys and young men, this state of affairs is little short of a national calamity, for no doubt a study of this matter in the prisons of other states would reveal similar conditions. There is no question but what the fault is largely that of the individuals themselves, although in many cases the blame can be placed on the adverse conditions surrounding their former home life. However this may be, it is a none the less deplorable fact that such a large number of our inmates are compelled to call upon others to write letters for them and to read those that they receive.

There is not only a crying need of education among prisoners, but with many there is an earnest desire for it. This is aptly illustratetd by the following incident which the writer himself witnessed recently. In passing through the cell block one night fully an hour after the electric lights in the cells had been turned off for the night, a dim light was seen shining through the barred door of one of the cells. An investigation disclosed the occupant of the cell thoroughly engrossed in the study of a simple spelling book by the light of a candle not more than two inches long which was attached to the top of one of the rear posts of his straight-backed chair. Do you think that this boy deserves any encouragement in his efforts to better his present little smatter of learning? Listen, friends, this particular boy was committed to the prison about two years ago when only seventeen years old and is serving a sentence of twenty years, but even that doesn't deter him from a desire and determination to better his present condition. Is he worth helping? (Pardon the personal reference, but I know him to have all the makings of a future excellent citizen if his present efforts can be properly directed.)

The State of North Carolina has just apportioned $4,976,000 among various counties in the State to aid them in maintaining their schools for the next school year. Reading this account of such marked progress in the line of education gave us much pleasure. But at the same time the thought occurred to us that a few thousand additional dollars allotted for the express purpose of promoting an educational program among those in "durance vile" throughout the State could be made to pay tremendous dividends upon the investment.—Prison News, Raleigh, N. C.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE

This Summer Conference doubtless offers one of the best programs ever offered to the North Carolina Conference. It is hoped that every pastor and as many of the laymen and laywomen will avail themselves of this program as can possibly do so. Come on Monday and remain until the finish. Do not forget the time, Monday, June 23, to Friday, June 27.

A College Program

It will be noticed that in the main those on the program are either members of the High Point College faculty or High Point College graduates. This will give our people a chance to see High Point College in action. Our people have seen what our college is doing and they want to see more of it. Come, people, and sit under the teaching of these men.

Popular Evening Services

The evening services except Monday will be conducted in the college auditorium. Dr. D. I. Humphreys, the new president of the college, will deliver addresses on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Rev. Paul Warner of the Maryland Conference will deliver the address on Thursday night. We are expecting fine addresses on these occasions. Prof. Ernest B. Stimpson, head of the music department of High Point College,will have charge of the music at these evening services. These evening services are to be popular gatherings and the people within reach are invited and urged to be present and get the benefit of them. Pastors are asked to announce these services from their pulpits on next Sunday and urge their people to attend. Great numbers of our people live within driving distance of High Point and out of these we should have a great attendance on these evening services. People, the program is being prepared. It is for you to come to it.

Ladies' Day

The ladies are invited to be with us at all the sessions. But Thursday night and Friday have been planned so as to be especially interesting to our ladies and it is hoped they will attend in large numbers. The ladies have secured the services of Rev. Paul Warner of the Maryland Conference and until recently a missionary in Japan to be their speaker. He will speak to both men and women on Thursday night and on Friday at 12 o'clock. Both of these addresses will be delivered in the college auditorium. The ladies will have other programs during the day Friday, while the program of the men will be carried out as on other days until 12 o'clock when all will hear Rev. Mr. Warner.

That Picnic Dinner

On Friday at 1 o'clock there is to be a picnic dinner at the Children's Home. Our people of the surrounding country are invited to have a part in this. While the ministers will enjoy this dinner, it is not planned exclusively for the Pastors' Conference. But it certainly is a good thing for our people to get together in this way, both ministers and laymen, once in a year. Then to make such a day for the children and workers at the Home should be that which should appeal to our people. Please come, people, and let us have a good time together. When packing that dinner do not forget to pack for the children and people at the Home.

Pastors, Are You Coming?

If so, do not fail to inform Dr. Dixon or the undersigned AT ONCE. Say when you are coming, for the Home must know about your coming if you are to be provided for. This is important. There are plenty of rooms at the college and they will cost you nothing. But the Home certainly deserves to know if you are expecting meals. The cost is $1.00 per day and 50 cents per meal when not taken by the day, or all meals over a day. This is certainly reasonable enough and should there be just a wee little profit we know it will be for a good cause. It will be helping ourselves maintain the Home.

One Thing More

People, please pay your pastor's way to this conference. Just $5.00—$1.00 for registration and $4.00 for board. Give your pastor this little treat. It will help you and him. I just wish I could visit every charge in the conference. I feel sure that there are few charges that would not make this provision if some one would just go at the matter in the right way. Somebody please volunteer.

All services except the 8 o'clock services on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night and possibly the services on Friday will be held at the Children's Home. Now, pastors, who of you are looking for those good old times as we had them in those other days when we used to gather at the Home for the full time? You are being given the chance. Come for it.

ON PROHIBITION AND LAW ENFORCEMENT

We have been gratified at the strong and consistent attitude taken by President Hoover in support of the spirit as well as the letter of our national Constitution. We especially note with approval his decisive stand with regard to the Eighteenth Amendment, its observance and enforcement. In view of the antagonisms inevitably engendered by such a position it becomes the special obligation of Christian people everywhere to support the President in these particulars to the limit of their influence and ability.

In some instances the wet propaganda has reached the proportions of treasonable utterances. It is the judgment of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church that our ministers and laymen alike should arouse themselves to the gravity of the present situation. The hour calls for a keener appreciation of the values of the Constitution of the United States and the dangers it is now meeting. We pray for a new sense of obligation to support it.

President Hoover's ringing words as to the majesty of law and the observance and enforcement of all law are entitled to the earnest attention of all patriotic citizens. We urge upon our people renewed devotion to the cause of Prohibition, unwavering support of the leaders in the movement for the final overthrow of the organized liquor traffic, and increased liberality toward the well ordered and approved agencies which are responsible for promotion and education in the campaign for the preservation and the effectuation of the Eighteenth Amendment and the measures adopted for its enforcement. We especially commend the Anti-Saloon League and the Board of Temperance of our own Church, both of which are approved by our General Conference.

By the Bishops,
H. LESTER SMITH, Secretary.

SECRETARY WILBUR'S FINAL WORDS TO DUKE GRADUATES

Dr. R. Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior and president of Leland Stanford University, who was granted a leave of absence that he might serve in President Hoover's cabinet, in delivering the commencement address this year at Duke University closed his message with the following:

"Those who are to start out to take part in this entertaining, intricate, and rapidly developing world can avoid confusion by maintaining contact with the firm foundations of science. They must weigh facts against opinions; in the long run facts will control. Individuals have value so far as they can see clearly. When they fall back on prejudices they join the crowd. There is no turning back, except to failure, and leadership is forced on university-trained men and women. It is your privilege to join with those already engaged in the great game of life. You will add your part either in pulling or holding back, or perhaps merely sliding along. What you will add will be increased if you can be careful to see that no one puts blinders on you and that you stand ready to fight ignorance in every form.

"You cannot defy human experience. The more you can learn by observation of others the better, but much must come to you from the things that you do, be they right or be they wrong. Do not spend time in excusing yourselves from mistakes; recognize them when you make them. Your satisfaction will come from what you may do, not from what you plan to do. The dreams you all must have had can become realities only through work and more work. Finding a place to work is your task. Your university has taught you what has been done and what can be done. It is now your problem to see that you play a man's part in carrying forward."—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

"Why Hast Thou Forsaken Me?"

The Son of Man is mortal pain
Is stretched upon the shameful tree!
O, who can tell what He endures
In these dread hours of agony?

We mortals shrink from dreadful sight,
Such death would us to madness drive;
We'd shriek and groan and cry aloud—
To free ourselves with might we'd strive.

Not so with Him who took our place:
From Him there comes no cry of pain;
He prays for foes, provides for friends—
For writhing form we look in vain.

But from His lips there comes a cry,
The most distressful heard on earth:
"O, why hast Thou forsaken me?"
A faithful son I've been from birth!

Yes, why indeed should such thing be,
That faithful son should be forsaken?
Unfaithful sons must answer give:
We've made it so by course we've taken.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

Onlyone-half as many people died from Tuberculosis last year as died in the best year before Prohibition, the death rate being cut 50% in ten years. This alone is a saving of 67,000 lives each year.

Believe It or Not

Deaths from Meningitis, that terror of parents' hearts, which had been unyielding to medical science, are less by an average of 66%, since 1920.

Deaths from Bright's Disease are less by 20% since 1920.
Deaths from Pneumonia are less by 33% since 1920.
Deaths from Typhoid are less by 46% since 1920.
Deaths from Bronchitis are less by 60% since 1920.

Best of All

Deaths of babies under one year are less by 30%.
Deaths of children under five years are less by 42%.

Believe It or Not

An average of more than 200,000 lives have been saved each year since 1920, making in the ten years a saving of more than two million lives.—Buffalo Citizens Committee for Law Enforcement.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Alamance

June 15, Sunday.—The morning and afternoon of this date were given to Alamance charge, Rev. J. A. Burgess, pastor. The churches visited were Bethel and Rock Creek, in order named. We were heard by attentive congregations at each place, and enjoyed the worship with them. Bethel church has paid nearly all of their allotment on "Dollar a Member," and we were assured that the balance will be paid during the year. The congregation at this place is working on a remodeling plan for their building, so as to provide Sunday School rooms. They would find this a great improvement in their work, and we trust that they may be able to go forward with their plans. Our service at Rock Creek was abbreviated, owing to a funeral in the community that some of the congregation desired to attend. However, a good spirit prevailed, and we trust that the service was helpful. An offering was taken here for the relief of the famine sufferers in China. These are each well established and useful churches, and draw their membership from the substantial citizenship of their respective communities. It was a pleasure to be with them and their pastor. Each of the four churches making up this charge has a missionary organization, and operates an all-year Sunday School. The total Sunday School enrollment of the charge last year was 500. It would seem that this charge could give to the HERALD a more liberal support. There are several subscribers now, of course, but hardly enough for the strength of the charge. The pastor is working on this, and no doubt the subscription list will be increased. We trust, also, that the charge may have a number of places on our conference honor roll this fall. Brother Burgess has the confidence and esteem of his people, and a general condition of harmony and co-operation seems to maintain on the charge. We expect a good year on Alamance. We are grateful to the pastor and his people for their kind reception of us, and for the hospitality of their homes.

Once More

We are glad to note in reports of churches to the HERALD last week that some charges have observed Children's Day, and others are now preparing the program. We got back from Alamance in time to get a part of a good program at Grace Sunday night. For some time, we have been urging all of our churches to observe this day. The preparation of the program will require some effort, but the results will be rewarding. If you have not already done so, let us urge once more that you get the program and begin at once to prepare to observe this day A card to Dr. G. W. Haddaway, 516 North Charles St., Baltimore, Md., will bring you the supplies.

Salaries

It was gratifying to find, from the reports of the second quarter, that pastors' salaries have not been permitted to suffer as seriously from the financial depression as might have been expected. The various charges are to be commended for this, and we wish to express to them our appreciation. However, some pastors have received less than during the first half of last year, and in most cases there is considerable arrears in salaries to date. The laity will not forget, we are sure, that the great Pastor has said: "The laborer is worthy of his hire."

Pastors' Summer Conference

This begins next Monday, June 23. The President, Rev. George L. Curry, has prepared a good program, and he is exceedingly anxious that all pastors shall have the benefit of it. Let us make a special effort to attend this conference, and to be present at the opening hour Monday. The conference culminates in a big assembly Friday, with a picnic dinner. The work of the women will feature this closing day. The automobile and good roads make it possible for any who can not stay for the entire conference to share in at least a part of it. We have often noted the presence of our laymen in these conferences. It is a pleasure to have them present, and we hope that many of them will attend this year.

Herald Subscriptions

We are not yet up to the goal of 3,000 subscribers, but it is encouraging to see that we are going in that direction. One interesting feature about the effort is that every charge in the conference has reported new or renewal subscriptions except seven. Let us suggest a way of helping this undertaking: every pastor, from Sunday to Sunday, refer from the pulpit to something interesting and informing that he saw in the HERALD the previous week. Or, let him tell the story, on "Story Page," for the benefit of the children, just before he preaches, and announce that he got it from the HERALD. We believe that this would help. This campaign should succeed. Our people need the paper, and the allotment is not too large.

Assigned

Rev. O. B. Williams has been assigned pastor of South Winston to fill out the unexpired term of Rev. P. L. Kinnaman, deceased. We trust that he and his people may have happiness and success in their work together.

The Revival Season

We are now approaching the time when most of our revival work is done. It is a recognized fact that it is not as easy now to have success in revival efforts as it was years ago. Why this is true may not be so easy to determine. But that it is true, is an acknowledged fact. Let us make our revival programs matters of special prayer. There is no doubt about the fact of sin. It is in evidence everywhere. There is no doubt either that the unregenerate sinner is in the "broad way that leadeth to destruction," and that Christ wants him saved. The church is his agency for doing this, and surely he will make us strong and wise for it, if we but seek his guidance and his power. Let us all pray that God may be with us in our evangelistic efforts, and that we may learn from him how to seek and to save the lost.

Appointments

June 22, Sunday.—Level Cross, Randleman charge. Hour, 2:30 P. M.

June 23-27.—Pastor's Summer Conference.

OUR STORY PAGE

FLIP

“What's that?” she asked herself and following the sound went into the hall. “It's a bug of some kind. Sounds like a cricket.”

“Creak, creak!” he remarked, quivering his small wings.

“That's my pet cricket,” explained Betty. “Don't let him get into the fire”

They fed him with bread and bits of apple and he sang to them all the evening.

“A cricket on the hearth is good lucky, so they say,” Hattie the hired girl told them.

The only thing that worried Betty was that her pet became more and more used to the family and would walk about on the rugs where he was liable to be stepped on. The family formed the habit of looking furtively down on the floor as they went about, which seemed funny to their friends. But fortunately Flip's favorite perch was on the mantlepiece where he could survey the whole room. He often wandered to other parts of the house and before winter was over he had been all over it, from attic to cellar.

Paul had made great plans for him. In the summer they would get him a wife and raise a large family and perhaps have trained crickets to show their wondering friends. But alas, for the plans of men and mice!

Just around Easter time Betty had a girl friend staying over night with her. They were just going to bed when Jean, the visitor, looked up at the wall and gave a little cry.

“Ugh, look at that!”

It was a great big spider strolling carelessly over the wall paper, a mean-looking creature with a small body and long legs branching out in every direction.

“I bet he stings,” said Jean. “I'm afraid of spiders.”

“Well, I'm not,” Betty answered, “but I'd just as leave not have him in our bedroom. He's apt to jump on the bed and bite us while we're asleep.”

“Don't!” screamed Jean, clapping her hands over her ears. “Please get rid of him or I'll go home. I won't stay with you.”

“All right,” said Betty, “you just look the other way if you're so timid and I'll tend to him.”

She went downstairs and got a broom while Jean stayed and kept her eye on Mr. Spider. When Betty came back armed for the fray, she put her coat over her head and cowered on the bed with her eyes tight shut.

“Where is he?” demanded Betty grimly.

Betty climbed on a chair and took aim. Bing! Her broom came down with enough force to kill a dozen spiders and Betty lost her balance and went bing, too.

“There!” she exclaimed, picking herself up and rubbing her knee. “I bet that settled him.”

“Good,” said her guest, hopping off the bed. “Hope you're not hurt. It's a wonder you didn't break that mirror.”

Betty hobbled to the bureau.

“Where's the remains, I'd like to know?” she inquired, resting one hand on the bureau scarf and letting her eyes rove around the floor.

Jean gave a loud scream.

“Look out!” she cried. “He's there! There! Right near your hand!”

Betty hastily drew her hand away just as the spider was about to crawl on it. Her action startled the insect and it gave a sudden leap and landed on Betty's sleeve. It was her turn to scream.

“My, my!” thought the spider. “This is making me nervous.” And it leaped off Betty on to Jean, right on the front of her pajamas.

This time Jean only gurgled and tore madly out of the room. At the door she ran into Paul.

“Say!” exclaimed Paul. “What's the matter? Are you being killed or what?”

“Spider!” gasped Jean.

Paul laughed.

“Ho, ho! You girls would yell over a spider!”

“It jumps like anything and I hit it with a broom, so it's thoroughly aroused and probably has its stinger out ready to take revenge,” she explained.

“Is it on me? Is it on me?” cried poor Jean. “Where is it? quick! I feel something crawling on my neck.”

“It's not on your neck,” assured Paul, in a patronizing way. “Get out of here, both you, and I'll attend to him. You'll scare the whole neighborhood yelling like that.”

“No, I want to kill it myself,” said Betty, firmly, with flashing eyes grabbed the broom. “I don't need any boy to kill spiders for me.”

“Aw, show him to me and his goose will be cooked,” retorted Paul. You girls give me a pain.”

Showing the spider to Paul was no easy task. They hunted all around the room.

“Well, he's escaped into the hall,” said Paul. “After all he wasn't doing any harm. Shut your door tight and you'll be safe.”

Betty slammed the door and scowled at her friend.

“It's silly to act this way,” she muttered.

“I can't help it,” said Jean. “I tell you I'm afraid of spiders.”

Just then they heard a tapping on the door and Paul appeared, looking pale and sorrowful.

“Oh, Betty, I'm a murderer,” he said. “I've committed a crime.”

“What?” they both demanded.

“You know,” said Paul, “as I went down the stairs I saw that spider. It was on the landing in a corner. I took my foot and squashed him flat. Then I picked him up by one feeler, and—and—Oh, Betty, I hate to tell you this! It's just terrible, Betty. I'll never forgive myself.”

“Oh, you superstitious thing!” his sister exclaimed. “You've heard that it was bad luck to kill a spider.”

“No, no, Betty, it wasn't the spider. It was—it was—” and Paul turned away to cover his emotion.

Paul sadly nodded his head and held out one hand in which lay a bright brown, crumpled object.

O—o—o, my cricket!” cried Betty, beginning to cry. “My darling Flip!”

JUNE 29: GREAT MISSIONARY LEADERS

Scripture Text—Eph. 3:7,8; 4:11-13

Daily Bible Readings

Monday, Jonah's Mission. Jonah 1:1-3.

Tuesday, A Home Missionary. Amos. 7:14, 15.

Wednesday, John the Baptist. Luke 3:1-18.

Thursday, Peter's Mission. Acts 10:34-48.

Friday, Philip in Samaria. Acts 8:5-8.

Saturday, The Master Missionary. Acts 9:10-18.

Suggestions to the Leader

This meeting affords a splendid opportunity to become better acquainted with our mission fields, our missionaries and their work. The meeting should be planned far enough beforehand so that all the information possible on our mission stations and missionaries may be secured. What are some of the great needs of each mission field? What is being accomplished. How may we at home do our part to help the missionaries? Assign to each speaker one missionary or mission field and ask him to give a brief statement of the work of that field. All the principal mission fields should be included.

A large map of the world might be hung on the wall. Use your own town or state as a center. At this center tack several red strings and as each speaker describes a mission field, have the secretary pin the other end of one of the strings to that "field." The map will look like a wheel when all stations have been described. The need of keeping the lines to these mission fields open should be emphasized.

The suggested hymns are as follows: "We've A Story to Tell to the Nations," "Rescue the Perishing," "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go," and "Faith of Our Fathers."

Leader's Talk

Missions is the divine program for the conquest of the world for Christ. This was God's choice for the evangelization of the world even though man's wisdom might suggest many other plans. The work of the missionary is to preach Christ which is vital to the progress of Christ's Kingdom on earth. We might examine ourselves and see how we regard our work in the Master's Vineyard. Do we consider it a privilege or a duty? Of course it is better to consider it as a duty than nothing but unless our duties become privileges we lose much of the joy of service. Paul rejoiced over the fact that Jesus had called him to become "the chosen vessel to the Gentiles and kings," and called it the "divine favor of God."

Questions to Be Answered

1. What are some characteristics of missionary leaders?
2. Would missionary leaders be leaders if they were not missionaries?
3. What sort of a leader was Livingstone?
4. Does the greatness of a missionary have anything to do with his preparation? How?
5. How do ancient and modern missionaries differ?
6. What opportunities for leadership are there in missions today?

Poetry

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of Arsenals and forts.
—Longfellow.

DAVID LIVINGSTONE

To lift the somber fringes of the night,
To open lands long darkened to the Light,
To heal grim wounds, to give the blind new sight,
Right mightily wrought he.

Forth to the fight he fared,
High things and great he dared;
He thought of all men but himself,
Himself he never spared.
He greatly loved—
He greatly lived—
And died right mightily.

He passed like light across the darkened land,
And, dying, left behind him this command:
"The open door is open! So let it ever stand!"
Full mightily wrought he.
—John Oxenham.

THE SON OF GOD GOES FORTH TO WAR

"The Son of God goes forth to war,
A kingly crown to gain;
His blood-red banner streams afar;
Who follows in His train?
Who best can drink His cup of woe,
Triumphant over pain;
Who patient bears His cross below—
He follows in His train.

"The martyr first, whose eagle eye
Could pierce beyond the grave,
Who saw his Master in the sky,
And called on Him to save.
Like Him, with pardon on His tongue
In midst of mortal pain,
He prayed for them that did the wrong:
Who follows in His train?

"A glorious band, the chosen few
On whom the Spirit came,
Twelve valiant saints, their hope they knew,
And mocked the cross and flame:
They met the tyrant's brandished steel,
The lion's gory mane;
They bowed their necks the death to feel—
Who follows in their train?

"A noble army, men and boys,
The matron and the maid,
Around the Saviour's throne rejoice,
In robes of light arrayed:
They climbed the steep ascent of heav'n,
Thro' peril, toil and pain:
O God, to us may grace be giv'n
To follow in their train."

THE LION WITHOUT

"The sluggard saith, There is a lion without; I shall be slain in the streets."—Prov. 22:13.

The sluggard lay upon his bed,
And this is what the sluggard said:
"There is a lion in the streets,
Attacking every one he meets.
Lest I should be that lion's prey,
I will not go to work today."

No sluggard ever has a doubt
There is a lion waits without.
The sluggard, as he lies and shakes,
Out of his sloth a lion makes,
A lion desperate and grim,
Ready to make a meal of him.

How terrible a task appears,
Clothed in the mantle of our fears!
How difficult, severe, taboo,
The thing we do not want to do!
And how are lions quickly killed
When any work with love is filled!
—Amos R. Wells in C. E. World.

IS THIS THE DRIEST COLLEGE?

Ashbury college students voted on May 24th in chapel 499 to 3 for strict enforcement of the prohibition law. Thirty-seven members of the college faculty voted on the same question and were unanimously for continuance of prohibition. Ashbury, which is at Elmore, Ky., now claims the honor of being the driest college in the United States.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

◆

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

400th ANNIVERSARY AUGSBURG CONFESSION

The Augsburg Confession of June 25th, 1530, is regarded as one of the great religious events of the 16th century, and was a forward step for all Protestantism. This anniversary will be celebrated this year by a special meeting of the United Lutheran Church in North Carolina whose Synod of more than one hundred ministers will hold appropriate exercises on June 25th in observance of the day. Among other features there will be an historical address by Dr. W. T. Whitsett, of Whitsett, who will traec the influence of this event upon succeeding religious development.

THE BEVERAGE THAT EATS CONCRETE

The "Washington Star" is authority for the statement thta a bottle of bootleg liquor that was accidentally spilled over the concrete floor of the Treasury Department building, before an attendant could mop it up, had eaten a clean white irregular space into the concrete floor.

And that is the kind of "beverage that cheers" the "die-wet" defiers of the Volstead Act.

—Baltimore Zionists at a meeting held in Baltimore on Wednesday, May 28, 1930, unanimously protested against the "unwarranted and sudden action" of the British Labor government in rescinding 3,100 immigration certificates originally granted despite the fact that there is definite evidence that the Yishub (land) is prepared to absorb without economic disturbances a much larger number of immigrants.

NORTH CAROLINA FIRE LOSS FOR APRIL, 1930

The total fire loss in North Carolina in April was $348,036 from 238 fires as compared with a loss of $468,279 from 213 fires last April, Insurance Commissioner Dan C. Boney announced today. Detailed report shows there were 208 fires with a loss of $260,811, of which 188 were dwellings with loss of $318,964, and 30 rural fires with loss of $87,225, dwellings 22, loss $23,925.

For the first time on record, the biggest fire loss for the month came from a farm enterprise near Asheville, a chicken hatchery and poultry establishment in Buncombe county, this loss being $35,000.

RALLY DAY

Rally Day will be held in the sixth district the fifth Sunday in June at Bethel church. Flat Rock Circuit. Draper, Reidsville, Haw River, Flat Rock, and Kernersville stations and circuits comprise the sixth district.

The program, both morning and afternoon, is built around the theme of "Evangelism." Dr. S. W. Taylor, Rev. W. F. Kennett, and Rev. W. T. Totten will speak in the morning session. In the afternoon Dr. and Mrs. George R. Brown will give addresses.

Special music will be given by Pine Grove choir. Picnic dinner at 12:30. Everybody cordially welcomed.

Faithfully Yours,
J. P. PEGG, Chairman.

LIGHTNING

If the average person is asked the purpose of a lightning rod, he will answer that it is to carry a stroke of lightning to the ground, thus preventing damage to the building. It is evident that few persons know that this service represents only about 5 per cent of the usefulness of a lightning rod. In 95 per cent of the cases, the lightning rods actually prevent the stroke from occurring, by neutralizing charges between the cloud and the earth.—The Fire Plug.

NEW METAL DISCOVERED

The Drekolias International Corporation announced that it has obtained the secret formula for the manufacture of an unnamed metal which is stronger than steel. This metal, says the company, may prove to be of inestimable value in the aviation, automobile and shipping industries. The formula was conceived by a German scientist but developed after his death by an American chemist.

A little country girl called at a neighbor's house. "Mrs. Smith," said she, "mother wants to know if you won't please lend her a dozen eggs. She wants to put them under a hen."

"Put them under a hen?" asked the surprised neighbor. "I didn't know that you had a hen!"

"We haven't," was the frank rejoinder. "We are going to borrow the hen from Mrs. Brown."

SNAPSHOTS FROM OUR MISSIONARY CONVENTION

One of the greatest sources of information and inspiration that one finds at our Missionary Convention is contact with returned missionaries. There is about them some of the romance and glamour of the distant lands in which they have been working and from which they have come with news of the great adventure of the business of missions in which we are stockholders.

From these faithful followers of the Master we get first hand knowledge of the successes or failures of our enterprise in various fields, and they never seem to grow weary answering questions no matter how trifling they may seem to them. Our church is in the front rank, judged by the quality and consecration of her missionaries, past and present. They are intensely human, and to know them is an encouragement to us to do more for their comfort and support. Would you like to have a few snapshots of some of them as they appeared to one who saw a little of their personality at the recent Convention?

The splendidly equipped church in which the Convention met contained many rooms, and, while wandering around on a tour of investigation, I saw a person whom I supposed to be a young college boy helping arrange exhibits from our mission stations. Upon invesitgation I found the "boy" to be none other than Horace Williams, who was assisting his charming wife in bringing China into a certain room for our inspection. Tall, good-looking, he is rather reserved, but very much in earnest. He and his wife are studying at our Seminary to better prepare themselves for future work in China. They are fine young people.

One delegate asked another what she considered one of the high lights of the Convention. Without a moment's hesitation she replied, "Paul Warner." Another said he seemed like a "bright flame with his burning zeal and enthusiasm—his heart all on fire with love for his Master and for the people with whom he labored in Japan." His happy personality gives to his earnest plea for greater efforts in strengthening our mission work in Japan a force that can not be withstood. I wish all of our young people in North Carolina might hear him when he speaks at the College during the Summer Conference.

What a joy it was to see dear, cheerful, competent, consecrated Dr. Roberta Fleagle, whose heart is still in China, and whose body we are hoping will also be there again engaging in the blessed ministry of healing in and around Kalgan as soon as conditions there are more peaceful.

Every one who knows Dr. Woodford loves him and admires his wonderful work at Pine Ride. Quiet, unassuming, yet forceful and earnest and zealous, he combines keen business ability with those spiritual gifts that make him a good preacher and teacher. I shall not attempt to describe the many enterprises he has established in the decade he has been at Pine Ridge. Suffice it say that he runs a saw mill in order to get material for our mission buildings, using any surplus in constructing real houses for the mountaineers to ocupy instead of living in log huts. Then he saw the great need of lime for the soil and discovered an outcropping of limestone rock nearby, bought the land on which it was located, bought a rock-crusher and furnished lime for our mission farm and for the farmers for miles around. The donation of used clothing for the poor among the mountaineers led to the establishment of a store where about two thousand dollars each year are taken in and used for scholarships for mountain boys and girls in Alvin Drew school. Circumstances made it necessary for him to take over a grocery store, and he operates it at a profit. Besides all these things he is in demand as adviser and helper in the educational and civic affairs of the county. On Sundays he preaches and conducts Sunday schools in hamlets for some miles around.

Here is a little story I heard Dr. Woodford tell that impressed me very much: "When I was a boy," he said, "I had my head 'read' by a traveling phrenologist, and he told me that I had a bump on it which indicated that I would be especially successful as a store-keeper, or a hotel-keeper. I tried my hand at both, but when I received the call to the Gospel ministry I gave them up; but in my work at Pine Ridge I have found my experience in these two lines of business very valuable." Last year iur work at Pine Ridge, exclusive of the salaries of workers, was very nearly self-supporting, and the returns on our investment there are trained young men and women who are taking their places as teachers and preachers and leaders in their own mountain state.

Those of you who have enjoyed reading the bright and interesting letters written by Miss Perley from our Dhulia mission will be sorry to hear that she will no longer be our missionary. She had a long, stormy, seasick voyage home and did not make as pleasing a snapshot as the one of the cover of the Missionary Record a few months ago. She did faithful service as our missionary, and we love her and regret to lose her.

When we think of China we think of Charlie Heininger, and vice versa. He was at the Convention, the same whole-souled missionary-minded man he was when he lived in Kalgan, ready to go again as our missionary, provided the Mission Board could arrange matters; but even if there were no war in China we are not at present financially able to enlarge our working force in Kalgan, though the need to do so is very great.

I will save some snapshots for another time.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—Attendance at Sunday school Sunday was good. Preparations were made for a Children's Day service. Mesdames J. L. Craven, R. G. Craven, and D. E. Hilton were appointed to have charge of the program. The date has not yet been set.

Mr. J. B. Swaim's singing school closed the first Sunday with a large crowd present. Rev. D. C. Cox, of the Reformed church, was with us at the 11 o'clock hour and gave an interesting talk to all, but especially to the young people on "Building a Character." Dinner was served on the ground, then in the afternoon the class sang many songs and quartets from various places were heard from. Mr. Cox made a short talk in behalf of the church's need for more seats. Some $2.00 subscriptions were promised, then a collection was taken all amounting to $42.00 which will go to the Ladies Aid treasury. Much to our surprise but greatly to our joy, Brother Whitehead, our former pastor, arrived in the afternoon and gave a brief but interesting talk. The people at Spring Hill are always glad to have him in their midst and extend to him a cordial welcome at all times. Brother Powell was with us at 8 o'clock, bringing an unusually good message.

In spite of the continued downpour of rain and only a few present at the supper given by the Ladies' Aid Saturday night, the total amount cleared was $15.00.

The Christian Endeavor society met Sunday morning at 11 o'clock with Alice Haynes as leader.

The Ladies' Aid will hold its regular monthly meeting Saturday night with Mrs. George Craven.

Mrs. W. A. Craven, who has been ill for some time, remains so, we are sorry to say. We offer our prayers that she may be restored to health again.

Gibsonville-Fountain Place.—The work of reporting from these charges has been left largely with the reporters for the last few weeks, but as our second quarterly conferences have been held, possibly some things of interest might be given by the pastor.

Bros. R. G. Hornaday and J. O. Glenn are the nominees for delegate to Annual Conference from Fountain Place. J. R. Apple and N. N. Brown from Gibsonville. If politics entered into this election the pastor would get a double dose of it as there are two charges to handle, but we are not having anything of that kind in our work here, so far as the charges are concerned.

Finances are somewhat behind, but we are expecting a general rallying to catch things up soon. In fact, Gibsonville charge is planning to catch up in a few days. They have been paying pastor's salary up to date until this month and the chairman of the board of stewards, Frank Owen, is getting down after these interests with a will that will show results. Some amounts have been paid on all interests from both charges, including "Dollar a Member" for the College.

We are working our Herald campaign just now and are hoping to reach the goal set by the committee. We may talk about failing if certain interests are not looked after. But the question is, Would we have ever succeeded as we have had it not been for the Herald. We cannot afford to fail in this.

Increased interest is being manifested in the music at Gibsonville by a large attendance at choir practice. Christian Endeavor here has taken on new life also. The revival at this church was largely attended and there were nine accessions. Quite a number of renewals and the cooperation on the part of all denominations was appreciated very much. Our church was filled at every service for the ten days and sometimes the Sunday school rooms were put into use.

One of the encouraging things about the meeting at Fountain Place was the increase of attendance at every service. Several conversions here among the children, and the effect of getting some of the members who had been neglecting the church services to begin their lives for Christ over again has had an encouraging effect upon the membership. The people here seem to be encouraged, notwithstanding the cumbersome debt that has been on them from the beginning. This has been decreased by half now and it is to be hoped that there may be that increase of interest that will get this arranged in a satisfactory way.

Preparation is being made at both churches for Children's Day services at an early date.

The fifth Sunday night singing at Fountain Place is a regular affair, and always brings out more folks than can be accommodated. The music is always of a helpful kind. Some of the best talent is always on the program. You are invited to attend the fifth Sunday night in June.

We have been remembered in a substintial way by many of the members and friends, but will not take the space and time to tell you who they are now. Our work upon the whole is encouraging, and we are happy in the associations of former days, as we meet so many daily that we have known in the days gone by.

Sincerely,
N. G. BETHEA.

Tabernacle Charge.—Memorial services were held at Tabernacle church on the 3rd Sunday in May with large congregations present both morning and afternoon. Hon. J. Dolph Long, Graham, delivered the memorial address at 11 a. m. A new feature in the afternoon was the reading of obituaries of Tabernacle members who passed on during the year. Our own people and certain members of Mt. Pleasant choir furnished special music throughout the day. Revs. J. F. and T. F. McCulloch were present in the afternoon and made talks. We were glad to have them present.

Four of our Tabernacle young people attended the Leadership training school at West End church, Greensboro, and each one received a cetificate.

We are forttunate to have a splendid male quartet composed of Bros. T. B. Reynolds, Worth Trogdon, Tyson Shaw, and Wade Coble. These young men are now taking special training under Miss France Wilson, a vocal instructor of international fame.

Julian and Shiloh churches are showing a fine spirit of cooperation. Just recently a Junior C. E. society was organized at Julian for both churches with Mrs. Kime of Shiloh, and Mrs. W. T. Hanner as leaders.

Two new members recently united with Tabernacle church by certificate, Mrs. Dwight Fields and Mrs. Charles Coble. We were pleased to receive these spndid young women.

Brother W. T. Hanner has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the passing of his only sister, Mrs. Rea, who was buried at Yadkin college a few days ago.

Miss Elizabeth Hanner will address the C. E. society at Tabernacle on the fourth Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Causey have our thanks for strawberries.

H. L. ISLEY.

Asheboro.—Our church and community suffered a great loss in the death of Brother J. W. Wolff on Tuesday evening of last week. Brother Wolff came to Asheboro from Rural Hall about ten years ago and while he retained his membership in the Disciples Church near Rural Hall, yet he was a regular worshipper with us and most of the time for the past two years he has taught the men's Bible class. He was a student of the Bible and loved to teach and the class greatly appreciated his work. The funeral was held from our church on Wednesday afternoon and was attended by a large number of people.

Yesterday was another good day with us, there being 265 in Sunday school and a goodly number of people were in the morning church service.

At the evening hour the choir under the direction of the leader, Mrs. H. W. Walker, rendered a program of beautiful music. The service consisted of anthems, duets and quartets, a violin solo and a piano solo. The service was held at seven o'clock so that people of other churches could attend. Several of them came and expressed themselves as being delighted with the service.

Our Children's Day service will be held the fifth Sunday evening in this month.

While playing on the school grounds the last day of school, Howard Brown, a member of our church, fell and broke his leg. He is improving nicely. Hal Hammer Walker. broke his wrist the same day but he is doing well also. Mrs. C. F. Smith who made considerable improvement for several weeks is not so well again. Miss Mary Whitely remains about the same.

One of our members, Mrs. Henry Rich, has recently been bereaved in the death of her mother, Mrs. T. L. Williams. The sympathy of the church is extended to her.

The pastor has been gathering up church letters recently and hopes to have a number ready by next Sunday morning.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Kannapolis.—The third anniversary of our church here was observed Sunday, and was a red letter day for us. The day was ideal and our church was filled to the fullest capacity. Many stood on the outside, not being able to get in.

The S. S. attendance was 138, which makes a new record for us.

The program was in charge of Mr. M. W. Henderson, and on the program besides our pastor was Rev. Robert Short of Roberta, Mr. N. J. Miles of Shelby, Mr. D. A. McLaurin of Concord, Rev. C. H. Hill of Friendship, and Mrs. E. J. Sharpe, general secretary of the Kannapolis Y. M. C. A.

We were also delighted to have the Kannapolis quartet, the Lexington quartet, the Tilley quartet, which rendered special music, and Mr. N. J. Miles who rendered two solos. Mr. Miles was with us in the first meeting here when Rev. G. H. Hendry organized our church, and directed the singing, and it was a pleasure to have him again.

A message from Rev. E. G. Cowan, a former pastor, was read to the congregation, expressing regret that he could not be with us and congratulating us on our success. We gratefully appreciate this encouragement from him.

At the noon hour a picnic dinner was served on the parsonage grounds and the long table was loaded with good things to eat. The crowd did full justice to the eats and yet there was plenty to spare.

We ask all readers of the Herald to pray for us here. The field is white to harvest but the laborers are few.

Two more members, both adults, have been received into the church since our last report which makes a total of 16 received this year.

Siler City.—We had a record-breaking attendance at Sunday school the third Sunday there being 134 present. We hope to reach the two hundred mark in a few more weeks.

Dr. Williams filled both appointments the third Sunday. At the eleven o'clock hour his text was taken from the 16th chapter of John. Subject, "The Work of the Holy Spirit." As usual we expected a good sermon and I'm sure that no one went away disappointed. We were glad to have Mrs. Williams, Miss Mabel Williams, and J. D. and wife in our congregation, also Miss Bettie Smith of Liberty, who has been visiting relatives and friends in our town the past two weeks.

The attendance increases at each mid-week prayer service. In the absence of our pastor, who has been sick, Messrs. L. L. Wrenn and T. L. Smith have had charge of these services for the past three weeks. You who do not come out to the meetings do not know what good messages you are missing.

The C. E. society is moving along nicely. They are putting out some good programs lately.

The committee are busy getting up a Children's Day program. This will be rendered the fifth Sunday night. They are striving to make this the best ever.

Our auxiliary will meet at the church next Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. T. L. Smith has charge of the program and we expect an interesting meeting.

Mrs. L. L. Woody who underwent an operation for appendicitis two weeks ago at St. Leo's hospital, was able ti return to her home Saturday. We are indeed glad for her to be back with us again. We miss her so much in all our church activities.

First Church, Thomasville.—Our Sunday school is gaining in attendance and interest. Mr. Connell, superintendent, has instituted a new plan whereby to gain a better attendance. A banner will be awarded to the class having the highest percentage attendance at classes and also at the closing exercises each Sunday.

The union meeting of all the M. P. churches of our city was a great success. These services were held in order to prepare for the "Day of Pentecost" which was observed June 8 There was a good attendance at all the services .

The Junior Christian Endeavor society, under the leadership of Miss Lucille Carmichael, went on a picnic a few miles from the city. The members of the class enjoyed a delicious picnic- supper after their long hike. On Thursday the Intermediates, under the leadership of Mrs. J. W. Baity, will hold a picnic. All members of the class are invited to attend.

We are more than glad to see the improvement in attendance at prayer meeting. When Mr. Madison, our pastor, came to us in May, only a small number attended the prayer services. Every prayer meeting night since then the number has increased until now we have a fine attendance.

On Mother's Day, the mothers of our church were favored with a special sermon and a chain of flowers. We did not forget our fathers and last Sunday morning they sat in a body and listened to the fine sermon of our pastor, Mr. Madison.

We have been trying for some time to get a Christian Endeavor City union, started in our city. Next Sunday evening all the C. E. societies of this city are invited to attend the union meeting to be held at the Presbyterian church. If we can get this union started, I hope that more interest will be taken in Christian Endeavor work.

A Children's Day service will be held in our church on the fifth Sunday in this month. Mrs. Lindsey Loftin, Mrs. W. J. Loftin, Mrs. S. R. Westmoreland, together with Mr. Madison, have charge of the program.

Shiloh.—Rev. R. S. Troxler brought us an inspiring sermon today from the text, "Behold the Lamb of God," Jno. 1-36. He said in part: "It is fine to meet good men. We are either helped or hindered by every one we meet. We are influenced by every thing that touches our lives, whether it be people, books, or work.

"Some things that influence us are bad; but for every poison there is an antidote, for every temptation there is a way of escape. There is a remedy in reach of every man and he is responsible if he does not use it. It is possible to get over the bad by the help of Jesus.

"It is fine when we come in contact with good folks, they leave us something that makes life worthwhile. But there is one who can touch our lives of power—Jesus. When John cried, 'Behold the Lamb of God,' Andrew followed and let Christ fill his life. Andrew then found his brother Peter, an ignorant fisherman about whom little had been said. When Jesus filled Peter's life, he became a man of power, unafraid to preach the Gospel in the face of persecution. Yea, the disciples were mostly unlearned and ignorant men before being with Jesus, but became a world power afterward.

"Your business and mine is to point people to the Lamb of God. There is nothing so great as to introduce people to Jesus after we've met him ourselves. He helps every life that meets him. May the church, may every organization and every S. S. teacher cry out, 'Behold the Lamb of God.'"

We were glad to have several visitors today. You are always welcome at Shiloh.

The next quarterly conference for Shiloh circuit will be held at Greers Chapel on Sat. before the fourth Sunday in July. All day conference—preaching at 11 a. m. and conference after dinner.

We are looking forward to Children's Day service in the near future.

All departments of our work are moving along very nicely.

Don't forget to pray for our revival which begins the third Sunday in August as usual. Pray for an indwelling of God's Holy Spirit. When the Holy Spirit fills the church, people come and souls are saved.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF.

Gideon Grove, Flat Rock Charge.—We are yet in our Sunday school and church work, though we are frank to admit we could do more for the Master. We had our Children's service last Sunday night; we had a large congregation and they rendered their part well. We had some very small children to take part in the recitations and in songs. We want to thank the good ladies for their work which made it possible for us to have the program. The audience responded by contributing a good collection for foreign missions. Ous special meeting is the first Sunday in July: Pray for us and come and join in with us and put forth best efforts to have a good meeting, for the fields are white unto the harvest and the laborers are few, and let us thank the Lord for his wonderful works for the children of men.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—Our Sunday school is doing splendidly this summer. The seed sown last summer by our former pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, has put forth much fruit.

Our pastor, Rev G. B. Ferree, delivered a forceful sermon which was interesting from beginning to end.

Brother Ferree has won the friendship of both the old and the young. We are indeed glad to have him visit in our homes. We feel when he leaves that we really have been benefited by his coming.

Ballot was taken yesterday for delegate to annual conference.

Best wishes to Herald and its many readers,

Mebane.—We are planning for our revival which begins Wednesday night, June 18th. Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Fountain Place, Burlington, will be the pulpit help. Our Children's Day service was held Sunday night. A large crowd was present and the exercise was indeed good. Much credit is due Miss Alta Allen, Mrs. Cliff Cheek, and Miss Edna Nichalson for their efficient training.

We are always glad for the help of our young people in our church work. The Ladies' Aid is doing good work as usual. The Woman's Auxiliary is active. A contest put on by the president of the auxiliary to secure Octagon coupons was very successful. The circle that won the prize turned in 1,000. The coupons had been sent in from here and we thought only a few would be gotten in the contest, but 3,000 was collected, so we pass this method on to those who read. It proves to us that in the united effort we accomplish much. If each auxiliary will do likewise the required amount will soon be available.

Presidents of the Woman's Auxiliary will please make a special effort to get all the Octagon coupons in your church and send immediately to Dr. Dixon at the Children's Home. I would suggest that you put on a contest, see which circle can bring in the most coupons. If you do not have an auxiliary in your church, suggest to the superintendent of S. S. to put on a contset in Sunay school.

Please do this at once so they can have the use of the refrigerating plant during the hot weather.

MRS. H. C. NICHOLSON,,
Secretary of Children's Home.

Roberta.—Children's Day was observed at our church Sunday, June 8. The children had charge of the 11 o'colck service. At the evening service a pageant, entitled "Onward and Upward" was given, and was enjoyed by all present.

We were sorry to learn that Pastor Short was sick a few days last week, but were glad to have him with us Sunday. He brought us a fine message.

Mrs. E. J. Linker is very sick in the Presbyterian hospital, Charlotte, we hope if it be the will of the Lord, that she may be able to return to her home soon.

Attendance for Sunday 204, offering $10.30. Some were absent on account of death in the family.

Death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Sherrill Saturday night and took Mr. Sherrill. He will be laid to rest in Fairview cemetery following funeral services, which will be held in the church today (Monday) at 11 o'clock by Rev. Robert Short.

Fountain Place Church, Burlington.—Our church has sustained a great loss in the death of Mrs. J. W. Sharpe. Seldom do we fully realize and appreciate the blessings that are ours until they are gone, and it was just such a case when we lost Mrs. Sharpe. It hardly seems possible that one person could be missed in so many places: as superintendent of the Intermediate Christian Endeavor, as a Sunday school teacher, as an active member in the Ladies' Auxiliary, as a regular attendant at all church services, and as one interested in any church movement. Mrs. Sharpe went about her work quietly, but she was always present and faithful in her duties. Our sincerest sympathy goes out to her husband who was her constant helper in all her church activities.

We also sympathize deeply with Mrs. Egbert Greeson and Mr. Clifton Truitt because of the death of their mother, Mrs. Truitt.

In spite of the downpour of rain last Monday night our Ladies' Auxiliary held its monthly meeting at the regular time. It is the plan of this band to do some definite work each week to bring in money for the needs of our church and missions. One of the interesting things that they sponsored was an address June 1 by our pastor, Mr. Bethea, in which he gave an account of a few of his experiences in the Holy Land. This service was interesting, educational, and a good sum was realied as a result of it. Another plan is for each member of the Auxiliary to bring something to sell to each meeting. This may be fruit, eggs, handwork, or anything that ladies need in their home. This week a candy and cake sale is being planned and next week an ice cream supper is to be held Saturday night on the parsonage lawn.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor is again holding its prayer meetings, but no outside work is being attempted at present. It is now in the hands of Mrs. Aubrey Amick, assisted by Mrs. Hubert Terrell. Last Sunday evening an outdoor meeting was held and although the number wasn't large, the meeting was helpful.

Even though our special meeting closed several weeks ago we still feel the effects of its help in our personal lives.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—We were very glad to see the picture of our beloved editor on the front page of May 22nd Herald. At the end of the week he always has our paper ready. That we appreciate ever so much. Hope he will continue years yet.

Our Sunday school is moving on about the same.

Rev. C. I. Smith filled his appointment Sunday night, he brings to us sermons that will be a success to us if we'll only let them.

We do not want Rev. Lawrence Little to feel disappointed, it looked like it was going to be bad weather, why more people weren't there. He has a hearty welcome to come again.

Ous C. E. will meet Sunday at 2:30 p. m. if nothing prevents.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hawkins were glad to have Mr. Smith in their home the second Sunday.

Miss Gaynelle Greene, a graduate from Buies' Creek, has gone to summer school.

Mr. Roy Collum broke his arm cranking a truck.

We are missing Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Pair in our church. But we are glad to report they are much better from their illness. May God bless them through their troubles.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—Bro. Joyner preached one of his fine sermons the second Sunday night; he also preached last night. We were very much pleased with his preaching when he came on this charge, but we think he gets better each time we hear him.

The Ladies' Auxiliary Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. Earl Stallings June 5 at 3 p. m. Mrs. M .L. Stallings, the president, had charge of the devotionals. Mrs. Joyner and Mrs. M. L. Stallings made a very interesting talk on the Scripture reading. We then had the roll call and the reading of the minutes. There were 11 members present and eight visitors. We were indeed glad to have so many present. One of our dear members that hasn't been able to be with us for some time was present, Mrs. S. A. Noles, and we were so glad that she could be with us, and we pray that she can be with us in many more meetings. After the business and reports were attended to, Mrs. Carl Stallings and Mrs. Joyner, acting as joint hostesses, invited us into the dining room where they served sandwiches, iced tea, cake and ice cream.

Mrs. Carl Stallings' and Mrs. Joyner's birthdays were in this month; they received many beautiful gifts. We adjourned with a closing prayer. Our next meeting will be a picnic near the home of Mrs. John Garmon. We invite everybody to be present.

Gibsonville Church.—Next Sunday morning at the regular preaching hour, a Children's Day program will be given. A splendid program is being prepared by the Junior, Intermediate and Primary department under the direction of Mrs. F. R. Owen and Mrs. K. J. Williams. Everybody is invited to attend this service.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavorers are making a special effort to get the Methodist Protestant Herald into every Methodist Protestan home. On last Friday evening I took a group of them out to canvass for the paper. We were handicapped because of the rain. We only got to work between showers and did not get into all the homes. We hope to visit again next week and get more subscriptions.

We have just promoted our largest intermediates to the Senior C. E. D. and reorganized the intermediates. They are a real live bunch of boys and girls. Hal Troutman has been elected president, Ellen Styers, recording secretary, Douglas Yow, cor. secretary, and Melvin Randolph, treasurer. Douglas Yow will be the leader for the C. E. prayer meeting next Sunday evening.

There will be a stewards' meeing on Wednesday of this week.

The Woman's Missionary society will meet in the hut on Wednesday of this week at 7 p. m. These meetings will adjourn in ttime for those who attend to go to the Baptist church for preaching at 8 o'clock.

The many friends of Buck Alred will regret to learn that he is seriously ill at his home on Joyner street.

Mrs. E. G. Hammer has returned to her home on Burlington street after being a surgical patient in the hospital at High Point. Her condition is improving and we hope to have her back at church again soon.

Miss Ella Mae Sears has returned home for the summer vacation. Miss Sears has been attending school at Great Falls, S. C.

St. Paul's Greensboro.—Brother Ashburn has been holding a revival meeting for the past two weeks; it closed last night. Dr. J. D. Williams, of Liberty, came on Tuesday night of the first week to do the preaching, but he was not well and had to go home on Friday. We all enjoyed his preaching and were sorry he could not stay longer. Prof. Hamilton was our choir leader; the singing was good and he had some special music most every night; there were about 35 converts and 14 joined the church. Attendance was good all through the meeting and closed last night with a full house.

We are glad to report that Mrs. John Craven is improved enough to be brought home Friday after a serious operation at the Clinic Hospital.

Miss Kate Craddock, one of our young members, was carried to the hospital Friday for an operation.

Mrs. N. Brittain has been away for the past ten days visiting Mr. Brittain's father and mother at Weaverville and her father and mother at Hickory.

Our Sunday school attendance is real good. The children start practice next week for Children's Day program.

We are glad to have Miss Lenora Lineberry and Miss Lillian Cook with us in church service and Sunday school. They have been away for the past year in school.

The Ladies 'Aid will meet Saturday night, June 21, with Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Williams.

Thomasville.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Church held its regular monthly meeting last Monday evening. The meeting was called to order by playing very softly "I Think When I Read the Sweet Story." The society sang "Jesus Loves Me," followed by prayer by Mr. Connell. The president, Mrs. A. H. Ragan, had charge of the devotional. Theme: "And Jesus called a little child unto him and set him in the midst." "The Path of Little Children," by Edgar Guest, was read very impressively by Mrs. Ragan. We were then favored by a duet, "Have Thine Own Way," by Mrs. Lindsay Loftin and Miss Juanita Hill. Roll called with payment of dues. Blessing boxes, pledge cards and envelopes distributed. New pledges were made for another year. The treasurer reported $157.32 in the treasury. Committees were appointed for another year, namely: Program, Membership, Budget, Parsonage, Social, Calling, and Flower.

Mrs. W. J. Loflin, program leader, described the Brown children of India. The Yellow children, by Miss Lucille Carmichael; the American by Mrs. Baity. Solo, "Our Missionary Magazine," was rendered by Mr. Connell. You could hardly escape subscribing after hearing him sing.

A motiton was made that the quilt made by the society some time ago be given to our new pastor, Rev. T. Glenn Madison. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

MRS. S. R. WESTMORELAND,
Corresponding Sec'y.

Pilot Church.—Our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, preached the first Sunday at 11 o'clock an excellent sermon. He also delivered a splendid sermon at the regular evening service the third Sunday. There was a number of visitors from other churches present. We welcome them in our services and hope they will come again.

The second Sunday in May being Mother's Day, a special program was arranged which was very good and enjoyed by all present.

The Sunday school is doing well under the splendid leadership of our superintendent, Mr. J. L. Whitaker.

We are missing Mr. J. F. Whitaker at our services very much as he is one of our older members. He was once our superintendent, serving about 40 years. I am glad to report he is back home from the hospital and still improving.

Friendship, Mount Hermon Charge.—At the regular service Sunday afternoon our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, delivered a very helpful and inspiring sermon, using as his theme "The Crosses of the Mothers." The crosses of the home, of education, and religion are borne by the mothers of us all, Mr. Carroll stated. It is to the mothers that we owe so much in these particular phases of life.

The congregation was not as large as usual Sunday and we hope that there will be no summer slump in our church attendance. Let us be loyal to our own church and attend every service we possibly can.

Next Sunday we will have Sunday school at 2 o'clock instead of 11 o'clock.

At the 3 o'clock hour Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis, of thee Methodist Protestant church of Graham will be with us and lecture on missionary work in India. We are very glad to announce this service and we trust that a large congregation will be present to hear Rev. and Mrs. Minnis' talk on this very important phase of our missionary program.

We are very proud to congratulate Mr. Kenneth G. Holt, of our church, on his recent graduation from High Point College. Kenneth is a young man of high ideals and Christian character and we wish him every success in his chosen profession, the ministry.

Our C. E. Society is constantly growing in membership and interest. Much good is being done in this work.

The Missionary Society of our church met with Mrs. G. M. Isley Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with Mrs. D. I. Offman, the president, presiding. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. J. M. Murray unless other announcement is made.

We want all of our folks who posibly can do so to plan to attend the Young People's Summer Conference at High Point College. If you cannot go, you can register anway. Registration is only 50 cents, and this small fee will help others to benefit by this week of training.

We want to extend our best wishes to all the churches of the Conference and to the readers of the Methodist Protestant Herald.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Children's Day service was given at our church Sunday morning. The pageant, "Onward and Upward," was very impressive. Each child did well. Much credit is due Mrs. M. P. Efland, Miss Bert Crutchfield and Miss Margaret Efland for the training of the children.

Our pastor brought us another of his inspiring messages Sunday night.

Our revival begins the third Sunday in July. We are expecting Rev. Fred Paschall to assist in this meeting.

Our Sunday school attendance is good now and the interest taken in the work by the young people is encouraging.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Moriah.—Our Sunday school is growing by leaps and bounds; had 139 present Sunday, June 8, and 108 yesterday, with splendid attendance at church services.

Our pastor brought us a very forceful and timely message yesterday, using the one word "Home" as his subject. He said in part:

The greatest need of the world today is more Christian mothers. The ideal home is where both father and mother live in love and peace with God and man, and where the children are taught the love of God and also taught to love and serve Him. Fathers, mothers, train your children and teach them how God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him might not perish but have everlasting life in a home prepared for those who love and serve Him.

The home is the auxiliary to the church and Sunday school for leading young people to a fairer and more beautiful and loving home.

Next Sunday a splendid Children's Day program will be given at the 11 o'clock service.

We have reached our goal in Herald subscriptions, and hope to "keep on keeping on" until every member of our congregation is reading the Herald.

The college fund hasn't all been paid in yet, but hope to report that paid in full real soon.

Don't forget next Sunday the collection goes to the Children's Home.

MRS. J. S. WOOD, Reporter.

Lexington, State Street.—Our pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, has about regained his normal strength after his recent illness. Little Louis Hendry was able to be out again Sunday also for the first time in two weeks.

The services were all good Sunday and all well attended, although we feel like there is much to be attained in the attendance record and are striving to bring in more.

The C. E. Society meets regularly each Sunday evening an hour before the preaching service. The young people are interested and enthusiastic and are doing good work.

The mid-week prayer service which is held on Wednesday evenings will be conducted this week by the Women's Bible class. The study book on Pentecost which is being taught by Mrs. C. L. Koontz at the Wednesday evening meetings is a very profitable part of the program and is being much enjoyed.

The Misionary Society will meet at the parsonage Friday afternoon. Mrs. H. C. Rodgers, president, will preside.

Through the efforts of the Men's Bible class the services of a splendid church orchestra have been secured for each Sunday morning for the Sunday school hour. This is a great help in many ways and we are grateful to our friends who make the music and also to the men who were fortunate enough to secure them.

Miss Lila Aron is attending the State Normal training school for teachers at Boone this summer.

Mr. Homer Evans is traveling for a publishing house, selling magazines.

Among the students who graduated with honors from Lexington High School this spring were three of our girls, Misses Helen Harkey, Edith Hoffman, and Lila Belle McCrary.

Laurel Hill.—The Sunday school is getting along fine. But we hope to improve it each Sunday.

Our pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, preached another very impressive sermon Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Sain, Sunday.

The revival meeting will be held the second Sunday in August.

We were very glad to have Mr. Tom Blanton to visit us and worship wtih us Sunday.

The following have recently subscribed to the Methodist Protestant Herald: Mr. A. A. Sain, Mr. Cape Blanton, Mr. Srnest Brackett. The number of subscriptions for Laurel Hill to get is 15. Lois Willis is appointed agent. Almost half of the number has been raised. Every effort is being made to go beyond the goal.

Misses Lois and Vangie Willis, two of our Sunday school teachers, left Tuesday for Western Carolina Teachers College, where they will finish their college work this summer.

Fairfield, Lincolnton.—The Annual Home-Coming service was held Sunday, June 8. A large number from far and near gathered to pay respect to their deceased ones. Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, preached at 11 a. m. After an inspiring sermon he made some very appropriate remarks about "The Great Home-Coming."

Dinner was served on the ground and was enjoyed by a great number. In the afternoon the program consisted of singing and short talks by the people.

Kistler's Church, Cleveland Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, filled an extra appointment at this place the third Sunday afternoon. The Holy Communion service was held at the close of the sermon. I am sure all that were present enjoyed this good sermon.

On the first Sunday in June memorial services were held at this church with a very large attendance. Lots of beautiful flowers were placed on the graves of loved ones.

On the fifth Sunday in June a rally of the churches on Cleveland charge will be held at Oak Grove church. We are expecting a large attendance.

Our Sunday school is doing a good work. The number is small, but all seem to be interested.

We realize our leader is gone, but we are doing the best we can, and by God's help we will strive to carry our church work along.

With best wishes to the Herald.

Albemarle.—Our revival services started last Sunday morning with Pastor Anderson doing the preaching. He brought us two wonderful sermons Sunday which resulted in two conversions Sunday night. Several pastors of the town have agreed to conduct the services one night each, this week. Mr. Anderson will conduct the balance of the meeting, and as he has had many years of experience in evangelistic work we are sure his messages will be very inspiring.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Moton spent Sunday in High Point. Mr. Moton's mother returned with them for a few days' visit.

Mrs. Ira Smart has been very low with an attack of acute indigestion. However, she is some better at this time.

The small son of Mr. J. D. Gantt was stricken Sunday wtih something like colitis and has been in a serious condition, but is now improving.

Our Primary Department now has a splendid organization with Mrs. C. S. Moton as superintendent. Although they have to hold their classes in the basement room they have arranged it very nicely by using folding screens covered with cretonne in juvenile design, to separate the classes. The windows will be curtained with the same material very soon, which will add further to the personality of the room.

The Cam Snotherly circle held their monthly meeting June 3 in the home of Mrs. J. A. Furr. The regular routine of business was followed, as there was no special business for discussion at this time. It was decided that we start working for our bazaar by each member making an article each month. This month will be baby month. Mrs. D. F. Harker, Mrs. B. C. Burleson and Mrs. C. S. Moton were appointed to keep flowers in the church for this month.

At the conclusion of the meeting the hostess served delicious home-made ice cream and pound cake as refreshments.

The Lucy Hatly Circle was entertained at their June meeting by Mrs. C. L. Hatley. The devotional period was led by Mrs. J. W. Hornbuckle with prayer by Mrs. M. Hatley. Sixteen members were present at this meeting.

The business was transacted in the usual interesting manner. No special activities were arranged for the coming month. As the Dollar Social was postponed, all members who have their dollar are asked to bring it into the next meeting.

Refreshments consisting of dainty sandwiches and iced tea were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—I am very glad to report some improvement in our Sunday School. The attendance last Sunday was 85, of this number 14 were visitors. Among the visitors we mention Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Hunter of Winston-Salem, Mrs. R. G. Holder of Charlotte, and Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Anderson and daughter of High Point.

The regular preaching service was conducted by our pastor Sunday morning at 11:00.

Sunday evening at 6:00 our C. E. Society met for its regular weekly meeting. Recently the meetings were changed from the second and fourth Sunday mornings to every Sunday evening at 6:30. The attendance at our meetings has not been so good. It seems that it's hard to get the members interested in the work, and also to get new members. If any of you readers have any suggestions we would be very glad to consider them. We are going to try to have several socials and parties during the summer months and see if this will create any more interest in our society. Misses Lola and Ruth Long are going to entertain the society at their home Friday night of this week. We hope all the C. E. members will be present.

The monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will meet at the home of Mrs. W. B. Speas on Tuesday night of this week.

The Junior Missionary Society will meet with Miss Juanita Hunter next Saturday afternoon at 3:00 for its regular monthly meeting.

Preparation is now being made for the "Children's Day Service," which will be held at this church on the fifth Sunday night of this month. The name of the cantata for this service is: "The Pathway of Service."

Funeral services were conducted from this church Monday afternoon at 2:00 for Sarah Alvaria Anderson, the daughter and youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Anderson. Her age was one year, two months and 18 days. In addition to her parents she is survived by five sisters and five brothers. The flower girls for the occasion were seven small girls dressed in white.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The Woman's Auxiliary has been doing some splendid work this year under the leadership of Mrs. L. P. Holt. The first outstanding undertaking was an Easter egg sale; 28 women and two men helped in this, realizing a profit of $14.75. A committee has been appointed to put on some project every month, for six months, to raise money. For June 21st Mrs. G. F. Holt and Miss Mabel Crabtree will sell ice cream on the ball ground and at Eureka. At 8 o'clock the Auxiliary from the First church will give a program at Eureka; admission, 15 cents and 25 cents.

Children's Day service will be the fifth Sunday at 11 o'clock.

We are very proud of our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll. In 1928 he graduated at High Point College with an A. B. degree. The past two years he has been at Duke University. This June he received his M. A. degree, and, we understand, he is planning to continue his pursuit for knowledge at this University. He left Sunday afternoon accompanied by Rev. Jabus W. Braxton, for Sabina, Ohio, where they will attend the Leadership Training School. From there they will go to Toronto to attend the convention of Religious Education, June 23-29.

The revival services will begin the third Sunday in July. Rev. D. I. Garner will be the pulpit help.

Since the Woman's Auxiliary has been soliciting subscriptions to the M. P. Herald the following have subscribed: Mrs. L. P. Holt, Mr. J. P. Loy, Mrs. Henry Lutterloh, Miss Flossie Thompson, Miss Dorothy Holt, Mrs. J. F. IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

IN MEMORIAM

Edna Earl Burris

Edna Earl Burris, member of the Beginners' Department of the Methodist Protestant Sunday school of Concord, passed away after an illness of one week. Her passing sent a wave of grief and sorrow throughout the entire Sunday school department, she being the first of our little lambs to be taken.

Little Edna, only three years old, attended Sunday school regularly. She was loved by everybody and was an unusually quiet little girl. She greeted every one with her smile.

While it is hard to understand her being taken away from us, we are confident that she has entered into the larger life. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved parents. Teachers:

MRS. R. D. WADDELL,
MRS. KATE SIMS,
MRS. G. F. MILLAWAY.

Mrs. Harriet Lindley Harris

She was happiest when actively engaged in Christian work. This characteristic was very marked to the last of her long life of 77 years. And what a beautiful life! How noble in ambition; how consecrated in purpose; how uncomplaining in suffering; how strong in faith; how bright in hope; how fruitful in old age. Mrs. Harris seemed to have an intense desire to do the whole of her bit for the kingdom and to do it well. Who can doubt that she accomplished this desire? Her life was a benediction to the Tabernacle community. The writer was inspired every time he visited in the home of Brother P. A. Harden, where Mrs. Harris made her home with her daughter.

A good woman has gone to her reward. May grace be multiplied to her two daughters, Mrs. Harden, and Mrs. Johnson, and the grandchildren who still remain.

H. L. ISLEY.

Ivester

On the twenty-third of May Bro. Eddy M. Ivester departed this life after reaching the ripe age of eighty-one years.

Bro. Ivester was ready to meet death. He was known by all as "Uncle Eddy." He was loved by all who knew him. He had a cheerful spirit which caused the young and old to admire his life.

It is often said of "Uncle Eddy" that he was one of the best men that has lived in this section of the country. There are a few things that we may mention of the different phases of his life:

1. As a citizen he was a loyal patriot; loyal to his county and to his fellowman and who wanted to see this country prosper in material and spiritual things.

2. As a Sunday school worker, he was faithful always filling his place and trying to help better the Sunday school and make it interesting to the young as well as to the old. He was ever ready to teach his class, always leading them to a better life.

3. As a church member, he held his membership at Kistler's church. "Uncle Eddy" was always faithful to his church, he was ever present with a warm handshake, to make all feel a hearty welcome. When the finances of the church were being met, he did his part gladly.

When the church needed to move forward he was anxious and willing to do his best to help its progress. When the affairs of men are sailing on easy seas no storm is near, we don's realize the worth of men like "Uncle Eddy," but when the boisterous storms appear and are raging, and satan appears in his power, then their worth is known. Kistler's church will miss this faithful old soldier, but we trust that some young man will model after his life, and follow his footsteps.

4. As a member of the quarterly conference of Cleveland Circuit he has been faithful. He has always been present to do his part in everything the conference undertook to do. He always enjoyed to meet the brethren. And express his love for the church and the kingdom of God. He served many years on the board to examine the young men for the ministry, this he did faithfully. He was the minister's friend, always loyal to his pastor.

5. As a man having a passion for lost souls. In helping men, women, boys and girls to see the plain plan of salvation. Bro. Ivester worked in his own church community and was instrumental in leading many to accept Christ as their Savior. He spent many weeks in the revivals on Cleveland Cirucuit and other churches nearby. He took a great delight in the uplift of humanity. Kistler's church, Cleveland Circuit, and the county has lost one of its most loyal men. May God bless the bereaved family and friends who mourn his going. This is a short sketch of what could be said of "Uncle Eddy." May Heaven's richest blessings rest on the Herald and its readers. CHARLES LEE GRANT.

Jones

Tabernacle church has lost another good woman in the passing of Mrs. Mary Ellen Jones. She was born December 15, 1850 and was released from her suffering May 30, 1930, making her sojourn in this world more than 79 years. For more than fifty years she was a member of Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church, and was faithful at all times. She had experimental religion. Only a few days before she died in the presence of the pastor she praised the Lord aloud for His saving power.

Seven children survive: W. A., J. F., and Robert Jones, Mrs. Eli Coble, Mrs. M. T. Garrett, Mrs. Fred Amick, and Mrs. Percey Coble. Her husband, Alfred Jones, preceded her to the grave some years ago.

Funeral was conducted by the writer at Tabernacle June 1, 1930, and the burial took place in the church cemetery.

In Memory of Mrs. W. P. Pickett

Mrs. Pickett was called from earth to her reward on November 5, 1929. Mrs. Pickett suffered with that dreaded disease, cancer, two years or more. In her affliction she was one of the most patient sufferers the writer ever saw. I was in her home many times during her illness and when I read and prayed with her some times by the time I had concluded the prayer she would break forth in a hymn of praise. She was interested in all the activities of her church. She was especially interested in her Sunday school and the young people of her church and community. She was a good wife, a loving mother, a kind and faithful friend and a Christian indeed. She is not dead; she is living in the land where there is no sickness or death. The funeral service was conducted from Shiloh M. P. church on November 6, 1929. Rev. G. F. Millaway was in charge, assisted by Rev. W. M. Pike and her pastor. Interment was made in the cemetery. She has gone from this earth, but her influence still remains with her community. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

In Memory of Our Mother

The light of my life has gone out, and in sadness I wander alone,
For the dearest and sweetest mother has gone to the great unknown.
But one thought comes to me in my sadness:
She is free from all sickness and pain;
And I trust when my journey is ended
I will meet my loved mother again.
Surrounded by friends I am lonesome,
In the midst of my joys I am blue,
With a smile on my face I've a heartache,
Longing, dear mother, for you.
You suffered many hours of pain to wait for ease, but all in vain,
Till God alone knew what was best:
He called you home for eternal rest.

Barrow

"To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die."

In the passing of Brother Henry S. Barrow the writer has lost one of his best friends. During my college days I supplied for one year on Oak Ridge Circuit, going from Elon college each Saturday and returning Sunday afternoon. His hospitable home just outside of Kernersville was my "stopping place," and he and his faithful companion were always giving words of encouragement. Brother Barrow was a successful farmer and accumulated a sufficent amount of property for old age. He was honest and true to all the duties of life. A loyal member of Pine Grove M. P. church, a large contributor, and a regular attendant. Tis life of 68 years was spent in trying to make the world better. May the blessings of God rest upon his companion and daughter.

The writer was called to Kernersville to assist the pastor, Rev. J. D. Cranford, in the funeral. H. L. ISLEY.

Cheek

Henry R. Cheek died May 26, 1930, aged 77 years and one day.

About 16 years ago Brother Cheek united with Chestnut Ridge church, where he remained a member until death.

He leaves a wife and the following children: one daughter, Mrs. Emma Sykes; three sons, David, Marshall and Lindo, besides several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

May God comfort all the bereaved ones.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Chestnut Ridge church, May 27th, after which the remains were placed in the church cemetery. B. M. WILLIAMS.

Our report is rather short this week, but we sincerely thank all those who have helped us.

Our Farm

Last night and today there have been showers, and it has meant much to us. Our crops are looking well, and these showers are very helpful.

Coupons

We still need the Octagon coupons, and we have some encouraging promises relative to collecting them and mailing to us. Thank you and God bless all our workers.

Yours in is service,

A. G. DIXON.

—Brother Ward of Calvary church has been called on to endure another great loss: his father died a few days ago. His death was unexpected. He had been treated in a Greensboro hospital and was thought to be on the way to recovery. He lived at Coleridge, N. C., and was buried there, Rev. C. W. Bates officiating in the funeral service.

—Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Bates are spending a few days in Weaverville this week. Brother A. C. Dixon has charge of the Wednesday evening service.

—Miss Ila Burrough's Sunday School class will entertain their friends in the Hut tomorrow night with some amusing plays, charging a small admission fee and imposing small fines if their guests do not come attired according to specifications.

—Brother J. W. Swain and family have been taking a few days of rest on the beach at Morehead City.

THE PASTORS' SUMMER CONFERENCE

Since the pastors' summer conference is to be held here at the Children's Home, or at least you are to eat here, we are anxious to have all our pastors come at the beginning and stay to the finish.

We shall kill the fatted calf, and perhaps several fatted chickens. We hope to have a good time together. So be sure to come.

Picnic Dinner

At Friday noon, June 26, there is to be a picnic dinner on the grounds here at the Home. The good ladies from one end of the conference to the other are coming with well-filled baskets. Come and be happy with us that day.

Faithfully,

A. G. DIXON.

God's Bow In the Cloud

A storm arose, a tempest raged,
Contrary winds fierce battle waged:
The souls of men were filled with fear,
Escape they saw not there or here.
In course of time the storm passed by,
And beauteous bow appeared in sky:
'Twas God's handwriting telling men
To fear that storm not once again.

Through all the storms of life that beat
Upon our heads in journey fleet
We may be sure these storms will end,
And God will say, Fear not again!
What joy it is for us to know
Each cloud will have its own rainbow:
And if in storm God frowns awhile,
In bow we'll see His loving smile.

Turn About Fair Play

At this season of the year we frequently read of congregations in our city and town churches being greatly reduced in size by the exodus of members to the country. This is not very surprising when we remember how many of these people once lived in the country. They do a natural and proper thing in going out to renew association with relatives and friends. We are not saying they are always justified in taking Sunday for this purpose, but they are but performing a duty when they cultivate and continue life-long friendships. But the thing we started out to say is this: there are two ways of doing the thing. Let country people return the compliment by attending sometimes the churches of their friends in the cities and towns. This would be helpful and encouraging to the city and town churches and would also be helpful to the visitors, especially at such times as they have no services of their own. In this matter turn about is fair play.

An Exercise In Worship

Go out at night and behold the heavens. See the multitude of stars. Think of their magnitude, immensely greater than the earth. Consider the vast inter-stellar spaces. Reflect on the swiftness of the light. Study the Milky Way. Remember that every star in the heavens is moving at a tremendous speed. Think of the physical power necessary to propel the vast machinery of the universe. Think of the orderliness of the movements of the heavenly bodies. Then think of the Mind great enough to produce and maintain through centuries and ages all this complicated mechanism. Think of the purpose of it all.

Then think of yourself. Of your littleness, your weakness, your ignorance. Of the brief span of your life. Of the eternity that will soon take up your being. Think of yourself in the life beyond.

Your sight of the great world, your thought of the mighty Creator, your true measurement of yourself, will surely make of you a worshiper. And well will it be for you to carry back into your daily living the impressions received in this outdoor worship.

When Did Jesus First Ascend?

We believe the common thought about the time of Jesus' first ascension to the Father after the resurrection is that it occurred forty days later. But would not the natural interpretation of John 20:17 lead to the view that He first ascended on the day of the resurrection? He said to Mary Magdalene, Touch me not, for I have not yet ascended to My Father; but go tell My brethren that I ascend to My Father and their Father, to My God and their God. He does not say, I will ascend: He uses the present tense as though the ascension were to be at once. And is it not reasonable to suppose that He would at once return to the Father, tarrying on earth only long enough to comfort the most distressed friends? We may take the ascension to the Father declared to Mary as Jesus' apology and explanation to the body of His disciples for not returning to them at once. He sends them word that He cannot see them now but will see them a little later. He had promised to go before them into Galillee and see them there, but He does better than He promised: He returns to earth the same day and makes appearance to several persons among the most intensely interested. He modified His program of appearances in response to personal demands. He did all that He promised and more than He promised. But it seems fitting that He should give the Father precedence in His post-resurrection attentions. His ascension on the day of His resurrection seems logically required.

A Hungry Soul

He was a railroad conductor. There was a passenger on board whom he took to be a Christian minister. He showed him every courtesy and sought conversation with him. The passenger did not realize how serious were the man's intentions or he might have helped him more. The conductor in his heart-hunger was really seeking the light of salvation and wanted to hear the way described, but he did not say so and the minister did not suspect. But when the passenger started to leave the train the conductor shook hands with him very warmly and said, "Pray for me." He was hungering after God. There are many such who pass us daily. O that we might realize their need and do our best to help.

NINETEEN HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF PENTECOST

June Feast, June 8, 1930

(From Sermon by Bishop Eward Rondthaler, D.D.)

Text—John 14:16: "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another comforter, that he may abide with you forever."

Just 171 years ago, a new tract of land, called "Black Walnut Bottoms" was measured out; a peculiar fact, too, that Bethania was founded then. And so it came about, that, Brother Godfrey Grabbs and his wife, became the first to settle here.

There were the Spainhours, the Shouses, and the Hausers names, and others I could mention.

But, first was Brother and Sister Godfrey Grabbs; who came on the 18th of July. The French Indian war was on then; one day a man arrived with two arrows sticking in his back, where the Indians had shot him. It was a time of famine; a time of typhus fever, which appeared about this time, many died of it, the names of all I do not recall. Sister Grabbs, brave woman that she was, thought of the twenty-third Psalm, as she and her husband went to bed on that first night, and God protected them, and kept them safe from all harm and danger.

Today, these fifty years ago, I was here. (Oh, how I love it.) Bethania has been blessed, it is a marvel, that the village of 171 years, has not been destroyed; but it still lives on today as of old. The church is beautiful to look upon today; its interior has been changed, but everywhere it is in fine condition.

But what interests me most is the spiritual condition of the people who live here today, after all the changes that have come and gone. When I first came here, the people were poor, and in distressed conditions. The church was dimly lighted. In Brother Lineback's time I came here to preach, I noticed some dark shadows creeping up the stairway, I said to Brother Lineback, what are the shadows I seem to see there? He told me the young men crept up there when a new minister came to preach; they did not come other times, and felt ashamed to come now, so they slipped up in the dim light to hear me.

In later years a railway was built near, not in, Bethania; and many improvements otherwise made in the country, and village.

Sometime ago, when Sister Kapp was buried, I will never forget it, it seemed to me more like Heaven had come down, instead of death, here. When the young womanhood of the church marched down the aisle there, with the wreaths, it seemed the light of Heaven shone down.

Why has this church not gone down to ruin in all these 171 years? Because God has been its leader, and protector. The Holy Spirit is, and has been, protecting it. Every one of us is built three stories, one can not do without the other, the physical, the mental, and the spiritual, three in one. And so also, is God the father, God the son, and God the Holy Ghost, the three in one.

When I was a young student, I was alone one day in the building; the Holy Spirit laid its finger upon me, I was convicted of sin. When God comes He will convict the world of sin; also when he comes He will glorify me and all Christians.

The spirit shows many things to come; eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, the blessings which are to come.

CHINA'S APPALLING TRAGEDY CONTINUES

At last the extent and terror of China's famine tragedy are beginning to be realized. The personal experience and testimony of George Andrew, born in Kansu and now there as missionary and famine administrator, have convinced many who until recently have doubted. The failure of crops last year and no seed planted for the coming season, together with sub-zero weather in the Yangtse Valley and North China, have been ascribed by Mr. Andrew as causes for the widespread suffering.

"Stories of cannibalism are entirely true," Mr. Andrew declares. "I witnessed many instances of it. The authorities at first sought to stop the practice, but later abandoned efforts to prevent it. The practice of selling children was stopped long ago, because there were no buyers. Children are lucky if sold and provided with the means of life."

Grover Clark, who in December and January personally visited the famine district, is now in New York. As a result of his investigations and experiences among the starving, he reports that one-third of the 6,000,000 population of the Provinces of Shensi and Shansi perished of starvation during 1929 and that 2,000,000 more are doomed before June.

In response to abundant and convincing information, China Famine Relief, U. S. A., sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches and the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, has been pressing forward its appeals for contributions for China's starving. The National Christian Council of China reported early in the year that $2,000,000 Gold could be effectively used before the next harvest. This appeal has been widely presented in the United States.

Due to the seriously misleading impressions created by the report of the American Red Cross, many generous Americans who usually give freely in relief of suffering fellowmen have not responded to the Chinese appeals. More honor is therefore due to these who have done so in spite of the obstructive conditions.

The latest report from China Famine Relief, U. S. A., shows that since February 1 it has cabled to China $450,000, equivalent at present rates of exchange to about $1,300,000 Gold. This has been sent to the National Christian Council, with headquarters in Shanghai, whence it has been transmitted to responsible administrators for grain purchases and distribution in the famine areas.

A cablegram from Peiping on May 14 states that military trains are carrying relief grain to railheads nearest the famine areas and that distribution is going forward in twenty-two counties in Shensi. General Chu Ching-lan, just back from Shensi, presented such urgent appeals in Peiping and Tientsin that $60,000 Gold was contributed in three days. George Andrew was at that date in Kansu and John Earl Baker in Shensi, supervising relief administration. It is now clear that the chief obstacle to substantial famine relief is lack of money.

The urgent need will continue until the hoped-for regular harvests in August and September are gathered, which, however, at the best may be only 10 per cent of normal. Surely, with our knowledge now that the famine is real, that Chinese officials are helping, that bandits give no trouble to relief workers, and that administration is actually going forward—the American Red Cross report to the contrary notwithstanding—generous Americans should respond generously.

Contributions are cabled from New York and reach Shanghai and Peiping in two days, and shortly thereafter food starts toward the famine areas.

Checks may be sent to the Federal Council or, better, direct to China Famine Relief, 205 East 42d Street, New York.—Federal Council Bulletin.

POSSIBILITIES

Be your present work great or small the important thing is to do it well. Good work always confers a distinct benefit upon the worker. Greatness of spirit can make a little task great. Your visions of power and achievement are intimations of what you can be. They summon you to larger and more earnest effort. However well or much you have already done, you can do still better and more.

Immense possibilities are before you, and the field of splendid opportunity constantly widens as you persevere in honest purpose. Attempt the great, pursue the great, and ultimately you will achieve the great. Rise to your possibilities and know that through patient and persistent effort you can surely reach your rightful place in the world.

Put forever out of your mind all anxious and self-limiting thoughts. Bend your best efforts toward the big and essential things of life. Intelligent aspirations coupled with diligent work, will steadily advance you to high and honorable position. There are wonderful powers and possibilities within you waiting to be utilized.

Make definite choice today of the material you intend to use from this great inner storehouse. Draw generously since you can not possibly exhaust the supply. When you realize more fully the immense and inexhaustible mental resources at your command, you will not look to other men for assistance. Your own powers are sufficient to give you a distinguished place in the world.

Grenville Kleiser.

THE GOD OF ARTISTIC FORM

If God is the Creator of beauty, then it must follow that the laws of form, of color, of musical harmony, are all His own, as truly His as those laws which govern right and wrong, and as worthy of our careful study. For if they are His laws they must reveal something of His nature.

We become aware at once of the importance of balance and of symmetry. One force seems to be so placed over against another that we feel a sense of stability, of rest and security, and yet the possibility of power. Let us see if we can illustrate this. The human form is more interesting to us perhaps than any other.

How the power of motion is combined with that of gravitation to secure certainty of either rest or motion as we may desire! We are poised upon feet which with the aid of gravitation and of friction are planted firmly upon earth, and yet so constructed are we, with a body capable of successive fallings and recoveries, that we may progress from point to point.

Balance of all parts in symmetry, cohesion of parts, the reach upward, the foundation by which form contacts the force of earth—they are some of the characteristics both of our bodies and of common natural forms everywhere.

How marvelous it is that, with the vibrating, pulsing forces within our bodies and within forms of every kind, all is yet held together in complete unity! How remarkable that form in plant and animal should so repeat itself, that it should continue in all its essentials generation after generation and still be the same!

Through the world of nature there runs an unescapable rhythm which is vitally related to all our sense of beauty in form. The waves of the sea, the repeated curves in shell and flower and mountain are all in some fashion related to that rhythm which we feel within ourselves with every heart-beat.

Moreover, there appear to be mysterious and yet vital correspondences of beauty, parallels felt in things that appear at first widely dissimilar and yet are alike in some deep sense, and in these correspondences we discover beauty. These hidden and yet lovely likenesses are the stuff from which poetry is made, and their discovery often seems to the reader to be the unfolding of truth through inspiration, a heightened ability to perceive the world as God sees it. In these correspondences of form and curve and successive motions we somehow feel that we have come to understand something of His laws.

And these discoveries are endless. The world of nature is like a book, which tells us of Him but which we may never complete. We only know that the farther we turn its countless pages the more we know that His world is one of mathematical law interpreted in terms of music, and of complete symmetry.—Zion's Herald.

"WE KNOW NOT WHAT WE SHOULD PRAY FOR AS WE OUGHT"

Much that perplexes us in our Christian experience is but the answer to our prayers. We pray for patience and our Father sends those who tax us to the uttermost; for "tribulation worketh patience."

We pray for submission and God sends sufferings; for "we learn obedience by the things we suffer."

We pray, "Lord, increase our faith," and money takes wings; or the children are alarmingly ill; or a servant comes who is careless, extravagant, untidy or slow; or some hitherto unknown trial calls for an increase of faith along a line where we have not needed to exercise much faith before.

We pray for gentleness and there comes a perfect storm of temptation to harshness and irritability.

We pray for quietness and every nerve is strung to the utmost tension, so that looking to Him we may learn that when He giveth quietness, no one can make trouble.

The way to peace and victory is to accept every circumstance, every trial, as straight from the hand of a loving Father, and to live up in the heavenly places, above the clouds, in the very presence of the Throne, and to look down from the Glory upon our environment as lovingly and divinely appointed.—Selected.

GETTING IN ITS DEADLY WORK

Rationalism, or infidelity, masquerading under many disguises, is doing its deadly work on all our mission fields on all continents, and indeed, throughout what is called Christendom. Its most effective allies are the religious pacificists who profess evangelism, while always voting in support of Modernism.

Modernism is as surely an inspired religion as Christianity—with this indifference, that Modernism is undoubtedly inspired by the devil. Therefore the lusts of its father it will do. We have become familiar with its "methods" and "spirit." It has no compunction whatever in depriving evangelicals of their legitimate rights: it will steal their colleges and their churches, their missionary societies, their endowments of all sorts, and prostitute them to its own uses.—The Methodist, Philadelphia, Pa.

DR. PARKS CADMAN ON SIN

The most terrible sentences on sin are pronounced by scientists, and not by preachers or by priests. Many artists, dramatists, and novelists portray its fearful consequences as the pulpit has seldom done. If clergymen should talk as plainly as Dante, Shakespeare, Isben, George Eliot, or Huxley talked about sin their hearers probably would resent it.

The question is not what either laymen or clerics say, but what are the facts. So far as I can learn, sin's fruit is so deadly that no description of its perils passes beyond the limits of actual human experience. A fire bell ringing in the night may disturb some slumberers. Nevertheless, it must ring if we would not roast in our beds. Likewise, some incipiently insane people may have yielded to religious mania while listening to denunciations of sin. But those are few enough when compared with the millions whom such denunciations have aroused the newness of life and righteousness. This age is in no particular danger from the insanity you mention. It indulges in other and far more destructive forms induced by excess and turpitude.

View the entire matter in all its aspects and you will perhaps see that the only right you have in life is to choose to whom or to what you will surrender that right.—Selected.

GOD'S DIAL, THE JEW

When Frederick of Prussia asked some one to state in a word some evidence of the inspiration of the Bible, he replied, "The Jew." He is the marvel of history. Though scattered all over the world, he has never been assimilated by any nation. His face is like the face of the Jew when Jerusalem fell before the soldiers of Rome; his language now, his customs, his traditions are the same as then, even though less than a half million of the fifteen million of them now live in their ancient home.

He is virile; at the end of the sixteenth century there were less than a million of them, and even though they have been terribly persecuted, there are today fifteen millions of them. And though this is a small number compared with the other people of the world, yet the man who dominates current philosophy is a Jew—Bergsen; the outstanding scientist is a Jew—Einstein; the soldier who mastered mighty Russia was a Jew—Trotsky; and the greatest actress of all time, recently dead, was a Jewess—Sarah Bernhardt.

We think of the horrors of the Armenian massacres, but they did not compare with the programs of Russia, where the entire Jewish population of the Russian Western War Zone was evacuated at twelve hours' notice, a million and a half of them. So that the British minister said: "The massacre of the Jews in the Ukraine can find for thoroughness and extent, no parallel except in the massacre of the Armenians."

In spite of all this, they have been preserved, as God said they would be, and they are returning to Palestine in great numbers. Viscount Cecil has said: "I hope that Jerusalem will yet become the seat of the League of Nations." It is reported that for the first time since the Zealots fell in defense of the temple, a Jewish army numbering not less than a half million men and well equipped with munitions and machine guns, has been secretly organized in Russia. Rabbi Levi, of Tremont Temple, New York, says: "The temple will be rebuilt at Jerusalem, or possibly the Mosque of Omar which now stands upon that site, will simply be cleansed and rededicated to Jehovah: for according to the strictest Jewish law, any place of worship may be transformed into a Jewish synagogue or temple by removing all idols and rededicating it to the God of Israel. It is more possible that the very religious will insist upon tearing down this mosque and erecting a temple as much like Solomon's as is now possible."

But the most remarkable thing about this remarkable race now is the fact that so many of them are turning to the One whom they rejected. There is now one Hebrew Christian to every 156 Jews, while there is but one Gentile Christian to every 525 Gentiles. And three times as many Hebrew converts enter the ministry as do Gentile converts. With their background of the Old Testament they usually are preachers of great power, too.

These things are of especial interest to us at this time, for two reasons: they tell us that the dial of God's clock is showing that the time for the dawn is very near; and then for the other reason, that next week in Atlanta there will be a meeting of representative Hebrew Christians.—Selected.

MODERNISM

If Modernism is true, we have no Bible. From its first sublime statement, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," to its latest prophecy, "Behold I come quickly," it is a fake and a fable. Its history "is only old folklore"; its heroes the "creatures of Jewish imagination;" its laws, sacrifices, prophecies and commandments are only Hebraistic devices used for political purposes."

The New Testament is the history of a deluded enthusiast, written by a lot of self-deceived, partisan, uneducated followers, as an offset to the Roman dominance of political prowess.

If Modernism is true, then the greatest religion in the world, which has comforted millions, and which has been the inspiration of billions to a noble and better life, is only a cunningly devised fable. The story of missions, of Paul, of Peter, of Carey, of Judson, of Buckner, of Yates, and a thousand others, is only the story of a lot of deluded and blinded followers of an ideal whose lives displayed a world of wasted energy to no permanent purpose of good to mankind.

If Modernism is true, then our fathers were fools. We veritably thought that Fuller, Broadus, Boyce, Jeter, Hawthorne, Carroll, Penn, Eaton, Landrum, Hatcher, Willingham and Tichenor and a thousand others were the very salt of the earth and were actual heroes of the faith, and deserved all possible honor from us and from all who love and revere our Lord Jesus Christ. But if Modernism be true, these all deserve at the very most only pity for their blind ignorance.

If Modernism be true, let us recall our missionaries and cease to worry about the debts of our boards. Let us disband our churches or turn them into moving picture shows; let us turn our Christian colleges into athletic fields, or theatres for the amusement of mankind. Let us dissolve the marriage tie, for that is founded on the teachings of the Bible, and is, if Modernism be true, only a cruel and unnecessary bondage. And let us do away with our Christian Sabbath, which is only the result of a senseless and superstitious tradition.—Selected.

HYPOCRISY

Hypocrisy itself does great honor, or rather justice, to religion, and tacitly acknowledges it to be an ornament to human nature. The hypocrite would not be at so much pains to put on the appearance of virtue if he did not know it was the most proper and effectual means to gain the love and esteem of mankind.—Addison.

All Things Through Christ

Pastor's Summer Conference

June 24, Tuesday.—We have just returned from the morning session of the Pastors' Conference, which opened in a get-together program last night. Dr. S. K. Spahr opened the session today with a helpful devotional address. He was followed in well prepared and interest compelling addresses by Drs. Forlines, Lindley and Kennett. Each of these speakers will appear in four addresses. Dr. Forlines is discussing "The Pastor and Religious Education"; Dr. Lindley speaks on "Sociology and the Church" and Dr. Kennett on "Church History." These are daily addresses, running through Friday. In addition to these highly helpful addresses, Dr. Forlines was drafted by the meeting for a thirty-minute talk on "Divine Healing." He was perfectly at home with this subject, and enlightening to his auditors, as is his custom on whatever topic he speaks. However, he could not exhaust this matter in a short time, and the conference would no doubt be glad to hear him again on it.

Dr. Gideon Ireland Humphreys, President of High Point College, was introduced to the conference, and made some fitting and pleasing remarks. He is to be heard in the night programs of the conference in three addresses to be delivered in the college auditorium.

About thirty ministers and pastors were present today, with a few laymen in attendance. The numbers will no doubt grow as the conference advances. The day programs are being held at the Children's Home, and meals are served there also. Rev. George L. Curry, the president of the conference, presides, and gives fitting direction to all the meetings.

Midway

June 23, Sunday.—This Midway, on the Midway-Shady Grove work. We went out there to attend Sunday School and to worship in the eleven o'clock service, but not expecting to preach. We found a considerable number assembled for Sunday School—62, we believe—and it was our privilege to share with them in this lesson by leading the study in the "Women's Class." We found deep interest in this class, and it was a great pleasure to us to meet with them. The pastor insisted that we should preach in the 11 o'clock service. This we tried to do, and enjoyed the effort. The attention was most helpful, and the spirit of the service highly pleasing. Brother White, the pastor, has given most earnest and acceptable work to the charge, in connection with his studies at High Point College. Now that he is through his college work, he would like to give more and better service to these churches. But he is handicapped because of a salary that is not sufficient to provide him a living, and the charge is not able to pay more. We trust that a supplement to his salary may be provided in some way. There are signs of growth in the Midway church, and the future for them seems hopeful.

Our appointment on this date was at Level Cross, on Randleman charge. We were to have been there at 2:30 in the afternoon. A funeral of one of the members to be held at this hour at a nearby place wisely determined the pastor to cancel our appointment. We shall plan to be there at another time.

"Line Upon Line"

Have you appointed the registration agents at your churches, Brother Pastor, as requested by Brother Paschall, the President of the Conference Council of Religious Education? If this has not been attended to, please see that it is done with the minimum delay. Brother Paschall is depending upon these agents, and it is highly important that they be appointed and that they work diligently between now and the opening of the Training School, July 12. The registration fee is 25c for children and 50c for adults.

Subscriptions

The total new and renewals to date is 780. It would be interesting to know how much this increases the total subscription list. There are still seven charges with no credits and only seven charges listed in capitals. But the constant dropping of water wears away the highest stone. Success may be delayed, but it comes if we persist long enough. The HERALD must survive!

Budgets

Slightly more than four months remain between this and conference. Up to the first half of the conference year, only $895 had been raised on our A. C. B. and a little less than $5,000 on the G. C. B. This is explained by the fact that "Dollar a Member" was given priority during the first half of the year. We are now behind the budgets, and for the remaining months of the year every possible emphasis is to be put on this part of our financial program. Our annual conference is in dire need of money, and we must raise every possible dollar on the budget. The same is true of the general conference budget. We urge that pastors and church officials begin now to put these budgets to the front, and keep them there for these remaining four and one-half months. Don't despise small collections from week to week. The aggregate of these amounts will mean much in the end. Press the Children's Day offerings. Much can be realized from this source. The one important thing is that we do what we can, and not put this matter off until the last few weeks of the conference year, as is too often done. So much is to be done then that we can not hope to have the success that we would have if we keep the work going all along as the end approaches. The budgets now, brethren, the budgets!

Faithfulness

This is a very familiar word, but what it signifies may or may not be so familiar. Faithfulness in human character has always been at a premium. Solomon said that such men were scarce in his day. "Most men will proclaim every one his own goodness: but a faithful man who can find?" (Prov. 20:6). God's attitude toward faithfulness is shown in the fact that he rewards it with his richest blessings, as the following passages show: "The Lord preserveth the faithful"; "A faithful man shall abound with blessings"; "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." To saints in the church at Smyrna He promised a crown of life if they would remain faithful unto death. Paul told the Corinthian church that "it is required of a steward that a man be faithful." The highest compliment that the Apostle could pay Epaphras was, "a faithful minister of Christ." And after all, isn't that the highest compliment that can be paid to any minister? Surely faithfulness is a crowning virtue.

Not So Well

Mrs. G. L. Reynolds has been a patient at the Clinic Hospital, Greensboro, for five weeks. Brother Reynolds was called from the Summer Conference to her beside this morning. She has seemingly recovered from the operation for which she went to the hospital, but other troubles have developed that are retarding her recovery. She is being given every possible medical attention, and we trust that her reaction may be favorable and speedy. In the mean time, she and her loved ones will have the constant and earnest prayers of their many friends. Brother Reynolds is one of our beloved pastors and he and his family will not be forgotten in this time of their anxiety by the brethren of the conference. May the great Physician abundantly bless and heal.

ON TO HIGH POINT COLLEGE

July the 12th is not far in the future and this is the opening date of our annual Leadership Training School. We are planning a splendid program and you can not well afford to miss the school this year. Come to High Point for the school and this the largest, best school in the history of the work.

Have you registered for this school? We are urging you to do this NOW if you have not done so. See the registration agent in your church today and register for the school, or send your registration direct to Fred W. Paschall, 165 Hillside Street, Asheville, N. C., and your church will get credit for the registration. On to High Point College for the Leadership Training School.

THE AARONIC BENEDICTION

"The Lord bless thee, and keep thee; the Lord make His face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace." (Num. 6:24-26).

Rev. Joseph Parker says of this passage: "Here is a benediction that can go all the world over, and can give all the time without being impoverished. Every heart may utter it: it is the speech of God; every letter may conclude with it; every day may begin with it; every night be sanctified by it. Here is blessing—keeping—shining—the uplifting upon our poor life of all heaven's glad morning. It is the Lord Himself who brings this bar of music from heaven's infinite anthems"—Selected.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

High Point College is the best college in the South for Methodist Protestant students—a splendid college for any other faith.

High Point College is the best place to take vacation when the Leadership Training School is in session.

If you are anticipating going to High Point College for higher learning you should attend the Leadership Training School. Many of the students come back here for a vacation and you could get acquainted with them.

The environment is of the best type. The subjects taught in the Leadership Training School are standard. They are recognized by other denominations by their board of religious work.

If you cannot plan a real worship program, you should attend the Leadership Training School.

If it's new games for socials that you lack, you should attend the "L. T. S."

If you are planning to organize a Bible class or a missionary circle you should attend the "L. T. S."

If you are going to teach, play, or sing in a vacation Bible School this summer, you should attend the "L. T. S."

If you would like to meet the leaders from other M. P. churches you should attend the "L. T. S."

If you would like to know what the young people are doing in other churches, you should attend the Leadership Training School.

If you want to be a successful leader in your own church, you should attend the Leadership Training School.

If you just want to take a rest for about ten days and have an entire change in the daily routine of work, you should attend the Leadership Training School.

You should register now (if you have not already registered) and plan to attend the Leadership Training School at High Point College, July 12-19. ORPHA BURGESS.

CHARITY, LOVE

Corinthians 13

"God's love and man's love must be carefully distinguished. Man's love is made up of sentiment and emotion, passion, with some higher elements, but it never attains its highest character until it is permeated and sanctified by the love of God. In this thirteenth chapter, Paul is not speaking of man's love, but the love of God. This is the greatest thing in the world, yea, in heaven; yea, in all existence. We cannot arrive at the meaning of the first three verses from our own English word, love. It has too many meanings, and is used very differently by different persons . . . Paul does not attempt to define it. He analyzes it. Many would be saved from self-deception if they would stop to realize that the divine love here used is not mere human sentimentality. The present, day indifference to the doctrine of God's Word is one of the strongest evidences of the absence of the love of God." —Selected.

THE GLORY OF THE SABBATH

Nothing draws along with it such a glory as the Sabbath. Never has it unfolded without some witness and welcome, some song and salutation. It has been the coronation day of martyrs—the first day of saints. It has been, from the first day till now, the sublime day of the Church of God, and the outgoings of its morning and evening rejoice. Let us, then, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

OUR STORY PAGE

HIS OWN BROTHER

“He findeth first his own brother, Simon.” Harry Knowlton read the words wonderingly. At eighteen Harry was having the unique experience of reading the New Testament for the first time. There had been no open Bible in the Knowlton home. Harry had found himself in a new world when the lure of a Loyal Class had attracted him to Sunday School and church.

But the newness of the New Testament remained. He was always finding somethng that had a perplexing directness about it, a meaning easy to understand but hard to follow. Now here was Andrew finding Peter, and finding him first. There had been so much to Harry to learn about the Christian life, and he was just beginning to sense a longing to lead someone else into it. He had wondered about taking a Sunday School class of small boys, he had thought of his Scout troop as perhaps havng prospects on which he could work. But to be quite honest, he had never thought of Horace.

Horace was his twin, and between the two boys there had always been a closeness of understanding. Harry's religion was the first thing that had separated them, and it seemed to be a growing wall of partition between them. As Horace came into the room, Harry closed his Testament, and acting on sudden impulse spoke his mind.

“Horace,” he said, “did you ever think of being a Christian?”

Horace laughed good-naturedly.

“Did I ever think of being a deep sea diver or the United States Ambassador to Turkey?” he countered. “No, dear boy, I never did. Somebody has to stick to conventional lines, or where would the social standing of the Knowlton family be? Mother is bowled over this minute by your refusal to take Etta Kinson to the dream dance. Now what's the matter with Etta, you Christian martyr?”

Harry's laugh was as good-natured as Horace's own. He had not expected a serious answer.

“Etta's all right,” he answered, “but the dream dances are more of a nightmare than anything else. And you don't really think I'm a martyr. I'm probably a pretty poor sort of a Christian, or I could get your attention on a thing that makes such a tremendous difference to me.”

Perhaps it was a note of wistfulness in Harry's voice which brought his brother to seriousness for a moment. Horace's hand had dropped affectionately on Harry's shoulder as he said:

‘You couldn't be a poor anything, old scout, but for the life of me, I don't know what it's all about.”

With a quick intake of breath Harry realized that his chance had come. Horace was listening. But such speech does not come easily at eighteen.

“It's about living,” he began slowly. “There has never been anyone like Jesus. His teachings represent the highest there is.”

“Yes, I suppose they do,” agreed Horace. “But I can't see that that needs to lead you into all this Loyal Class stuff and a church connection.”

“The Loyal Class is just a help to understanding Jesus,” answered Harry promptly, “and the church is an organized group of His followers.”

“But do you think for a minute that your church folks are any better than any other folks, or that your Loyal Class is loyal to any better principles than any decent set of fellows?” Harry hesitated to answer. He did not want to boast, and he felt the futility of argument. Herace went on, “Give me a demonstration, old boy, I'm from Missouri.”

Harry Knowlton pondered that conversation. How could he demonstrate Christianity to his brother? They were both kindly lads, pleasant at home and industrious at school. Harry, scrutinizing their daily lives critically, could see little outward difference. He was faithful in church attendance, and Horace went to the dream dances. But in the common virtues or honesty and kindness they ranked about alike.

Harry had taken his Sunday School class in a mission school, ten-year-old ragamuffins who furnished him with endless interest. Finding his point of contact with them with a weekly puzzle. His family became interested in the amusing anecdotes he brought home of his boys. One quiet Sunday afternoon he inveigled Horace into going with him down to the mission.

That day Harry used some excellent illustrations showing that the follower of Jesus must be braver and truer and kinder than anybody else.

“Aw, you're stringin' us,” jeered a new youngster. “All any feller has to do is to be as square as he can. Nobody has to do more'n anybody else. And a lot of 'em does less, and gets away with it.”

“It's the folks who do less who aren't following, isn't it?” suggested the young teacher. Horace was interested in spite of himself. These street youngsters were putting up his own arguments.

It was the street youngsters who gave the Knowlton boys the background for the demonstration of Christianity for which they had been waiting. Some change in the city water system, and a reorganization of the fire department had left the fire protection temporarily weak. The call for volunteer firemen for emergencies had included the senior class in high school, and the Knowlton boys had responded, eager for adventure. Horace awakened Harry at daybreak with the words, “A fire. It's our call!”

Following the signals they rushed quickly into the poorer section of the city where an old row of frame houses was in flame. There was no hope of saving them, but energy was put forth to stay the fire from spreading to neighboring buildings.

Apparently everyone was out of the houses. Relief cars were taking the refugees to shelter. One house had not yet fallen, the last in the row, and the only one with an attic. The buildings were not so close on that side as on the other three, and the fire had reached it last. Now with the rest of the row under control, the full fire force turned on this last house. It was past saving; in fact, its walls were almost ready to fall.

Suddenly at the attic window appeared two faces. One was the jeering youngster of Harry's Sunday School class, and the other was a baby. A shudder of horror ran through the watching crowd. The two Knowlton boys from different directions rushed toward the chief as volunteers of rescue.

“Too late!” said the chief. “No use to sacrifice life needlessly. You couldn't possibly save them.” But the two boys who always teamed together, were already shooting up an extension ladder.

"I'm the lighter," said Harry, putting his foot on the first round.

"Well, I'm the quicker," snapped Horace, at the same time swinging his brother to the ground and starting up the ladder himself. The crowd waited breathlessly, expecting every moment that the crash would come, landing the rescuer in the flames. But he reached the top safely, while Harry with quick thought rallied to spread the net. It did not seem possible that the ladder would stand long enough for the three to descend. Horace, turning with the baby in his arms, saw that the net was ready.

First came the children, one after the other, and last came Horace, collapsing as he struck the net. Then came the American cheer for heroism.

Anxiously Harry waited by the bedside for Horace's wakening. No one expected any ill effects from the adventure of the strong boy. But Harry could scarcely wait for the handclasp of his twin.

Suddenly Horace stirred and opened his eyes. He looked soberly at Harry; then his eyes began to twinkle.

"We demonstrated, didn't we?" he said. Harry's mind did not work with its usual quickness, and he waited for his brother to go on. "There's something in it," he said, "your Christian living, I know now." Harry caught his drift, but was plainly puzzled.

"You were the hero," he said, "not I. Do you mean that you've proved that we don't need Christ, even in the great emergencies? I would have gone if you hadn't beat me to it." Now that the danger was over, Harry felt a sense of disappointment that it had not been he, whose courage could have claimed a Christian backing, who had done the heroic deed. But he listened for Horace's next rewark.

"It doesn't matter who did it," said Horace. "Neither one of us could have done it alone. In just that moment of danger I found your Christ. I know He was helping me."

Slowly Harry came to understanding of his brother's newfound faith. All the weeks and months that he had joked and jeered at Harry's religion he had been acknowledging in his own sub-consciousness that there was something in the Christian ideal. In that one great instant when human need called for heroic action. Horace had called for help beyond himself and the answer had come. As he said, he knew now that there was something in Christian living, and he claimed it for himself for all time.—Eva R. Baird in The Challenge.

THINGS OF VALUE DIFFICULT OF ACQUISITION

Anything of great value is obtainable only at the cost of sacrifice and struggle. On the contrary, things of little value may be had almost without effort. It necessitates no cultivation to grow a crop of noxious weeds and grasses, but it takes the patient plodding of the plowman to produce snowy harvests of cotton and the pendant ears of golden grain. One only needs to walk through the fields in the autumn and the beggar's-lice and cockle-burs will cling to him; but roses have to be plucked, and often in securing them, the hand is pierced by cruel thorns. Poverty is easy of acquirement, but it takes ardous toil and the practice of economy to amass a fortune. One needs to do nothing to be an ignoramus, but one must burn the midnight oil to be a scholar. It requires no striving to let life run riot in wickedness and make one's self a profligate; but to attain Christian character and sainthood is a task most difficult of accomplishment. The downward way is an easy way, but the ascent of the shining path of the just is like mountain-climbing. Only he who musters his strength and steadily perseveres may hope to scale the glory-crowned summit. How beautifully J. G. Holland has expressed this truth in his volume, "Bitter-Sweet":

"Thus is it over all the earth!
That which we call the fairest;
And prize for its surpassing worth,
Is always rarest.

"Iron is heaped in mountain piles,
And gluts the laggard forges;
But gold-flakes hide in dim defiles
And lonely gorges.

"The snowy marble flecks the land
With heaped and rounded ledges;
But diamonds hide within the sands
Their starry edges.

"The finny armies clog the twine
That sweeps the lazy river;
But pearls come singly from the brine,
With the pale diver.

"Wide is the gate and broad the way
That open to perdition,
And countless multitudes are they
Who seek admission.

"But strait the gate, the path unkind,
That lead to life immortal,
And few the careful feet that find
The hidden portal.

"All common good has common price;
Exceeding good, exceeding;
Christ bought the keys of Paradise
With cruel bleeding.

"And every soul that wins a place
Upon its hills of pleasure,
Must give its all, and beg for grace,
To fill the measure."

REVERENCE TOWARD GOD

In prayer we should be on friendly terms with God; yet we should not be over-familiar. The mental attitude of reverence is the one that is emphasized in the Bible. In the model prayer we address God as "our Father," but we add, "who art in heaven," to acknowledge that He is high and holy and above us. There is a passage of Holy Writ that depicts precisely the proper speech in which we should addrses God in prayer. Have we ever read it—read it carefully? "Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thy heart be hasty to utter anything before God; for God is in heaven and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few." (Eccles. 5:2.)—Selected.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

RALLY POSTPONED

The district rally that was to be held at Love's Grove on the Fifth Sunday in June, is postponed indefinitely because it seems to be an inopportune time for the pastors and people to attend.

HUMAN LIFE NOT "PRELIMINARIES"

I once read that a man called some of the singing in the church preliminaries; and later on, one referring to the expression corrected by saying that we have no "preliminaries" in the genuine service but the singing and all belongs to the worship and service of God.

The interest we take has much to do with the reality of the devotional occasions. Once the "door of the church" was opened one Sunday to receive members, and at the time a small boy who was to join was missing. His friends went out to look him up. They found him out in the woods playing with another small boy—and he was called in and joined the church.

The Sunday School is a great institution, and it is encouraging to see so many trying to go regularly. However, lots of people carelessly allow their children to go home as soon as they get out of Sunday School.

UNDER GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION

If the Smoot bill to bring tobacco products under the supervision of the national Food and Drug Act is crowded out of this session of Congress, as it is likely to be, it must not be allowed to lapse. Tobacco, of course, is not a food, but it is a drug, and a peculiarly dangerous one. The advertising of it is done in a crafty and mendacious way and especially needs national checking and supervision. Billions of dollars are spent every year on this narcotic drug, and the nation is becoming poisoned at an increasingly rapid rate. Particularly perilous for the future is the gigantic and successful campaign to make tobacco-users of the wives and mothers of the future. If the country cares what sort of boys and girls it is to have two decades from now, the present is the time to take thought. Placing tobacco under the Food and Drug Act will not solve the problem, but it will be a beginning and a very helpful beginning. A campaign against nicotine poisoning should be undertaken at once, in every religious paper, every church, and every school, reaching down to every home. Nothing less has the slightest chance of success.—Amos R. Wells.

Jul 6: JOYS AND DANGERS WHEN AWAY FROM HOME

(CONSECRATION MEETING)

Scripture Text—Gen. 28:10-22

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—A meeting with God. Gen. 32:9-12, 24-32.

Tuesday—A Lost Boy. Gen. 37:9-20.

Wednesday—Danger of Temptation Matt. 6:13.

Thursday—Joys of worship. Acts 16:12-15.

Friday—Prodigal practices. Luke 15:11-16.

Saturday—Joys of Soul Winning. John 4:39-42.

Suggestions to the Leader

This might be called a "where" and "why" meeting. Just at this time of the year the desire to go aaway for a vacation is strong. The lure of the highway is present. At the beginning of the meeting you might ask several to tell where they would like to go, and why. Since it costs nothing to wish, the expense need not be a hindrance to the choice. It may help some young people plan their vacation to the best advantage.

The following songs have been suggested: "If Jesus Goes With Me," "Lead, Kindly Light," "Jesus, Saviour Pilot Me," "Where He Leads Me I Will Follow," and' "Help Somebody Today."

The Leader's Talk

There comes a time in the lives of most people when the safety and the shelter of home must be left behind. As we go out new joys greet us, we have a keen sense of freedom from restraint; we see new scenes and new faces—and new dangers.

If we go out and find pleasant, wholesome work to do and choose the right companies our dangers will not be so great. It is always "idle hands" that "the the devil's workshop." The busy life is the safe life. The church is another safeguard to the young people away from home. They will find a haven of safety through faithful attendance at the services of the church. One of the most profitable investments possible is the time spent in the House of God.

Wherever you are there are always opportunities for service if you but see them.

Topics to Be Discussed

1. The influence of good homes.
2. The joys of vacation.
3. The dangers of vacation.

Questions to Be Answered

1. How shall you decide between a good time and a bad one?
2. What would you say are some good rules to follow in one's vacation activities?
3. In vacation time is it all right to forget the church?
4. What can the home do to best safeguard the future of the young men and women?
5. What makes the city more dangerous than elsewhere?
6. What can the church do to help young people avoid dangers while away from home?

Quotations

Very literally we spend our vacation. What do we get in return? Many throw away precious days and get only tedium for their reward.—Anon.

The glass of which a bottle is made prevents the contents from running out and being wasted. Home influences around us help to keep us from running wild. We tend to try to live up to reputation.—Macleod.

WANDER-THIRST

Beyond the East the sunrise; beyond the West the sea,
And East and West the wander-thirst that will not let me be;
It works in me like madness, dear, to bid me say good-by;
For the seas call and the stars call, and oh! the call of the sky.

I know not where the white road runs, nor what the blue hills are,
But a man can have the sun for a friend, and for his guide a star;
And there's no end of voyaging when once the voice is heard,
For the river calls and the road calls, and oh! the call of the bird!

Yonder the long horizon lies, and there, by night and day,
The old ships draw to home again, the young ships sail away;
And come I may, but go I must, and if men ask you why,
You may put the blame on the stars and the sun and the white road and the sky.

—Gerald Gould.

—Information has been received to the effect that Australia has abandoned the policy of giving military training in its schools and colleges in view of the adherence of that government to the Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact.

—There are five times as many colleges where there is either no student drinking or almost none as there are colleges whose students polls indicate a predominance of drinking. This is revealed in the replies of 263 college presidents to an inquiry by the National Women's Christian Temperance Union. Of the college presidents queried, 147 say there is less drinking than ever, much less than before prohibition; 97 say there is no drinking at their schools, or so little that it is almost unknown; and 18 say that conditions are "about the same" as before prohibition.—Zion's Herald.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

REV. PAUL F. WARNER SPEAKS THURSDAY NIGHT AND FRIDAY NOON AT SUMMER CONFERENCE

Rev. Paul F. Warner, who has served our church so capably and acceptably as a missionary to Japan for the past six years. will reach High Point Wednesday morning and remain for the concluding days of the Pastor's Summer conference. On Thursday evening at eight o'clock he will make an adderss and again on Friday, Rally Day. His address on Friday will be at 11:45 a. m. and he will probably speak before the Executive committee of Womens' work, which will meet at 10 a. m. Reports of the Baltimore convention will be given by Mrs. George R. Brown, Mrs. C. W. Bates and Mrs. E. L. Ballard.

Every auxiliary in the conference is urged to see to it that a large crowd of women come with well-filled baskets. Every church, whether there is an organization or not, is urgently requested to cooperate and make this a gala day in Methodist Protestantism. Not only are the members of the Executive committee expectd to be present, but an invitation is extended to every Methodist Protsetant woman, and any one else interested, to be present.

—Professor Adolf von Harnack, German theologian, died at Heidelberg, Germany, on Tuesday of last week after a brief illness. He had occupied the chair of church history at the universities of Leipzig, Giessen, Marburg, and Berlin, and up to the age of seventy-five had written 1500 books, treatises, and pamphlets. He was in his eightieth year at the time of his death.

—The pastor of an influential church in New York city announced that all couples for whom he performs the marriage ceremony must sign the following pledge: For our own sakes and for the sake of the home we hope to establish, we will seek to associate ourselves for worship and fellowship with some Christian church in the community where we reside.

A customer in a Boston animal stoore was contemplating the purchase of a parrot which so far had evinced no sign of life other than to cock a malevolent eye at her. Finally, she asked, "Does he talk?"

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

First Church, Burlington.—The First Methodist Protestant Church of Burlington enters the period of "summer slump" with about the same rate of speed as usual. The services are being about as well attended as usual, and from observation and reports about as well as other churches. Our finances are in about as good condition as last year at this time notwithstanding the continued unemployment situation.

We brought to a close last Friday evening in a very fine commencement program in the church our vacation church school. This school had run for two weeks under the direction of Miss Maxine Taylor of Enfield, and Miss Elizabeth Rogers of our local church. These were ably assisted by a very fine group of teachers and assistants. In the group of teachers there were four school teachers, two who have been teachers, four college students, one church choir director, and the others are are high school students. With a group like that you would expect a very fine work to be done, and so it was. Our school was the best of the three that we have held at this church. The enrollment was 147, with an average attendance of about 120. Something like 120 met the requirements of attendance and study and were awarded the certificates at the end of the program.

The women of the church are still active as the following report will show:

The Women's auxiliary of First Church held its June meeting, Monday evening, June 16th in the hut. The Business Girls' circle with Miss Arthula Cheek in charge conducted the program. The meeting opened with song, "In the Garden." Scripture, 23rd Psalm, read by Miss Arthula Cheek, followed by prayer by Mrs. L. W. Gerringer and Miss Ila Stafford, remembering the church children of three colors, brown, white, and yellow. Song by auxiliary, "Saviour, More Than Life to Me."

Mrs. L. W. Gerringer, president, presided over the meeting during the business hour. The reports from the circles and the treasurer were very gratifying to the members. They felt as if they were really accomplishing something worthwhile for the new missionary year. The attendance was 47 members and 6 visitors, making a total of 53 present. The attendance was unusually good this month and it shows that the women are very much interested in the work and that they are aiming for higher and better things in the church.

During the social hour Miss Frances Browning gave several humorous readings. She was very amusing and kept everybody laughing from beginning to end. The Junior Girls' quartette of this church gave several selections which were enjoyed by all. The Business Girls' circle served sandwiches, pickles and tea for refreshments.

West Forsyth.—The appointment at Harmony Grove was met last Sunday morning and the attendance was not quite as good as usual, owing to sickness among some of the members and others had gone away for the day. The vote for delegate to Annual Conference was taken. The nominees are J. H. Speas and Miss Gertrude Masoncup, the former of Stony Knoll church and the latter of Tabernacle church.

After the service at Harmony Grove last Sunday the pastor was invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Levens where a birthday dinner occasion was enjoyed by about one hundred people. It was in honor of the sixtieth birthday anniversary of Bro. Henry Warner and his twin sister, Mrs. Robert Lineback. A sumptuous dinner was spread on a long table in the yard of the home.

Bro. W. S. Bodford, one of the official members of Harmony Grove church, has been in poor health for several weeks. He was not able to attend church services last Sunday. Bro. Thomas Todd, who underwent an operation at the Baptist hospital in Winston-Salem a few weeks ago, is slowly recovering from the operation.

The pastor and family have been remembered with substantial gifts since our last report. We are very grateful to the following for needful articles of food, which were apprecited, not only because of their value, but for the spirit and purpose of the givers: Mrs. A. R. Long, Mrs. J. F. Hunter, Mrs. E. G. Long, Mrs. C. G. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill church; Mrs. Henry Doub and Mrs. S. M. Speas, of Stony Knoll church; Mrs. T. L. Long, of Baltimore church, and Mrs. Pearson Sprinkle, a Baptist neighbor.

The Christian Endeavor meeting at Pleasant Hill Sunday evening at 7:30 was led by Miss Alice Saylor and was well attended. A very helpful program was rendered and a number of new members were received. Miss Lena Hunter will be leader for the meeting next Sunday evening.

Splendid progress is being made in the preparation of the cantata-pageant entitled, "The Pathway of Service," by the Sunday schoool of Pleasant Hill church. According to plans the service will be held as a Children's Day program on the first Sunday night in July. Mrs. J. F. Hunter, Mrs. R. J. Whitman, Mrs. W. B. Speas and Mrs. B. A. Sprinkle are training the children and young people for the service.

Revival meetings on West Forsyth charge have been arranged as follows: Stony Knoll, first Sunday in July, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, help; Tabernacle, second Sunday in July, Rev. C. G. Isley, help; Union Hill, third Sunday in July, Rev. E. C. Norman, help; Baltimore, fourth Sunday in July, with services at 11 a. m., and 2 p. m. and 8 p. m. which will be the beginning of the revival meeting at that church. Rev. M. P. Chambliss will arrive for the evening service.

Asheboro.—It is not my purpose to write every week, however, there are so many ing church attendance took a considerable things taking place these days it keeps us busy to keep up. Sunday school and morntumble yesterday morning owing to all-day services in the country. At the morning service we received three new members by letter, C. Earl Bulla, coming to us from the first M. P. church, High Point,; Mrs. Annie Hargett, from the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church in Charlotte, and Golden Brower from the Mt. Zion Holiness church near Seagrove. We have letters from some others but on account of sickness they were not able to be present yesterday.

Our annual Children's Day service will be held next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. A committee is hard at work on the program.

Some weeks ago we thought we had about reached the limit in the matter of Herald subscriptions, however, we keep finding new ones.

At the evening service last evening we were made to rejoice to see Mrs. C. F. Smith in the service for the first time this conference year. We trust she may be completely restored to health. Mrs. W. R. Hamlin, another one of our faithful ones, has not been able to be out for quite awhile. While she is not able to go to church she is a close reader of the Herald and in this way she keeps up with what is going on.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Orange Charge.—Children's Day services have been held at each church. We wish to thank all who had any part in making it possible for us to enjoy these splendid services.

Communion services well be observed as follows: Union Grove, first Sunday in July; Chestnut Ridge and Hebron, second Sunday in July; Efland, third Sunday in July.

The third quarterly conference will meet at Efland Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July at 2 p. m.

Bunn Dawson and Myra Baldwin were married by the writer June 23. Mrs. Dawson is a member of Union Grove church.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—There will be all-day services at Philadelphia Sunday, June 29th. The young people will render a Children's Day program in the morning and Mr. O'Briant has a special service for the old folks in the afternoon. We especially urge all the old people to be with us Sunday.

Our revival meeting will begin the fifth Sunday in August, with Rev. J. M. Morgan pulpit help. Mr. Morgan was one of our former pastors whom everybody loved, and we're very glad to have him with us this summer.

Several of our people are seriously ill, Mr. Tommy Pearson, Mrs. Hattie Taylor, and Mr. Emmit Moore. We hope for them a speedy recovery.

Beulah, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. Bro. Joyner, Sunday at 11 p. m. preached a soul-stirring sermon and pleased all present.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. We are glad to have the visitors and new members to worship with us each Sunday. We are expecting to have a hundred on the roll in Sunday school at the end of the new quarter. We are planning to have a little picnic for our Sunday school Saturday afternoon, especially for the smaller children.

We are still having our prayer service each Sunday night, and we will be glad to have all that will be with us in this prayer service.

Mr. W. E. Elmore is still on the sick list and continues to be about the same. A prayer service was held at his home last Sunday afternoon and was attended by a large crowd. We all pray that he will get better so he will be with us in many more services to come.

Many hearts were made sad when the news came to us that little Hoyle, the son of

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lemmond, was dead. Little Hoyle was born on the first day of June 1929, and departed this life on Thursday morning June 19. He was laid to rest in the Weddington cemetery Friday, June 20. Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Joyner, preached the funeral.

Dear father and mother, do not weep, for the dear Father above doeth all things for the best.

Oak Grove.—This peculiar church is located about two-thirds of a mile east of Rural Hall.

Fourth Sunday is the regular time for the pastor, Bro. Williams, to preach.

Nearly 25 years ago when this church was first built the location seemed to be exactly in place, but "times change," and now it seems that it would be much more desirable to have the church located among the oaks in Rural Hall.

Sunday after the meeting a company including Bro. Williams, had to walk nearly a whole mile through the heat and dust on their way to the "city," and to dinner. I was in the company and was made glad when they stopped under some large oak trees and talked about how the church (our Oak Grove) could be located on that spot, under the large oak trees.

Going from the depot to the church, and then back over into the town, over two miles in the heat and dust made a full force of circumstances—and now I'm constrained to urge for our Oak Grove to be in town among the churches—in the good company. Let someone, at once, be reminded, and go and get a deed for the location.

Brother Williams taught our Bible class in the S. S. and the interest was very goood. There are 93 names enrolled in the school. At the recess, between the school service and the preaching, about ten or fifteen persons disappeared—but the preaching was good. The pastor preached loyalty to us; and a reminder is that if four or five thousand subscribers were in for the Herald it would be one of the great means of "loyalty" to the regular church work. The Herald is now one of the best representatives of mutual rights that we can see anywhere among the various church papers. The system of reporting every week through the paper is really "worth its weight in gold." I feel to thank the editor for his regular poetic service.

I once, years ago, had a poem on mother, nearly memorized, but lost the paper. Some of the lines were: "Nobody knows of the work it takes to keep the home together, Nobody knows but mother."

Lexington.—Mr. Hendry has about regained his strength and enthusiasm since his recent illness and gave us two splendid addresses Sunday.

We have new scholars and visitors in Sunday school each Sunday morning. The fine music rendered by the orchestra is one of the very pleasing features.

Our Vacation Bible school opened Monday morning under the direction of Miss Maxine Taylor, Mr. Hendry, and an efficient corps of teachers and helpers and a large enrollment af children give promise of a successful school.

Plans are being made for a picnic to be on July 4th. A committee has been appointed to decide on a suitable place. All the Sunday school folks and some of our friends outside are anticipating a very pleasant outing.

An interesting and helpful program was given at the meeting of the Missionary society last Friday p. m. Some important business maatters were discussed and some problems satisfactorily solved.

One thing of importance was a decision to bake and sell cakes and pies twice a month. This has already been tried on a small scale and found successful.

Mrs. Cox, Mrs. H. C. Rodgers, and Mrs. C. L. Koonts and their respective Sunday school classes received honorable mention Sunday morning for a perfect attendance.

Saxapahaw Charge, Orange Chapel Church.—The reporter of our church asks that I send a report to the Herald this week, so here goes. The first annual session of the Orange Chapel Memorial association was held on June 15th. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mr. G. F. Rogers. The devotionals were conducted by the pastor, Rev. T. J. Whitehead, he read the 90th Psalm. Both the music and the speaking for the day were of the highest type. The speakers were Prof. W. R. Thompson, one of our own boys, now superintendent of public instruction of Chatham county, who gave us some ancient history of the general church. We keenly appreciated having him, and enjoyed his message. Mr. McBride Hall of Graham brought the memorial address, which was full of interest and very uplifting. We apperciate Mr. Hall more for the fact that our association was organized under his direction. The special music for the morning session was furnished by the Holt brothers, of Greensboro, and the Central quartette of Burlington, with Mr. Easley at the piano. These specials were well rendered, and when we wish to express our appreciation words fail us. Mr. W. E. Thompson introduced to the association, with very fitting words, three life members, namely, Mrs. Johnnie Rogers, Miss Hettie Quakenbush, and Mr. B. C. Quakenbush. The lunch hour was no bad faeture of the day, with a picnic spread, barrels of ice fater and mingling with friends. In the afternoon we enjoyed some more specials by the Central quartet, and short talks by different visitors, whom we were glad to have with us, and the Junior girls' quartet of Burlington furnished some very special music, with Miss Riddle at the piano, which was highly favored by the congregation. For these specials of the day, we gave a rising vote of thanks. The offering for the day was gratifying, and we made a gain of about went to our homes feeling that it had been tweny-five members of the association. We a day well spent. Our Woman's auxiliary meets at the church on the first Sunday night. We hope all who can, will be there. Our much esteemed pastor is to be with us in this meeting, and will address us on the work and workers in one of our foreign fields, Japan perhaps. Our Children's Day program is to be given on the third Sunday night in July. Everybody is invited to come.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Harmony.—The people of the community are showing great interest in the Sunday school and the attendance is increasing.

Rev. D. D. Broome delivered an interesting sermon at the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning. The first part of his sermon was for the children.

Children's Day was obsered at our church Sunday night. A pageant, "Onward and Upward," was given by the Intermediates and seniors. The pageant was enjoyed by all.

The Christian Endeavors of our church enjoyed a picnic held at Erwing bridge, Saturday evening. We are sorry that all the members could not be present.

Mrs. F. S. Crawford and Mrs. John Gambell have been ill. We wish for both of these a speedy recovery and hope that they will soon be back with us.

Pleasant Grove.—We were glad to have Rev. Mr. Newton from Thomasville fill the pulpit Sunday morning. He came in just at the beginning of the 11 o'clock service. When asked by the pastor to preach he said he always tried to help when possible. His subject was "Faith." At the evening service Rev. D. R. Williams brought us an inspiring sermon from the text, "Am I therefore become your enemy because I tell you the truth."—Galatians 4:16. The Intermediate S. S. class with Mrs. W. G. Myers as teacher went to Ritter's Lake for a picnic supper the 12th. All reported a nice time.

The Junior C. E. also went on a picnic Friday evening.

We are planning to have an all-day service the second Sunday in July: Children's Day program at 11 o'clock, and the Memorial in the afternoon.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Murphy join the church since our last report.

The Brotherhood meets next Saturday night with Mr. B. E. Kennedy. This organization has presented a nice new Bible to the church since their last meeting.

MRS. RALPH KENNEDY, Reporter.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Attendance at Sunday school was very good Sunday. At 11 o'clock our pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, delivered a wonderful sermon taken from St. John the 6 chapter and the 7th verse. Pastor Fogleman has been bringing us some wonderful messages. I think this was the best sermon he has preached since he came to this charge. This sermon has been highly complimented by those who heard it.

Rev. and Mrs. Fogleman are leaving today (Monday) for High Point and Concord. Mr. Fogleman is going to attend the Pastor's summer conference in High Point, and Mrs. Fogleman is going to visit her parents in Concord.

A number of people from Hollister attended the Children's Day service ta Bethesda Sunday night. They gave a splendid program including the pageant "Onward and Upward."

The Woman's auxiliary is planning to have a social party on July 4th on the church lawn. We are going to have a measuring party asking each one to measure their waistline and give a penny for every inch they measure around their waistline. The cream and cake will be served free to those who measure their waistline.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson.—Sunday, June 22, was a good day with us. We had 106 in S. S. We keep gaining some. Brother Powell delivered a splendid sermon from the text: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging and whoever is deceived thereby is not wise." Temperance is a thing that is needed in the home, church and public schools. We must not leave the "old landmark." There is much difficulty in teaching temperance. Brother Powell, emphasized the fact that he had studied every spelling book and he had never found a book that taught temperance as much as "The Old Webster's Blue Back Selling book." The following is brought out very plainly in the spelling book. Temperance, immorality, and purity. The books are not like that today. We have gotten away from the "old landmark." Brother Powell said he had heard men say that strong drink is worse today than it had ever been. But he doesn't agree with them in saying this. The following will show very plainly that the liquor business is not worse, but very much better. Back when the saloons were here a "licensed distiller" was a "licensed bootlegger." There were two barrels of whisky put out every two hours and where did the remainder go? It was stacked up along some creek being hid away. Many people drank up their entire income and lots of them even sold their property off in exchange for liquor. He told of a very serious incident when the father stayed drunk the entire time and his children were starved and were clotheless. One of the little girls died. The man had no money to bury her with. The good women went in and clothed her and prepared her for burial. The next morning the woman came back and the father had stripped his child of the shroud and sold it for liquor. What could have been worse? He also told of another incident when a man died drunk and left his wife behind. The wife also wa sa drunkard. She sold every article and piece of furniture in the house in order to buy whisky. But the last thing was the Bible. She took this to the saloon man, but he refused and then the woman turned over and died. Isn't this enough to show that the liquor business is not worse but better? People are not as bold about drinking the stuff. Time went on until the legislative body got in power and passed the 18th amendment. After this was passed there were men hired to come into Littleton drunk and cut up, and try to put it against prohibition. Who is not brave enough to fight this thing? "I'll fight," said Brother Powell, "not with my fists, but I'll fight." "Do not be thoughtless and fool with liquor," were Brother Powell's closing words.

This was among the very best sermons that I have ever heard delivered. It was a good piece of advice to the young and also the old.

The third quarterly conference will be held at Spring Hill on Saturday before the 3rd Sunday in July.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Welborn's baby, Lela Rucker, has been very sick but is improving.

On last June 15th the Fairview S. S. came over and joined with us. We extend to them a hearty welcome to visit us again. We as the Mt. Pleasant Sunday school are planning on going and joining with them the 3rd Sunday in July.

We are planning a "Church paper program" the first Sunday in July. We are expecting an interesting program, and we hope that we will have a large crowd. Come and enjoy the day with us.

MISS RUTH PAYNE, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—At the hour for church school Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock Children's Day was obesrved with an interesting and helpful program, which was well rendered by the children. Miss Myrtle Davis was the efficient chairman of the committee, which presented this program; many thanks are due them for their praiseworthy service. At the 11 o'clock service the Junior church was led by Rev. E. L. Ballard, director of religious education, and the adult congregation worshipped in the main auditorium, and after the prelimisaries, music, scripture lesson, etc., listened to a comforting and eloquent message by Rev. R. I. Farmer on "Anchorage for Restless Souls." This was a most timely and practical sermon, and the minister said in part; "In the first convention of religious education there was found a group of young people whose slogan was, 'Anywhere but where we are.' That is not a fair attitude toward life, and the essence of it is selfishness. The man of God whom we read says, 'We are born again into a life of hope.' Be it possible to believe this? H. G. Wells tells a story about a man in a haunted house, in which was a row of lighted candles of various sizes, one going out at one time, another later. The terror he faced was these candles going out leaving him in utter darkness. Since the World War there have been so many cases of shell-shock, mental and spiritual, which has produced pessimism and a questioning of faith. Too many men and women have been dirfting without hope and anchorage. Is God in His heaven since there is so much hell on earth? If there is any hope, it must come from someone who can present us a doctrine of faith, in which we can find an anchor for our souls. Up and down the streets in High Point as in every city walk human beings seeking work, sad and dejected, obliged to acept charity, caused by factory failures, family losses, sick ones needing attention, savings of a lifetime swept away. It is a time to produce restlessness, bitterness, and despondency—a time when the bolshevist and anarchist gets in his work. We are on the verge of a crisis unless something happens to inspire hope and confidence. Young women trained for professional work are willing to do housework. My heart is heavy, and I know yours is, to think of these whose bodies and minds are wracked with torture to make an honest living. These are people who stay away from church and keep their children out of Sabbath school because they are not properly clothed, and do not have money to pay church dues. God will utilize these trials and afflictions to make us more steady if we but lean on Him. Tribulations come to test us, do let us be faithful to Him. The Christian faith is the only anchor worthwhile. Let us be peaceful and strong in these perilous times of testing, and may we rise triumphant over the fret and anxiety and sorrow of a disturbed world. Plato of old said, "I find sin, but no Savious." Praise God, that we know Him who is the author of our salvation.

The vacation church school opened at 9 o'clock Monday morning with 50 pupils present, and will continue two weeks. Only two departments, the primary and kindergarten, will be conducted for children ranging from four to nine years of age. A corps of splendid teachers has been secured as follows: Supt. Primary department, Mrs. L. R. Johnston; teachers and helpers, Misses Margaret Walton, Margaret Neese, Alma Andrews, Mary Elizabeth Adams, Annette Pickens, Laura Thompson, Dorothy Bayliff, and Annie Mae Dawkins and Joseph Montgomery. Joint Supts. of kindergarten department, Mrs. E. L. Ballard, and Miss Grace Koonts; helpers, Misses Margaret Poole, and Agnes Byrum. The work of this school will consist of Bible study, drills, and dramatizations, handwork, recreation, music and missionary instruction. A number of children from other denominations has enrolled.

The State C. E. Union will assemble in annual session Tuesday evening in Home Moravian church, Winston-Salem, and the keynnote address will be delivered by our pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer. A delegation of 100 young people will go over from this city to hear this message, and to honor Arnold J. Koonce of High Point, State president, and a valued member of first church, who will preside over the sessions, some of which will be held in Memorial Hall, Salem College. A splendid program around the convention theme, "In Christ We Triumph," will be presented by a number of eminent speakers and workers in Christian Endeavor effort.

A card from Mrs. L. J. Diffee at historic Kenilworth Castle, immortalized by Sir Walter Scott in his famous novel, brings news that she and the party of friends are greatly enjoying the historic castles and large estates of England. Mrs. H. A. Moffitt is a member of this party.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Garland, the latter having been Miss Virginia Pickens before their marriage a week ago, returned Monday night from a honeymoon trip to Washington, Philadelphia, and New Yofk. They will be at home to their friends at 800 Fourth St.

Miss Claire Douglas, who is taking work at the State University leading to an A. M. degree, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Douglas.

Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe, Judge and Mrs. Lewis E. Teague have returend from a trip to Asheville, where they attended the Rotary convention.

Mrs. R. M. Noble of Chicago, who is most pleasantly remembered here as Miss Etta Blair of Asheboro, has returned home after a visit here to her mother, Mrs. Martha E. Blair, and her sisters, Mrs. A. M. Rankin, Sr., Mrs. Ernest L. Auman, and Miss Florence Blair.

New Hope, Pageland Charge.—Our pastor Rev. T. E. Martin left yesterday for High Point where he will attend the summer conference.

Large congregations were present at our services here Sunday. Two very interesting and helpful sermons were delivered by our pastor. At the 11 o'clock service, we also had the communion service with a large number participating.

We have begun a mid-week prayer service in the homes. Everybody seems to be interested and we are witnessing great results. The crowds are growing so large until it is almost impossible to assemble in the homes.

Our Christian Endeavor is doing splendid work. We reorganized last Sunday evening. Most of the officers were re-elected because of their service and regular attendance.

With best regards to the Herald. We ask the prayers of all Herald readers that we may accomplish just what we are working for.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Anderson

Sarah Elvira Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Anderson, was born March 28, 1929; died June 15, 1930. She was ill only a few days, being a victim of colitis.

The life of this dear child was brief, but was a blesing and a source of joy to the parents and brothers and sisters. As one of God's flowers, budding into life, she was transplanted in the Eternal Garden of God, in His everlasting Kingdom, to live forever as a shining light in that Great Eternity.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Pleasant Hill Methodist Prootestant church June 16, at 2 o'clock p. m., and the body was interred in the church cemetery.

Surviving are the paarentts, five brothers, John, James, Lee, Beaaufort and Worth Anderson, and five sisters, Leotie, Della, Nettie, Bessie and Annie Anderson, who have the sincere sympathy of their neighbors and friends. "And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in their midst, and said, Verily I say unto you, except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven."—Matt. 18:1-3.

Speas

John Samuel Speas was born April 11 1847, and departed this life May 19, 1930. He was the son of the late William Henry and Sarah Speas, and is the last of a family of eight children, four brothers and four sisters.

On April 14, 1868, he was united in marriage to Mary Frances Doub. and to this happy union were born three sons, William Speas, Walter H. Speas, and Wesley B. Speas; one daughter, Mrs. J. G. W. Holloway, the first named son and daughter having passed to their heavenly reward several years ago. Besides the two sons, ten grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren survive.

He professed faith in Christ as his personal saviour in early life and united with the church becoming a member of Pleasant Hill Methodist Protestant church. Later he transferred his membership to Doub's Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church, South, where he was a devoted member for some time. He again united with Pleasant Hill church about forty years ago and remained a faithful member until death. He was one of the staunch supporters of his church during his active life. We are told that during the erection of the parsonage he was one of the most generous contributors to the home for his pastor and furnished much of the material used in the construction of the parsonage. He loved his Lord and the work of the church, and was active in promoting the work of the church during his active life.

Thus the life of Bro. Speas was a life well spent. He reared a family of splendid children and has left an example worthy of emulation. His good influence will live on to bless and inspire and help us to be able to say as he said, "I am ready." His last months, weeks and days on earth were spent in waiting for the final summons to the heavenly world. He told his pastor that he was just waiting for the Good Lord to call him, and that he was as ready to go as he knew how to be ready.

It is not death to die,
  To leave this weary road,
And, 'mid the brotherhood on high,
  To be at home with God.

It is not death to close
  The eye long dimmed by tears,
And wake, in glorious repose
  To spend eternal years.

It is not death to bear
  The wrench that sets us free
From dungeon chain, to breathe, the air
  Of boundless liberty.

It is not death to fling
  Aside this sinful dust,
And rise, on strong exulting wing,
  To live among the just.

Jesus, thou Prince of Life,
  Thy chosen cannot die!
Like thee, they conquered in the strife,
  To reign with thee on high.

Thompson

J. Calvin Thompson passed from this life on June 1, 1930. He had passed three-score and ten years. For several months his health had not been very good,. Therefore, his death was not unexpected.

Mr. Thompson is survived by six daughters, one son, two sisters, two half-sisters, one brother, and one half-brother, and eleven grandchildren.

He was a kind and loving husband and father. He was a good neighbor. At home, he was a man of industry. In his community he was a civic and religious leader. He always stood for high ideals. His death brings sorrow to our hearts, but it brings eternal happiness to him.

The funeral services were held at Concord church on Saxapahaw charge. The pastor was assisted by Rev. S. W. Taylor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, and Rev. W. M. Pike. The Saxapahaw lodge of Jr. O. U. A. M. had charge of the services at the grave.

T. J. WHITEHEAD.

Ivester

Edley M. Ivester departed this life May 23, 1930, aged 81 years, 6 months, and 27 days. On September 27, 1873, he was married to Sarah Hoyle. To this union were born six children, three boys and three girls. One boy and one girl preceded him in death. His first wife also died about 16 years ago. He was again united in marriage to Tilda Canipe, and they lived happily together until his death.

He was converted and joined the Methodist Protestant church at Kistler's when a young man, and lived a consecrated Christian life until death.

He leaves to mourn his departure the widow, two sons, Rupert and Crowell Ivester, two daughters, Mrs. Andrew Elmore, Mrs. A. A. Horton, twenty-three grandchildren, twenty great-grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Saral Norman, Mrs. Patty Hudson, and a larg circle of relatives and friends.

Brother Ivester's life and the service he ha rendered for the Kingdom of God has mea much to our church on Cleveland charge. He was deeply interested in the work here and always attended all our quarterly conferences. He did not grow old with the years but by constantly reading his Bible and his church papers he kept himself informed as to the progress and program of his church and conference. He was progressive in all the activities of his church and a leader among men.

Just last fall he spent about five weeks with us in our meetings on the charge, He was the preacher's friend. Only his pastor and those who have served him can know his real worth. A brother member of Kistler's church said to me that Brother Ivester held the standard of Christianity the highest of any man he ever knew. We are thankful to Almighty God that such a man has lived in our community.

While we no longer see his face we know that his influence will live on and the life he lived will inspire us to do more faithful service for the cause of Christ.

The funeral service was held at Kistler's church on Saturday, May 24, at 3 o'clock p. m.

The writer was assisted in the service by Rev. J. D. Morris, a former pastor, and Rev. J. M. Morgan, pastor of Fallston charge, after which the body was carried to the cemetery and we left it there to await the Resurrection Morn.

The congregation was large,
The floral tribute was beautiful,
The bereaved have our sympathy.
"Servant of God, well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past,
The battle's fought,
The victory's won,
And thou art crowned at last."

His Pastor,
C. E. RIDGE.

Cheek

The seemingly merciless hand of death has visited our ranks again and claimed another one of our oldest members of Chestnut Ridge church, Mr. Henry Cheek. He was born May 25, 1853, and departed this life May 26, 1930.

Mr. Cheek had been in declining health for several years, but wasn't confined to his bed.

He was converted about twelve years ago and joined Chestnut Ridge church, and remained a member there until God saw fit to call him home. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, one sister, one daughter, Mrs. L. C. Sykes, and David, Marshall, and Lindo Cheek, several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

The large crowd present and the many beautiful floral designs proved that his friends were numerous.

Funeral services were conducted at Chestnut Ridge church Thursday afternoon by Rev. B. M. Williams. Interment was made in the church cemetery. The sympathy of the community goes out to those bereaved ones in their sad hour.

Paschall

Leonard Wilton Paschall, 33, died Thursday, June 5th, at 1 o'clock at his home near Drewry. He had been in bad health for some time but did not appear to be seriously ill until a few days before his death.

The deceased is survived by his wife and four children, Lila Bell, Clifton, Katherine, and James Paschall. His father, four brothers and eight sisters also survive to mourn his passing.

Mr. Paschall was married in 1917 to Miss Katie White.

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock at New Hope Methodist Protestant church, of which the deceased was a member, and interment was in the church cemetery. The services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church in Henderson.

Cox

Miss Bertha Cox, one of the most active and beloved members of Hickory Ridge church, Forsyth charge, passed into the Great Beyond on June the 9th, 1930. She was a sister of Miss Lula Cox, Miss Daisy Cox and Mr. R. M. Cox.

Her going was not unexpected, for she had been seriously ill for several weeks.

An obituary will appear later.

Outterbridge

Whereas, Mrs. Mary Avent Outterbridge, a loyal and faithful member of Whitakers Methodist Protestant Church always deeply interested in all that pertains to the Kingdom; a devout worshiper in prayer meeting and church services; an active member of the women's organizations; contributing liberally of means and personal effort to the welfare and activities of the church, has, in the Providence of God, been called to her reward, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary, while bowing humbly to the will of a Kind Father, feel keenly the great loss to our organization and to the entire church.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our auxiliary, that a copy be sent to the family, and a copy be given to each the Methodist Protestant Herald and the Women's Missionary Record for publication.

A Tribute of Love

The members of the Woman's Auxiliary of Fountain Place M. P. church offer a tribute of love and respect to the memory of one of our most faithful and loyal members, Mrs. Grace Piper Sharpe, who died May 21, 1930. We realize in her death we have lost a true friend, one who was interested in all the activities of her church. She was very loyal and attended every meeting unless providentially hindered, and helped in every way. We know we shall miss her smiling face and sweet prayers. We feel that our Auxiliary has suffered a great loss, but our loss is her eternal gain. Her death has brought sorrow to her loved ones, her neighbors and her church.

Therefore be it resolved: first, that we bow in humble submission to our blessed Heavenly Father's divine will; second, that we extend our deepest sympathy to her bereaved husband, and commend him to Him who ever loves us.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her devoted husband, a copy be placed upon the minutes of our Woman's Auxiliary and a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. G. L. AMICK,
MRS. PORTER SCOTT,
MISS SWANNIE COBLE.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, our All-Wise Father has called our beloved president and co-worker, Miss Mamie Johnston, to her eternal reward, be it resolved:

That, we have lost a tireless worker, who was faithful in little as well as great things; and we recommend her as a worthy example of faithfulness and optimism, who always fulfilled her duty cheerfully to both God and man. No task was too great, because she walked so close to our God that He shared her every responsibility.

Resolved, that while our auxiliary misses her cheerful companionship and her willing hands, we bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who has rewarded her for short but full years of efficient service. It will take many of our remaining members to fill the vacancy made by the going of one so capable.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and a copy sent to both the Missionary Record and the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

—Three hundred acres of rugged forest land heavily timbered with a variety of trees and containing over three million board feet of lumber has been given to the forestry department of the North Carolina State College by George Watts Hill, young Durham capitalist and farmer. The woodland is located 17 miles north of Durham County and was formerly a part of Mr. Hill's modern Quail Roost Dairy Farm. Dr. Hofman says a permanent camp will be established in the forest as soon as possible. This will be used by students while engaged in practical forestry work. Student surveyors from the school of engineering will also use the area for farm surveying.

—The average acre of cotton produced in North Carolina costs $50 in labor, fertilizer, ginning and other costs. Working from this as a starting point, the grower knows that he must produce at least 312 pounds of lint when cotton sells at 16 cents a pound before he will produce the cost of production. Either this or he must cut the cost of production below $50 an acre.

REVIVAL MEETING AT GLEN RAVEN

"We Are All Traveling, but Where?"

Rev. Clarence Isley last night in his sermon tried to make each and everyone present at his meeting see just where they stood. He stated that there were two roads or two directions in which any one could travel.

"Broad is the road and wide is the gate that leads to destruction; but strait is the way and narrow is the gate that leads to safety."

Now the question left with us to decide was which road we should take; for the sinful way which leads to destruction is the larger and broader way. We can go through a large place better than a small place. Naturally, it is easy to go the way of the stream, to float the way the stream runs, but when we go up a narrow place in opposite direction, we have to use more energy and be on the look-out to stay in safety all the time.

Life is an opportunity to be used for a good purpose, so let each one of us decide for ourselves to take the straight and upright way, which will carry us safely through life.

Come out and enjoy our revival meetings with us every night. Preaching Friday, Saturday, and Sunday night, also Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock.

It is indefinite just when this meeting will close but will probably last for some time yet.

KEEP COOL
(Summer Suggestions)

If you wish to keep cool,
Don't be a fool
And worry about this and that;
Don't think of the heat,
In your talk be discreet,
Relax like a well-behaved cat.

If you wish to keep cool,
Don't be a fool
And eat many things to excess;
To be well and strong,
Stop habits all wrong,
Masticate more and eat less.

If you wish to keep cool,
Don't be a fool,
Leave meat and iced drinks alone;
Moderation is best
To insure a night's rest
And give you a vigorous tone.

If you wish to keep cool,
Don't be a fool,
Be prudent in all that you do;
Keep your mind calm and sweet,
Ignore haste and heat—
So here's a cool summer to you!

NEW MUSIC COURSE AT MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE

Though always giving large place to instruction in gospel music as a necessary factor in Christian work, the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, has enlarged the curriculum and given to music subjects the standing of a separate course, which will be inaugurated September 4, beginning of the fall term. This expansion has been asked for by the student body, both graduates and undergraduates, who stress the desirability of gaining advanced music instruction in the atmosphere of Christian earnestness and fellowship known to characterize the Institute.

Why This Sad Refrain?

"The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved!"

The grain is garnered, the fruit is saved,
But crops of men still go to waste.
Why save the less and lose the greater?
Let reapers go and go in haste!

The fields are white, for souls are ripe.
Let reapers all go forth to reap:
Let no one turn to other task
And no one fold his hands to sleep.

Not wail of lost but song of saved
Is sound we'd hear upon the air.
Send forth, O Lord, the harvesters,
Both here and there and everywhere!

"Of All Men Most Miserable"

We read that a body of our Unitarian brethren have confessed themselves without hope of a future life. They are in a most deplorable state of mind. "If in this life only we have hope in Christ we are of all men most miserable."

Why has the faith of these hopeless brethren collapsed? It is because in building their structure they have omitted the keystone which must support the arch: they have denied or failed to believe in the resurrection of Christ. Paul saw the bearing of the resurrection of Jesus on our hope of immortality and discusseed the matter at length. If Christ be not risen we are yet in our sins and there is no hope for us, or only the hope for the present life. We have no assurance of a future state of life. Our Unitarian brethren allowed themselves to be cheated out of their inheritance when they allowed themselves to be robbed of their belief in Jesus' divinity and immortality. "Because I live shall ye live also," said Jesus to His disciples. If death ended his career then it will end ours. But death did not end His career. He lives now and will live evermore. The Unitarians have made a prodigious effort to convert the world to their unbelief. Now they are suffering the sad consequences of their course. They are pitiable, but the only thing that can save them is the faith which they have rejected. O that they might see Jesus as He is!

The Unchanged World

Frequently it is said, "O how the world has changed!" But when specifications are called for and given, they are all superficial. We ride differently and dress differently and live in houses of a different style and take medicines of a different name; but we walk the same way and still talk with our tongues and laugh and cry with our mouths. Pain still feels just as it used to and so does joy or happiness. We still have hopes and regrets, we still look forward and backward with interest. The same things that poisoned us still poison us and we still live by eating wholesome foods. We still live on the same earth and are warmed by the same sun. There are surface differences in petty waves, but the great deep of life remains the same. There is still sin and need of deliverance from it, and, thank God, there is still redemption and eternal deliverance from sin through Him who is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

THE CHURCH, INDUSTRY AND LABOR

What Should Ministers Do In a Strike?

Industrial disputes seldom come unawares upon communities, and yet in most instances pastors are caught unprepared in a crisis in which they cannot avoid entanglement. The members of their churches are likely to be participants as employers or workers or both. Some of their own families may finally be in want of the necessities of life, for a strike is a hard experience on the workers' women folk and children. Pastors will be looked to for guidance in moral situations. If they are silent they are accused of cowardice. If they speak it is often without adequate knowledge. If they take sides they become involved in controversy.

Then again, when pastors act together, they have the power to keep the issues of justice and human welfare before the community and to exercise a sobering influence upon leaders and public opinion at a time when tolerance and self-control are greatly needed by strikers, employers, city officials, the police and the public alike.

Out of these considerations and the experience of the churches in communities where there have been labor disputes, come the following recommendations in policy:

1. Concerted Action by Ministers

If none of his fellow ministers will join him in meeting a strike situation a pastor must do what he can alone, but he is in a difficult position. If the ministers act together, they are individually much stronger and their influence is greatly enhanced. They correct one another's knowledge and judgment. They more really speak the conscience of the entire community.

Wherever there is a Council of Churches, with a salaried executive who is informed and actively concerned about industrial problems from the Christian point of view, as has been the case during strikes in New Bedford, Los Angeles, and other cities, the churches are fortunate indeed. But there are not over 50 such councils in the United States. However, there is always a Ministers' Association which may be called together; and if it is impossible to get the ministers to act unitedly, it is always possible for a smaller group to work together.

2. The Best Action Is Action In Advance

This requires only statement to be seen at once. The churches need not be caught unprepared. There may be opportunity for conciliation before a strike begins, but it will be missed if the pastors have no conferences. An industrial situation needs study before an open dispute looms on the horizon.

When a conflict is seen to be inevitable, the public mind and those directly concerned should then be challenged by a Christian technique in conflict. The ministers and their committees should be meeting regularly for consultation as long as the conflict impends or continues.

3. Fact Finding

The first problem is to discover what is happening, to seek out the causes of the trouble and to discover if possible what is just and right and what the churches can do. This is best done by a committee, through interviews with leaders on both sides. It is important for every minister to learn what he can from his own people but also by going in person to the scene of the trouble, mingling freely with the strikers, and talking with employers whom he knows.

In a number of communities where there have been serious strikes, each side of the dispute has been asked to send representatives to meetings of the Ministers' Association to lay before them the facts of the situation. It has not been found advisable, at least not at first, to have representatives of employers and labor leaders at the same meeting, but this should be kept in mind as a later possibility.

The statements thus made and the findings of committees and pastors studying by themselves, then become matters of conference. No other work that the pastors can do is likely to be so important for the time being as to join in these efforts.

4. Preventive Measures and Conciliation

The New Bedford Council of Churches called to face the textile crisis in 1928, held that its function at the outset was preventive. Apart from the merits of the issues, it advocated that the issues ought to be dealt with in conference between the opposing groups, and by reason and not first of all by ultimatums. The object was if possible to avoid industrial warfare. So before the storm broke, representatives of both management and labor were interviewed and the full weight of the influence of the churches, so far as the Council could voice it, was put on the side of those community forces, official and unofficial, which were working for adjustment by agreement.

5. Advice of Specialists

Because of the technical nature of modern industrial problems, the ministers may find it advisable to call in a specialist who has had experience in industry, and in strike situations, whose counsel therefore will be valuable in such an emergency, especially in fact-finding and efforts at conciliation. The Commission on the Church and Social Service and the Department of Research and Education of the Federal Council of Churches have such men on their staffs who will be glad to come, if they can, or to suggest some one to advise.

6. Action During a Strike

The first opportunity of the group of ministers is to exert their influence to hold the community together. If they were to issue something like the following statement to the press and from their pulpits, the effect would be wholesome: "We have been hitherto a united community. We are neighbors, we belong to the same churches and our interests are bound up together. We must live and work together when this conflict is over. Let us keep together now as much as we can. Let us try to be fair and just in the trying days ahead and not do things which we shall all regret. Let us be thinking even now of future co-operation."

It is very important to endeavor to bring out the issues of justice, and to urge that everybody shall desire the welfare of the workers and their families, and that the workers' families shall not be sacrificed in the final settlement.

During the New Bedford strike the Council urged the earliest possible termination of the struggle and used its influence to bring into the field the boards and commissions which the State had created to intervene in such cases. It never closed the door to either side by partisan action. It insisted that wage reduction should be the matter of last resort, that necessity for it should be demonstrated, and that when resorted to it should include salaries and dividends as well as wages. In regard to wages, the Council said through press and pulpit, that the workers ought to be consulted beforehand, and all the relevant facts showing relations between wages and earnings should be set forth clearly and fully. On the other hand the Council urged the obligation of the workers to make the shop where they were employed as efficient as possible.

7. A Christian Technique in Conflict

It is a fact that business establishments which have Christian managements—that is, which are just, which do not exploit the workers but make their welfare their own, and in which the relations between management and men are friendly and democratic—seldom have labor troubles.

But when a conflict arises, there is a Christian way of handling a conflict. The essence of it is for the leaders of both sides to keep poised, not to give way to hatred or anger, not resort to violence, and to be fair in settlement. It is for police officials, sheriffs and their disputes to be impartial, to avoid brutality and to learn to keep order without resort to bloodshed, even at personal risk. The courts have the imperative duty of even handed justice. The final peace and harmony of a community are best promoted if the use of injunctions can be avoided in labor disputes.

Should not pastors set the community thinking on such a policy at the beginning of a strike?

8. Pastoral Work in a Strike

A pastor's best work is usually done in his personal contacts with his people in their homes. This is especially true during a long continued strike. The leaders on both sides need the strengthening influence of his friendship, if he is a true man of God. Strikers' families may become hard pressed for the necessities of life. A church can hardly let its families suffer without doing what it can to help them. It is a time to make clear the real meaning of Christ's words "I was an hungered and ye gave me meat"; and, "If thine enemy hunger feed him, if he thirst give him drink."

9. Relief

In some communities where there has been distress growing out of long continued strikes or lockouts the churches acting together, have organized relief for families of the strikers. This was done by the Council of Churches in Los Angeles during the railway shopmen's strike, by the Council of Churches in Pittsburgh in co-operation with the social agencies during the coal strike, and at Marion, North Carolina, by the Commission on the Church and Social Service and its allied denominational departments of social service, in co-operation with the American Friends Service Committee. In none of these cases did the churches feel that they were taking sides in a conflict.

10. When a Strike Is Over

"The work of the organized religious forces in a community does not end when a temporary adjustment has been reached, when mill gates are open once more and operatives resume work," writes Dr. John M. Trout, Secretary of the New Bedford Council.

He goes on to say that the New Bedford Council joined in an all summer program led by the Chamber of Commerce for a bigger and better city, which had the co-operation of labor union leaders. They held week day community services and Sunday evening services in the parks, in which social questions were discussed by the speakers. They have been joining since in community projects. A small group of pastors took up the study of industrial problems so as to be better teachers and more influential in community life. Study groups were also organized in churches and industrial conferences were projected. A column has been maintained weekly in one of the city papers, edited by the Secretary of the Council, in which the public issues are discussed from time to time from the point of view of religion. The right and duty of the churches to participate in whatever affects the happiness of families and the welfare of the community has been vigorously maintained.

All of which means that once pastors have got together in the emergency of a strike, they are in a stronger position if they continue to act together for community welfare.

CONFERENCE LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Our Conference Leadership Training School will be held in High Point College, High Point, N. C., July 12-19. We are urging everyone who has taken a Standard Course and every one who has begun work toward a diploma in the courses for Young People to attend this school. Why not come to High Point College three hundred strong this year?

The best possible program has been arranged. In the Standard Courses we are offering the following: The Message and Program of the Christian Religion; The Teaching Work of the Church; Church School Administration; and The Life of Christ. These courses are open to those who are high school graduates or eighteen years old. We are also offering the four-year courses for Young People who are fifteen to eighteen. We have been fortunate in securing very able speakers. Dr. L. C. Little will bring us three addresses; Dr. R. I. Shipley will bring us three addresses; Dr. G. I. Humphreys will bring the commencement address; and Rev. R. I. Farmer will conduct the Vespers. You can readily see that the school this year offers you a rare opportunity. Certainly you can not well afford to miss this one!

Have you registered? If not, why not see the registration agent in your church now, or send your registration direct to me? It is very necessary that we put on this pre-registration campaign, so will you co-operate with us in this matter and make the campaign a success? Only a few registrations have reached me so far. The first group came from our church in Whitakers: Dr. J. H. Cutchin, Mrs. J. H. Cutchin, J. H. Cutchin, Jr., Danford Cutchin, Miss Mollie Wheless, Dr. T. M. Johnson, and Mary Ward Johnson. The second group came from Mt. Hermon Church on Mt. Herman charge: Flossie Thompson, Mabel Crabtree, Lois Coble, Ruby Isley, and Truth Isley. Registration agents, please get busy and put the campaign across successfully during the few remaining days.

What to bring: toilet articles, towels, bed clothing (a pillow, if you use one); tennis racket, tennis shoes, play clothes. The cost for the week is the same as that of last year, ten dollars per person. On to High Point College three hundred strong.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE

The Summer Conference of 1930 is now past history. For different reasons it was decided not to have vesper services other than on Tuesday evening. Because of the illness of his mother Brother Madison who was to conduct this vesper service could not be present. This was the only hitch in the program. Brother Gerringer was asked to take the part for Brother Madison and of course did it well. Thank you, Brother Gerringer. We have records of attendance for last year's after Tuesday and these records compared with the same days of this year show a very slight fall off from last year. During the four days of last year there was an attendance of 192; during the same days of this year there was an attendance of 190. Just a difference of two out of the four days. This was not bad considering the circumstances. The registrations were considerably better this year than last. This is gratifying. It seemed to be the most delightful conference for years. The preachers seemed to be pleased to gather again for most of the services at the Children's Home where the conference was held for a number of years in its beginning. A number of the brethren expressed themselves pleased with the program of this year. That is, to have lecture courses from men who are giving their full time to the line they brought to us rather than to have the different pastors discuss various topics. We certainly do thank these brethren who brought us these splendid courses of lectures. We also thank Dr. Humphreys, Rev. Warner and Rev. Farmer for addresses from the platform. Ladies' day was observed this year as it was last year. This was a great occasion. There was a full attendance of ladies and the attendance of the ministers as well as laymen was extra good on this day. The picnic dinner was another success. Dinners were brought and the large table was well loaded. The children and workers of the Home were cared for in a fine way. This is all appreciated and thanks are extended to whom thanks are due. Last but not least, in behalf of the entire conference, thanks are extended to the management and the children of the Children's Home for the splendid meals served to the conference. These meals were just fine. There was plenty of fine wholesome food most of which was the products of the home farm. Then it was prepared and served in a way that is to be appreciated. The home dining room furnished a fine place for fellowship that could not have been had at any other place. Thank you, thank you, grown folks and children folks of the home. We will never forget the good time we had.

The time and place for the conference of 1931 is the same as this year. At the Children's Home June 22-26. Pastors, make your plans accordingly.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Rev. Geo. L. Curry; first vice-president, Rev. C. E. Ridge; second vice-president, Rev. Ed Suits; secretary, Rev. H. Freo Surratt; treasurer, Rev. E. A. Bingham; librarian, Rev. W. M. Loy.

CONCENTRATION

Concentration is a great distinguishing faculty of men of high purpose. The ability to apply your mind steadily and exclusively to one subject at a time is a mark of superior power and essential to really great achievement. Concentration can be cultivated by regular and conscientious practise.

When you detect your mind wandering, instantly substitute the desired subject for the intrusive one. Repeated efforts of this kind will rapidly remedy the fault. Guard against mind-wandering and idle day-dreaming as enemies of culture and progress. Be deeply interested in what you are doing, and ignore vagrant ideas. Concentration will rapidly build your mental power. It is vital to large mental growth and personal advancement.

There are occasions when you must will strongly and decisively. To believe yourself able and efficient is a prerequisite to large accomplishment. The happiness and prosperity of many men have been due largely to courage and confidence, based upon well-established habits of decision, purpose and constancy.

The activities, duties, and problems of your daily life may make severe demands upon you, but you will be equal to every demand if your character is based upon principle. The ability to make sound decisions, and to put them promptly into execution, has been a leading characteristic of distinguished men. Choose your course wisely, then go forward with unflinching purpose.

FATHER

Used to wonder just why father
  Never had much time for play,
Used to wonder why he'd rather
  Work each minute of the day.
Used to wonder why he never
  Loafed along the road and shirked;
Can't recall a time whenever
  Father played while others worked.

Father didn't dress in fashion,
  Sort of hated clothing new;
Style with him was not a passion;
  He had other things in view.
Boys are blind to much that's going
  On about 'em day by day,
And I had no way of knowing
  What became of father's pay.

All I knew was when I needed
  Shoes I got 'em on the spot;
Everything for which I pleaded,
  Somehow father always got.
Wondered season after season,
  Why he never took a rest,
And that I might be the reason
  Then I never even guessed.

Saw his cheeks were getting paler,
  Did not understand just why;
Saw his body growing frailer,
  Then at last I saw him die.
Rest had come! His tasks were ended,
  Calm was written on his brow;
Father's life was big and splendid,
  And I understand it now.

THE FAR OFF LOOK

There is a story of a literary worker going to an oculist. She thought she needed new lenses. After an examination the doctor assured her that the trouble was not with the lenses, but that her eyes needed rest. She said that was impossible because of her work. After a little thought the oculist asked her if she had some wide views from her windows. She told him she had full view of the Blue Ridge from her front gallery, and the foot hills of the Allegheny from the rear. "That is just what you want," said the oculist, "when your eyes get tired from reading or writing go stand at your window and look steadily at the mountains for five minutes, ten would be better. This far look will rest your eyes."

Fellow workers, are you tired, too, of the little treadmill round of care and worry—tired of today's commonplaces? Then let us rest our spiritual eyes by taking the far look, even to the hills from which cometh our aid, many times a day. "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are not soon are eternal." Let's practice this far look.—Selected.

OPTIMISM | EVANGELISM

The President's Letter

All Things Through Christ

District Rally

June 29, Sunday.—This rally was held at Bethel Church, Flat Rock Charge, with the chairman of the district, Rev. J. P. Pegg, in charge. This district is composed of Flat Rock, Kernersville, Reidsville, Draper, and Haw River charges, and each charge was represented. The program of the rally was built around evangelism. The morning speakers were Brothers W. F. Kennett, W. T. Totten and myself. In the afternoon Dr. George R. Brown spoke. He was followed by a young man whose name I regret not to be able to give (I am writing en route to Pittsburgh, Pa.) Mrs. George R. Brown and Mrs. C. W. Bates were also on the program in the afternoon in the interest of the women's work. The attendance through the day was large and a pleasing interest was shown in all the proceedings. We are sure that these occasions are productive of good results. Bethel is one of the few centenary churches of our conference. The centennial celebration was held last year. The present building is commodious and well-kept. We were specially pleased with the care given to the church grounds. The activities of the church and its spiritual condition are also good. We found a well-attended Sunday School in progress, and the pastor announced that a children's day program would be rendered next Sunday night. It was a great pleasure to us to attend this rally and to share in its spirit and its purpose. Besides the ministers already mentioned, we noted the presence of Rev. C. W. Bates, Dr. A. G. Dixon, Rev. Felix Totten, Rev. T. F. McCulloch and Rev. A. R. Morgan. We were glad to be attended on this trip by Brothers Kennett and McCulloch.

Send It In

We mean the children's day offering. The reports in the HERALD of last week indicated that a number of children's day services are to be held. Many about which we have not yet heard will of course be held. Let us urge this about all of these services: just as soon as the offering is in hand, send it to Dr. Brown, treasurer. This is important. The Board of Missions is greatly in need of the money, and Dr. Brown's bookkeeping will be made easier if the money is sent in now. Please "Send It In."

Our Revival Season

We are now in the midst of it. During July and August most of our revival meetings will be held. This is true especially of our rural churches. We urge that all of us pray daily for the outpouring of God's spirit upon these meetings. We suggest that pastors all over the conference ask their people to keep these meetings in their minds, and to pray constantly for their success. The church's chief business is the salvation of souls, and certainly all of us should share in this work. Prayer is one way by which all can do it.

Abbreviating

We one making our report short this week owing to the heat, a tired mind and absence from home. But why not? People will read what is brief.

Our appointments remain as given last week.

CLERGYMEN JUSTLY ENRAGED

The prohibition poll of The Literary Digest showed the clergymen of the District of Columbia as voting for enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, 42; for modification, 38; and for repeal, 234!

This was widely trumpeted abroad by the wet press as showing that even the ministers of the country had come to see the folly of prohibition.

Thereupon the indignant Protestant ministers of the District of Columbia got together and made a thorough investigation. There are 198 clergymen in the poll, representing 19 denominations. Not one minister voted for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Only eight voted for modification; five of these were Lutherans, two were Protestant Episcopalians, and one belonged to the Evangelical Synod. One hundred and eighty-eight voted for strict enforcement of prohibition.

Of these Protestant clergymen, 109 had received the Literary Digest ballot, the same eight voted for modification, none voted for repeal, and 87 voted for enforcement.

Those are the facts; and yet the newspapers of the country have seen to it that the United States shall believe the clergymen of our national capital to be opposed to prohibition!—C. E. World.

PRAYERS FOR ANIMALS

One of the English scholars says somewhere in "Lux Mundi" that the suffering of animals presents a problem more difficult to understand than the suffering of human beings. Some of the Eastern churches include in their services prayers for animals. The Rev. Arnold N. Hoath, whose recent death lost us a charming writer, some time ago published in The Living Church three prayers taken from The Guardian, on behalf of animals. One of the prayers reads:

"Hear our humble prayer, O God, for the sorrows of animals; for all beasts of draught and burden, overworked and underfed; for all birds and animals in captivity who beat against their bars; that the love and care of those who tend them may lessen their suffering. For all that are in the charge of cruel men we pray thy cherishing love, that thy tenderness may comfort the oppressed, and soften the hard-hearted. Upon those that are lost or deserted or starving or frightened or in pain or dying, we entreat thy mercy and pity."

Another of the prayers has this ending: "For those that must be put to death, we pray that humanity and mercy may wait on every circumstance of their end. Their breath is thine, and we pray thee to be with them when they yield it up to thee."—Our Dumb Animals.

FAMINE RELIEF

Millions of Chinese children, caught innocently in the net of circumstances over which they have no control, are starving for the want of a few dollars and benevolent Americans are responding to their mute appeals.

"I am a little girl eight years old and I am so sorry for those little starving Chinese children. I want to send this dollar to them. It is not so much but it is all I have, besides a nickel, and I do want to help them so bad. Send it over there and maybe it will help a little. I hope you will get a lots of money for them," writes a little North Carolina girl.

State Chairman Albert L. Cox says that $2.50 will take care of one Chinese child for a month.

"VENGEANCE IS MINE; I WILL REPAY," SAITH THE LORD

John Hay, while still a very young man, was private secretary to Abraham Lincoln. Later on he was Secretary of State under Theodore Roosevelt. Probably few men in their lifetime have seen strength and weakness more strongly delineated in human character than Hay had been permitted to see and to know in his lifetime. The following poem written by him should be read by every professing Christian:

Saith the Lord, "Vengeance is mine";
"I will repay," saith the Lord;
Ours be the anger divine,
Lit by the flash of His word.
How shall His vengeance be done?
How, when His purpose is clear?
Must He come down from the throne?
Hath He no instruments here?
Sleep not in imbecile trust,
Waiting for God to begin;
While, growing strong in the dust,
Rests the bruised serpent of sin.
Right and wrong—both cannot live
Death-grappled. Which shall we see?
Strike! Only justice can give
Safety to all that shall be.
Shame! To stand faltering thus,
Tricked by the balancing odds;
Strike! God is waiting for us,
Strike! For the vengeance is God's.

SHOW US THY GRACE

Show us our need, O Lord; how lost, how helpless,
How poor, how sunk in sin our carnal hearts;
Show us how vain to change our sad condition,
Our best endeavor and our utmost arts;
Show us how weak we are, and how dependent,
How multiplied defeats our pride abase;
And then,—O Lord, lest we despair too wholly,—
Show us Thy grace!

Show us Thy grace, the great, the all-sufficient,
Infinite riches for our poverty,
Mercy of God for uttermost salvation,
Weapon that turns defeat to victory;
Gladness unspeakable and full of glory,
Beyond our needs, a vast, unmeasured space.
Lord, as we never yet have seen or known it,
Show us Thy grace!

THE TOBACCO PLOT AGAINST CHINA

WILL H. BROWN

In view of the adoption of the 18th Amendment in the United States, American brewers are transferring their business to China, and are thus adding the liquor curse to China's other misfortunes and evils. Outlawed at home, the brewers seek to enrich themselves at the expense of a country already sorely oppressed in many ways.

The National W. C. T. U., which has as one of its objectives world-wide prohibition, is working for a law that will disfranchise any citizen of the United States who engages in a business in any other country that is outlawed at home—and they confidently expect to have such a law enacted.

It may be that the haste of American tobacco men to make the use of tobacco universal in China is due to their foresight, reasoning from what has happened to the liquor interests here, for they have adopted this slogan: "A cigarette in the mouth of every man, woman and child in China."

Men who can deliberately plan and work for such an accomplishment in such a suffering country as China, should be disfranchised. Even hold-up men have been found who had a conscience. This attempt on the part of American tobacco men to nicotinize China's 400,000,000 people is one of the biggest, most conscienceless games in the history of the world. The most heartless crook spares the poverty-stricken, the feeble, and the children.

If the W. C. T. U. disfranchisement act becomes a law, let us hope it will not be many years until it will apply to the American tobacco men who have such a heartless attitude toward China.

BACK OF THE JOB

Back of the beating hammer
By which the steel is wrought,
Back of the workshop's clamor,
The seeker may find the Thought,
The Thought that is ever master
Of iron and steam and steel,
That rises above disaster
And tramples it under heel!

The drudge may fret and tinker,
Or labor with dusty blows,
But back of him stands the Thinker,
The clear-eyed man who knows;
For into each plough or sabre,
Each piece and part and whole,
Must go the Brains of Labor
Which gives the work a soul!

Back of the motors humming,
Back of the belts that sing,
Back of the hammers drumming,
Back of the cranes that swing,
There is the eye which scans them
Watching through stress and strain,
There is the Mind which plans them—
Back of the brawn, the Brain!

Might of the roaring boiler,
Force of the engine's thrust,
Strength of the sweating toiler,
Greatly in these we trust.
But back of them stands the Schemer,
The Thinker who drives things through,
Back of the Job, the Dreamer
Who's making the dream come true!

MARTHA'S GRADUATION PRESENT

"Yes," said Pete, Martha Martin's brother, "I've got to give Marty a graduation present. I'm thinking about it but I haven't decided yet what it'll be. I've saved up a dollar and I'm willing to spend the whole of it on her, but she's hard to suit. She says she would like me to make something for her, but I haven't time."

"Well," said Bill, Pete's chum, "let's go and watch the Dragons and the Hornets play ball. We can be thinking about Martha's present at the same time while we're watching the game. I get good ideas sometimes while I'm watching games."

"Tell me if you get a good one," replied Pete, as the two started off for the vacant lot nearby where the game was just beginning.

It was not a very good game. The Hornets played very badly, in fact, if they ever hit a ball it was just pure luck and their pitchers threw like girls. The Dragons hardly tried at all, but they beat them all the time. Pete and Bill laughed at first, then they got tired of watching such a bum game. Just as their patience was all gone, they heard horses hoofs and the rumble of wheels on the street. In a moment a bright yellow wagon came into view drawn by two large chestnut horses.

"Hurray," yelled Bill. "The trash wagon!"

The two friends ran after the wagon and were soon perched comfortably behind ready for a ride around town. For years this wagon had been driven by an old colored man named Ben who was a friend of all the boys. Pete and Bill supposed that he had hold of the reins now. But instead a new man was driving. When he stopped to gather rubbish at the next house and saw the two boys stealing a ride, he yelled at them and sent them scurrying off.

"Let's go over to my house," invited Bill.

Their way lay along the route taken by the trash wagon. It was a way strewn with papers and bits of trash, for the new man besides being cross was careless. Suddenly Pete stopped and picked up something off the road.

"It looks like a diamond!" he exclaimed. "I know now what to give Sis. I'll make a ring for her."

"It's glass," said Bill. "You said your sister didn't like cheap jewelry."

"But see it sparkle!" cried Pete. "It may be only glass, but I bet it's as pretty as any diamond."

Bill asked scornfully how his friend was going to make a ring. Pete replied that he had some thin pieces of brass which he would shine up and fix into a ring. Bill thought he could help, so the two went to Pete's room, one of which was fixed up into a little workshop with a table and tools. They made several rings before they got a good one and it was hard to make the diamond stick in its setting, but at last the ring was made and placed in a velvet lined box Bill's mother gave him.

"I think it ought to be from you, too," said Pete, but Bill said he'd rather not, because while Martha was all right, still he didn't feel like giving her a graduation present.

"She might think I'm sweet on her," he said, and Pete laughed, because Martha was a big sensible girl of seventeen and not likely to think such a thing of little boys of ten.

Poor Martha! She had gone and helped make a lovely white dress for graduation, and she was to get presents from so many uncles, aunts and cousins—but she didn't graduate. She got so nervous during her exams she just forgot everything she ever knew. So there she was.

Pete was real sorry for her.

"Marty," he said, "I know how you feel because I'd more'n likely to do the same thing. But never mind. I'll give you a graduation present anyhow." Then he bowed low and handed her the velvet box.

Martha seemed to be very much delighted with her present, especially when she learned that her brother had made the ring for her. She promised to keep it always.

"And wear it," said Pete. "I want you to wear it always."

"But, don't you see? It's too grand to wear always," said Martha.

"Then wear it on Sundays and to parties," said Pete.

"Oh!" exclaimed his sister. "It is too—er—grand even for that!"

"No, it isn't," said Pete. "It isn't too grand for you and if you don't wear it often I won't like it a bit."

Well, Martha was very good natured and slipped the ring on her finger at once where it glittered with blue and red lights. It was surely a grand ring.

Martha had to take her senior year over again and this time she graduated. She had not worn her ring since the first day her brother had given it to her. Now when she was all dressed in a new white dress ready to start for the hall where the graduation exercises were to be held, Pete came into her room.

"Look here, Marty," he said, "Where's my ring, eh?"

Martha tried to change the subject, but all in vain. She had to admit that the ring was in her drawer. Pete made her take it out and put it on her finger. Her mother whispered:

"It looks ridiculous, dear. Take it off when you get there."

But Marty shook her head.

"I can't disappoint him," she said. "He made it for me and gave it to me even when I flunked."

Her mother smiled, pleased at finding her daughter so considerate.

All during the exercises Martha wore the brilliant ring, and did not even try to hide it because she knew her brother would be looking for it. Some of the girls snickered at it. She had a piece to speak and more than one eye was attracted by the blaze of the stone on her finger.

Afterwards as she joined her family in the doorway, a man spoke to her.

"That is a very magnificent stone you have there, young lady," he said. "Take care of it."

Martha looked down at her ring and hurried to tell her fahter what the man had said. Then ,of course, Pete told how he had found the stone thinking it was just a bit of glass.

"We must try to find the owner," said Father, "and if we can't we must have it set properly for you."

They did not find the owner. The stone had been lost for over a year. It proved to be a true diamond, and Martha was the most excited girl you ever saw.

"Now I really can't wear it," she exclaimed. "It is too grand."

"Not for you," said Pete. "I wisht I'd found ten of them to make into rings for you."

"Don't you want it back?" asked Martha.

"I'm no Injun giver!" Pete exclaimed.

When he told Bill about the stone turning out to be a real diamond, Bill's eyes certainly grew big.

"Gee!" he exclaimed. "It's a good thing I didn't go in with you to give her that ring!"

Pete wanted to know why.

"Don't you know that when a fellah gives a girl a diamond that means he's gotta marry her? Gee! That was a narrow escape!" replied Bill.

Pete laughed, but Bill shook his head warningly.

"Better look out," he said. "I know what I'm talking about. I saw it in a movie!"—Selected.

THE TESTING OF BUFF

From the days when he was old enough to stagger about in his first cowboy suit, his yellow head topped by one of his father's old felt hats and a toy pistol in his belt, Rob had delighted in playing cowboy and Wild West Show.

So, when on his fourteenth birthday, Mr. Deaton presented Rob with a pony which he declared gentle enough for the children to ride, the boy immediately procured a long rope from the implement shed and was often seen tearing down the country lanes on Dinah's back, trying to lasso the fence-posts. Sometimes, to make the play seem more realistic, he would go into the meadow, and practice on the yearling calves, much to the amazement of the sedate old cows who fed in the same pasture, and the delight of Marjorie and George, who were the interested spectators of Rob's daring exhibitions.

Horns were still fashionable in calfdom in those days, and Rob really became quite adept at throwing the lasso. But James and Clifford, his two elder brothers, complained to Mr. Deaton that the calves were becoming so wild they would never amount to anything if kept on the farm for future use, so his father very peremptorily forbade Rob's playing cowboy in the pasture any more, and he had to content himself with a milder form of amusement.

But school opened shortly after this, and what with lessons during the week, and helping with the fall work on Saturdays, Rob found his time pretty well employed.

The older boys often twitted him about his proclivity for daring deeds. They teasingly asked him if he had "signed up a contract with Buffalo Bill yet." For Buffalo Bill as a show man was then at the zenith of his popularity. They even went so far as to nick-name Rob, Buffalo Bill, only they shortened the name to Buff, and by that name, much to his chagrin, Rob became known among all his associates.

Now no fourteen-year-old boy enjoys being teased, and Rob liked it no better than any other boy. But all winter he had borne the jokes of the others with the best of fortitude he could muster, and no one, not even kind Mrs. Deaton, knew how the boyish heart under the shabby old jacket ached for a little understanding sympathy.

Spring came at last, one of the busiest seasons on the farm. And while at its height, Rob had little time to spend with his pony. He helped with the morning and evening chores about the barn, and often when the older boys were at work in the fields, he milked the four cows alone.

One morning, early in May, he was awakened by his father's voice calling excitedly at the foot of the back stairs which led to the room known as the "boys' room."

"Boys, boys! Get up quick and help me. Blossom has a calf down by the old willow tree. It has been pouring rain all night, the branch is up and I'm afraid the calf will be drowned."

James and Clifford sprang out of bed, hustled into their clothes and rushed noisily downstaris.

Rob, fully awake, now got up, too, though he knew his help would probably not be desired. But Blossom was the pet thoroughbred Jersey cow, and he knew there would be great disappointment in the household should evil befall her or her calf.

He was amazed as he drew on his clothes at the incessant patter of the rain on the tin porch roof and the torrent pouring from the gutter spout. The barn was scarcely discernible in the gray waste of the rain-drenched yard in the early morning light. The evening before had been sweet and balmly, with a full moon and the air laden with the scents and sounds of early spring. No one had expected a dawn like this. Half whimsically Rob repeated the lines from Byron's "Eve of Waterloo" which he had often read at school; "since upon night so sweet such awful morn could rise," as he finished dressing. And to think Blossom should have chosen such a time and such a place to bring her offspring into the world!

Rob never knew why he did it, but as he passed through the back porch he seized his lariat from the neal where it had hung all winter, the noose still in it just as he had left it the preceding fall.

James and Clifford were already out of sight beyond the barn. The rain pelted Rob's face as he ran, trying to overtake them. As he climbed the fence by the windmill at the edge of the barn lot, he saw the branch, the name given the usually placid little stream which flowed between steep banks through the east meadow, about sixteen rods from the barn. But the branch was no longer a placid little stream. It was bank full now, and a raging torrent. With one quick glance Rob saw that the bridge, below the willow tree, where he and Marjory and George had spent so many happy hours the previous summer, was gone. Then he heard his father shout, "Get the calf James, and try and take it toward the barn, and then the cow will follow." Through the blur of rain, he could see James struggling with the wobbly-legged calf, now almost too weak from wet and exposure to move without assistance.

Above the roar of the water and the noise of the storm, he heard Blossom utter a low "moo" and take a short step forward. He saw his father and Clifford make as if to lend a hand with the calf, and then the water-soaked sod beneath Blossom's feet gave way and she sank down into the dark and turbulent waters.

Scarcely knowing what he was doing, Rob raced to his father's side. "Keep back, boys! More of this bank may go any minute," shouted Mr. Deaton. "Go on to the barn with the calf, James. You, Clifford, bring a pole from the fence there. Maybe we can get her before she gets out into the current."

"Here's Buff with his lariat. Maybe he can pull her out, father," said James sarsactically.

"I believe I could, father," said Rob quietly as the horns and head of the struggling animal came in view. In spite of her struggles poor Blossom was slowly drifting toward midstream. Clifford was frantically searching for a pole. It seemed absolutely hopeless that they would ever be able to rescue the cow from the torrent, or that she in her weakened condition would survive the experience if they were successful in rescuing her. If she drifted down stream she would probably be cut to pieces on the wire fence which spanned the brook some fifty feet below. All this flashed through Mr. Deaton's mind as he helplessly watched his pet. Rob's proffered help seemed just one chance in a thousand, but it was the only chance, so he said "Stand back as far as possible and go ahead and try then."

Very carefully but quickly, Rob prepared the rope and threw it. It fell several feet short of the poor animal who was already exhausted from her efforts to regain the bank. A second and a third time he missed, partly because of the uncertain footing on the slippery sod. His father warned him to give it up. But, somehow, through his brain flashed the remembrance of those unhappy days when the older boys had teased him so unmercifully, and James, sarsactic remark a short time ago. O, if he could prove to them that he could do something useful after all!

"I must succeed this time, I must, I must!" He kept repeating the words to himself as he cautiously moved a step nearer, and with set lips and white and determined face he made one more mighty effort to land the noose over poor Blossom's horns.

The rope flung out, poised for the fraction of a second above the cow's head, and as he drew it taut he knew that his aim had been true.

"Did you do it?" asked the excited watchful Mr. Deaton. "Clifford, James, lend a hand, will you!"

Clifford came running and seized the rope along with his father. Quickly they towed the cow to the ditch at the foot of willow tree, now a small lagoon because of the water which had backed into it. James soon appeared also, and by their united efforts, before long they had the frightened cow on the bank.

"Good old boy, Rob," said James heartily, as the dripping procession headed for the barn. "I'll mash the nose off the first fellow who dares to call you Buff again."

"Here too," said Clifford, while Mr. Deaton put his arm affectionately about Rob's shoulder and said, "He's father's pal from now on." And although the morning was cold and dark and rainy, Rob's heart was full of sunshine.

First aid treatment was given to Blossom and her baby by Mr. Deaton and the older boys, and strange to say, both survived their fearful experience, and before many days were able to enjoy the May sunshine in the pleasant barnyard.

"What shall we name the calf?" Mr. Deaton asked Rob as they were petting the calf one evening.

"O, Noah, I guess," said Rob.

"Why Noah?" asked his father.

"Because he survived the flood," answered Rob. And Noah he was to the end of his days."—The Leader.

THE RENEWAL OF OUR VOWS

"I will pay my vows unto the Lord." This Psalm is a song of thanksgiving for deliverance from death. After passing through such experience, if ever, a man thinks seriously. Afterward he may forget quickly and easily. The vows we make in crises ought to be fully carried out. Their payment results in certain "benefits." Religion is always a "benefit." It is a noble resolve to say "I will pay.' The man who does not pay is "no good" in the business world—and other where! If you cannot depend upon a man's promise, he is soon eliminated from business and the opportunities of life.

It is a matter of good morals to make vows. Everywhere in life, the men who do things, the men who lead, the men on whom we depend—are the men who dare to promise. The lawyer makes his oath when he enters the bar; every physician knows the ancient oath of Hippocrates; the minister takes upon himself solemn vows; young men and young women "plight their troth." It is a wholesome and essential habit in life. How much have you promised God for His "benefits" to you? What duty does the recollection of your vows bring to your soul? How will you "pay" that which you have vowed? Home, citizenship, business, church membership, the Christian life; these are all shot through with reasonable and vital vows. To omit or ignore them is fatal.—Ernest Bourner Allen.

THE SECRET

I met God in the morning,
When my day was at its best;
And His Presence came like sunrise
With a glory in my breast.
All day long the Presence lingered,
All day long He stayed with me;
And we sailed in perfect calmness
O'er a very troubled sea.

Other ships were blown and battered,
Other ships were sore distressed;
But the winds that seemed to drive them,
Brought to us both peace and rest.

Then I thought of other mornings,
With a keen remorse of mind,
When I, too, had loosed the moorings,
With the Presence left behind.
So I think I know the secret,
Learned from many a troubled way;
You must seek Him in the morning;
If you want Him through the day.

THE CHURCH

The Church of God does not depend upon some men who set themselves up as leaders in the same. Its future is not in the hands of Pharisees. In fact, many a man who is "over the church," as a veritable earthly lord holding high office in connection with the same, a political bishopric, for instance, is not even a member of that spiritual body of Christ named in the New Testament—"the Church."

Some years since, a high official in the world's largest Protestant denomination, put forth a declaration concerning his ideal Church. Into it, he would take the unconverted Jew and Gentile; into it he would take the warring liberal and conservative; the Unitarian and the Trinitarian; into it he would take the most devout believer and the most determined atheist. But, a society created after that manner, is not a Church, no matter what name it wears. It is a social conglomeration as far removed from the Church of Jesus Christ as the east is from the west, and, instead of building up the true Church, congregations assembled after that manner would shortly dissipate the same from the face of the earth. He would have in his Church only those who "trust" in Him, and if but "two or three were gathered together in His name," He in the midst, there is a Church of God.—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By J. T. BOWMAN

July 13: WORTH-WHILE HOBBIES

Scripture Text—Psalm 8:3-9

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Study of Animals. Prov. 6:6-11.

Tuesday—Study of Birds. Solomon 2:11-13. 4:29-34.

Thursday—Study of Recreation. Matthew 11:16-19.

Friday—Fishing. John 21:1-3.

Saturday—Music. Psalm 33:1-4.

To the Leader

Hobbies may be placed into two great classes—the worthless and the worthwhile. Some times we speak lightly of one who is "riding a hobby" and think that hobbies are not worthwhile but sometimes an honest-to-goodness hobby is a life saver; it diverts, rests, rebuilds and lengthens life. The right kind of hobbies broaden us.

One of the chief dangers of hobbies is their power to turn the switch and shunt the rider off the main line onto a siding and then forget to open the switch to get back on again. Perhaps the most objectionable and worst hobby is that of "nosing" into other people's affairs.

If we choose worthwhile hobbies, numerous fields of enjoyment and pleasure are opened to us. Contentment and even health may be wooed and won. Sometimes hobbies are of real value in the process of self-improvement. Occasionally we hear of a hobby which grows to such proprotions that it controls the life and brings fame and profit to its possessor. Gene Stratton Porter is a splendid example of this. Then many of the greatest and most useful inventions have come as a result of hobbies. It has been suggested that a splendid hooby would be the acquiring of an intimate knowledge of the word of God. This field is not crowded. Wisdom cries to us everywhere, urging us to study.

Some suitable songs: "Count Your Blessings," "Help Somebody Today," "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," "Some One Is Watching Your Light," and "Keep the Heart Singing."

To Be Discussed

1. What is a hobby?
2. Does it make any difference what kind of hobbies a person chooses?
3. Name some of the dangers of hobbies.
4. Name some of the blessings of hobbies.
5. Which part of the day is most dangerous, dividing the day as follows: Sleep, eight hours; work, eight hours, and play, eight hours? Why?
6. Name some hobbies of value for self-improvement in leisure time.
7. What should govern the choice of a hobby?
8. Does the possession of a hobby necessarily imply that one's life vocation is distasteful?

Suggestive Slogans

A purchased friend never lasts.

A photographed smile is never beautiful.

A man's pessimistic views are often caused by an intimate acquaintance with himself.

Honesty is the one business policy that need never be changed to keep up with the times.

QUOTATIONS

A hobby is a relaxation. Concentration is needed for our daily work. Just to stop work and not fill in the time with anything is to fall into a mental coma.—Anon.

A PSALM OF LIFE

Tell me not in mournful numbers,
Life is but an empty dream!—
For the soul is dead that slumbers,
And things are not what they seem.

Life is real! Life is earnest!
And the grave is not its goal;
"Dust thou art, to dust returnest,"
Was not spoken of the soul.

Not enjoyment, and not sorrow,
Is our destined end or way;
But to act that each tomorrow
Find us farther than today.

Art is long, and time is fleeting,
And our hearts, though stout and brave,
Still, like muffled drums, are beating
Funeral marches to the grave.

In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of Life,
Be not like dumb, driven cattle!
Be a hero in the strife!

Trust no Future, howe'er pleasant!
Let the dead Past bury its dead!
Act—act in the living Present!
Heart within and God o'erhead.

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

Footprints, that perhaps another,
Sailing o'er life's solemn main,
A forlorn and shipwrecked brother,
Seeing, shall take heart again.

Let us, then, be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.

—Longfellow.

J. D. Ross, Treas., Balance	1.25

I was absent from the state all of last week and did not get my report in the Herald. When I remind you that my balance at the time this report is made is considerabbly less than $300.00, with a lot of unpaid bills on hand, you will doubtless understand why I am not enjoying the hot weather quite as much as the other members of the conference.

Brethren, please read and observe the following: Do not send postage stamps to your treasurer. Do not send odd cents. Make your remittances in even dollars. Make your checks payable to Geo. R. LIBERAL REWARD FOR FINDING POEM

"When I was a young man my time and thoughts were entirely devoted to doing good instead of making money," writes Mr. J. J. Kelso, founder of the Toronto Tumane Society. "There were times, in consequence, when even the price of a dinner was lacking, but still I pinned my faith to Psalm 37:3.

One day, when finances were exceptionally low, a lady met me on the street and asked if I could help her find a piece of poetry written about a pet dog that had died. She could give me no date, but thought it was a year or two ago. Making a random search in the file-room of our newspaper the verses of Dr. J. G. Holland's now well-known poem, 'To My Dog Blanco,' were located in a few minutes. In spite of protest the lady insisted on paying one hundred dollars as a reward for finding these lines, and, needless to say, the money was a welcome relief, a direct answer to prayer."—Selected.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

THE BODY GUARDS

I had been driving across country and had had car trouble so that darkness overtook me some distance from a town. I passed a friendly looking farm house and decided to see if they would take me in. As I walked up to the door two of the largest and handsomest St. Bernard dogs I have ever seen came to meet me.

The mother of the house agreed to keep me overnight. Beside herself there was a grown son and a younger daughter. The mother's bedroom opened off the living room. She retired about nine. A few minutes later one of the big dogs came in and went into her bedroom. The son motioned me to look and opened the bedroom door. The dog lay on the floor at the foot of the bed.

"My father died three months ago," the son told me. "Those dogs had never been allowed in the house, but shortly after father passed away, at 8:30 in the evening, they both came in. The family tried to put them out but they showed fight.

"'Let them stay,' Mother said, finally. 'They'll be company.'

"That dog you saw there took his place at the foot of her bed when she lay down. Every night since he has come in at about the same time and taken the same place. If you step to the outer door you will find his fellow lying down just outside."

I did as suggested and there lay the other big dog.

"They never change positions," continued the son. "It is always the same one who comes inside."—Mrs. Lelia Munsell in Our Dumb Animals.

TWICE AS FAST AS THE AIRPLANE

It is commonly said that the airplane, going at record speed of something better than 350 miles an hour, is fast enough literally to run over any bird that flies. That has given the impression that no living thing could outspeed flying man in his machine, but that conclusion is incorrect. There is one little creature, tiny as compared to even a small bird, that can cover two miles to the airplane's one—even leave the noise of the big artificial bird far behind.

That champion of speed is the deerfly, the fastest thing in the world. Professor Townsend, formerly connected with the United States Bureau of Entomology, timed the deerfly at 400 yards a second, 815 miles an hour—more than twice as fast as the speediest airplane! If the deerfly could make a non-stop flight at known speed, under favorable atmospheric conditions, it could fly from New York to Paris in a little over three hours, and by hurrying up a little might circle the globe in a single day. I venture that it will be some time yet before flying man "runs over" the deerfly.—Lester Banks in Our Dumb Animals.

"THE RICHEST MAN IN NEW YORK"

The "Sunday School World" recently called attention to the death, in New York City, of a man who called himself the "richest man in New York City." His name was George White. He was ninety-four years old when he died, and he had spent fifty-six years as a teacher in New York City schools. During that period he had taught, or directed the teaching of, some 225,000 boys and girls. When he was in his sixties, former pupils organized in his honor the George White Alumni Association, and annually since then he has been their guest of honor at a dinner. Literally thousands of distinguished men and women have cherished his memory, and called him the man who laid the foundations of such success as they have attained in life. A few years ago at one of these annual dinners he said that life had left him "a poor man in money, but a rich man in friends, in memories, in mind and soul, in the knowledge that life has counted for something. I doubt if any man from the President down influences as many lives as the man who spends his days as a teacher. I believe I am the richest man in New York."—Selected.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We were glad to have Mr. Lee Leonard preach for us Sunday, June 29, and glad to hear that he is to be with us again on the second Sunday to help with the singing. We were also glad to have our pastor and his family worship with us.

A committee will be appointed next Sunday to get up a Children's Day program. It is rather late, but better late than never.

We ask the prayers of all the Herald readers that our church, Sunday school, and Christian Endeavor may all be built up.

REPORTER.

◆

Pinnacle—The revival meeting began here last Sunday morning and will continue through this week. Our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, is being assisted by Rev. R. C. Stubbins, of Forsyth Circuit. He has already delivered two splendid messages. There has been a very large attendance at these meetings, specially Sunday night.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely in a general way. We had the largest attendance Sunday we have had for some time. We are planning to attend the Sunday School Convention at Mt. Zion next Saturday. The program committee is preparing a short program.

The Ladies' Aid Society met on last Friday night at the church for their regular meeting.

We extend a hearty welcome to any out-of-town visitors who will visit us during the meeting this week. Services will begin at 8 o'clock each evening. REPORTER.

◆

First Church, High Point.—The congregation enjoyed a rare treat last Sunday morning when the newly elected president of High Point College, Dr. G. I. Humphreys, lately of Salisbury, Md., occupied the pulpit, and delivered a most timely and appropriate message based on the text from I Kings 19:4-14. He said in part: "I presume to the average man or woman there is no more interesting study than character study. These characters furnish many lessons. The story of Elijah comes and goes, but leaves a blazing light. Some of the revelations brought to us by the study of his life are: Elijah, the daring; Elijah, the despondent, and Elijah, the delivered. There is something very dramatic about his first appearance in the Vale of Esdraelon. The people of Israel had been vacillating, and somebody must call them to a momentous decision. There was only one man who had the powers of leadership, and that man is the prophet Elijah. So, making his challenge, Elijah undertakes to pit himself against 400 men of Baal; so he bids them to try their God. Takikng 12 stones, symbolic of the 12 tribes, he builds an altar, pouring water on the bullock for three times. All day long the priests of Baal prayed to their God to bring down fire upon the altar. When evening came, they had done nothing. Then the old prophet himself takes the barrel of water, pours it on the bullock, prays, and suddenly like lightning the fire came down and consumed the sacrifice: then the people cried out, 'He is our God, and we will worship Him.' We need to remember that this scene must be lived over again in the struggle between right and wrong. The story of Elijah on Mt. Carmel's summit must be our guide. When he saw that an issue was at stake, so we must remember that this scene is a symbol of our own lives and its tests. Then Elijah on Mt. Carmel's summit was despondent. Buoyed up by hope, he ran back to the palace of the king. When Ahab told the queen, Jezebel, that Elijah had slain all the prophets of Baal, she sent a messenger unto him, saying, "Se let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by tomorrow about this time.' So the old prophet fled for his life into the wilderness, and came and sat under a juniper tree. When physical vitality is low, we grow despondent. Sometimes after great spiritual experiences come reactions of despondency; people find themselves depressed, and say, 'What's the use?' You and I know this experience. Elijah lies down to sleep, and God appears to him, saying, 'Arise and eat!' Where do you suppose God wants any of us to go? He wants us to go to Horeb, the mount of vision. The finest experience that can come ot any of us is to hear God speak to us in a time of despair. First, there came a mighty rushing wind, then an earthquake, then a fire, but God was not in them, but where was He? He heard the still, small voice, 'What are you doing here, Elijah?' God said, 'Now, listen, Elijah!' There are seven thousand who have not bowed the knee to Baal. God has many more forces at work that cannot be estimated, that you and I cannot see and understand. Jezebel, the wicked queen, wanted to kill him, but Elijah was delivered from himself. The greatest slavery of all is to be slaves of doubt and fear. When the power of God sweeps into a human soul, it is a great experience. After Elijah had a vision of God, he went down the hillside serene and peaceful; the birds were singing, and he was happy. When we have had a vision of God, everything looks better, as we meet the needs of life. We pray thee that thou wilt help us to remember that thou art all in all to us."

Dr. Humphreys has a most pleasing personality, and this fine sermon captivated his audience. We can but feel that this is a good men, and that his work with us and the college will be greatly blest. As Mr. Farmer said in his morning prayer, may we feel in cur minds and harts that there is no higher interest than Christian education, and the program of High Point College should be taken to God.

The Vacation Church School is in its second week, and the interest and enthusiasm keep remarkably well despite the intense heat

On Wednesday evening, if the weather is good, a picnic supper will be enjoyed by the congregation at Municipal Lake, Jamestown. Each family will take its own lunch. The theme for discussion by Rev. Mr. Farmer will be "Green and Dry Trees." In the event of rain, the picnic will be held at the church, as usual. Following this supper, the Intermediate-Senior C. E. Society will hold its monthly meeting, when Miss Sarah Everhart will lead.

Miss Julia Elizabeth Coe left yesterday morning for Camp Leonda at Lake Junaluska to spend a month.

Mrs. Ben T. Moore and Miss Elizabeth Reitzel spent the past week-end at Myrtle Beach, S. C.

Miss Lucille Pickens left Monday morning by motor for New York, where she will study at Columbia University during the summer session. The party drove up through the Shenandoah Valley, via Lexington, Endless Caverns, and Winchester to Washington.

Miss Mary Eller is spending a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. W. P .Pickett.

Dr. Humphreys is spending the summer here, and has a room in Woman's Hall at the College, taking his meals up town. He expects to move his family here September 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Pickens motored to Roaring Gap for the week-end.

Mrs. Fred Leonard, who underwent a recent operation for appendicitis at High Point Hospital, is recovering nicely.

Rev. R. I. Farmer went to Bethesda, seven miles north of Lexington, to deliver the address at the annual Home-Coming last Sunday afternoon.

◆

First Church, Burlington.—Our pastor, Bro. Gerringer, brought two very helpful and powerful sermons to us today at the regular preaching hours. The congregation at the morning service was fairly large, but not quite as many attended the evening service, as a large number of our people attended special services at Fountain Place M. P. Church.

Bro. Gerringer attended the Pastors' Summer Conference at High Point last week, and while he was there, Mrs. Gerringer and the children visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. R. Oliver, at Kernersville, N. C.

Attendance in the Sunday school today was 288 and offering amounted to $18.83.

The Baraca class was taught by the assistant teacher, Mr. Geo. C. Smith, and the number present was 52. Business meeting and social was announced for Tuesday evening, July 8th, at 8 o'clock to meet at the home of Glenn F. Isley, on Church street. Let's have a full attendance of the Baracas.

Thursday evening, July 3rd, at 6:30 p. m., the Girls' Mission Band of First Church will give an ice cream supper on the church lawn.

The Christian Endeavor society held its regular prayer meeting this evening at 7:15, with Miss Tula Paul, the president, leader. About 15 were present, and the interest was very good.

Little Wilson Gerringer, of the parsonage family, who recently underwent an operation for removal of tonsils and adenoids, is able to be out again and getting along nicely, we are glad to report.

Best wishes in the great work of our Master. L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

◆

Asheboro.—Two more new members, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Brower, united with our church yesterday morning by letter, coming to us from Pleasant Hill Church on Why Not Charge. They have lived in Asheboro for the past two or three years and we are glad to have them unite with us.

Sunday school attendance was 252 as compared to 231 the previous Sunday, which was also the minimum for the past several weeks.

At the evening service yestrday we had the annual Children's Day service. The committee composed of Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr., Miss Kate Bulla, Miss Louise Swaim and Miss Cleta Rich deserve a great deal of credit for getting up such a splendid service, especially in such hot weather. The audience overflowed the regular auditorium and almost filled the Sunday school annex. We have not yet learned the amount of the offering.

Next Sunday morning Dr. G. I. Humphreys, the new president of High Point College, will preach. Dr. Humphreys is coming at the request of the pastor, not for the purpose of raising money, but that our people may know him better. We are expecting a good sermon.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Glen Raven-Haw River Charge.—We brought our revival meeting at Glen Raven to a close last Wednesday. During the revival 61 made professions of faith and 15 joined the church, and we are expecting several more to join later as a result of the meeting. Rev. C. G. Isley was the pulpit hlp, and he did some very effective preaching which was enjoyed by large congregations every night. His sermons wre the type that inspire us to higher and nobler things of life. Mrs. Isley, his mother, also was with us and contributed much to the success of the revival by her earnest efforts in personal workk. She led many to the altar and we thank her for her work. At the close of the last service Brother Isley was presented wit ha purse of $51.68.

We are planning to commence our revival at Haw River church on Wednesday evening before the third Sunday in August. Rev. N. G. Bethea will be our pulpit help there. We are praying and hoping for a great revival there. We have a splendid church there and are anxious to see it grow. Pray for us that ours may be a success.

O. C. LOY.

West Forsyth.—This writer desires to call attention to a mix-up in the last paragraph of our report in the Herald last week, which left the impression that Rev. M. P. Chambliss would be the beip in he revival meeting at Baltimore church. Evidently the "makeup" man dropped a couple of lines of type, causing the error. Rev. D. I. Garner, pastor of Randolph charge, will be the help at the Baltimore church, the meeting to start the fourth Sunday in July.

The meeting at Stony Knoll church will begin next Sunday, with services at 11 a. m., 2 p. m., and 8 p. m. The pastor will preach at the morning and afternoon services and Rev. M. P. Chambliss, the engaged help, is expected to arrive in time for the night service. The vote for delegate will be taken at the morning service. Bro. J. H. Speas, of Stony Knoll church, and Miss Gertrude Masencup, of Tabernacle church, are the nominees. We are trusting there will be good attendance and interest at all of the services of the meeting during the week.

Pleasant Hill church will render their Children's Day program next Sunday night, according to present plans. Regular practices of the program have been held for the past two weeks and the service is expected to be a very intersting and helpful one.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

West End, Greensboro.—Despite the usual summer detractions, such as hot weather, vacations, home-comings, etc., the attendance of both the church services and Sunday school is holding up unusually well.

During the month of June an attendance contest was staged between Calvary Sunday school and the West End Sunday school. Both schools made exceptionally good records—Calvary having an average attendance of 193 and West End 235; 221 being the largest attendance reached by Calvary and 245 for West End. In connection with this contest 823 invitations were given, by members of school, to friends and neighbors to attend our Sunday school. We feel that this was really a worth while contest and wish to thank Calvary for challenging us to such a contest.

During the recent State Christian Endeavor Convention, which was held at Home Moravian Church, Winston-Salem, our Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society was awarded the Intermediate shield for best work accomplished by any I. C. E. Society in the state during the past year. Miss Frances Foust and Mr. Ray Routh were the society's official delegates to this Convention, while several of the other Endeavorers attended part of the sessions.

REPORTER.

Greensville Circuit, Hobbs Chapel.—You are invited, come and bring your family! If you haven't a family, bring—somebody! There will be an all-day service here the second Sunday in July. The Children's Day program will begin at 11 o'clock. A Parent's Day service will be held in the afternoon. Brother Cowan has announced "special music" for the afternoon service, suspect he is planning to sing a solo(?) However, if he should have a case of sore throat, we'll substitute string music instead, Come!

We are glad to report that Mrs. Cowan has improved; we hope she will soon greet us at church with her cheery smile; we have missed her.

EMBASSY SMUGGLING

The Chilean Ambassador to the U. S., Senor Don Carlos G. Davila, some time ago received a rare Moslem rug which an attached note a rare Moslem rug which an attached nite offered to the Ambassador for $10,000. If he did not want this rug, said the note, would he please "return" it to a specified Manhattan address? Puzzled, the Ambassador consulted the U. S. State Department.

Last week the Department, after an investigation, declared that evidently many a foreign embassy at Washington has been thus used for smuggling high-priced goods into the U. S.; that a band of international crooks has thus been able to defraud the U. S. Treasury of at least $350,000 in duty. Chilean Ramon Silva, the band's leader, was arrested in India, and confessed his crime.

A BARGAIN

It was once proposed to the Duke of Wellington to purchase a farm in the neighborhood near to his estate, and therefore valuable. The duke assented. When the purchase was completed, the steward congratulated him upon having made such a bargain, as the seller was in difficulties and forced to part with it.

"What do you mean by a bargain?" said the duke.

The other replied: "It was valued at 1,100 pounds, and we have got it for 800 pounds."

"In that case," said the duke, "you will please to carry the extra 300 pounds to the late owner, and never talk tto me of cheap land again."—Selected.

—Frank Seagles of Lincoln county reports a yield of over 300 bushels of wheat from ten acres of land this year. The grain weighed 63 pounds to the measured bushel.

HOW THE MOVIES AFFECT ANIMALS

Cats and dogs do not get much kick out of the movies, says Daily Science News. During tests made in Berlin some time ago by Dr. Victor Mendel, animals and birds showed a surprising lack of response to moving pictures. The pictures were especially selected for each animal and animal group, and the experiments were made in an exhibition room especially adapted to the purpose. We read:

"The response of dogs was practically nil. Neither St. Bernard, setter, spaniel, poodle, nor collie gave the slightest attention to the pictures. Only a little mongrel of doubtful origin evinced a momentary interest by sniffing at the human figures on the screen. Experiments with birds were rather negative. Geese and ducks, chickens and pigeons paid some attention, while owls showed great interest.

"Small wild birds and barnyard fowl showed anxiety when a hawk appeared in their line of vision. A squirrel displayed interest when a weasel made its appearance on the screen, but reptiles and fish were, as might have been expected, almost wholly indifferent."—Our Dumb Animals.

—The U. S. Treasury Department tells us that nineteen months of participation in the World War and the "clean up" of 13 years since have cost the government approximately fifty-one billion dollars.

IT CAN BE DONE

Don't say it can't
When it can be done,
No matter how hard the work;
The thing to do
Is to see it through,
Not idly to sit and shirk.

The men that win
In the face of life,
Are foes to fear and doubt;
They toil with zeal
For a high ideal,
Failure they put to rout.

Don't say it can't
When it can be done,
Whatever your task today;
Stand up like a man,
Say, "I know that I can!"
Valor will blaze the way.

IS THERE MORE THAN ONE MORMON RELIGION?

The Mormon colony at Independence, Mo., known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is not affiliated with the Mormon church which has its headquarters in Salt Lake City. Those at Independence are the Mormons who refused to accept the leadership of Brigham Young in the early days of the religion. The two sects agree in most points of doctrine, but the Reorganized Mormon church repudiates the revelation of plural marriage and maintains that the law of God provides for but one companion in wedlock for either man or woman. Brigham Young published the doctrine of "celestial" marriage in 1852.—The Pathfinder.

Woman's Missionary Department

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Is your church one of the 80 churches reporting a Woman's Auxiliary, or are you one of the 151 not organized?

Are you using the Efficiency Chart?

Do your members take and read the Missionary Record?

Have you sent Mrs. S. W. Taylor, the Branch Treasurer, one-fourth of your budget for the year? (One-fourth of the missionary year is gone).

Are your young people receiving missionary instruction?

Is your Secretary of Spiritual Life busy about soul-winning at this special revival season?

Have you called on your District Chairman to help you? (The list of Chairmen was in a recent issue of the Herald). If I can help you in any way, call on me. Let's have reports in this page from the district meetings.

MRS. C. W. BATES,
Chmn. of Districts.

QUARTERLY REPORT—N. C. BRANCH OF WOMAN'S WORK

During the first quarter of our missionary year some of the auxiliaries seem inclined to relax after the strenuous work of bringing finances and department work up to date for Branch meeting. Having very little to report, I presume they think it not worth while to return the report blank sent them by the corresponding secretary. This idea is erroneous. There are several reasons why the officers of the Branch should check up on the Auxiliaries at least once a quarter.

A few Auxiliaries give names of old officers on their annual blanks, and from the quarterly blank the Branch Secretary gets the names of president and secretary, at least. A very good reason for the quarterly blanks is the mutual strength and encouragement imparted to both Branch and Auxiliary. Report blanks are like a friendly letter saying, "How are you, have you any good news to tell us? Is there something we can do to help you to solve your problems and create more interest in the work of missions?"

If you are using the Efficiency Chart you will surely return the blank promptly, for it is an "official letter."

Speaking of the Efficiency Chart, I was surprised that the reports from Branches given at the convention did not feature that phase of our work more largely, because to me it it the key to the whole situation as regards our Women's Work.

From the interest taken in the charts at our Branch meeting, and the additional number of Auxiliaries using them this year I am sure they are very helpful.

Last year 15 out of 65 Auxiliaries used them and this quarter's reports showed 23 out of the 45 reporting as using the Efficiency Chart.

Why are they helpful? They make your Auxiliary send in funds each month, increase the number of subscribers to the Missionary Record, hold regular meetings, teach missionary education in S. S. or C. E., hold Thank-Offering services and elect departmental secretaries. Some of our Auxiliaries have elected these secretaries since Branch meeting. More than half have none as yet.

Seventeen out of 45 Auxiliaris report new members during the past quarter and, by comparison, I find that some have new Record subscribers.

Scholarships and workers are reported as follows: Two workers in India and one scholarship in India, one in China, one in Japan and one at the Children's Home.

Nineteen Auxiliaries report young people's organizations and eight missionary work in C. E. soceties.

Maple Springs and Pleasant Hill report the Record in the home of each member of the Auxiliary, while three Auxiliaries report no Record taken.

I received three belated annual reports after Branch meeting, and two after the Executive meeting. Two Auxiliaries have been reorganized by Rev. B. M. Williams on his work since Branch meeting. Two reports are designated "Ladies' Aid," but contributing to missions. That is the Auxiliary idea, anyway.

The following are some replies to the question, "What plan have you found most helpful in your work?" Circle plan—5 auxiliaries; pledges—3, serving meals to clubs—3, following programs in yearbook—2, sales of various articles, presenting plays, birthday social, contest, quilt plan, giving each member something to do, free-will offerings.

Auxiliaries returning quarterly blanks (45):

Asheboro, Asheville, Bess Chapel, Bethany (Randolph Circuit), Bethel (Alamance), Burlington, Calvary, Chestnut Ridge, Community, Eden (Halifax), Fair Grove, Fountain Place, Friendship (Mt. Hermon), Gibsonville, Grace, Graham, Harmony, Haw River, Henderson, Hickory Ridge, High Point, First, Hollister, Hope, Lebanon (High Point), Liberty, Maple Springs, Mt. Carmel (S. Lexington) Mt. Carmel (Forsyth), Mt. Hermon, New Hope, Pinnacle, Pleasant Hill, Rehoboth (Granville), Shiloh, Siler City, Tabernacle, Thomasville, First, Union Chapel, Union Grove, West End, Winston, First, Whitakers, State Street, Lexington, Midway.

I sent 70 report banks and there are 10 Auxiliaries whose officers I do not know.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Sykes

On June 1 the angel of God came and plucked out of the garden of earth a little rose in the person of Winford Sykes, the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sykes of near Enfield. She had been permitted to live just long enough for the fragrance of her life to inspire that love and affection on the part of those who knew her that will live eternally. She lived just six months, but in those months she won a big place in the hearts of her father and those who touched her little life. And no doubt a much fuller understanding and appreciation on the part of her mother, who had passed just six months before to spend eternity with Him who said "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Her little body was placed in the Maplewood cemetery of Enfield, the writer conducting the funeral services.

Beck

Mrs. Minnie Proctor Beck was born October 21, 1875, and departed this life June 23, 1930. She is survived by her husband, L. H. Beck, and four children, two sons and two daughters, Ira Virgil, Robert, Mrs. Nora E. Cox, and Miss Lily Beck, also ten grandchildren, her mother, two brothers, and one sister.

Mrs. Beck was a member of Mitchell's Grove M. P. Church for a number of years and remained faithful to her church until death. She suffered affliction for many years but seemed to bear it with much patience.

The funeral services were conducted at Mitchells Grove church by Rev. W. F. Ashburn, of Greensboro, N. C., assisted by the writer. E. O. PEELER.

Of the laate Bishop Charles C. Grafton a Fond du Lac man said: "Bishop Grafton was remarkable for the neatness and point of his pulpit utterances. Once, during a disastrous strike, a capitalist of Fond du Lac arose in a church meeting and asked leave too speak. The bishop gave him the floor, and the man delivered himself of a long panegyric upon captains of industry, upon the good they do by giving men work, by booming the country, by reducing the cost of production, and so forth. When the capitalist had finished his self-praise and, flushed and satisfied, had sat down again, Bishop Grafton rose and said with quiet significance: "Is there any other sinner who would like to say a word?"—Exchange.

MARRIED

Madison-Pearson

In the Methodist Protestant church at Whitakers, Rev. T. Glenn Madison and Miss Dora Pearson, June 30, 1930, Rev. T. M. Johnson, officiating. The happy couple left immediately for a tour among the mountains of Western North Carolina, after which they will be at home in Thomasville.

Lindsay-Garrett

On Tuesday morning June 17th at the early hour of 7 a. m., in the First Methodist Prottestant church of Burlington, Miss Cynthia Ogburn Garret and Mr. John William Lindsay were united in marriage. Only a very small number of friends witnessed the ceremony which was performed by Rev. L. W. Gerringer, pastor of the bride. After a honeymoon trip by motor to Asheville and other points, Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay will be at home in Gainesville, Florida.

Pickens-Garland

In an impressive ceremony marked by charming simplicity, the Armfield home on West Broad St., was the scene of a pretty marriage on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock when Mr. Robert G. Garland and Miss Virginia B. Pickens plighted their troth in the presence of only the immediate families and a few intimate friends of the contracting parties. The bride's pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, was the officiating minister, and a beautiful ritual with a ring service was used. Miss Lucille Pickens, a sister of the bride, played the Wedding March from Lohengrin as they entered the library unattended and the soft strains of "Song of Love" were heard during the ceremony.

Mr. Garland is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Garland, of Woodrow Avenue, and is manager of Mann Drug Co., No. 2, and is a young man of splendid character and many sterling qualities, while his bride is the pretty and attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert T. Pickens, Sr., a grand daughter of Mr. Wyatt J. Armfield and also of the late Rev. C. A. Pickens. She was graduated from High Point College in the first four-year class of 1928 and taught last year in Asheboro city school. Immediately after the ceremony, the happy pair left by motor for a honeymoon trip to Washington, New York, and Niagara Falls, and upon their return here will be at home at 800 Fourth Street for the present. Many relatives and friends in North Carolina and other states will unite in congratulations and all good wishes for this popular and highly deserving young couple as they begin in youth's fair morning the great and glorious American romance of building a home and sharing work and the joys and sorrows of life together.

The following announcements are being mailed this afternoon:

Mr. and Mrs. Rupert T. Pickens, Sr. announce the marriage of their daughter
Virginia Britt
and
Mr. Robert Grady Garland

TAKE A CHANCE?

There is a fascination in risk. Children playing tickly-bender on thin ice; an acrobat walking a tight rope; aviators flying over the ocean; a poor man chancing his wages on the whirl of a wheel; a speculator hazarding a fortune on a turn in the market; all such ventures are alluring to mortals. The possibility of accomplishment is a factor in the allurement. Men like to gamble.

In battle or business, whatever the game,
In law or in love it is ever the same;
In the struggle for power or the scramble for pelf,
We think it is smart to wager one's self

This disposition to enjoy hazard seems to be characteristic of man. Animals are daring. They venture boldly under necessity, or for the protection of their charges, but man alone appears to covet "the thrill" of irrational adventure. Man alone indulges in chances as a form of intoxication. In contradiction of his intelligence, he embodies the stupidity of beetles and moths that torture themselves about an arc light. The ruin of others does not deter him. Hope springs eternal in his breast. He is governed by impulse when by the exercise of his intellect he might escape discomfiture. Social by instinct he becomes unsocial by impulse. If he wins, his gain is proportional to the loss of others. If he loses, it is not himself only who suffers. His wagering encourages the foolish and haphazard use of wealth and discourages those qualities of thrift and foresight upon which individual and national prosperity are built. He prostitutes a natural instinct by using it to pull down the bulwarks of community life.

The mischievousness of gambling is not always apparent. It is easily concealed. Most people have never thought much about it. It is an easy method of catching "suckers," and the proceeds are so alluring that the social effect is apt to be overlooked. Under the specious argument that "the end justifies the means," provided the end sought is beneficial, all manner of gambling traps have been set and baited for credulous human beings obsessed with the idea that by the occult influence of an invisible star called "luck" they are in some measure immune from the law of averages. Sovereign nations and enterprising states, cities and communities, not to speak of churches, clubs and other corporations, have promoted lotteries of one kind or another for purely mercenary reasons, and many are they who justify the practice.

But the courts of law in all lands recognize the danger of gambling and the social injustice and moral corruption inseparable therefrom. In most countries lotteries and gambling are under the ban of law. They are socially inexpedient, if not indeed morally wrong. In the United States the courts have upheld the contention that gambling is not a business but a crime, and that money loaned for gambling purposes cannot be recovered by process of law. In the language of the courts, whose decision is not only unanimous but harmonious in all the 48 states, "The whole system and mania is against private honor, personal integrity and public wealth."

This explains why our country got rid of the great Louisiana Lottery that was so deeply rooted in popular practice until outlawed by the Government at Washington in 1903. Its returns yielded millions of dollars to its promoters, thousands to the State of Louisiana and fortunes over night for some of its devotees. But, as described by J. S. Jordan in the New York Evening World, "the big wheel that was turned in New Orleans by aristocrats of the South, ground down monthly, thousands of good men and women in the dust of adversity and spread ruin through countless homes."

Slowly the moral consciousness of the American people is rising to the level of that intelligence and discrimination which recognizes the iniquity of trying "to get something for nothing," or for consideration not at all commensurate with the value wagered for. Slowly we are coming to see the wisdom of "square" dealing, where no return is sought that is not a mutually beneficial exchange of value for value, in which both parties shall benefit by the barter and no one shall suffer because of it.

Can anyone sincerely interested in the welfare of our country, or of mankind in a larger sense, fail to lament the increasing practice of gambling and chancing? Millions of dollars are exchanging hands every day in this irregular and unhealthy fashion. Millions of men and women, boys and girls are being corrupted. Their business integrity is being warped and disintegrated my a mania that is quick to become a frenzy to acquire wealth without giving in exchange a commensurate service.

What is the answer? Is there a way of escape from the evil consequences of these inborn tendencies of mankind; ambition, acquisitiveness, love for the hazardous? Rather than suppress these great instinctive urges, may we not find expression for them in wholesome and invigorating activities of a higher type that injure no one, but enrich alike both him who gives and him who takes?

What was Jesus' way? He who is ambitious, let him serve the common good. He who would acquire possessions, let him seek the riches that have eternal value. He who would be venturesome, let him risk everything for the Kingdom of God.—Pennsbury Leaflet No. 37.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Montgomery, High Point, a nice lot of sweet potato plants.

We thank all of you for these offerings for the Home.

Good News

The Octagon people have agreed, by letter today, to send us a large General Electric refrigerator for 106,000 coupons. We have 80,000 coupons, so if our friends will rally to our support we will soon have the refrigerator.

Our New Bus

We have said little about a bus because it did not seem possible to get one. But through the kindness of the International Harvester Company, Greensboro, and the Ford Body Company, Greensboro. We were able to secure an $1,800 bus for $1,200. Mr. Worth Kilpatrick, of Connellsville, Pa., gave us $600. A few other friends have helped, and our children and the workers in the Home gave liberally, so we have placed the order, the bus has been delivered and we are using it.

The children gave joyfully. One little tot had 50 cents which she called her "big money." One morning as soon as she got up she said, "Mother Dixon, I want to buy my big money with the bus." She had real joy in giving that big money. Won't you help us a bit with your big money to finish paying for the bus? Thank you.

Produce

Summer is on, and you will have grain or fruit or other produce to spare. Please begin planning your donations for the Home. Get together wheat, potatoes, canned fruit and vegetables at some central place in your community and send it to us, or let us know and we will send for it.

You will help in every way you can, and we thank you.

Pastor's Summer Conference

Our entire family enjoyed having the preachers in our Home last week. We hope they enjoyed us. We also enjoyed visits of many of our people for the picnic dinner on Friday. We delight to have our people come.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

RALLY OF THE FIRST DISTRICT

With but few exceptions the program was carried out as planned. All charges were represented except Greenville, Littleton, and Chase City. All pastors were present except Bros. Cowan, O'Briant, Fogleman, and Smith. Distance, no doubt, had something to do with our representative crowds; however, we had a good attendance from some of the charges. Next to Creswell, Halifax charge had the largest attendance, having 17 present. The Creswell folks treated us royally, a boating trip on a nearby lake and a fish-fry Saturday saw the beginning of our good time, which lasted throughout our stay with these good people. The smoothness with which the plans for our entertainment were put into operation is an evidence of the spirit of unity which exists between the pastor and people of this charge. From our arrival on, the parsonage was made headquarters for the delegates. And truly it was a nice place to hang around.

Brother Hethcox is completing his 12th year as pastor of this charge.

Those of you who were not there have missed something wheih will be difficult to duplicate on any other charge in this District.

REVIVAL CLOSES AT GLEN RAVEN

On Wednesday night June 26, Rev. O. C. Loy, pastor, and Rev. Clarence Isley, who had been conducting the revival brought the meeting to a close. Rev. Loy stated that they regretted to bring the meeting to a close while the interest was still high, and while so many people were still out of the Ark of Safety but after consideration they thought it the proper thing to do.

The week of prayer meeting previous to the revival; the personal work and special work of the Christian people together with the fine inspiring sermons delivered by Rev. Isley resulted in bringing between 50 and 60 persons to the altar. On Wednesday night the doors of the church were opened to those who wished to unite with the church, and Rev. Loy received 15 new members into the church. Some of these members having come from other churches, others joining the church for the first time.

The Old Life and the New

The life of sense that once I lived
Then seemed to fill my full desire:
Enjoyment came with every breath
And I could think of nothing higher.

But growth began within my soul
And needs were felt unknown before.
New longings showed that life for me
Undreamed-of things now held in store.

From life of sense to life of faith
I gently passed in course of time:
And now by faith I clearly see
A world that fills with joy sublime.

Terrors of the Night Time

The darkness of night and the state of the mind in sleep or partial sleep form a background for the appearance of creatures of most frightful mien. Fact and fancy combine to produce results in keeping with our excited state of mind. When the sun is shining brightly it is easy for us to see omens of good. But in the still darkness of night when we are in our weakest state and sleep has come or is approaching we have the favorite season of ghosts and hobgoblins. Here are a few cases:

One night I was aroused from a deep sleep by the feeling that a strange presence was in the room. I could see nothing, I could hear nothing, but still I could not dispossess myself of the feeling that I had a visitor. Noiselessly I pressed an electric button and flooded the room with light. To my amazement I saw a huge headless man with outstretched hands slowly groping his way across the floor. I could see clearly the style of his dress which seemed to be of the colonial age. I could see the neckerchief neatly folded. In place of the head was simply a bald patch of skin, bearing no marks of blood or violence. What could this headless monster want? As I gazed he slowly turned his direction toward me. By this time I was sitting bolt upright in bed. As he approached me I gave a feeble nightmarish scream and the specter instantly vanished. I found myself shivering with terror in total darkness. I had not turned on the light, only dreamed that I had. I at once turned it on and was intensely relieved to find the articles in the room in their usual places with no sign of the presence of any visitor.

Another case: Two men out on horseback late at night happened to meet in front of an unoccupied dwelling. They recognized each other and stopped for a conversation. As they talked they saw emerging from the darkness in the rear of the house a ghostly figure. It moved slowly and noiselessly toward them. Their horses were both affrighted and could not be restrained. Abruptly they said good night and rode away in a gallop in opposite directions. One of them was carrying some bacon. He said afterward that if he had dropped his bacon he would not have stopped to recover it. This ghost could not have been the creature of their excited imagination, for that would not have alarmed their horses. The most probable explanation is this: the vacant house was soon to be sold at auction, and some would-be purchaser thought he could reduce competition by creating the impression that the house was haunted.

Another case: Two young men who had gone calling on some ladies were on their way home on horseback. They were passing through a dark wood beyond which was a graveyard. They were surprised to see the figure of a woman approaching them from the direction of the cemetery. They watched her closely until she had passed them and gone on. They observed that she was exceedingly tall, her head rising above theirs. Who was this awesome figure? Just a makeup of a jealous young man.

The children of fear begotten in darkness and ignorance are a dreadful progeny. Many of the demons that possess us and torture us are of our own creation. The light of intelligence will drive from the world not only the hobgoblins of superstition but will rob realities of many of their terrors. It is said that poisonous snakes sometimes bite themselves to death. Certain it is that we humans punish ourselves severely by the power of our own imaginations. There are malign powers in the world, but we need not be panic-stricken because of them. They that be for us are more than they that be against us. The earth and the heavens are filled with the horses and chariots of God.

No Herald July 24

The HERALD's summer vacation has been chosen for the week including July 24. This will give temporary relief from the heat and grind of printing shop work. Those having announcements to make that week will please send them in time to be printed the previous week.

◆

—The HERALD's distinguished friend, Mr. Grenville Kleiser, now of Paris, France, sends his check for ten subscriptions to count in the present campaign. We thank him most cordially. This is the second time he has contributed in this campaign. Mr. Kleiser is distinguished by his ability and achievements in the world of letters as well as by his kindly spirit and generous deeds in his contact with his fellowmen. One of a number of important literary tasks he has performed was the editing of "The World's Great Sermons" printed and sold by Funk and Wagnalls Company. It is through his sheer kindness that we are sometimes able to offer our readers the choice fruit of his literary genius. His prose has weight and wisdom and his poems sparkle with wit or shine with the light of true moral philosophy. We highly appreciate the friendship of such a friend. May all joys be his!

UNFAIRNESS OF PROHIBITION'S ENEMIES

The following true story shows the spirit and methods of the wets in their war against the nation. Honest people everywhere must be on guard against misinformation and deception.

Plain Talk magazine for July printed as its leading story a 20-page contribution by Walter W. Liggett, entitled "Ohio—Lawless and Unashamed."

The whole article consists of gross exaggerations, half-truths and scandalous falsehoods against various villages and cities and against the state of Ohio as a whole. The manifest purpose of the subject matter is falsely to allege the failure of prohibition and to discredit its champion, the Anti-Saloon League.

Westerville, Ohio, executive and publishing headquarters of the Anti-Saloon league of America and seat of Otterbein college, the largest educational institution of the United Brethren church, is wrongfully slandered in the Liggett article as a place where prohibition is a failure.

From the numerous untrue statements about Westerville, the following are selected: "There are at least twenty speakeasies in the town and bootleggers call on their customers almost as regularly as the milkman . . . A denominational college in Westerville is run by the United Brethren and a fairly large proportion of the college boys and girls are thoroughly familiar with the taste of hard liquor . . . High-powered home brew is manufactured in hundreds of Westerville residences and some of the country club dances are decidedly moist."

The Westerville Committee of one hundred for law observance is made up of over 200 individuals connected with the various churches, chamber of commerce, business firms, college faculty and employees of the Anti-Saloon league. It has been in existence for more than a year. It has co-operated with the local officers in suppressing such minor liquor law offenses as have occurred, has secured an annual budget appropriation by the City Council of $500.00 to be used when necessary for investigations, has instituted a campaign of temperance education in the schools and has been active in the support of local, county and state officers in law observance and enforcement.

A morning paper at the nearby capital, Columbus, issued the first front-page news publicity, headed "Twenty Speakeasies in Westerville," and then proceeded to give the false statements about Westerville from the Plain Talk article. Immediately Westerville was aroused. The committee of one hundred functioned. The specific slander to the effect that "there are at least twenty speakeasies in Westerville" was selected as a central point of defensive attack, in a general movement of protest.

Immediately a group of indignant Westerville business men, members of the committee, deposited $1,000 in the Bank of Westerville, and President W. G. Clippinger of Otterbein college and five other persons not connected officially with the Anti-Saloon league by registered letter challenged Liggett to produce his proof and take the money. In reply to a telegram sent Liggett in care of Plain Talk magazine by the Columbus Citizen, an evening newspaper, Liggett declined so to do. He said that no amount of money would tempt him to disclose the names of his "informants."

While awaiting Liggett's reply, the city manager of Westerville employed two detective agencies of good repute to inspect the town and to obtain evidence if possible of the presence of such places. A largely attended union community meeting was held last Sunday evening, June 29th, under auspices of the churches and the committee of one hundred to hear of the conditions in Westerville and to take appropriate action. The proof presented was conclusive that there is not one "speakeasy,"—which is defined as "a place of resort where liquor can be purchased in violation of law."

The reports of the agencies, each of which spent three days and nights in diligent search, are as follows:—From the Easley Investigation Service, Columbus: "All garages, poolrooms and tire stations have been checked in a leisurely manner; I have talked to the operators of these places, also to restaurant owners and other business men, endeavoring to find a place to purchase liquor or beer, and have failed in all attempts." From the Cleary Commerce Detective Bureau, Columbus; J. D. Cleary certified: "My two operatives were unable to find any bootlegging anywhere in Westerville, or any speakeasy, or any kind of liquor being sold or handled. They did not see anyone drinking any kind of intoxicating liquor during these three days and nights in Westerville. They visited public places, talked with a number of residents and some business people, and after diligent and thorough searching throughout the village they were unable to find any violation of the liquor law." Mr. Cleary further certified as follows: "I further report that I personally investigated Walter W. Liggett's visit to Westerville. Mr. Liggett and the editor of Plain Talk magazine, the late G. D. Eaton, were in Columbus in April, 1930. One day while in Columbus, after first calling Westerville upon the telephone, Mr. Liggett went to Westerville and made calls while at Westerville upon two persons who are residents of Westerville. Mr. Liggett then returned to Columbus. The time occupied by Liggett in his trip to Westerville was about two hours." The names of the "two persons" were discovered, but will probably not be published.

The foregoing facts, which prove utterly false the statement of Liggett that "there are at least twenty speakeasies in Westerville," have discredited and condemned his whole article against the state of Ohio. The United States district attorney at Columbus has announced that Liggett would be summoned to answer to the Grand Jury at the fall session of the Federal Court. The district attorney was reported by the Columbus Citizen as having said Liggett's article "hasn't a word of truth."

An editorial in the Ohio State Journal censures the citizens of Westerville for showing a spirit of desire to "wring the necks" of those blamed for the story and for their efforts "to get the scalps of writer Liggett and his two informers." This intention was denied upon the part of Westerville committee of one hundred in a communication to the Journal by President Clippinger and others, and the real purpose of the defensive protest is stated by them as follows:

The intent and purpose of the committee of one hundred is set forth in the resolutions adopted at the meeting, as follows: "We appeal to the allies of prohibition to organize more strongly in communities, counties and states to bring to pass the following results, namely: First: To offset falsehood with truth; to publish more zealously everywhere, especially to youth, the warning that alcohol is a narcotic, habit-forming poison, and that the traffic in liquor has been officially outlawed because it is inconsistent with and impossible under our new conditions of civilization. Second: To smite, wherever it appears, every effort to spread the poison of false publicity, to withdraw support from disloyal and untruthful publications and heartily to encourage those patriotic publications which stand by the policy of prohibition and obedience to law."

This story comes to us from the Westerville Committee of One Hundred for Law Observance, Howard Hyde Russell, Chairman.

SAVE AMERICA!

Where I required to go through the graveyard of the world and place a marble slab over the grave of every dead nation of the world, with the cause of its death inscribed thereon, I would use but one word—Sin.

Sin is injustice, selfishness, lawlessness, rebellion against constituted authority and the only cause of human degeneracy.

When a nation becomes degenerate, it gradually grows more and more enfeebled, and at length goes the way of all the earth.

Sin, therefore, is a reproach, a shame, a disgrace to any nation. Rome, Greece, Babylon, Egypt—all tell the same painful story, that the nation that sins dies.

Is America in peril? If not, why this agonizing cry going up all over the land; "Save America?" America is in peril. There was never a more perilous hour in her history. Our nation has become the most lawless civilized nation of the world. Unless there is an immediate checking up in its course, it will be impossible for America to survive.

Lest it be thought that I am an alarmist, let me quote just one paragraph clipped from a newspaper the other day:

Every thinking man and woman is alarmed, spiritually and patriotically, over the terrible lawlessness and contempt for authority which prevails all over the United States. To what depths will society sink if lawlessness is not checked? The home, the nation and the government can not exist in honor, brotherhood and security, if the contagion of moral debasement is allowed to spread.

Among the causes given for this condition are the following:

Our youth as a nation; our get-rich-quick obsession; our mistaking of license for liberty; our wonderful prosperity as a nation; our remarkably rapid advancement as a nation; our love of ease and elegance as a people; and our attempt to cure every ill with a statute.

But these are only surface views, merely the frothy foam on the crest of the waves. Those who would understand conditions here must look deeper.

There is now, and for some years has been going on in this country, an insidious attack on American institutions, of which the general public has been little aware. Those carrying on this attack have various ways of proceeding, but always the attack is upon our institutions. They lay special emphasis upon the contemptibleness of law, and one certain group by solemn resolution has declared that their number will determine for themselves the constitutionality of law rather than obey the decrees of the courts.

Those responsible for this propaganda are composed of several distinct groups, the three main ones being:

1. Certain American College Professors. The great body of our American teachers are patriotic, loyal to government, and self-sacrificing in service; but certain alien elements, communists and anarchists, have found their way into our schools, and there they sow in the unformed minds of youth the seeds of unrest and revolution. They raise suggestive questions as to whether things are right as they exist today; whether the marriage bond, revered by us for centuries, is not fundamentally wrong; and whether the Christian religion has not outlived its day of usefulness. In the atmosphere of every American university has grown up an egotistical and conceited intellectual aristocracy which defies the vengeance of God and despises the opinions of men. Out of all such atmospheres comes the emphasis upon the materialistic conception of the universe, which does away with the dignity of man, the inspiration of the Bible and the authority of God.

2. The Parlor Socialists. Members of this group infest all of our large cities. They are generally the offspring of men who have made large fortunes, mostly by lawless methods. Coming into this inheritance, and never themselves having engaged in anything but idleness, they have abundant opportunity to engage in wise talk about "a more equitable distribution of wealth" and "a government under which every one will be happy." It must be noted, however, that no one of them was ever known to deny himself any of his own comforts, nor to distribute any of his unearned wealth among the proletariat he professes to love so much!

3. The I. W. W. and Kindred Radical Groups. These have established offices in most all of our large cities. Their objective is the workingman, whom they seek to embitter against capital. The extent to which they carry on their propaganda is evidence of the fact that from some source they are powerfully financed. They specially devote themselves to the creation of class consciousness. This is the most dangerous propaganda on earth, for, when once rooted, it is the most difficult to destroy. The ills of Europe today are largely the ills of class consciousness. Deep-seated prejudices of one class against another are handed down from generation to generation, and are the fruitful cause of war. When once class consciousness has been firmly rooted in America, the reign of perpetual strife, confusion and bloodshed is at hand. The man who wilfully contributes thus to the creation of class consciousness is an enemy of man, an enemy of our government, and an enemy of God!

This, in brief outline, is the condition from which America must be saved. Fundamentally, it is rebellion against God. Religion lies at the root of man's nature. He is incurably religious. Before he can become degenerate, religion must be uprooted and God banished. And that is precisely what these anarchists and outlaws are trying to do—banish God—just as they are doing in Russia. It is the result of a program that has been running in this country for years. A quarter-century ago I warned my people of it from my pulpit, now it is here. Communism is fundamentally atheistic. Its conception of the universe is materialistic. It would tear down every altar, wipe out the home, destroy every flag on earth but its own, and turn the human race back to animalism and primitive barbarism.

And that is just what Rome did before she died. If one will take pains to read that part of the first chapter of Paul's letter to the Romans which deals with the matter, he will find the awful excesses to which the Romans went when they parted company with God. Many, if not all, of these excesses are being reproduced in American life today. It is the story of every nation that has gone down to death and decay.

Are we utterly without hope?

King Lear's answer to Gloucester, "Ay, every inch a king," had embodied in it the epitome of man's conception of greatness. The king, if "every inch a king," has always been the lawgiver, leader and ruler of men. In him centered the majesty of the nation. Viewed as the source of authority, the protector of the weak, the defender of home and vested rights and the champion of liberty, law and order, the yearning of every loyal heart for him was revealed in the cry, "God save the king."

Under our system the people are king. The idea that the citizen exists for the sake of the State has been supplanted by the doctrine that the State exists for the sake of the citizen. But with that change of ideas has come a new responsibility. As in the days of old the priests bore "the iniquity of the sanctuary," so now the people bear the responsibility of government.

America is "king." Let her be "every inch a king."—Charles L. Brooks, D.D., in Supreme Council Bulletin.

COOLIDGE ON PROHIBITION

In the Cosmopolitan for May, 1930, Calvin Coolidge sets down some common-sense thoughts on prohibition. In these days when violators of law claim that their own lawbreaking ought to be taken as a reason for repealing the laws they break, Mr. Coolidge's words call us all back to the world of reality. Mr. Coolidge says:

"Considering that people have differed most radically on the best method of regulating the sale of liquor for generations, it is not likely to be settled for a long time to come. Of course enforcement is necessary under the law, and may be one element in determining the future course of action in relation to prohibition.

"No law on this subject has ever been free from criticism. So long as the human appetite for stimulants on one side, and for money on the other side, remain what they are, there are likely to be some violators of a prohibition law. If, judging by the past, this agitation is destined to continue far into the future, attended by considerable fanaticism on both sides, the question arises as to what attitude the people can take concerning it. We have the amendment. There is no immediate prospect of its repeal.

"It seems to me the country can get considerable assistance by recalling the attitude of Lincoln in all his discussion of the slavery issue. He was opposed to slavery, and thought the decision of the Supreme Court in relation to property in a slave was unsound. Yet he was not an abolitionist and did not approve of the violence of John Brown, or the nullification and secession proposals of the radical groups in the North.

"He declared it the duty of citizens to support the Constitution, observe the fugitive-slave law, and accept the decision of the Supreme Court in dealing with property in a slave, until by due process these were changed. Lincoln did not recognize any abuse so great, not even human slavery, that he was willing to try to remedy it by a violation of the law of the land. This may well be pondered by those who feel aggrieved by prohibition.

"It is my judgment that the great body of serious-minded people, who think there are other subjects of superior importance to a drink of liquor, may well continue to follow the principle Lincoln so clearly stated, realizing that we have a well-defined constitutional method of changing our statutes and our fundamental law whenever the people desire, but that so long as the Constitution and the laws remain, the duty of all people to observe them in good faith and of all duly authorized public officers to enforce them in good faith can only be denied by an appeal to anarchy. No one need feel that a country which maintains this attitude will not, candidly and without prejudice, examine any proposals that are made for the improvement of its people and the betterment of its condition.

"If we could all keep in mind that nothing, not even the art of finding fault, is yet perfect, and that the burden of proof is on those who propose a change to show that it would result in an improvement, we should dwell together with less bitterness and more good will. The ultimate determination of human conduct will not be made in terms of appetite. It will rest on the finer and higher, more permanent, and more divine qualities of our nature."—C. E. World.

EXPLORING THE MORAL LIMITATIONS OF THE WORLD

Several years ago when Commander Byrd returned from his flight over the North Pole, a reporter asked him what his thoughts were on that long flight. He is reported to have said:

"I thought of the limitations of those who have taken over the conduct of civilization. I thought for the first time, as in a flash of understanding, of the inadequate results of the effort to solve, not the enigmas of space and time, but the problems of mankind.

"We have improved and progressed and developed, but we have failed to make the most of ourselves. We have explored everything except our consciences.

"We are still a horde of pigmies, selfish and envious, each striving for individual supremacy.

"It is not the geographical but the moral limitations of the world that must be charted, and the really great explorers will be those who find the way to universal reconstruction, the first step in which is the abolition of war and the needless destruction of human life."—N. C. Christian Advocate.

A FINAL CALL

When you read this it will be time to start for High Point College to attend the 1930 Leadership Training School. This is a final call. A most splendid program has been prepared. Do not miss it! A full week of inspiration awaits you at the 1930 school.

Come to High Point College on Saturday, July 12th. Come early, select a room, select a course. On to High Point College three hundred strong on July 12th.

FRED W. PASCHALL.

—The judicial decision refusing citizenship to a Yale University professor who would not agree to take up arms in prosecution of a war which his conscience condemned has been modified by a higher court. In this later decision individual conscience is recognized as a respectable authority in the determination of conduct. The tendency of deify the nation or mankind as a whole and reduce God to a nonentity is already too strong in many minds. The Kingdom of God should be recognized as highest of all. All that conflicts with the claims of righteousness, God's righteousness, should give way.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Forsyth

July 6, Sunday.—This date was given to this charge, with a visit to Maple Springs and Mt. Carmel churches. The service at 11 a. m. was with the former church. We were heard with helpful attention by what we suppose was the average congregation for this place. The membership enrollment here is not large. An interesting feature of the service was the presentation of a Bible Story Book to Grandmother Hunter. The gift was from one of the church societies to which she belongs, and the occasion was her advanced age, and very fond of reading. The strength and sweetness of her character marks her as an "elect lady." She was about to be missed when the offering was taken, but she rapped for attention, and had the plate passed to her that her offering might go in. I do not have her religious record, but I doubt not that all of her life she has been a church goer and that she has always been liberal with her means in the support of the church. May the blessings of God abound toward her, and keep the way light and smooth for her feet. The people at this place are loyal and progressive; the church is well organized, and the work is going forward with normal progress. This church and the parsonage of the charge are located on a large and beautiful wooded lot in the west suberbs of Winston-Salem. The property would seem to be valuable. The people here are loyal and progressive; the church is well organized, and the work is going forward with normal progress. This church had two honor roll recognitions last year. We trust that they may have a complete record this year. They now have the HERALD in every family but one.

The visit to Mt. Carmel was at night. We had the privilege here of enjoying a well prepared Children's Day program. We did not learn the amount of the offering, though we trust it was liberal. In the short time that remained to us to present the conference programs, we were heard with marked interest. This church made a good record last year, having secured four places on the conference honor roll. They will improve that good record this year, we trust, by making it 100 per cent. Our first active connection in our conference work links up with this church. We were never there many times; but Brother John Faw and Rev. Mr. Patterson made the church indelible on our minds. They were regular attendants at the quarterly conferences of the Winston circuit, and it was here that I first came to know them. This church belonged to that charge then. They have both gone on to their places in the church above, but their works follow them. The church in which they worshiped and worked continues with increasing strength and usefulness. The old building has been replaced by a new and more commodious one. When the plant is completed it will be one of our very best equipped rural churches. It is certainly "beautiful for situation," and we are sure that it is "the joy" of many of the people in the community where it is located. The Sunday School here is good, and the condition of the church in general is highly encouraging.

There is, however, one failing in the church here; too few church papers are taken. We trust that there may be a change in this particular at an early date. No congregation can afford to miss the benefits that a liberal circulation of the church paper always gives.

This charge has recently sustained a great loss in the passing of Miss Bettie Cox. She was reared in Hickory Grove church, and for many years has been one of the most active, earnest and influential workers in that congregation. She was a woman of beautiful Christian character, and the influence of her good life will continue to live in the church that she loved. We extend our deep sympathy to the church and to the bereaved family.

Brother Stubbins, the pastor, has already held three meetings on the charge, and with good results. About forty additions were secured to the church rolls. He is working faithfully and wisely to promote all interests, and has the helpful co-operation of his people. We believe that the work will go forward during these remaining four months earnestly and unitedly to a good closing in the fall. May the blessings of God rest abundantly upon pastor and people. We are grateful to Brother Stubbins and his family, and to the people, for their hospitality and kind reception of our visit.

In the afternoon Brother Stubbins and I spent a little while pleasantly with Brother and Sister C. H. Whitaker in their home. We were glad to find him improved in health, and Sister Whitaker recovering from a fractured knee, the result of a fall which happened five weeks ago. The health of Brother Whitaker appears to be better than it has been for months. This will be pleasing to his many friends.

Young People's Training School

The time for this draws near, July 12-19. The courses offered deal with timely and important subjects, and are to be taught by competent instructors. It is hoped that many of our young people are preparing to take advantage of this splendid opportunity. In addition to spending an enjoyable week together, they will receive benefits that will be greatly helpful to them in their work back home in the local church. And besides the school will be helpful to young people who are facing the problem of their life's work, and who want to find the field of service where God wants them. We urge our young people to go to High Point July 12-19.

Our Sick

After a stay of nearly two months at the Clinic hospital, Greensboro, Sister Reynolds, wife of Rev. G. L. Reynolds, has sufficiently recovered to return to her home at High Point. We trust that her improvement may continue until her recovery is complete. Archie, the twelve-year-old son of Rev. and Mrs. B. M. Williams, is a patient at the Sternberger hospital, Greensboro. He has been a sufferer from rheumatism for many months. When we saw him last Saturday he was comfortable and seemed to be getting along all right.

Sister Reed's condition is unchanged, and Brother Reed finds it necessary to give much of his time to her. We commend all of these to the prayers of our people.

Appointments

July 12-19.—Young People's Training School.

THE STRUGGLE FOR FAITH—PSALM LVI

Psalm LVI is a striking example of a soul climbing the ladder of hope by successive efforts of faith. It begins with a heart-breaking cry for immediate succor. "Have pity on me, O God: for men trample me down, pressing on me all day long, many and malignant." This is Professor Moffatt's translation, which frequently adds poignancy to the ordinary version. Then the poet pulls himself together and declares: "What time I am afraid I will put my trust in Thee." That is a good beginning, but there is a way of putting concrete into the shifting sand of one's feelings and the poet follows it: "In God will I praise His word. In God have I put my trust, I will not be afraid: What can man do unto me?" Here we have the important step from fear with faith to faith without fear, to faith which can be defiant. The translation of the Authorized Version fails to bring out this point clearly.

Then like an overwhelming flood the thought of his difficulties pours over the struggling soul. "All the day long they wrest my words, all their thoughts are against me for evil. They gather themselves together, they hide themselves, dogging my footsteps like murderers." He breaks down under the strain and can only call to God for vengeance on his persecutors. He is quite unmanned now, and weeps. But he is not quite without resource. "Put Thou my tears into Thy bottle, are they not noted in Thy book?" This pathetic plea will be understood by those who have seen in museums little bottles with a lip to them, often made of an iridescent glassy substance, which are called tea-bottles. With extraordinary intimacy of confidence, this broken man is assured that his tears are the concern of God.

These flashes of child-like confidence illumine some of the Psalms. There is another example where the poet cries: "Thou makest all his bed in his sickness." (Psalm XLI:3). There is no mistake about the reality of this homely touch, for referring to the margin we see that the alternative translation: "Thou turnest his bed in his sickness." Our thoughts fly back to boyhood. In some hour of childish sickness, when the bed had become hot and uncomfortable, a mother lifts the child and wraps him in blankets and lays him on a couch until the bed is remade. Then he is replaced in it and its coolness and smoothness woo him to sleep. Such a thought of the mother-love of God the inspired writer dares to have.

But after all, the poet would have been a beaten man, although a consoled mourner, if the Psalm had ended here. Once more he gathered himself for another leap of faith. Twice over he braces himself, "I God will I praise His word, in the Lord will I praise His word." Then he is able to repeat the assertion of defiant faith: "In God I have put my trust, I will not be afraid: what can man do unto me?"

After this, there is no turning back. According to the authorized version he expresses his settled confidence, based upon a simple argument: "Thou has delivered my soul from death, will not Thou deliver my feet from falling?" The revised version translates more correctly: "Thou has delivered my soul from death, will not Thou deliver my feet from falling?" The revised version translates more correctly: "Thou has delivered my soul from death, hast Thou not delivered my feet from falling?" referring both experiences to the past. But it may be truly said that God sometimes uses honest mistranslations to convey a portion of His mind, for did not Saint Paul approve this very argument, when he wrote: "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?" Thus the poem ends in victorious confidence. The struggling soul has reached the summit of the ladder of hope and abides there.—R. C. Gillie, in Presbyterian Banner.

THE CHRIST OF CALVARY

Christ does not save men by His life,
  Though that was holy, sinless, pure,
Nor even by His tender love,
  Though that forever shall endure.
He does not save them by His words,
  Though they shall never pass away;
Nor by His vast creative power
  That holds the elements in sway.
He does not save them by His works,
  Though He was ever doing good;
The awful need was greater still,
  It took His death, His cross, His blood.
Men preach today a crossless Christ,
  A strengthless Savior, vague and dim.
  They will not see their sinful state,
  They will not know the Lamb of God—
  Despised, rejected, crucified—
That were to humble into dust
  Their boasted intellect, their pride.
Yet no man cometh unto God
Save by the Son alone, He saith.
The deathless life for which we long
  Can only—ever—come through death.
Not Bethlehem or Nazareth
  Stern Justice's lifted hand could stay;
To Calvary the soul must go
  And follow Jesus all the way.

He probably knows more about it now.

Whereas the movement of Rationalism, Liberalism, Destructive Higher Criticism, and Darwinian Evolution, commonly known as Modernism has made serious inroads upon the religious life of America; and

Whereas it has invaded the institutions of learning throughout the land and has scattered the seeds of skepticism and infidelity and undermined the faith of multitudes of the rising generation; and

Whereas the so-called Modernism is put forward and maintained as the very essence of progress and as being preeminently scientific, social, and Christian, making it all the more dangerous; therefore, be it

Resolved, that the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness, in convention assembled, put itself on record as being unalterably opposed to Modernism as herein described, and as being in favor of Fundamentalism so far as it stands for the Mosaic (Genesis) account of the creation and fall of man, the Inspiration of the Bible, the Virgin Birth, the Deity, the Vicarious Atonement, and the Bodily Resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Resolved, further, That in view of the fact that the Association stands committed to the cause of Christian Education and also recognizes the serious situation in the educational world today—we urge upon religious parents everywhere the necessity of sending their children to schools and colleges where their morals will be protected, and where their faith will not be wrecked but strengthened and confirmed in the truths of the Bible.

Resolved, finally, That the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness re-emphasize above all things the work of evangelism, and the evangelical doctrines of repentance, saving faith, regeneration, the witness of the Spirit, and entire sanctification as a second work of grace wrought by the purifying and empowering baptism of the Holy Spirit.

"HOW MUCH OWEST THOU MY LORD?"

In the matter of stewardship there are, broadly speaking, three groups of Christians. Perhaps it would be assuming less to say that in the matter of supporting the church there are in the main three groups of members, those who give "free-will" offerings, those who tithe and those who pledge. The answer one gets to the question, "How much owest thou my Lord?" depends on the group to which the person addressed belongs.

If he belongs to the first group, he will probably say—"I owe Him nothing. I do not like to have this matter presented as a debt or a duty. To do so is unscriptural. Religion is free." Abe Martin implied as much the other morning when he said, "Religion must be free: Aimee McPherson has opened a church in Glasgow." The fact that a member feels that he owes nothing, it is always a "free-will" gift, a voluntary offering, the amount of which is determined by the impulse of the moment is determined by the strength of the emotional appeal made to his heart. His emotions may be worth five cents today, ten cents tomorrow, and possibly as much as a dollar some other day. If for one reason or another his emotions are not stirred, the grace of giving refuses to function and his offering is nil. We have much to be thankful for in the fact that this group of twentieth century Christians is not proportionately large.

If the person addressed belongs to the second group, the prompt answer is—"By the teaching of Scripture and by all the laws of grace, I owe Him at least a tenth of my income." There are thousands and tens of thousands who conscientiously believe that the tithe is obligatory. They would just as soon refuse to acknowledge a note at the bank as to refuse to pay their tenth promptly. What some of these tithers give and give willingly and cheerfully, is almost incredible to persons who have never tried that or any other system. We know one such, a bright consecrated young woman, whose earning capacity is $15 per week and whose gifts to the various agencies of her church average $1.25 per week.

Members of the third group are often tithers, and if not tithers they at least qualify as systematic givers. Ask one of these how much he owes his Lord and he will answer in substance, "I owe Him the amount subscribed to the budget, the amount pledged for the support of the church and the advancement of her mission. It may be ten cents or ten dollars per week, but whatever is pledged I always regard the payment of that amount as a binding obligation, unless by mutual arrangement with those who represent my church, the amount is altered or cancelled."

The work of the United Presbyterian Church, involving the outlay of six million dollars annually, is financed almost entirely by members who belong to the second and third groups—those who tithe and pay, and those who pledge and pay. Blessings on all such. May their number steadily increase. Without them the church would be sadly crippled and organized religion impossible.—A. H. B. in the United Presbyterian.

THE CENTRAL FACT OF SCRIPTURE

It is the incarnation that gives organic character to Scripture. It is human guilt that constitutes the great presupposition of revelation. It is the doctrine of faith as man's response to the overtures of love that meets the exigencies of man's moral nature and makes the Bible the best and greatest message that man has ever had. Why, then, do men tell me that they wish the Bible taught religiously, but not doctrinally? Why do educated men who have been taught to distinguish between the letter and the spirit show such proneness to mistake when they touch religious themes? Yet the world is full of men who speak in this way. These are men who stand in our pulpits and preach on the patience of Job and the moral courage of Daniel; who find material for sentimental sermons on the seasons, and practical sermons on the importance of sleep, or the need of restricting emigration, but who are silent respecting the tremendous fact of sin, and the dogmatic significance of the atoning blood. I do not say that such men are handling the Word of God deceitfully, for I am willing to have them plead guilty, if they prefer, to an unscholarly stupidity that prevents them from seeing that the bleeding Christ is the central fact of Scripture.—Rev. Frances L. Patton, D.D.

OUR STORY PAGE

GERTIE FOSTER'S BELL

Just after Easter, 1926, I went to Pittman, N. J., to help to dedicate the new Presbyterian Church. The day before dedication Sunday, the pastor, the Rev. T. Rebber Taggart, took me to call on a family of whom he told me nothing in advance.

He knocked upon a cottage door and upon being bidden to enter, he ushered me familiarly through a small sitting room into another of equal size, where a light like the Shekinah radiated from the angelic face of an old lady in a rocker. She did not rise—it was not necessary—to greet me, but her smile and her words were warm with welcome, as the pastor said to me: "I want you to know Mrs. Foster!"

Then silently from a rather concealed corner, came a wheelchair carrying a younger woman, the replica of the older, with the same warmth of smile and word, and I was greeted by the cripple daughter, Gertrude, whose cordiality suggested the appropriateness of the nickname, "Gertie."

In an instant, I was made to feel at home with them, because I had come to be a fleeting part of their beloved church. They were members of the church whose early struggle had prophesied a future big with the promise of achievement. And though physical circumstances kept them from public participation in its worship, their devotion made them a part of its aim and determination.

When the church was organized by the Presbyterian evangelist, the Rev. Mr. McDowell, the few dozen members mortgaged their resources to buy the choicest site in town. Possession of the ground but increased their fervor and determination to have a building of their own, so they mortgaged their future to erect the first unit of their plant—their educational building.

In this enterprise, Mrs. Foster and Gertie must have a part. Having no money to give, they began to save and work. From their slender income, they took a part and added to it that which their hands could earn making pin cushions, ink blotters, pen wipers, artificial flowers, etc.—whatever they could make and sell. God smiled upon their garden and sun-gold asters and dew-fresh peonies added beauty and fragrance to the place and when they were sold, increased the gift for the new church. This gift amounted to $100.

Who but they know how often the evening meal was more than usually meagre in order that they might have the more to give to God of that which cost them something, of comfort and need. But they never spoke of sacrifice! It was a labor of love and it wasn't hard, for he who broke the bread at Emmaus gave them bread to eat that the world knows not of. Was not their favorite song:

"It may not be on the mountain heights,
Or over the stormy sea;
It may not be at the battle's front
The Lord will have need of me.
But if by the still small voice He calls,
Unto paths that I cannot know;
I'll answer, 'Dear Lord, with my hand in thine,
I'll go where you want me to go'."

So Gertie told me how she did the menial tasks of the home, sweeping, dusting, cooking, washing dishes—from her wheelchair. The fire in the stove must be kept alive and the ashes must be lifted into a paper-lined chip-basket, held on her lap by the corners of her apron in her teeth.

"When we had given our one hundred dollars, we had four cents left (not all they had, but all they had in this fund—set apart for God's use) and we sought to know what God wanted us to do with those four cents. We prayed about it, and we received the answer that we were to buy the bell for the new church. We couldn't go to church to worship, but we can see the lights from the upstairs windows and we could hear the bell ring. So we are determined to buy the bell, although we know it will cost $500!"

"Gertie"—I said, "You don't mean to tell me that you are going to try to buy a five-hundred-dollar bell with four cents!"

"Why, certainly, I do. God told us he wanted us to buy that bell, and he will help us to do it. That bell will ring for the first time next Easter! Don't you think it would be most fitting to have it ring first on Easter Day?"

"But tell me, Gertie, how are you going to do it?"

"O," she replied, "I have already begun. I bought two postage stamps with the four cents and I wrote to two persons of whom I know. One sent back a check for $5.00 and the other a check for $2.00 Didn't I tell you God wanted me to buy that bell!"

"And I began to talk about it to all who came to see us, and soon they began to call it 'Gertie's Bell.' One day a man of the town came in and said, 'Gertie, I have heard of your bell. I will tell you what I will do. If you get ninety-nine others to give you five dollars apiece, I will be the one-hundredth one, and that will make the five hundred dollars'."

Gleaming and glowing with joy, she exclaimed—"See how God is answering my prayer! I have only ninety-seven more to get and I will have my one hundred. There is no doubt about it! That bell will surely ring next Easter Day!"

I remembered what the Master said in the presence of a faith that was strong enough to support a weak man—"I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." Gertie's faith was the simplicity of a trusting child who knew that her Father would never disappoint. Invalidism had shut her out of the world, but had shut her in with God. Who will not say: "All things conspire for good to them that love God."

About Christmas time that year, Gertie wrote me somewhat as follows: "I want you to help me decide what kind of a bell I should buy. Do we need the more expensive alloy bell, or will a steel bell be satisfactory? I am enclosing catalogues for your study. Please let me know your opinion." I made inquiry of several manufacturers and gave her my answer.

Just before Easter, I received from the pastor a formal invitation to be their guest on Easter Day, to help dedicate Gertie's bell! She had bought the bell, paying cash for it, paid the freight from Cincinnati, Ohio, paid for its installation and it was ready to ring out its glad Easter message of praise to the risen Lord!

It is safe to say that to no one did that bell ring as sweet, as musical a message as to the cripple Gertie Foster. Loving hands carried her to church that day, that greatest of all days to her. All through the years she had been worshipping at the altar of her home, where the only voice beside her own was her mother's. That day she worshipped with the joyous multitude—where

> "Easter flowers, Easter carols, > Deck the altar, Fill the air."

and it was her dedication, because she gave that day to God what God had given to her. It was her dedication, too, because she gave not only the bell to God, but her whole life in a renewal of service to her Lord. Who shall say what service of love she may not render in the coming years? She told me with her own lips that when she had bought the bell, she would begin on some other work for her church.

A friend who has come to know Gertie Foster through this remarkable experience, has caused a memorial tablet to be inscribed and the congregation has erected it in the vestibule beneath the bell, as follows:

"The bell which calls this congregation to worship is the gift of Miss Gertrude Foster who, though weak in body and without money, believed the promises of God and accomplished the impossible. 'O, woman, Great is thy faith'."

Gertie Foster did not stop her ministry on that happy Easter Day, for she had tasted the sweetness of service. Her church needed a piano, so she bought it, for she had a surplus in the bell fund. Again she prayed and asked God what he wanted her to do. To answer her own prayer, she set about purchasing a marble baptismal fount for her church. No church anywhere has a finer.

Paul looked upon men expending their efforts to win a place in the world, a great fortune or a great fame, and he said, "They do it to obtain a corruptible crown but we to obtain an incorruptible." The world calls them wise. Yes, men work to the point of slavery to amass a pile of dollars "not knowing who shall gather them." Yes, men sacrifice ease to attain social recognition all the while knowing that today's queen is tomorrow's cast-off. And the world calls its own wise!

The Chinese have a proverb: "'What wouldst thou?' said God. 'Pay the price of it and take it.' " He will become great who seeks greatness; rich will he be who seeks fortune; wise will he be who quests wisdom; immortal will be he who seeks first "the Kingdom of God and his righteousness" and proves by his life that the followers of Jesus are never asked to precede their Lord but only to go with him even to the end of the world.

Arthur Jackson went to Mukden; Hall Young went to Alaska; Sheldon Jackson went to the unexplored West; David Livingstone went to Africa; Hunter Corbett went to China; Paul went to Asia and Europe; Abraham went to Ur and then to Jordan; Jesus went to the Cross. Why?

Less spectacular individuals have, with no less heroism, gone out to do—what? To be what? Why? "There is a divinity that shapes our ends" by planting within a wish, an ideal, a determination, to be and do. Sentimentality and theology brushed aside, the truth stands clear as a white marble shaft pencilled against the blue sky.

"Who are these that are arrayed in the white robes?" "These are they that have come up out of the great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."—Platte T. Amstutz, D.D., in Presbyterian Advance.

CAPTAIN HERB

The "Hannah Moore" is down at the wharf, Herb was told as he came out of school, and Herb began to run. The "Hannah Moore" was his father's two-masted schooner and the pride and joy of Herbie's heart.

Many a time he had made trips on her up and down the Chesapeake Bay, into estuaries and rivers, and he looked forward eagerly to the time when he would be old enough to sail her himself. Now he must stay in the sleepy town of St. Michaels and go to school, except in the short summer when he was allowed to sail with his father.

The "Hannah Moore" was gracefully sliding to the wharf, her sails were furling one by one and in the glassy water there was a perfect picture of the old vessel, only the masts and spars were wiggling like snakes.

Herb jumped into his boat and rowed to the side of the "Hannah Moore," which rode low on the river owing to a heavy cargo of coal destined for the farms along the eastern shore. It was with no difficulty that the boy swung himself on board.

The first thing he noticed was that Mose, his father's old deck hand and crew, was missing and a new man was moving over the deck whistling softly to himself.

"Morn'n' Mistah Prine," greeted the stranger. "I was jist expectin' you-all. Youah pap, de Cap'n, leave word fo' you."

"Good morning,' said Herb rather taken with the man's broad, smiling face. "Then the Captain's gone ashore already?"

"Sho' has," replied the man. "My name's Sam."

Herb asked after his old friend Mose and learned that he was sick with rheumatism in Baltimore.

"De misery done et into his bones," explained Sam. "An' I'se gwine drap muhself lessen I gits a chaw of terbaccy pronto—dat's French fo' right-away quick."

"I'd get it for you, Sam, only they won't sell tobacco to boys," said Herb. "Maybe I can find somebody who'll get it for me."

Sam was doubtful. He seemed to think that if Herb left the "Hannah Moore" on such an errand he would begin playing and raucousin' with the other boys and forget what he was about.

"Then I'll tell you," said Herb with importance. "You run ashore and get your chew right quick and I'll keep the ship for you. But the Captain will skin you if he finds you've left your post, so make it pronto."

Now old Mose would never have done such a thing, but Sam was young and irresponsible and eager to get his foot on shore. He hurriedly finished his tasks and then sprang into Herb's little boat and made for the pier, and the boy watched him with satisfaction, feeling himself the master of the ship.

When he was alone he started on an inspection trip, went down to his father's little hole of a cabin and then up on deck again and into the galley which was a little shack near the stern. There was a black greasy pot cooking on the stove and Herb peeped in. The water was low and black lumps resembling boiled beef was almost beached on the bottom.

"Humph!" he grunted. "Low tide." And he put back the lid.

When he stepped back on the deck he noticed that the "Hannah Moore" was moving up and down, that a stiff wind had risen and flakes of snow like large feathers falling and melting on the deck. He looked at the sky and it was a dark gray.

There was no sign of Sam and Herb looked anxiously up the road leading to the pier which he could view from the ship. The tomato cannery nearby was forsaken and empty at that time of year. Not a soul in sight except two boys playing in some boats near the river's edge where somebody's lawn sloped to the water. They were a long way off, but Herb knew what to do. He ran down to the cabin and got his father's old-fashioned pistol. Pointing it upward he fired. Then he looked at the boys. They were starting in his direction and he made frantic signs to them.

After a while one of them began pushing a boat into the water. When it was launched, both scrambled in and began pulling toward the schooner. But the young oarsmen had not counted on the wind and tide and they made little progress, skirting the shore to avoid getting into the deep rough channel. Herb yelled encouragement and soon they were near enough to hear him. Up and down bobbed their tiny boat, a wave dashed in and an oar was lost. Herb took a round life-belt from its place against the galley and tossed it out, making sure that the line was securely fastened.

The small boat twirled around like a top and began to drift rapidly out toward the channel and both boys decided to swim. Into the water they plunged and Herb was relieved to see that they both crawled through the water with strong experienced strokes. They reached the life belt and pulled themselves dripping wet and scared on the deck of the "Hannah Moore."

They were not a moment too soon reaching that haven for the storm broke with an icy blast that sent the schooner dancing around her cables. Herb hustled them into the galley by the fire where they could dry their clothes, but when they got in clouds of smoke almost drove them out.

"Something's burning," cried one of the boys.

"A fire on board!" cried the other.

But Herb saw that the smoke was coming from the pot, and grabbing a cloth he managed to move it from the fire.

In the excitement, the boys had not noticed the commotion on the wharf. Other ears had heard the bang of the pistol and other eyes had seen the smoke curling from the schooner, among them Sam's.

"Oh my! Oh my!" he moaned. "Dat kid done got into mischives."

But Sam, if rather happy-go-lucky, was no coward. He got into the row boat and started for the schooner. He had not gone far when it was swamped and he had to get back on the pier as best he could. Somebody went to find Captain Prine, who had gone to his home, while Sam was preparing to make another try in another boat.

Meanwhile the boys were enjoying themselves on board. Clothes were drying, the steam from them adding to the fears of those on shore, and Herb had built up the fire and was boiling water for hot tea.

Sam started out again with a seventeen-year-old boy named Andy to bale. A rough voyage and many close shaves with the angry river brought them near the "Hannah Moore," which was swinging around so that she was hard to approach. Sam managed to throw a noosed line up which held. Andy scrambled up and then Sam. They ran for the galley.

"Wall, Great Day in the Mornin'!" Sam cried at the sight which met his eyes. "Ain't you-all havin' a good time!"

"Sure are!" chanted the boys, sipping hot tea.

"You needn't have hurried back in the storm," said Herb. "I was keeping the ship. These fellers are shipwrecked and I rescued 'em."

Sam's rolling eyes alighted on the black pot and he groaned.

"Mah dinna's done burnt up," he said.

"Better go out and holler to the Captain that it's O. K. here or he'll be trying to come aboard, too," warned Andy.

Sam had a voice like a bull. He took the megaphone and shouted through the storm.

"Everything's O. K. Cap'in Herbert in command and I done learnt a good lesson!"—Selected.

MY CUP RUNNETH OVER

There is always something over
When we trust our gracious Lord;
Every cup He fills o'erfloweth—
His great rivers all are broad.
Nothing narrow, nothing stinted,
Ever issues from His store;
To His own He gives full measure,
Running over, evermore.

There is always something over
When we, from the Father's hand,
Take our portion with thanksgiving,
Praising for the path He planned.
Satisfaction, full and deepening,
Fills the soul, and lights the eye,
When the heart has trusted Jesus
All its need to satisfy.

There is always something over
When we tell of all His love;
Unplumbed depths still lie beneath us,
Unscaled heights rise far above;
Human lips can never utter
All His wondrous tenderness,
We can only praise and wonder,
And His name forever bless.

Margaret E. Barber.

DEGENERATION

Disuse and deterioration go hand in hand. Bandage your arm and cease to use it, and soon it will hang limp and shrunken by your side. Cast a fish into subterranean waters and force it to live in darkness, and its optic nerves will atrophy and it will lose the power of vision. In like manner, when they are not exercised, the moral and spiritual faculties of a man weaken and wither away. The neglected soul, in the course of time, becomes more and more a wreck. Worthy aspirations characterize it no longer. The right impulses that once sprang up within it, incite it to better things no more. Even its very capacity for salvation dwindles with the passing years. It is a terrible thing to disregard the needs of one's spiritual nature and live apart from Christ.—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

By J. P. BOWMAN

President C. E. Society, High Point College

July 20: GOOD SUMMER READING

Eccl. 12:11,12; 1 Tim. 4:12,13

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Great Stort Stories. Luke 10:25-37
Tuesday—History. Psalm 107:1-15.
Wednesday—Biography. Genesis. 41:14-24.
Thursday—Poetry. Psalm 82:1-8.
Friday—Nature Studies. Matthew 6:26-34.
Saturday—Devotional Reading. Psalm 1:1-6.

To the Leader

It would be interesting to call this a "Bookworm meeting." Have someone draw a cartoon showing several large worms wearing caps such as college graduates wear, and also wearing horn-rimmed glasses. These worms should be in various attitudes of devouring a large book. Put the date, time, and subject on this picture and use it for advertising the meeting and then the night of the meeting have it where everyone can see it.

Get some librarian, your pastor, and some other capable person to make a suggestive list of books for an entire summer's reading course. Then if possible have these persons at the meeting and present their list personally giving a brief comment upon their choice. Then there might be given an opportunity for others to speak of their choice book and why. Ask your pastor to give a brief outline of the "Book of books."

Suggested hymns: "Wonderful Words of Life," "I Love to Tell the Story," "His Message of Love," "The Word of God Shall Stand," and "The Old Book and the Old Faith."

Leader's Talk

A great deluge of books are constantly being written today. Some of these are worthwhile and others are not worth reading. Books, like wheat, have to be winnowed, the few worthwhile ones from the many worthless. The worthless ones takes one's time and energy without giving value received. Some books are actually injurious. They destroy the high ideals of life. Such books should be avoided as we would shun a plague.

There are worthwhile books. Those which develop gifts within us. Many of them have real messages and enrich one's life.

Questions

1. Why read?
2. How read?
3. What shall we read?
4. To what extent do books influence one's life?
5. Do you think that the moral standard of today's books is higher or lower than in former years? Why?
6. What can the home do to safeguard reading matter for the family?
7. How May we know which books to read?
8. Why do some folks regard the Bible as "dry" reading? How may their feeling be changed?

Suggestive Slogans

Time amounts to what we invest in it.

The material for the Judgment Day is in your own life.

Poetry

MY MOTHER'S BIBLE

"There's a dear and precious Book,
Tho' it's worn and faded now,
Which recalled those happy days of long ago,
When I stood at mother's knee,
With her hand upon my brow,
And I heard her voice in gentle tones and low,

"Blesed Book, precious Book,
On thy dear old, tear-stained leaves I love to look;
Thou art sweeter day by day,
As I walk the narrow way
That leads at last to that bright home above."

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

RALLY OF WOMAN'S WORK

High Point College, June 27th 1930

The Executive Committee of the North Carolina Branch, Woman's work of the Methodist Protestant Church, met at 10:30 on the morning of June 27th at High Point College. Mrs. W. C. Hammer, president, presided. Rev. Paul Warner, returned missionary from Japan, led the devotional, which was deeply spiritual and inspiring.

The corresponding secretary, Mrs. Geo. R. Brown, gave her report which showed only 41 out of 80 auxiliaries had made reports for this meeting. This report was accepted with the motion that it was to be printed in the Herald. Mrs. S. W .Taylor, treasurer, reported total amount of money received since the Branch Meeting $1,579.20. This was an excellent report and showed an increase over the first quarter last year of $358.84. Report accepted, with the request that the following camparison be printed in the Herald and the Record: 21 auxiliaries had contributed to both budgets, 13 auxiliaries to only one budget, 44 auxiliaries had contributed to neither budget, more auxiliaries were contributing monthly than heretofore.

Mrs. C. W. Bates, district chairman, gave her report, which showed, interest, enthusiasm and some real constructive work done.

The report of the state editor, Miss Mary C. McCulloch, was read by the secretary. Mrs. Bates urged the ladies to send in material for the Record, with the suggestion that the district chairmen report form their various districts. Mrs. R. M. Andrews, vice-president and general chairman of all secretaries, read a list of dates at which time the different secretaries were asked to mail a report to the state editor:

July 7—Mrs. E. L. Ballard
July 14—Mrs. H. G. Paschall
July 21—Mrs. J. M. Stone
July 28—Mrs. D. S. Coltrane
August 4—Mrs. H. W. Maier
August 4—Mrs. F. W. Paschall
August 11—Miss Pearl McCulloch
August 11 Mrs. H. C. Nicholson
August 18—Miss Velna McCulloch
August 25—Dr. Harris Glascock
Sept. 1—Mrs. S. R. Harris
Sept. 8—Mrs. C. L. Whitaker.

Miss Pearl McCulloch, secretary of literature, gave her report which was accepted with the motion that $10.00 be given her for expenses.

The secretary was asked to write Mrs. H. W. Maier asking her to make some suggestion through the Herald for the Young People, while Miss Young is abroad.

Miss Velna McCulloch, secretary of temperance, asked all secretaries of local auxiliaries to call for literature, as she had a large supply.

Dr. Harris Glasscock, secretary of benevolences, reported literature sent to 15 auxiliaries and urged all members to be more interested in the various benevolences of our church.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, secretary of High Point College Student Loan Fund, reported four requests for loans since the Branch meeting. She made a strong plea for funds for boys and girls who were compelled to have loans to complete their college course.

Mrs. C. W. Bates spoke briefly of Bethel Home. She reported 12 patients being cared for; the house in an immaculate condition, and things going as nicely as possible on limited means. Mrs. H. C. Nicholson reported for the Children's Home.

Mrs. Hammer appointed the following committee from the Branch to visit the Home. This was done in response to a request of Dr. Dixon, superintendent of the Children's Home.

Mrs. T. L. Speas. Winston; Mrs S. S. Coe, High Point; Mrs D. S. Coltrane, Greensboro; with Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, secretary and Mrs. W. C. Hammer, president.

The time and place of the next Executive Meeting were discussed and it was decided to meet at Bethel Home, Weaverville, the last of September. Mrs. Geo. R. Brown, Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, and Mrs. C. W. Bates were made a committee on arrangements for said meeting.

The following committee was appointed to discuss plans for revising auxiliary report blanks to meet specific conditions in the North Carolina branch: Mrs. Geo. R. Brown, corresponding secretary; Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer; Mrs. C. W. Bates, district chairman.

The following committee was appointed to draw up resolutions of respect for Miss Betty Cox, one of our beloved members who so recently passed into the beyond: Mrs. T. L. Speas, Mrs. R. M. Andrews, Mrs. H. C. Nicholson.

The request was made that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Herald.

A report from the Baltimore convention, written by Mrs. E. L. Ballard, was read by the secretary. Mrs. C. W. Bates followed this with a brief report.

The meeting was dismissed by Dr. G. I. Humphreys, newly elected president of High Point college.

Immediately following this, Mrs. Hammer in a very happy way, introduced Rev. Paul Warner, returned missionary from Japan. Mr. Warner spoke on "Our Work in Japan." He told of the individual work of our missionaries in Japan and China, calling them by name, and emphasizing the marvelous work that is being done by them and through them. He discussed the schools, the churches and the very large part played by the native workers there, referring to their great efficiency and their deep interest. He said that our work was twofold: Evangelistic and Educational. Our great aim is to make the Japanese feel it their obligation to Christianize their own people. He referred to the 500 girls in our high school at Yokohama and the 1000 boys at our high school and junior college at Nagoya, the fine spirit, the splendid work and the wonderfful interest manifested there, yet how the work can't expand as it should for lack of funds. He spoke of how the missionaries are welcomed in Japan. The Japanese people are seekers after truth, and they are always ready to hear a message, from a person with a message. He depicted them as being ready and glad to hear the gospel of Christ. The misionaries are also looked after by the Japanese people as being ambassadors of goodwill from America. Japan and the United States are friendly and will remain so; first because of economic conditions, limited resources and, second, because at heart Japan is friendly toward us.

MRS. J. M. MILLIKAN, Treas.

GREENSBORO'S MISSIONARY UNION

A group of women met at Westminster Presbyterian church on March 31, 1930 and organized an Interdenominational Mission Union. Mrs. C. W. Bates was elected president. There were six churches represented. Very much interest was manifested by those present.

There was a committee appointed to work out a constitution, to report at next meeting. It was decided at this meeting to hold a meeting each fifth Monday. Any church in the city or community is invited to attend.

The Union met at Cavalry M. P. church Monday, June 30. The speaker for the afternoon was Miss Graham Roland. She made a very charming appearance in an orange Apache indian costume. She is a teacher in the government school at Fort Apache, Arizona. She very interestingly gave the life of the American Indian. She opened her remarks with an Indian legend that held the group. She displayed some very interesting relics that the indians made, some of them in the eighth grade, including miniature cradles, beadbands, necklaces, bags, belts, etc. The missionary spends no life of ease. The recreation they have they plan and carry out themselves.

Six churches were represented. Special music by members of the Friends church. Mrs. C. W. Bates, president, presiding.

MRS. J. G. SULLIVAN.

DEPARTMENT OF MISSIONARY EDUCATION

I hope every secretary of Missionary Education in our auxiliaries has read Mrs. J. W. Armstrong's article in the May issue of the Missionary Record under "Department of Work." There are some splendid suggestions for local secretaries of Missionary Education. If you are not a subscriber to the Missionary Record, try to borrow it from some one who is a subscriber, read the article, and then send in your subscription. It is only seventy-five cents a year, and every member of the Woman's Auxiliary needs it.

During this quarter I would like to urge that every auxiliary put special emphasis on Mission Study. This is one of our greatest needs in North Carolina, especially among our young people. If it is impossible to get the people together in any other way, try having classes in the Sunday school and give a course in Missions. Dr. Egbert W. Smith, in his book, "The Desire of all Nations," says, "Every Sunday school should keep itself in vital touch with the foreign field by having its own missionary toward whose support it contributes, and whose letters from abroad and visits when on furlough would be living links between the school and the field."

In a Scotch Sunday school the superintendent one Sunday read a letter from the missionary in the Fiji Islands describing how the gospel was changing the hearts of the cannibals. Then he said, "I wonder if there is a boy here who will some day become a missionary of the Lord Jesus and give his Asheboro.—Notwithstanding the fact that yesterday was the second hottest day of the year, Sunday school attendance was 272 as compared to 252 a week ago. Monthly report for June showed an average of 260. Our Superintendent, Bro. J. D. Ross, being out of town the assistant superintendent, Miss Bertha Presnell, presided over the adult department and did it splendidly.

At the morning church hour Dr. G. I. Humphreys, the newly elected president of High Point college, brought a timely message on "The Secret of Power of the Early Church." This was Dr. Humphreys' first visit to our church and our people were delighted with him and with his message. There were quite a good many visitors in the congregation and I am sure they were pleased also.

Brother Worth Way, one of our members, was in a serious automobile accident near High Point last Friday evening. He is in the High Point hospital and seems to be getting along very well.

Miss Thyra Wright, another one of our members, is doing well following an operation for appendicitis in the Clinic Hospital in Greensboro.

Our third Q. C. will be held tomorrow evening and our annual Sunday school picnic will be held Wednesday afternoon and evening.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

◆

New Hope, Pageland Charge.—We are glad to report that each Sunday our attendance is growing larger and everybody seems to be full of energy and willing to work.

I don't think I have seen a pastor who had his work anymore at heart than our pastor, Rev. T. E. Martin. He is with us each Wednesday evening at prayer service. On last Wednesday evening we met with Bro. Aycoth for service. There were eighty members gathered for prayer service. We had a wonderful service. Next Wednesday evening we will have prayer service at the parsonage and we are praying for great results.

I think it is time we should see our duty and become enthusiastic in our work. The harvest is great and laborers are few.

Our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor seems to be progressing nicely.

We ask the prayers of all pastors and people that our work may become just as perfect as God would have it be.

Oak Grove, Cleveland Charge.—Sunday, June 29th, Rally Day was observed at Oak Grove church. All the Sunday schools on the charge were represented, and several had very interesting programs. These programs were given in the forenoon, Mr. Charles Grant being in charge. Dinner was served at 12 o'clock, picnic style, after which a social hour was enjoyed. In the afternoon Dr. Kennett of High Point college spoke to a very large congregation.

Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, Rev Lawrence Lee, a young minister of the Palm Tree church, near Lawndale, preached.

Miss Rosemary White is now president of our C. E. society, and Miss Linder Pendleton secretary-treasurer.

Our revival meeting begins July 6th. Services in the evening at eight o'clock the first week. The second week there will be two services each day, one at 11 a. m. and one at 8 p. m. Rev. J. M. Morgan of Fallston will do the preaching. We are hoping and praying for a great meeting.

Bethel.—Newlins Township Sunday school association held their 35th annual meeting with us the 5th Sunday in June. The program was good, the addresses were inspiring and helpful.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the leadership of Mr. Lonnie McPherson as Supt. Also missionary society is alive and busy. The regular monthly meeting of the Missionary society will meet with Mrs. R. S. Thompson, second Sunday p. m. in July.

We are planning to hold a Children's service fourth Sunday evening, beginning at 8 o'clock p. m.

Revival meeting will begin August 14th, Thursday evening, 8 o'clock p. m., running over third Sunday and on into the following week. Bros. G. W. Holmes and Stubbins are to assist Bro. Burgess in the meeting.

MRS. R. W. LINDLEY.

North Davidson Charge.—On the last fourth Sunday when I reached Canaan I found a large crowd waiting. They had just closed a large Sunday school. When I went into church I noticed things looked different. I began to look around to see what made the change. Behold! I spied in the altar near the pulpit a nice piano. These folks love music, not only music, but all things good.

Our first revival will begin here with this people on fourth Sunday in July. There will be all day service. Rev. Glen Madison will be my pulpit help.

My second revival will commence the second Sunday in August. Rev. M. P. Chambliss will be my help.

On the fifth Sunday—Home-coming—old friends looked into the faces of old friends, greeted each other.

The Children's Day service in the morning was fine. The dinner was delicious, ample, and satisfying. After hundreds of people had satified their hunger, we reassembled and had lots of speeches by Rev. George Curry, Rev. Roy Farmer, Rev. R. C. Troxler, Grady Leonard, Prof. Sam Leonard, perhaps others. Bro. Curry brought to us the history of Bethesda church and community. The church and community has had an enviable record. There seems that no officer has ever had need to go into this Godly community to hunt bootleggers, or to arrest any man for the violation of law. No community in state can boast of a finer record. For eight years the writer has served the church and community as pastor, not one difficulty or trouble to settle among this fine membership.

The third quarterly conference will convene at Spring Hill on Saturday before third Sunday in July. We are delighted in thought of having our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, with us for two days and we will use him as follows: He will preach for us on Saturday, before the third Sunday in July, at Spring Hill at 11 a. m., lunch, hold quarterly conference. Saturday night at eight o'clock he will preach at Bethesda; on third Sunday a. m. at Spring Hill; 3 p. m. at Mt. Pleasant; 8 p. m. at Canaan.

Let us have a record attendance at Quarterly conference and a rousing congregation at each church.

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—The attendance at S. S. Sunday afternoon was 125. After S. S. Brother Powell brought a very forceful message to a good number. At this time we were glad to have with us J. R. Stone from Mt. Pleasant church.

The third quarterly conference for this charge will meet at Spring Hill the third Saturday in this month. President S. W. Taylor will be present and preach at eleven o'clock. In the afternoon the business will be transacted, and all the official members are urged to be present, and as many others as will.

On the third Sunday morning the Children's Day exercise will be given and President Taylor will preach at eleven o'clock.

On Saturday night, July 12, the Ladies' Aid will give a lawn party at Mrs Hermon Haynes'. The proceeds will go to buy new equipment for the church. The public is invited to come.

The C. E. society will meet Sunday morning at eleven o'clock with Miss Nellie Wade as leader.

First Church, High Point.—On Wednesday evening the mid-week Fellowship supper was at Municipal Lake, Jamestown, at which there was an attendance of 125. A delicious picnic supper was enjoyed and a delightful prayer service conducted by the minister, was held by the lake side.

On Sunday morning at the 1 o'clock service Mrs. J. H. Allred rendered a lovely solo, "O Dry Those Tears," by Reigo with violin accompaniment by Arthur Fidler. Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered an eloguent and effective message from the subject "The War at Home," based on the text in Numbers 32:6; "Shall your brethren go to war and shall ye sit here?" The two tribes of Reuben and Gad had united in begging Moses to give them as their inheritance the land on this side of the Jordan. He thinking it was for the sake of policy spoke to them as much as to say that in these pasture lands there is ease. Moses accepted their proposal, but told them that a failure to fullfil the promise would bring down the wrath of God upon them. He thought it was for the sake of their own convenience and not for the common good. This is a modern story. Lately "over there" was a great victory won. An accusation brought against our young men was that they would not fight. All that we may ever do is insignificant compared to what they have done. A constant warfare between right and wrong is being constantly waged all around us. This statement should ring in our ears. The force of discipline may keep in check for awhile these forces of evil. I want us to believe no individual, state or nation is safe unless the Golden Rule is obeyed. There is a spiritual wickedness in high places all about us.. There have been victories on battlefields, but greater than these is the struggle between good and evil. The glory of Christ's name is victorious over the kingdom of evil. My conviction is that when the United States passed the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution, she struck the greatest blow against the forces of darkness and evil in all history. We somehow tend to dull the public conscience; officers fail to do their duty. I want us to know that as Christians we cannot sit down and let thieves steal what generations have worked to gain. Shall those who sleep in Flanders and Argonne, those bravest and fairest of America's young manhood, who made the supreme sacrifice "to make the world safe for democracy," have died in vain? Great times demand great leaders. It is our task to bring humanity out of selfish ambition. We are not able to say "None of these things move me." I read with interest the other day the story of a base hospital lad, although crippled and with but two stumps left, but with bright eager eyes looked into the face of his visitor, and said, "Gee! Dr. Fosdick, I am glad it was that end I lost instead of this one," meaning that it was better to lose his leg than his head. What right have we as the Methodist Protestant church to survive if we do not arouse from our lethargy, and break down the stronghold of the liquor traffic? Alonzo Stagg says he has been connected with the University of Chicago for 34 years, and there is no more drunkenness in our colleges and universities than in the past. Conditions are so much better than in the days of the saloon, and before many moons pass, the buyers of whiskey will be considered as guilty as the seller.

At the Sunday opening service by the interchange of pulpits among the members of the Ministerial association, the pulpit was most acceptably filled by Rev. A. L. Aycock, pastor South Main M. E. church, who delivered a very telling sermon on "When Devils Tremble." Our congregation was delighted to hear htis consecrated servant of God.

The monthly meeting of the Woman's auxiliary was held Monday afternoon on the spacous veranda of the home of Mrs. S. S. Coe with an attendance of 13 members. It was decided to postpone our annual picnic at the college until some date in September. A food sale sponsored by the entire auxiliary will be held on Saturday, July 19th at a down town store, where cakes, pies, chess pies, ice cream and other seasonable delicacies will be offered for sale.

The Young People's C. E. society met in weekly session on Monday evening at 8 o'clock, and Miss Denny McAdams led the topic, "Joys and Dangers When Away From Home." An interesting feature was the reports from the state convention in Winston-Salem. The Wednesday evening supper meetings at the church will be resumed this week. The covered dish supper will be served at 6:45 o'clock, followed by a song service, and the minister will speak on the "High Cost of Living Well." Choir rehearsal, the Intermediate Senior C. E. society, and other committee meetings will be held.

The Conference Leadership Training school will be held at High Point college July 12-19. Miss Margaret O. Neese and Ralph Vance are securing registrations.

Ex-mayor W. A. Davis and family have returned from an extended motor trip to Detroit, Niagara Falls, New York and Toronto, Canada.

Mrs. G. L. Reynolds, who has been a patient in Greensboro Clinic hospital for seven weeks, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to her home on Fourth St. Her numerous friends will be much pleased to learn of this improvement in her condition.

Mr. R. Lynn Trout and his bride, who was Miss Annice Smoot, of Concord, came in yesterday for a stay of a few days with Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe.

We are much pleased to announce that Mrs. Earl Brooks, who undewent an operation, is greatly improved, and has been removed to her home on Otteray Drive from the hospital.

Miss Ruth Moffitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, and who is dietitian at a hotel in Washington city, is spending the summer vacation with her parents here.

Enfield.—We are not victims of summer slump even if we are behind with our report. Our various church organizations are active, and progess is normal. Our church and Sunday school attendance is normal, our church folks find the temperature no hotter at church than at home. Let us then play the game fair and be present at each Sunday and midweek service. Mr. Auman is his usual graceful manner preached an inspiring sermon first Sunday night. His topic was, "Play the Game." He brought to our attention the whole-hearted manner in which Jesus played the game.

Those of our people who attended the District Rally held at Creswell the fifth Sunday returned with happy faces. They tell how royally they were entertained by pastor and people; and how well the various programs were prepared and presented.

The Union Vacation Bible school which lasted for two weeks, and of which we are very proud to say, it was a success. The young ladies of the different churches responded loyally to its support, all working unitedly for its success. The commencement held at the school auditorium fifth Sunday morning and the program presented by the childen proved that able and talented leaders had trained them. So proud are we of the success of this Bible school we hope to repeat it next summer.

We hope some of our young people will find it convenient to attend the Leadership Training school to be held at High Point college next week. The time spent in this school will be worth the effort put forth to attend. Our pastor will be away next week as he has classes in the school. Success to the Herald and its readers. REPORTER.

Lineberry, Davidson Circuit.—As our church failed to elect a reporter this year, I will write a few lines anyway to let you know that Lineberry is still on the map and doing things, especially our young people. Brother Reed preached another one of his fine sermons Sunday with a good audience. We had 85 in Sunday school last Sunday; our average has been about 80 for a while, and the interest has been good.

Our young people have a live Christian Endeavor society with a large attendance and the interest has been very good. Brother Earnest Smith, our young Sunday school superintendent, was elected delegate to the annual conference to be held at Albemarle this year.

The hearts of our people go out in sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lanier in the loss of their baby, little Jamie, it was 13 months old, and had suffered for two weeks intensely with colitis.

Mrs. W. D. Reed was right feeble Sunday, not quite as well as she has been.

Mr. and Mrs. Leach Lanier and Mr. Matthew Varner all have been on the sick list for some time but are somewhat improved, we are glad to note. Lineberry will have a Children's Day exercise on the third Sunday night in this month. Misses Nora Carroll and Kate Frank are getting out the programs.

J. P. ELLIOT.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson.—We are having good congregations for such hot weather. At the 11:00 o'clock hour, today, we had a splendid program delivered by the young men and women, based on "The Benefits and Needs" of the Church Paper. After this Brother Powell gave a splendid talk on the paper encouraging more people to read the church paper. We are always glad of the little mite, we had three new subscribers to the Herald.

We are going to Fairview the third Sunday to join with them in Sunday school. We hope to have a large number present.

Bro. S. W. Taylor will be with us the third Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. We urge every one of our members to be present in order to hear our president. The third quarterly conference meets at Spring Hill on Saturday before the third Sunday. We want every official to be present, and every other members that can go. We are expecting a good day.

Mrs. T. H. Hilton is on the sick list but is improving. We are very glad to be able to change the report from that of last time and say that little Lela Rucker Welborne is better, and hope she and her mother will soon be back with us.

RUTH PAYNE, Reporter.

Lexington, State Street.—The Vacation Bible school closed last Thursday evening with an interesting and well rendered program. The local teachers and workers received much merited praise for their co-operation and fine work under the direction of Miss Maxine Taylor and Mr. Hendry. The attendance was good throughout the entire session, and in every way the school was a success.

Mr. Hendry had charge of the manual training of the larger boys and many useful and attractive things were made from wood. Mrs. Neal directed the needlecraft and they made many beautiful and servicable garments which well be donated to the Children's home.

Those working in other departments were: Mrs. C. L. Koonts, Mrs. F. J. Cox, Mrs. H. S. Lanier, Misses Lilla Belle McCrary, Willie Veigh and Mildred Leonard and Pauline Forcum.

Mrs. Blanton, sister-in-law of the pastor, rendered valuable service at the piano during the entire school. Her efficient help was much appreciated as was that of all the helpers in all departments. Miss Taylor was warmly welcomed by old friends here and made many new ones. We are proud to have her on the staff of conference workers.

Friday we went to Shiloh church grounds for our outing and picnic dinner. A large number of our own folks and many friends from other churches enjoyed this pleasant occasion. Various games were played before and after the sumtuous luncheon; cold drinks were on sale by some of our boys and we had access to a good well of water near the church. The orchestra which has been furnishing us fine music in our morning church, were on the grounds and delighted all present with music. The whole affair proved so pleasing and helpful that our pastor says he hopes it becomes a fixed custom.

The revival service at Elbaville is in progress this week, Brother Hendry doing the preaching; this left a vacancy—or would have. rather—Sunday night, but Mr. Blanton assured the pastor that he would fill in for him in some way, so he arranged with the Thomasville Male chorus to come over and give us a musical program.

This fine chorus delighted a large audience with splendid singing. They furnished their own pianist, too, who did the playing for the singers in a most efficient way. The writer failed to remember his name. The singing in directd by Mr. D. R. Connell, assisted by Dr. R. V. Yokley, Mr. R. L. Pope accompanied th singers and gave us a fine address on the importance of church loyalty. The address was short but Mr. Pope said much in a few words and surely no subject is more timely than that of church loyalty at this time.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Beggerly of Burlington, are visiting the home of their niece and nephew, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Rodgers. We were pleased to have Mr. and Mrs. Beggerly with us in the service Sunday night.

USE BOTTOM LAND FOR FALL GARDEN

Because it is hard to get a perfect stand of tender vegetables in late summer, the fall gardner needs use good, rich bottom land, or prepare irrigation systems for handling his garden this summer.

"There are three principal means of overcoming the effects of heat and drouth in making plans for the fall garden," says E. B. Morrow, extension horticulturist at State College. "One is to locate the farm on the moist, bottom lands of the farm, to irrigate or to so thoroughly prepare and pulverize the soil that the tender crops may withstand the effects of hot weather. The only trouble about planting the fall garden on bottom land is that the vegetables may be drowned out by frequent heavy rains."

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

In Memoriam

Jamie Ynell Lanier, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lanier of Handy, N. C., died June 27, 1930, afetr an illness of two weeks. She was thirteen months and ten days old. Her passing sent a wave of grief and sorrow throughout the entire community.

Funeral serivces were held at Lineberry Methodist Protestant church the following day by Rev. W. D. Reed. The beautiful flowers that were carried by nineteen little girls were a token of love for her. Little Jamie was loved by all that knew her. She seemed to love everybody.

Everything was done for her that father, mother, and neighbors could do, but our arms were too short. God knew best. We should be submissive to His will. While it is hard to understand her being taken away from us, some day we will understand it all. It may be to draw us all closer, yes, closer to Jesus.

The writer loved little Jamie and did everything she could for her, sitting by her side for about five hours before she died watching and caring for her.

Father and mother so heart-broken felt they could never give her up. May the parents be comforted by the words of the Master who said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

life in carrying the gospel to the cannibals." In a class of boys just in front of him sat Jimmie Chalmers, twelve years old. Then and there the seed was planted, the resolve made. Deep down in his heart Jimmie Chalmers said, "God helping me I will," and he became, though some careless years intervened, the Apostle of the Papuan Gulf, whom Robert Louis Stevenson loved with passionate admiration, esteeming him one of the two greatest men of modern times, and writing to him, "If I had known you when I was a boy, how different my life would have been."

Let us a secretaries of Missionary Education have no regrets in the years to come, but let us do our utmost to present Missions to our young people, praying constantly that the seeds may fall in the heart of our boys and girls and find lodgment there. Mission Study will bring a store o fimformation. create interest, encourage prayer, stimulate giving, and set people to thinking of the need for their services. We cannot know of the work being carried on in our fields, the good being done everywhere, the struggles of our missionaries, the story of their perils unless we read and study the books that are prepared for our use. Let's promote Mission Study.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mr. J. N. Long, Columbia, S. C., 4 crates of cantaloupes. Mr. Long, a stranger to us, passed this way with a truck load of South Carolina cantaloupes and seeing our home with the children playing on the lawn he stopped and gave us four crates of cantaloupes. He is a good Presbyterian with a love for children. May the dear Father bless him.

We thank all of you who helped to make this report possible.

Octagon Coupons

Just about 20,000 more coupons will enable us to get a large General Electric refrigerator. The following is part of a letter received today: "I have been working quite a bit, and have the promise of several coupons through the Ladies' Aid society of Lineberry church. You will hear from me about the 15th as the Aid society meets on the 12th. These hot days make us sympathize with you all, and want to help you. A 12 year-old boy of Lineberry S. S., John Low Wood."

We thank you, John, and hope that many more will work for us just as you are doing.

We need the refrigerator badly, and with the help of many friends will soon have it.

Ice Cream

My, but ice cream goes good a day like this. At noon today Mr. Jones, a real neighbor sent us five gallons of cream. That afforded a nice saucer full for each child and each worker. He's a jolly good fellow.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

For some time I have thought that I might write a word to the Herald in an attempt to encourage our people to support the Leadership Training school that is to be held at High Point College July 12-19. I hope that it is not too late to encourage some.

First of all, let us support the school with our registrations. Such work can not be carried on without financial support. Even if you are not planning to attend, hand your registration fee to your local registration agent or send direct to Rev. Fred W. Paschal, High Point College, High Point, N. C. Many of us who are not so young anymore can have a part in this good work by registering.

In the second place, I wish I might be able to encourage a number of our people to attend this school and take the courses offered. The need of such schools is recognized by most all progressive denominations, and they are holding similar schools for the purpose of training their teachers and other leaders for better service. The Methodist Protestant church is attempting, through our Department of Religious Education, and through the conference Councils of Religious Education to meet the obligation and live up to the opportunity that the times afford. The opportunity for training is offered at High Point College during this Leadership Training school for all who will take advantage of it. I think that ten dollars and a week's time could not be better spent this summer than in mingling with our leaders and would-be leaders at High Point. After you read this you will still have time to pack your grip and get ready. It is hoped that many of our pastors, even those who attended the pastors' conference, will be on hand with a number of young people from their charges.

"The Garden of the Lord"

Where is the "Garden of the Lord,"
The beauty spot of all the earth,
Where God bestows His tenderest care
To make the place of greatest worth?

Can it be found in tropic land
Where verdant leaf and gorgeous flower,
Combined in forms of highest art,
Reveal full force of beauty's power?

Or must we scale some wooded height
Where giant trees display their strength,
To find the place where God delights
To spend His time at greatest length?

O no! The garden of the Lord
Need not be sought in lands afar:
The place may be quite near to you;
'Tis where His loving children are.

A Boy's Biography of Herbert Hoover

William J. Marsh, aged 11, of New Milford, Conn., has written a life of our president and has printed about 60 copies with a small press he operates. The performance is boyish and interesting. Here are some excerpts from the book:

"The Hoovers lived in a one-story cottage across the alley from Mr. Hoover's blacksmith shop. Of course we all know, a person would never become rich from shoeing horses, as horses don't need to be shod every week; but he did make quite good on selling the machinery, which he had the agency for.

"When Jessie Hoover was twenty-four years old, their first son Theodore better known as (Tad) was born. Three years later Herbert Clark Hoover was born. And then later his sister May. I don't know anything about his sister, but; I can say this, I think she is a very lucky girl to have a brother like Mr. Hoover.

"All summer long Herbert played with the Indian children and they became very dear friends . . . Perhaps it was the Indian boys who taught him to be such an expert fisherman. Mr. Hoover can't be beat when it comes to catching the big fish . . .

"The death of Herbert's father made quite a difference in the Hoover family, his father left them comfortably fixed, providingly if they were very careful. . . . Herbert Hoover's mother was like all good Christian mothers, she wanted her children to have a good education . . .

"A good mother don't spend her time at dances and parties, she spends her time teaching her boys to be good . . .

"He (Herbert) decided he was going to Stanford University. . . . At first if I am right, he did not pass the examination but being ambitious he studied harder than ever and when he took the next examination he passed. And if I am right he graduated in 1895 . . . .

"At this University he met his wife, Miss Lou Henry, Miss Henry was a beautiful girl, she was like Mr. Hoover . . . Mrs. Hoover is an educated woman and a very refined Christian mother and of course we all know that is the only kind of woman we want to be the First Lady of the Land. . . .

"As soon as he arrived in California he went to see Miss Lou Henry and I bet she was glad to see him too. . . . . After they were married they sailed for China. I suppose they enjoyed the trip, especially Mrs. Hoover for I don't think she had ever been to China. . . .

"I have heard Mr. and Mrs. Hoover do not care for society, that is, they don't believe in wasting their time. Society is all right for lazy people. . . . I, myself, would rather be an honest working man, than a society bug.

"The World War was one of the worst wars ever known in history. . . . My mother does not allow us even to play wars, she says it is the wrong way of thinking. . . .

"Mr. Hoover never said one thing about the man who was running against him on the Democratic Ticket. . . . Everytime I heard any one say anything mean over the radio about Mr. Hoover, I made up my mind, right then, they either didn't know much or they had poor bringing up.

"The women in our town are for Prohibition. If any one says light wines and beer to them they fly up in arms. . . . I cannot understand how any good loving mother could be so small as to say her boy or girl needs wine or beer. . . . I think the women should stop serving wine at their parties. . . . Mr. Hoover is strictly dry for he said so over the radio and he also said so in his acceptance speech. . . . .

"He is a good man and everybody knows it. And one thing I do like him for, he don't drink. . . . Prohibition is here to stay. And let me tell you mothers, if you didn't smoke cigarettes, it would be more to your credit. It is bad enough for a man but when it comes to a mother or daughter smoking, that is awful!"

Paul An Optimist

Paul did not go about complaining of his head aches and back aches and stomach aches and tooth aches and ear aches and eye aches and leg aches and feet aches, of neuralgia and rheumatism, of shortness of breath and hardness of hearing, of acidosis and high blood pressure, of bad colds and sore throat, of mumps and whooping cough and chicken pox, of stiffness and numbness and nervousness, of long imprisonmens and floggings and ship wrecks and stonings: no, he had a large share of the world's troubles, but he said, "I am persuaded that these light afflictions which are but for a moment work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

IS THE TITHE A DEBT?

There is a lot of confusion about this Tithing idea; it is the least satisfactory religious idea that I ever hear Christians discuss.

Why? How?

Well it is so flat-footed, as you might say; "take it or leave it."

You do or you don't. And that's all there is to it. Now when Christians talk about prayer, they get along beautifully. If one has a notion regarding prayer that is a little different from the other's, it is all right. So with studying the Bible, or going to church, or your favorite hymns. Everybody has his own opinion, and everything's lovely.

Isn't it pretty much the same way about tithing?

No, nor anything like it. If you tithe, you pay a tenth of your income to the work of God. If you don't, you "give," according to some scheme of your own, or as yu happen to feel, or what you gave last year, or "about what is right," or "as much as most other people." But the tither knows, and you know, that the difference between "giving" and "paying" is as wide as a barn door.

But what is the difference?

Dear, dear; the slowness of some people. The tithe is a tenth. The tenth is the part which you put aside for religious uses. It is like rent, or interest. The rate is fixed. You don't say you "give" the landlord his rent. You pay it. Uncle Sam doesn't "give" you the interest on your Liberty Bonds. He pays it.

Yes, I can see that. But why should you "pay" anything for the work of God? Isn't a Christian free from all bondage to the ancient law? Why can't you give as you are able, without bothering your head over rates and words and names?

Because you are free. Who freed you? Who is responsible for your prosperity, such as it is? Who really "owns" what you hold, in money or goods? Who is first in your life? Yourself, or God?

Why there is only one answer. God, certainly. He made me what I am, and would have done better if I had let him. He has the right of way. He is the owner of all, how are you going to recognize that? I mean, how will you admit that he really owns what you possess? Uncle Sam admits your ownership of a Liberty Bond, not by thanking you for your help in financing the war. He doesn't give you a button or a medal. That would be nice; but he pays you four and a quarter per cent interest, no more, no less. Same way with your landlord; you don't expect to satisfy him with praises of the house, or compliments on his personal character. You pay him the rent.

But how can you pay God money?

You can't, of course. But God has a lot of faith in you. You are his child. You believe in his plan to save all men beginning with yourself. And he is willing that you shall take this money of his, and spend it for him, to help carry on this plan of his. Always remembering that the money is his, not yours. And that's where the idea of stewardship comes in; the relation of one who is trusted to use another person's property for that other person's purposes.

Very well; but what has all this to do with the tithe? Some poor people would find a tenth too much, and some rich people ought to spend more.

As to the poor, two things. I never heard of a tither who, being poor, complained that the tithe was too much. He isn't looking for sympathy. And then, it is one of the basic things, like the pay for the roof that shelters him. Up to the point of actual poverty, when the public should step in, every man expects to pay his house rent.

All right; supposing that everybody can afford a tenth. When a man becomes more prosperous, why should he not pay at least a tenth, and as much more as he can? Seems to me I've heard something about "the tithe as a minimum."

You have, and it is one of those phrases which should be banished from the language. There is neither minimum nor maximum to a fixed charge. It is what it is. Would you offer to pay more rent, just because your salary had been raised?

No, because I don't believe in making presents to my landlord.

Right you are. But wouldn't you enjoy making presents to God by giving to his work? And, after you have paid your tithe, that's your grand and glorious Gospel privilege. Go as far as you like then. It is one of the finest joys of the Christian life.

Maybe so, but what is the practical difference?

All the difference, between paying an honest debt, which is a pleasant thing, and being able to offer a grateful gift, which is pleasant in quite another fashion. If you paid no tithe, but considered you owed everything to God, you would always be in debt, and would miss the joy of real giving. The alabaster box of precious ointment would mean nothing to you.

Yes; and yet why not encourage the larger offerings? Aren't they needed, and badly?

I don't discourage them. But I tell you this, that if one may venture to guess at the purposes of God, he is infinitely more anxious that all his children should admit his claim than that a few should make large gifts. And the proof is, that not enough Christian work could be done in the world to exhaust the tithes of Christians, if all were tithers. The tithe would provide the means for as many workers, as much equipment, as could possibly be used.

Even if the Gospel were really carried to every man?

Yes; all the more. Because if as soon as man were converted to Jesus Christ he began to tithe, he would be providing means for the conversion of others.—By Dan B. Brummitt.

OBEDIENCE TO LAW

What do you think of a man who is willing to bribe another man to commit a crime? The bootlegger is a criminal. He is under the ban of the government. He is an outlaw, and, if caught, he will go to jail. All this is known by the man who buys of him. The man who buys knows that he himself is in no danger. He will not go to jail. He will not pay a fine. He can still move in good society and be counted an honorable man. But what do you think of him? What do you think of a man who is willing to bribe a man to commit a crime which may land him in jail? The bootlegger carries on his business for money. He is not a philanthropist. He does not carry the welfare of the town on his heart.

Criminals for Cash

He is in the rum business solely for cash. He is not interested in his customers. He cares nothing for their intellectual or moral or spiritual or bodily well-being. He wants to put money in his purse. To do that he is willing to become a criminal and to run the risk of receiving a jail sentence.

What do you think of a man who is willing to take advantage of the low moral development of a man who is willing for a piece of silver to do a thing which may put him behind the prison bars? The law makes a distinction between the man who sells and the man who buys. The law calls the first man a criminal; the law lets the second man go free. In the realm of civil law there is a distinction between the two men; in the realm of morals there is no distinction. The first man commits a crime; the second man commits a sin. Both men do wrong. Both men are enemies of society. The one man pays a penalty, the other man escapes. But will you allow the second man to escape your condemnation? The bootlegger lives on a low plane, but the man who patronizes him is on a plane just as low. They are on the same moral plane, even though society may despise one and respect the other.

The man who buys thinks he is smart. He is not smart, but stupid. He thinks he has gottten ahead of the government; he has fallen behind his better self. He thinks he has won a victory, whereas he has suffered a defeat. He laughs over the cleverness of his bootlegger, but his laughter is pitiable. He calls prohibition a joke, but the joke is on himself. He is morally so dull he cannot see how low down he is.

A Ruinous Doctrine

There is no more dangerous doctrine current today than the idea that a man is permitted to pick out the laws which he is willing to obey. This is the way to break down respect for all law. It is the way to overthrow popular government. It strikes at the root of law and order. It undermines the corner-stone of constitutional government. All men who understand the fundamental principles of democracy speak soberly when they deal with the question of obeying the law. If one man exercises the liberty of rejecting a law because he does not like it, a second man may reject another law which is distasteful to him, and a third man may do the same.

On a tour through China three years ago I realized as never before the majesty and beauty of law. At that time China was in large sections overrun by the armies of her war lords. These lords in many cases did not know how to keep their soldiers in hand. They were not always able to pay them; sometimes they could not even feed them. An army without food is a dangerous beast. Soldiers unfed became bandits, and these bandits roamed over the country, looting and pillaging and killing wherever they went. There was no law to restrain them. They did what they pleased. One day in a city in South China I saw a soldier suddenly kick a coolie. The coolie had done nothing at all. The soldier was in a bad humor, and so he found relief in kicking the coolie. The coolie did not resent the injustice. There was no redress. He slunk off like a dog. A dog would have yelped, but the coolie bore his suffering without a sound. One of the most impressive phenomena I witnessed in China was the amazing silence in which people suffered the injustices inflicted upon them. They were absolutely helpless. There was no law to protect them. In a village I saw a soldier one day go up to a bakery shop and pick up a big tray filled with different kinds of cakes and bread and toss it into the street. He did it for sheer devilment. The owner offered not a word of protest. He knew better. There was no redress, no protection, no law. Every soldier did what the passing mood prompted him to do. The sad faces of Chinese peasants who had been robbed and abused again and again, and who saw nothing ahead of them but similar or worse outrages, haunt me yet. I was told in one of the cities that very often a business man on his way to business in the morning would be stopped by a soldier who would compel him to carry his baggage to the next town. Sometimes the destination was miles away, but the poor Chinese merchant, unaccustomed to carry heavy burdens, would faint and fall under his load. In that case the soldier promptly shot him, and looked out for another victim whom he might compel to do his bidding. There was no law. I had never before been in a country in which there was no law. The stories which were told me of kidnappings and murders, and tortures inflicted on prisoners, made my blood run cold. There was no law. Where there is no law there is no liberty, no security, no happiness, no anything that the mind prizes or the heart holds dear. I had to get into a country in which there was no law in order to see clearly the loveliness and divine glory of law.—Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., LL.D., in C. E. World.

THE REALITY OF GOD'S PRESENCE

The story is told of a certain lady who was a great reader of history, and revelled in pictures illustrating scenes in many lands, and was equipped with good imaginative powers, yet had until more than thirty years of age traveled very little.

Finally the time came for a trip to Egypt. On the way, one morning, the ship came to a stand-still. On going to the port-hole, the traveler saw the rock of Gibraltar within a stone's throw, just as pictured and read about, but with one difference; it was real. So it was along the voyage as one after another of the points of interest became actually visible to the outward eye; everything was just as pictured in the mind, but everything was real instead of only imagined.

This experience made a deep impression on her in connection with her sense of the reality of God to her soul. It may well be to us a parable of the difference between thought about God and the real experience of Him.

How many of us are there who have for years read of and pictured in our minds our Heavenly Father and the riches of the Christian life, when, suddenly, He appears to us as a reality, unmistakably, a real felt presence in our work-a-day life!

Sometimes He comes to us in response to prayer; at other times, unsought perhaps, to warn us against embarking on some improper course, or to prick our consciences for some unguarded act or thought already past. There is no denying the fact that God does make Himself real to us, and we are made to realize that He is "nearer to us than breathing, closer than hands or feet." He will keep close to us to direct our acts and thoughts if allowed to have a rightful place in our hearts. Even though we have been sinful, He can do wonderful things for us. He gave His own Son as a sacrifice, that sinners might be saved if they believe in Him.

To make God real in our own lives, it is only reasonable that we should obey certain Divine laws; the felt presence comes by obeying these laws.

God's way of making salvation real is by and through Jesus Christ our Lord and Saviour. We have known people who were unable to believe that it was possible or necessary for our Heavenly Father to permit the sacrifice of His only begotten Son in order for the salvation of the souls of mankind; but "there is a perfectness and completeness in the act of the Cross which leaves every other achievement behind it a distance which cannot be measured."

Christ Himself chose the Cross as a means of returning from earth to glory with His Father after the cmopletion of His ministry here. Note what He says to the two disciples who journeyed to Emmaus: "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into His glory?" "Thus it was written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day." Luke 24:26, 46.

In order to enjoy God's presence we must have faith; it should be an abounding, abiding faith, a faith that will give a bit of a foretaste of Heaven even here on earth.

We cannot say too much of the importance of prayer. Prayer is our effort to commune with God; it is the outreaching of our souls for the felt presence of the Father. The prayer of faith does prove effective in opening the door to Him and the joy of being "at one" with the Father surpasses earthly joys.

The reality of the presence of God is made manifest in a ministry of service for Him. This may be vocal, or it may be in less obvious ways. In these days of world stress there is service for everyone, and our Master rewards His servants with His felt presence.

F. W. Robertson well says: "Life is not done, and our Christian character is not won, so long as God has anything left for us to suffer or anything left for us to do."

A very rich service is rendered to our fellow men when we make God real to them by allowing His reality in us to have full sway in our own lives. Those who have been privileged to see that wonderful painting in Keble College, Oxford, "The Light of the World," should have a vision of the importance of a life dedicated to the service of the best of Masters. If we open the door of the Heart to Him, even though it may be now more or less overgrown with the things of earth, then there will be experienced in very truth a Presence in the midst, the reality of God.—Wm. B. Harvey in Pennsbury Leaflet.

IS SMOKING A MORAL QUESTION?

Occasionally one hears it said even in circles where moral questions are usually well defined, "Smoking is not a moral question." Is this true?

What is a moral question when bodily, mental, and emotional injury is involved? Smoking injures the body by reducing lung-power, endangering eyesight, and drugging the nerves. It predisposes to unhealthy tissue and often encourages cancerous growths. It greatly increases infant mortality among maternal smokers. Smoking injures the mind, as many tests in high schools and colleges have shown. Smoking excites the nerves and upsets emotional balance. It dulls the finer sensibilities and makes for increased irritability of of temper.

Is it a moral question when economic waste is involved? Smoking wastes money that would make possible the higher education of thousands, ameliorate poverty (the smoker will usually rob his family of bare necessities in order to satisfy this wasteful habit), and provide many added comforts. If the money spent for tobacco were spent for useful commodities, it would greatly increase the general prosperity of the country. A further waste from smoking is the fearful fire loss each year from this cause alone.

Is it a moral question when the limitation of personality is involved? Smoking, like any habit that becomes our master, limits personality. The tobacco user is usually more and more enslaved by the habit. The personality of the smoker is limited by the fact that many persons who must unwillingly breathe tobacco smoke in lodge anterooms, hotel lobbies, restaurants, buses, trains, trolleys, halls, and homes, not to mention subways, ships, streets, and a thousand other places where the smoker is a boorish nuisance. Many a smoker has unconsciously imparted the tobacco habit to the members of his own family, who were as unconsciously injured by it as was he.

If the foregoing are not moral considerations, we do not know the meaning of the term.—Walter F. Whitney in Zion's Herald.

THE CHURCHES AND PROHIBITION

United Presbyterian Church

The United Presbyterian Church Assembly, in session at Des Moines, Iowa, on June 2nd reaffirmed faith in Prohibition deploring "private publicity enterprises in the form of straw ballots." A report of a committee on reform, headed by F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, was adopted.

In the report warning was given against the "insidious campaign of wet propaganda deliberately designed to discourage respect for prohibition and encourage the use of intoxicating liquors."

Further protest was registered against "drinking scenes in the movies showing the use of intoxicants as attractive, adventurous and fashionable," and "insinuations favorable to intoxicating liquors in the fiction pages of leading magazines."

Presbyterian

At the one hundred and forty-second General Assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, at Cincinnati, Ohio, on May 30th, Dr. Mark Matthews, of Seattle, addressed the convention on behalf of prohibition enforcement, and the assembly came to its feet in a rising vote for support of the Eighteenth Amendment and for solid opposition to any attempt to modify it.

Northern Baptist

The Northern Baptist Convention, in Cleveland, Ohio, on May 30th declared "a nation-wide campaign of education in the matter of strong drink and obedience to all law" is at once necessary. The report was submitted by the Committee on Prohibition and Law Enforcement of that convention.

The report calls the Baptists and other religious groups to "stand unwaveringly in defense of temperance and law enforcement."

Methodist Episcopal Church, South

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in conference at Dallas, Texas, during the month of May, made a strong declaration for prohibition. Statements in support of the Eighteenth Amendment brought repeated applause. Several times the Conference rose to its feet and cheered when Prohibition was commended.

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

"The Spirit of the Lord Is Upon Me"

This prophecy of Isaiah concerning the Messiah was Jesus' first text, and he astonished his townspeople by saying to them, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears." They were greatly offended, and cast him out from their midst. But what was offense to them was glory to Jesus. The Spirit of the Lord was upon him, and in the strength of that fact he did the work that the Father sent him into the world to do. To his own disciples he later said, "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." It was the Spirit of the Lord upon Jesus that gave him power; it is that Spirit, and only that Spirit, that gives power today to his ministers. With that unction, the weakest among us can be mighty for God; without it, the strongest are hopeless failures. A stranger who had just heard Mr. Spurgeon preach was asked what he thought of him. The reply was, "I did not think anything at all of him; he made me think so much of Jesus that I completely lost sight of Mr. Spurgeon." I have no idea what this great man of God preached about that day,—what his text was or what he said in his sermon. But one thing I am sure of: "The Spirit of the Lord was upon him." O brethren of the ministry, let us tarry before God, that the promise of the Father may be sent upon us. If the spiritual currents are weak and running low, let us see to it that the pulpit opens the flood gates that the onrushing streams of God's power may fill his church.

Herald

In the last report to HERALD the following charges were nearly out on their allotments: Liberty-Siler, State Street, Winston First, and Tabernacle. Asheboro has gone ten over their allotment, and Calvary four. Mrs. Sarah A. Glasgow, Littleton, N. C., writes that she has a clipping from the Central Protestant, bearing date of 1888. She had been a subscriber to the paper several years before that time, she says, and when Our Church Record (now the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD was started, she became a subscriber, and has no recollection that her subscription has ever lapsed. For nearly, or perhaps quite a half century, she has been a reader of our conference papers. It must be gratifying to the Editor to have these expressions of appreciation from these persons who have been readers of the paper from its beginning. Their constancy is a pleasing evidence, both of their appreciation of the paper and of their loyalty to the church. Surely the HERALD has been invaluable to us as a conference organ. Let the subscription campaign go forward. And along with the HERALD, take the oldest-newest Methodist paper in the United States—The Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Young People's Training School

This is on now, at High Point College, and a goodly number of young people are in attendance. About seventy-five were registered yesterday. My time is being given to the school this week, though a slight illness necessitated my absence today,—Tuesday. Expect to be back at my post tomorrow. The daily devotionals, in charge of Dr. T. M. Johnson, are pleasing and helpful. The school will be a blessing to these young people.

Salaries and Budgets

The salaries of many pastors are much in arrears. This, of course, is not as charges desire. The financial condition of the country makes money hard to get; and this is having its effect upon salaries. However, it is possible to magnify "money stringency" too much, and by doing this, permit the church to suffer unduly. We urge the stewards to do what they can to pay pastors now. Every dollar that is paid now increases the possibility of paying in full at the end of the year. And besides pastors need their salaries to meet current bills. Please, Brother Stewards, look after the salary. "The laborer is worthy of his hire." And brother pastor, you please press the budgets. But very little has been paid on either budget to date; and if both salary and budgets are put off until the closing weeks of the conference year, the results will be embarrassing. Small amounts gathered regularly from now on will reduce the amount to be raised at the close very materially. "Think on these things," brethren; "these things do."

Appointments

July 19-20.—North Davidson charge, as follows: Saturday, 11 A. M., Spring Hill in quarterly conference; Saturday night, 8 P. M., Bethesda; Sunday, 11 A. M., Spring Hill; 3 P. M., Mt. Pleasant; 8 P, M., Canaan.

July 24.—Graham, 11 A. M.

July 27, Sunday.—Level Cross, Randleman charge, 2:30 P. M.

August 3, Sunday.—Shiloh, Randleman charge, 11 A. M.; John Wesley Stand, a Holiness church near Asheboro, 2:30 P. M.

August 24.—Rockingham and Melton's Grove.

"Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might."

Fraternally yours,
S. W. TAYLOR.

OUR ROBES

I suppose we may say roughly, in our more modern phraseology, that the robe so frequently spoken of in Scriptures answers substantially to what we call character. It is the self—and yet it is a kind of projection and making visible of the self, the vesture which is cast around "the hidden man of the heart." This mysterious robe, which answers nearly to what we mean by character, is made by the wearer. That is a solemn thought. For every one of us carries about with him a mystical loom, and we are always weaving—weave, weave, weaving—this robe which we wear, every thought a thread of the warp, every action a thread of the weft. We weave it, as the spider does its web, out of its own entrails, if I might say so. We weave it, and we dye it, and we cut it, and we stitch it, and then we put it on and wear it, and it sticks to us. Like a snail that crawls about your garden patches, and makes its shell by a process of secretion from out of its own substance, so you and I are making that mysterious, solemn thing that we call character, moment by moment. It is our own self, modified by our actions. Character is the precipitate from the stream of conduct which, like the Nile Delta, gradually rises solid and firm above the parent river and confines its flow.—Alexander Maclaren.

THE EVER-PRESENT SAVIOUR

The presence of God with his people is one of the sweetest and happiest verities of our religion. The Old Testament gives this wonderful assurance: "The Lord your God is he that goeth with you." The gospel answers to this old promise in the words of him who spake as man never spake: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world!" The witnessing presence of the Holy Spirit is but another expression of the same great and blessed reality: "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the spirit of truth."

This presence of the triune God in all our walks and all our sojournings is a possible experience to every believing soul. It lends itself to experience. Through all the visions and revelations of the patriarchal covenant, the presence of the Lord was the one supreme evidence of the acceptance of the chosen people. What was the faith of Abraham? What was the confidence of Isaac? It was the Lord's veritable presence, always real to their unquestioning hearts. Whether this presence was symbolized in the noonday voice or the midnight dream; whether in a burning bush or a ladder of angels, or on pillars of cloud and fire, they felt, with their every return from the wanderings of sin, the constant and life-giving touch of the Divine Hand.

But the gospel of the Son of God brought to the world a new consciousness of the divine presence. One of the sweetest names of Jesus is that which signifies "God with us!" And, oh, how often in the progress of our Saviour's ministry did he justify that wonderful name! Always coming to the disciples in their time of need, always nearest to them when their need was greatest, Jesus fulfilled even on the earth the blessed promise: "Lo, I am with you always!" If he was on the mount of prayer while the disciples were storm-tossed on the troubled waters, if he was in far-off Galilee when the Bethany home-circle was broken by the hand of death, the Master came at once to them. He could have performed a miracle upon the waters, and spoken a great calm, even from the far-away mountain; he might have performed the miracle of raising the dead, even from far-away Galilee. But he knew that the miracle-worker was what they wanted, not the act of friendship alone, but the friend himself; they wanted him! And so he came to them. And in his presence the miracle became as natural as the growing harvest in the summer sun! And, far above and beyond the physical miracle, there was wrought the spiritual miracle, the miracle of forgiveness, the miracle of communion, the miracle of regeneration.

Those two disciples going down from Jerusalem to Emmaus had a wonderful fulfillment of the Lord's promise. They were walking that day in the desert of despair, thinking of their Lord as numbered among the dead, remembering perhaps his promises, but surrendering their very hopes to their fears. But Jesus himself drew near! And, even though he was not recognized, they experienced again the exaltation which came to them on the Mount of Transfigeration. Afterward, when they undertook to recall this wonderful journey, the words of the Saviour were not mentioned, perhaps not even remembered, simply because the Lord's presence had so wrought upon them as to become the dominant note of their experience. "Did not our hearts burn within us while he communed with us by the way?"

If thou art lonely, or sorrowful, or tempted, or discouraged, let Jesus commune with you by the way! His very presence is a miracle, and yet that miracle is a possible everyday experience to every believing soul.—Editorial in Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

CHURCH STATISTICS

Dr. H. K. Carroll has published in the Christian Herald his church statistics for 1929. The totals show 225,001 ministers, as compared with 222,202 in 1928; 237,290 churches, as compared with 238,371 in 1928, and 50,006,566 communicants, as compared with 49,706,147 in 1928. There was an increase of 2,799 in the number of ministers, as compared with a gain of 4,998 in 1928. There was a decrease of 1,081 in the number of churches, as compared with an increase of 2,380 in 1928. And there was a gain of only 300,419 in the number of communicants, as compared with an increase of 1,111,984 in 1928. The Methodists (16 bodies) show a net loss of 2,440. The Methodist Episcopal church, reporting 4,589,664 members, shows a net loss of 24,433. Of the twenty-one Episcopal areas in the United States, only three report any gain at all. The Roman Catholic church, reporting 17,173,147 communicants, shows an increase of 77,303. These figures are lower than the ones quoted from the Catholic Directory last week. Southern Baptists report 3,770,645, or a gain of 64,769. Northern Baptists show a decrease of 15,198, with a present membership of 1,404,685. The Southern Methodist Church reports 2,594,038 members, or a gain of 13,153. The Northern Presbyterians report 1,959,006, with a gain of 40,032, while the Southern Presbyterians report 455,988 members, and a gain of 9,331.—Exchange.

YOUR OWN WILL COME TO YOU

Lift your eyes occasionally from your immediate work and take a long-range view of God's beautiful and inspiring creation. Look away into the depths of the distant sky, and let your spirit find wing in the infinite. Give your mind freedom to wander where it may in the immensity of space surrounding you. This mental excursion will bring you spiritual refreshment and many helpful ideas, so that you will return again to your regular duties with exaltation and new courage. A flight of fancy is a desirable relief to concentrated effort. Never become so deeply absorbed in your work as to lose sympathetic touch with the world around you. Be earnest, be strong, be true, and your own will come to you.—Grenville Kleiser.

—An article of last week brought to the mind of one of our ministers an interesting experience of his some years ago. He and his son slept in adjoining rooms, and one moonlight night he saw or dreamed that he saw his son come into the father's room and take his stand by an open window, looking out into the night. The father was surprised at this movement and said, "Son, what do you want?" There was no response, and the question was repeated twice, each time with more emphasis. There was still no reaction. The father then rose from his bed and proceeded to grasp the young man by the arm. His hand closed on empty space and the figure had disappeared. He immediately went into his son's room and found the young man sound asleep. The minister thinks he awoke from asleep before the form of the son vanished. We are inclined to think the father was awakened at the moment the figure vanished, by the surprise of finding nothing in his grasp.

OUR STORY PAGE

A TRUE STORY

We walked slowly through the empty rooms of the little factory. He was alone in the building. As yet the machinery was not in place. He was starting over in life; his first attempt at business had not been a success. The tiny string of credit which he had to depend upon in his new venture was made up of the faith of a few close friends, rather than the calculated, mathematical confidence of banks.

When he came to a remote corner of one of the upper floors he knelt and closed his eyes and prayed.

Then he got up and went out into the world again and began his hard business fight. The machinery came at last, and he started to make furniture. He borrowed and borrowed and borrowed; his improving business records strengthened his credit.

But there was a mystery about hmi in the fields of credit. Although he began to look more and more safe to the credit men, he seemed to insist on giving money away. While he was borrowing he gave. Sometimes he said "no" to those who asked him for financial aid for religious or philanthropic purposes. But when he did say "yes," he said it with an alacrity that astonished the recipient. He did not give money to foolish ventures or to unsound enterprises, but it was a puzzling thing to the bankers to have him borrow from them while he was giving money freely to help others who were finding the world a hard place to live in.

But there was a mystery about him in the fields of credit. established; his furniture became known to the trade for its honest quality. At last there came a time when borrowing was no longer necessary.

When he died, after a well-rounded life, the mystery of his gifts was explained. It seemed that during all his career, he had considered that the money which he borrowed, the money which he earned, and the money which he gave away was not his own money at all; it was God's money.

Over his casket that day of the funeral the clergyman of the church which he had attended told the story.

"I have carried a secret about our friend," ran the gist of the clergyman's story, "which I have never been able to reveal until now. He asked me never to tell it while he was alive.

"When he was making his second start in life, so he told me, he knelt in an empty room in his new factory, and he told God that he wanted to take Him into parternership; that one-tenth of all the earnings should go to Him; and that he would use the money in all his business ventures as if it were God's money.

"That was the secret of his life," said the clergyman.

Then at last the bankers and the other furniture manufacturers and his associates knew why this man had given away money even while he was borrowing it.

One of the great furniture manufacturers of Grand Rapids recently told me this story; every other manufacturer in that great furniture center knows about the good furniture that was made with God's money.

It would be a posthumous violation of this furniture manufacturer's secret to give his name in this widely read magazine.

"It's a silent partnership you know," he told his clergyman-confessor.

But there's many a home in the United States today that is graced with the honest furniture that was made by this man with what he considered God's funds.—Wm. G. Shepherd.

THE HORSE WHO REMEMBERED

I bought "Joe" more for an experiment than because I really needed him. I had gone to a sales stable about twenty miles from my home with a neighbor who was buying a green horse for his spring work. The stable was full of horses, young and sleek, and while looking them over I was attracted to a small black horse who was in a box-stall at the end of the building. There was something about him that was familiar, something that teased my mind with a memory which just eluded me. The horse stopped eating when I looked over the door at him and retreated to the further corner of the stall and stood facing me with his head a little lowered, not as though he were afraid but as though he were waiting for some certain thing to happen, a thing that had happened often in the past ,and which he had reason to believe would go right on happening in the future. Something unpleasant. In spite of my extended hand, and my most soothing tones of voice the black refused to leave the corner, and did not once turn his head away or make any move to go on eating.

The owner of the stable strolled over as I stood there and said, "Now, there's a horse I'll sell dirt cheap if you'll take him home. He's as nice a little fellow as ever lived, but nobody seems to be able to get along with him. I've sold him back a dozen times in the last two years. He's kind but he's notional. For instance, he can't be fed or watered out of a tin pail. Goes crazy if you try to bring one up to him. And if you touch him without speaking to him first he's likely to kick your head off. Then, the way he looks at people with that steady stare as if he'd like to murder 'em, if he dared, gives most folks the creeps. But maybe you could get along with him."

As I mentally reviewed some of the animals this same trader had sold me in the past, I reflected that if none of them had killed me this one certainly wouldn't be likely to. And after a bit of argument I paid the ridiculously small price asked for the black, and a boy led him out and saddled him up for me. He was perfectly quiet during the process but there was about him all the time an air of watchful waiting. He was a rather showy, handsome horse, though small, and after he was saddled he still had that elusive, familiar something that I could not quite place. When I mounted and started home with him I found him to have very superior gaits, a nice, brisk walk, a good trot, and a canter that was a joy to ride. He was apparently afraid of nothing, was light-mouthed and easy to handle.

When I got home I turned Joe into a spare box-stall, watered and fed him and left him alone. The next morning I forgot the advice about tin pails and brought the horse a drink one. At sight of the pail he seemed overcome with fear, leaped about the stall, hitting his head against the wall, sweating with terror and behaving so wildly that I was frightened. I hastily exchanged the tin pail for a wooden one and had no more trouble.

As time went on I grew very fond of Joe. He was notional, to be sure, and sometimes his watchful stare was annoying, but he worked beautifully either under the saddle or in harness.

One day I had ridden Joe downtown and was sitting on his back in front of a store talking with some friends. To my astonishment and horror Joe suddenly leaped toward the sidewalk, nearly unseating me and with ears laid back, eyes rolling wickedly, charged at an elderly man who was just coming out of a store door talking to a companion. The man retreatedly hastily, but even as I checked and quieted the raging Joe I remembered, and almost regretted, that I had kept the horse from revenging himself.

Several years before, this same man had been a neighbor of ours on a farm and he had owned a small black colt, which he abused shamefully. His favorite amusements were pounding this colt over the head with a tin pail and sneaking up behind him quietly in order to hit him with a club. I also remembered a most unsavory tale of this man's having hit the colt over the head with a crowbar, a glancing blow that skinned his head and nearly killed him, and I knew where Joe got the ugly scar just under his foretop. After abusing and starving the colt until he was nearly dead he had sold him, and the poor thing had drifted about from owner to owner until he fell into my hands. I suppose he had been constantly on the watch for this cruel man and the sound of his voice had released something in the horse's brain that transformed him from a quiet, well-mannered saddle animal into a blood-thirsty demon.

Understanding Joe's ''notions'' better after I knew what caused them I had no trouble with him. Having found the man who had abused him he seemed to lose his distrust of other people but it was never safe to allow him to get within sight or hearing of his former owner.—Elizabeth Thomas in Our Dumb Animals.

WAS BARNUM RIGHT?

By Ernest H. Cherrington, LL.D., Litt.D.

(General Secretary, World League Against Alcoholism)

Does the American people love to be humbugged? Barnum thought so and made a fortune out of the theory. The foes of prohibition also think so. Just what they will gain by putting into practice this conception of the intelligence of the average man and average woman remains to be seen. The press of the country is being filled with stories about prohibition. This is natural, since the beverage alcohol question is the most important one confronted by the civilized world today. But the picture given of prohibition, its underlying principles, the economic necessity for its maintenance, the degree of its observance or enforcement, the effect it has had upon our business and social life is being so utterly misrepresented that, however reluctantly, one is forced to ask whether there is not a sinister motive and an even more sinister influence behind the repeated misrepresentations one reads daily.

A half-dozen wealthy men, according to the admissions of the heads of the wet organization fighting prohibition, are financing the assaults made upon this beneficent national policy. The revelation of their methods was given only fragmentary report in the daily press. Not since the Senate Judiciary Committee exposed the work of the liquor interests of the country in subsidizing the press, attacking temperance leaders, corrupting our political life and promoting lawbreaking and general lawlessness has there been such an assault made upon the basic channels of current information as exist today. Supposedly impartial newspaper correspondents and authors were revealed as being secretly in the pay of the liquor crowd. The founder of the wet group, posing as a philanthropist serving his cause without pay, was exposed as the recipient of a large salary which did not appear upon the books of his organization. His seized correspondence forced him to the admission that he had more than once transported intoxicating liquor. Mass meetings, reported by the press as expressions of the popular will, were admitted to have been ''worked up'' by expenditure of large sums. Handicaps of all kinds placed in the way of enforcement and encouragement given to law breakers were somewhat cynically set forth. The press is silent upon these or else so cautiously present them that their force is obscured and the people do not realize the true status of affairs evidently on the score that they do not constitute news.

We read misrepresentations concerning the amount of drinking done today although the most casual observer cannot fail to note the great decrease in drunkenness everywhere. We read stories of the debauchery of youth but the heated protest made by leaders of the younger generation who are outraged by this libel receives slight publication. We are told that prohibition cannot be enforced at the very time when the same papers tell the story of the arrest and conviction of the liquor criminals. We are informed that prohibition has failed even while Census Bureau reports and the carefully prepared data of great trade associations show the undisputable value of prohibition in greatly decreasing the death rate and in stabilizing our whole economic structure in the post-war period and in the difficult present day when all the industrial nations of the world are undergoing an unparallelled reconstruction. We are told that prohibition is fostering crime although the great criminal authorities of the country as well as the census data of the nation show a marked decrease in our crime ratio for the prohibition period.

Barnum may have made millions out of his theory that the American people love to be humbugged, but those millionaires who hope to bring back the liquor business with its billions of potential dollars for their profit at the cost of wrecking the safety, the security, the morals and the health of the American people have a false conception both of the age in which we are living and of the mentality of the people of this land. Abraham Lincoln was right when he declared ''you can fool all the people some of the time and some people all of the time but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time.''

◆

In all these thirty years I have never seen the day when I was tempted for a moment to return to the old spasmodic, haphazard method of giving to the Lord. We, too, have been blessed temporally and spiritually, in basket and in store, in mind and in heart, in this practice of systematic giving. There has seemed to be an overarching Providence all the way. When the tenth account would be running low because we had drawn upon it more freely in the face of some unusual need, then some windfall out of a clear sky, a generous wedding fee or an invitation to lecture or a commencement address with a very cheering ''honorarium'' attached, would come to our relief and we would thank God and go forward.—The Rev. Charles R. Brown, Yale University.

July 27: MISSIONS IN CHANGING CHINA

Scripture—2 Chron. 15:1-7

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—A call to repentance. Jonah 3:1-4.

Tuesday—Spreading the word. Acts 8:1-5.

Wednesday—A call to better living. Luke 3:10-18.

Thursday—Christ's transforming power. 2 Cor. 5:17-21.

Friday—Defeat of the Gods. 1 Kings 17:17-40.

Saturday—Medical Missions. Acts 14:8-18.

Leader's Talk

During the past twenty years China has undergone a political change. She is awakening and preparing to break the shackles of ignorance and take her place among the nations of the world.

We as a nation should be a sympathetic helper to China. Perhaps there is no other nation at the present time facing graver problems than China. Her social, economic, political and religious life is passing through a period of transition. She is experiencing that same agonizing transition period which comes to any nation when the ancient order of things is being changed.

The question is, will she respond, during this transition period, to the call of Him who said "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" Then, will America grasp her glorious opportunity and privilege, and give the answer which she, above all other nations, is prepared to give? Will she carry the message of the glorious blessings to be found only in Jesus Christ?

To be of help to China, we must have a full knowledge of and a genuine sympathy for China and her great problems and so we are studying "Missions in Changing China."

Topics for Discussions

1. Political Conditions in China.
2. Social Conditions in China.
3. Economic Conditions in China.
4. Religious Conditions in China.

Answer These

1. What are the principal causes of the terrible famines of China?
2. What are the barriers to education, and how are they being overcome in China today?
3. What have missionaries done for women in China?
4. What religion is most common in China? What is its effect?
5. What is your denomination doing in China?
6. Do you believe that Jesus Christ can help China? How?

Suitable Songs

"There Are Lovely Hearts to Cherish," "Throw Out the Lifeline," "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go," "We've a Story to Tell," ad "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Quotations

Christianity in China has proved to be like leaven in the people's minds, creating a desire for better things. To get these things the old system had to be destroyed.—Anon.

A child learns to walk by being given an opportunity to toddle alone. Missions in China are trying to let the native church meet its own problems and solve them. That is the way to independence.—Anon.

BUDDHA—CONFUCIUS—CHRIST

"Into a pit a poor man fell,
A pit full deep, and dark as hell;
Prone, helpless, groaning, there he lay
Till Buddha passed along that way.
'Poor fellow,' said the holy one,
''Tis sad to leave you thus foredone,
But this advise give I you
Before my journey I pursue—
If ever from your fearsome plight
You struggle out to life and light,
By aid of either gods or men,
Be sure you don't get in again!'
Confucius, lost in thought profound,
Was startled by the wailing sound
Of one in mortal agony;
The pit approaching cautiously,
He called in tones like far-off chime,
'If half-way upward you will climb,
I think that I can then make shift
You from that place of doom to lift.'
But down deep in the miry clay
The hapless, hopeless sufferer lay,
Nor could the great philosopher
One benefit on him confer!
Behold, now, Jesus Christ draws nigh,
Responsive to the plaintive cry!
Down to the lowest depths He goes,
Strong arms around the lost one throws—
All helpless, bleeding, sore distressed!
Upbears him on His loving breast
In heaven's own light and peace to shine,
Transformed by accolade divine.
Laves him beneath the lustral tide
That flowed from His own pierced side,
Dowers him with strength in ample store,
And sweetly says, 'Go, sin no more'!"

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

DEPARTMENT OF SCHOLARSHIPS AND NATIVE WORKERS

At the branch meeting in April I strongly urged that more auxiliaries support a scholarship or native worker this year, and am a bit disappointed that no auxiliary has reported to me as yet.

You will notice in the report of the general secretary of scholarships and native workers in the July Record that North Carolina has only eight auxiliaries contributing, which is a slight decrease from 1929. Our returning missionaries lay great stress on the value of these workers so I am very anxious that we climb up this year rather than slip back more.

The question sometimes arises as to the price of scholarships in various countries. I am therefore giving a list with amounts needed for support.

India—Girls' School, $35; High School, $125; Teachers Training, Kindergarten Training, Sewing Training and Bible Training, $150; BibleWomen, Native Teachers in Birdwood School, $180.

Japan—Girls' School, Yokohama, $75; Kindergarten Training School, Bible Training School, $75; Evangelistic Worker, $240; Teachers in Eiwa Jo Gakko from $240 to $900; Teacher in Primary School, $240; Kindergarten Teachers, $240.

China—Kalgan Girls' School, $50; Middle School, $85; Kalgan School Teachers, $150; Married Women's School Teacher, $120; Kindergarten Teacher, $120; Bible Women, $150.

It will be noticed by referring to the above-mentioned report in the July Record that in many instances the scholarship has not been fully subscribed. I think it would be a splendid thing where an auxiliary feels it cannot support a whole scholarship to add a new pledge to those partially supported and thus fill out the full amount where possible. Will not each secretary bring this to the attention of her auxiliary, and write me for pledge blanks?

I am very anxious to be of help so please call on me if I can assist anyone in any way.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

FAIRGROVE LADIES' AID

The Ladies' Aid of Fairgrove church met with Mrs. R. R. Auman on Wednesday evening, July 8, at 8 o'clock.

A majority of the members was present and a very successful and enjoyable meeting was held. After a song, the scripture was read by Miss Mildred Auman and prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Neese. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. During the business session two new members, Mrs. R. R. Auman and Mrs. T. F. Macon, were taken into the society; one honorary member, Mr. R. R. Auman, was also taken in.

The quilt on which the Ladies' Aid has been working was practically completed and so far, a sum of $38.00 has been collected for names on the quilt. Mrs. C. E. Stuart collected the most names, having a total of 80; while Mrs. W. H. Neese and Mrs. L. E. Cagle were close seconds. We hope to have the church wired before the meeting which begins the fourth Sunday in July.

Immediately following the adjournment, the hostess assisted by her daughter, Miss Mildred Auman, served lemonade and cake.

—The U. S. Senate in special session is struggling with the arms reduction treaty. There is much opposition to the ratification and the outcome is uncertain.

—Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, distinguished New York preacher, after 32 years of service as pastor of Broadway Congregational Tabernacle, has preached his farewell sermon. He is 70 years old but will continue an honorary minister of the church by a generous provision of its membership.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Linebberry Church, Davidson Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. W. D. Reed, preached a very interesting and helpful sermon at the regular preaching hour Sunday morning. The congregation was large.

Our Sunday School is increasin in number, and interest as well, since the contest has been put on. We hope the results will be lasting. The small children especially are interested in the "Children's Day" service which will be rendered the third Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Misses Nora Carroll and Kate Frank are making this possible. We cordially invite all who can to attend and don't forget your nickels and dimes as there is a great need for them far away.

The Christian Endeavor Society is progressing nicely with Miss Kate Frank as president. The regular monthly business meeting was held as usual Saturday night before the first Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hall. The different reports were very interesting and the prize was awarded to Miss Flada Smith for having the best report for the last quarter. We find this has helped our society a great deal, for we get more work out of our members. We enjoyed the evening splendidly. After the social hour we adjourned to meet with Mr. and Mrs. James Smith.

We are very sorry indeed that Mrs. Reed is not feeling as well but truly hope she improves fast. They have the prayers of the good people on this charge.

◆

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Pastor Smith brought to us a very helpful and inspiring message Sunday a. m. At this service one new member, Eunice Carter, united with our church by letter, coming to us from Tabor M. E. church. At the close of the service the Lord's Supper was observed.

We were glad to have with us Sunday in our service Mrs. Loy, from Glen Raven; Mrs. Walker from Vaughan; Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Browning from Richmond and Miss Mary Barbee of Farmville.

Pastor Smith and family visited at Ocean View, Va., the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Morris attended services at Littleton M. P. church Sunday night.

Mrs. B. C. Barbee and children of Farmville are spending some time with her father, M. J. Morris.

Hobbs Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—We observed children's day and parents' day the second Sunday in July. It was very well attended and enjoyed by all. The children rendered their part well, also the older people too. The amount of the children's collection and offering was $17.01. This will be divided for home and foreign missions. The home missions will go to our Children's Home. We promise to put the names of the children in the "Herald" that collected a dollar or over, so these are the following: Corine Phillips, Erline Phillips, Willie Carter Pair, Ethel Lee Pair, and Elaine Pair.

Brother Cowan preached a timely sermon to the parents in the afternoon using as his subject, "Is it well with thee, thy husband, and thy child." It will be well for all parents to live according to the message he gave us, and especially in this modern day and time.

We were glad to have Brother O'Briant, his niece and congregation from Ebenezer, also some members from the other churches to worship with us. It does us good to worship together occasionally.

Our meeting will begin the fourth Sunday in August with Brother J. Clyde Auman as pulpit help. Pray for us that there may be a great Pentecostal revival in our meeting.

Pleasant Union, Mt. Pleasant.—An enjoyable program was given by the Beginners, Primary and Junior department of Pleasant Union Sunday School. The spirit of the program was missionary. A very forceful missionary lesson was taught through a pageant which showed how everyone could make some contribution to spread the gospel to every people. The program was well-rendered and enjoyed by a large audience.

Canaan, Denton Charge.—Rev. E. A. Bingham delivered a forceful and effective sermon Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The text, "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." He gave a very liberal definition of the text, stressing the importance of environment as an influential factor upon the child, emphasizing the Christian training in the home and Sunday School as a permanent foundation.

The attendance in Sunday School is about as good as usual. There is much interest being shown by the officials to create greater interest. There were 89 present for Sunday School Sunday morning.

The prayer meetings are wide awake under the leadership of Mr. S. E. Martin.

A series of revival services will begin the third Sunday in August with Rev. E. A. Bingham doing his own preaching.

WESLEY SEXTON, Reparter.

◆

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—Children's Day service the second Sunday in July was fine. The children spoke well and the singing was good. We hope that they will stick to the Sunday School and church and be useful, for the church is depending on the young people to carry on the work.

Mrs. N. L. Fine and the superintendent, Mr. Foster Laxtin, trained the children.

Only one month until our protracted meeting. Are we preparing for it by watching, working and praying? Let us do all for the glory of God. Pray for us that we may have a good meeting and that souls may be saved.

ABIGAIL COGGIN.

Roberta Station.—We are very thankful for the refreshing shower which we had yesterday. We are hoping and praying for more, as it is very much needed.

We had a very good attendance in Sunday School yesterday, there being 285. Collection was $36.57. We want to give each one a special invitation to come and we want you all to feel welcome.

Rev. Fred R. Love, of Lincolnton, was a welcome visitor in our community Friday.

Our revival meeting will begin at Roberta Methodist Protestant church the first Sunday of August. Rev. Mr. Cranford will be the pulpit help. We want to ask all the Christian people to pray much for this meeting that many souls will be brought to God's Kingdom.

First Church, Thomasville.—Our Sunday School is increasing since we put on a contest. The whole school seems to have taken a greater interest in its work. There is pleasant rivalry between the classes. Last Sunday the banner for the highest percentage attendance was awarded to class No. 2, one of the children's classes taught by Mrs. J. J. Watts. Another banner, "Our Aims," for the lowest percentage attendance was given to the young men's class, taught by Mrs. A. H. Ragan. I don't think they will keep this banner long, for they are determined to win the "Honor Banner."

On the fourth Sunday night in June the Christian Endeavor city union met at the Presbyterian church. Mr. James Cameron, the leader, gave a splendid program. The topic for discussion was: "How can we as Christian Endeavorers help make Thomasville a better place to live."

New officers for our local Christian Endeavor were elected Sunday night, June 29. They are as follows: Mrs. Motte Williams, president; Mrs. Bertie Lloyd, vice-president; Mrs. S. R. Westmoreland, secretary-treasurer; L. R. Jarrett, assistant secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Motte Williams, assistant pianist; Mrs. T. G. Madison, superintendent of the intermediate society; Mrs. J. W. Baity, superintendent of the junior society; Miss Juanita Dorsett, assistant superintendent of the juniors.

Rev. Clay Madison preached for us Sunday, July 6. Our pastor, Rev. T. G. Madison, being absent.

Our pastor and Miss Dora Pearson were married June 30. After a tour through western North Carolina, they arrived here Wednesday night, July 9. They were met at the parsonage by a group of people and were given a hearty welcome. We wish them many happy years together.

We were sorry to learn that Mrs. Bertie Lloyd, a faithful member of our church, was taken to the hospital Saturday. We are hoping to see her with us again soon.

Siler City.—On the fifth Sunday morning in June we had 144 in Sunday School. That was a record breaking attendance and have had almost that many the past two Sundays. We feel proud of our Sunday School and are trying various means to try to get others who are not in Sunday School any place to attend ours. Our superintendent, Mr. Sharpe, says, "If we will all work together we can accomplish wonderful things."

On the fifth Sunday evening our Children's Day program was rendered to a packed house. This program consisted of songs, recitations, pantomimes, tableaux and pageant. Much credit is due the committee composed of Misses Sallie Smith, Flossie Siler, Minnie Cooper, Mrs. Duncan Welch, and Mrs. Leslie Parker for their untiring effort to make this one of the best programs ever held in our church. Every child did his or her part to perfection and everything was carried out just as well as heart could wish for. The collection was very good despite the cry of hard times.

The defeated reds of our Philathea class entertained the winning blues at the church on Monday night, June 23rd. After a business and social hour of games, etc., lemonade and cookies were served. Everyone present enjoyed the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cooper have returned home after spending several days in Baltimore, Md., visiting their son, B. C. Cooper and wife. They also visited Annapolis, Md., Washington, D. C., and other points of interest.

Dr. Williams filled his appointment the first Sunday morning, but did not preach at the evening hour as one of our neighbor churches was holding a revival.

Bessemer City Church.—We had services yesterday morning and evening, Brother Morris, our pastor, preached two very interesting sermons to a very attentive congregation. We have a very good Sunday School now, there being 177 present yesterday. Also our mid-week prayer meeting is growing in number and interest; 47 were present Wednesday night. We received one new member into th church yesterday, Mrs. Lottie Breeden. Two more ladies are to be baptized and received later.

Pray for us that we may continue to grow and prosper in the Master's name.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Pastor Joyner has been delivering some mighty fine sermons; each time he preaches he gets better. All speak well of Brother Joyner and like him and his family fine. Sunday School attendance is very good. The revival meeting will begin at Zoar the third Sunday in July. Rev. Robert Short of Roberta will be the pulpit help. Pray for us that we may have a successful meeting.

The third quarterly conference will be held at Zoar on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July; hope all churches will be well represented with a good report. Our hearts were made sad Monday, July 7, at the going to Mrs. Maggie Bayne. She joined Zoar church at 12 years of age and remained a faithful member until death. She was 31 years of age. Funeral services were conducted at the home by Rev. Joyner.

Fairfield, Guilford Circuit.—Our Sunday school fell five short of what it was last Sunday. That was probably due to the fact that our pastor, Rev. O. E. Peeler, has appointments at our church the first and third Sundays, and our Sunday school is usually larger on preaching Sundays. We are hoping it will be even larger next Sunday than it was the first, since our pastor has an appointment at that time. An average of 69.5 per cent of the Sunday school was present last quarter.

There was no prayer meeting last Sunday night due to the fact that revival meeting was beginning at a neighboring church and other revivals in progress at other nearby churches. Some of our members have been and will continue, we hope, to attend these services and help the revival spirit to be extant throughout the whole community so that when the meeting is held at Fairfield the third Sunday in September we can have a grand and glorious revival.

There will be a community singing aet Fairfield the fourth Sunday in July (the 27). Mr. J. W. Johnson, the well-konwn conductor, will have charge. Every one is cordially invited to come, both singer and hearer. Some of the well-known quartettes such as the Carlton quartet frm Lexington, Twin City quartet from Winston-Salem, The Colfax Female quartet from Colfax and other visiting singers are expected to be present besides the local talent. This church is located on state highway no. 61, seven miles southeast of High Point.

Asheboro.—Our third quarterly conference was held on Tuesday night of last week. Bro. R. T. Lloyd was declared elected delegate to the next annual conference.

Sunday school attendance dropped to 245 yesterday morning due in large measure to the weather.

The writer, Mrs. Pritchard and Misses Nell Leach and Kate Bulla expect to go to Weaverville tomorrow for a two weeks' vacation. Brother Paul S. Kennett will preach next Sunday morning and Brother Robert Lloyd on the morning of the 27th. There will be no evening services.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Guilford Circuit.—This is my first time to send a report to our church paper, but when Old Santa Claus comes in July, I feel that I must tell the readers of the Herald about it.

Last Thursday evening, July 10, a large number of the members from Mitchell's Grove church came driving their cars up to our little cottage, and after a splendid social hour together, each member of the group began to go to their cars and into the house. A few minutes later Mrs. Peeler and myself stood speechless beholding a big stock of good things to eat, such as a home needs in the pantry. Space will not permit to mention all the articles that we received, neither will it permit the names of all those who brought packages and sent them. We do not have words to express uor appreciation for the pounding.

All the churches on the work have greeted us with a warm welcome, and the individual members have givenn us a cordial invitation to visit their homes. The whole circuit seems to be working toward a great goal this year.

This report would not be complete without thanking the ministerial students of High Point college and Rev. George L. Reynolds for the splendid service they rendered on this work during the early part of the year.

E. O. PEELER.

* * *

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We enjoyed two very splendid services yesterday. Mr. Russell it seems is trying his best to please his people. And we like him better each time we hear him. It was announced yesterday that Mr. Tracy Burton would preach for us the fourth Sunday morning. And if possible the fourth Sunday night. Those on the committee are: Miss Romaine Poole, Miss Lula Pearson, Miss Ruth Pearson and Mrs. Jewell Harrison. Those in charge of the singing and music are: Mr. Nick Smith, Mr. Glenn McClimon, Mrs. Annice McClimon and Miss Kate Poole. We are sorry to hear of Mrs. Lee Leonard's illness. We have been asked to remember her in our prayers. Mr. Lee Leonard preaches to us at various times. We ask the readers of the Herald, especially those who know them, to join us in our prayers.

Concord, Saxapahaw Circuit.—On the first Sunday morning Brother Whitehead as usual gave us a good sermon. On the following Tuesday night he met with the ladies of the church and organized an auxiliary. The following officer were elected: President, Mrs. R. T. Woody; Vice-President, Mrs. J. F. Woody; Treasurer and Secretary of Thank Offering, Mrs. L. E. Guthrie; Secretary, Mrs. J. C. Guthrie; Secretary of Missionary Education, Mrs. H. S. Hargrove; Secretary of Literature, Miss Lucy Perry; Secretary of Spiritual life, Mrs. C. W. Johnson; Secretary of Temperance, Mrs. R. S. Woody.

The regular time for meeting will be after Sunday school on the second Sunday morning.

The work on the church has been partly done and will be finished this week. A new desk has been ordered for the pulpit which we hope to have before the series of meetings which begins the third Sunday.

The Children's Day service will be held on the third Sunday morning. We expect Brother Bethea to preach for us during the meeting. After Sunday the services will be held in the p. m. and night.

Brother M. S. Guthrie met with a painful accident while helping thresh wheat about two weeks ago. He is still confined to his home. Hope he will soon be out again.

MRS. J. C. GUTHRIE, Reporter.

Charlotte.—We are so very far behind with our reporting that we do not know where to begin.

Our Sunday school went on their annual picnic the 4th to Sustare's pool. A good number went and seemed to enjoy the outing and picnic supper.

The mid-week prayer service for some time have been in charge of a committee with some members of the church having charge each week—Last week we were glad to have Mr. Crissler of Winston-Salem conduct the service. Mr. and Mrs. Crissler have recently moved here and we are very glad to have them in our services and gladly taking part in all services. Also Mrs. Crissler's mother, Mrs. Crenshaw.

Mrs. A. H. Lynch, one of our members who has been away for the past three years, spent two weeks here in the interest of her work and visiting friends. Mrs. Lynch is a consecrated Christian woman giving her time and tithe. She was in every service while here taking part in some way. She is now in the eastern part of the state.

Mrs. R. S. Garmon is improving after several weeks of illness. We hope she may soon be restored and back with us.

Circle No. 2 met last Tuesday the 8th with Mrs. Roy S. Garmon. The devotional program was led by Mrs. A. L. Haigler and Mrs. G. W. Stegall presided over the business session.

The auxililary will meet at the church Tuesday (of the week). We have been a little slow and have not accomplished what we had hoped for our first quarter of new year, but hope to catch up now and go forward. We have been handicapped by sickness and other things that could not be prevented.

A number of our people are away on vacation now.

The Interdenominational missionary union met the fifth Monday in June at the First M. E. church of this city, with Mrs. Luther Little, president, presiding. An address by Dr. Stewart, a missionary to Japan, was interesting. The Mission Study class will be held the first week in October.

We hope every auxiliary will work for the Herald campaign and also in securing Octagon coupons for the Children's Home.

First Church, Thomasville.—We wish to express our thanks and appreciation to the members and co-workers of this church for the kindness and hospitality which they have shown to us. When we arrived at the parsonage we found a number of people waiting to welcome us. After a hearty reception we were invited to the kitchen where we found the table burdened with good things to eat. In addition to theese we received a number of other nice and useful gifts—pillow cases, buffet scarf, a broom, rolling pin, a nice name-quilt made and presented by the Ladies' auxiliary, and a box containing some money.

The people have spent considerable time and money to add to the comfort and beauty of the parsonage by remodeling, painting, papering, etc. Also they have installed a new living room suite and a new oil stove besides new curtains, shades, table lamp, chandelier, etc. We are very grateful for all of their kindness to us and we are very happy in our location. We have never worked with nicer people and we know that we can never make a material compensation to them for what they have done for us, but we pledge the very best we have by way of service while we remain on the work.

Knob Creek, Fallston.—On last fourth Sunday our pastor, Rev. G. M. Morgan, preached another wonderful sermon, which was enjoyed by a large number. Visitors were present and old members. We want to extend to them a hearty welcome to come again.

Our revival meeting will begin July 27th. Pray that we may have a real revival. Help will be Brother Ridge from Cleveland charge.

On the sick list: Miss Ruth Hartman and her brother, Mr, Swain Hartman, but are improving. Our pastor is rejoicing over a new baby.

Orange Circuit, Hebron.—Our Children's Day exercise was held the fourth Sunday in June. This was a success. The offering was around $16.00. Mrs. B. F. Wilson and Mrs. Frank Cook whe trained the children deserve much credit.

Last Tuesday evening the ladies of the church served supper to the Kiwanians of Mebane and cleared the sum of $24.00.

The play entitled "The Old Maid's Club," gotten up by Miss Nannie McAdams and composed of the ladies of the church, was given at Hebron schoolhouse Saturday night. They realized the sum of $23.00 which goes to pay our missionary budget. We are planning to take this play to Efland school building Saturday nigth, July 19th. Beginning at eigth o'clock.

Our pastor was called away by a death in the family and could not fill his appointment Sunday afternoon. We were delighted to have in his absence Rev. W. M. Loy of Mebane, who brought us a most interesting message which I am sure was enjoyed by all. We hope he can preach for us again in the future.

Our special meeting begins the second Sunday in August. Rev. Mr. Short will assist Mr. Williams in this series of services, and we pray much good will be done.

West Forsyth.—The revival meeting at Stony Knoll church closed Friday night of last week. Rev. M. P. Chambliss, of Moriah charge, did the preaching, and did it well. There were 22 professions, with five accessions to the church. Others will likely join later.

The meetings at Tabernacle church began last Sunday morning, with Rev. C. G. Isley, of South Lexington charge, the help. Brother Isley came for the first service, and has been doing some very effective preaching. Nine conversions were recorded up to Monday night, and we are expecting a great meeting.

The pastor conducted the funeral service of Brother W. L. Doub, of Baltimore church, last Saturday morning, being assisted by Rev. D. C. Norman, of the M. E. church, South. Brother Doub, who had been ill for more than a year, passed away peacefully Thursday afternoon of last week. An obituary will appear later.

The regular service will be held at Pleasant Hill church next Sunday morning. At three o'clock in the afternoon we will begin the revval meeting at Union Hill church. Rev. E. C. Norman, a Methodist minister, will be the help there.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

◆

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—We are glad to report that our Sunday school has a good attendance each Sunday and every one seems to be interested in the work. The C. E. society is moving along nicely.

Our pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, seems to have his work at heart, and is trying to help each one along life's journey. He brought us a wonderful message Sunday night.

Our revival begins July 27th; the morning service will be preached by Dr. A. G. Dixon of High Point. This is his home church and we are always glad to have him with us. In the afternoon we are expecting Rev. R. I. Farmr to do the preaching. And in the evening services we will have Rev. Mr. Loy with us who will do the preaching throughout the meeting. Come all who can, and pray that we may have a great revival.

Rehobeth, Creswell Circuit.—There has been no report from this church for sometime. The reporter has not been able to use her eyes owing to some eye trouble; however, we have been moving on, as well as we could, we had a splendid Easter and Mother's Day service. Surely Brother Hethcox never preached a more beautiful sermon and tribute to mothers than he did that day. I've heard such a fine report from the "Rally" held at Creswell church; where is the reporter that there is not something said in the paper, about the benefit received? much has been said about the good times of the delegates and preachers and how royally Creswell entertained them.

Ous special meeting at Rehoboth begins tonight, July 14th. I feel that we are going to have a good revvial.

Sorry to report that Brother C. V. White is very ill, little hope for his recovery.

He enjoyed going to Creswell and told me about meeting Dr. Johnson, and how glad he was to see him. By the way we had a short visit from Talton Clayton, named for Dr. Johnson, he is married, nice wife, two children. Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Everett have a nice little boy.

Mr. Jimmie Spruill and Miss Audrey Patrick were married last week; they were at church Sunday, and are very happy. Will close now.

Pray for meeting and old Rehoboth church.

Porter.—Pastor Hill filled his appointment yesterday with a real good sermon. The more we hear him, the more we enjoy hearing him. He preaches the plain truth and that's what we all need.

Our Sunday school is going along very well, we would like to see more interest and larger attendance, however, we have some as faithful members as could be found anywhere, especially our Superintendent, Mr. J. L. Cauble. If all would put a shoulder to the wheel and help him, our Sunday school would go in leaps and bounds.

On the fourth Sunday in this month we will have all day service, Home-coming, Children's Day and a Love Feast will be observed on that day. The Children's Day program will begin at 11o'clock, dinner on the grounds at noon. Then in the afternoon talks appropriate to the occasion, followed by a Love Feast.

Everybody is cordially invited and all former members and pastors have a special invitation. We wish every one that has ever attended church here and all former pastors would come and be with us on that day. It would be such a pleasure to have our old friends with us once more. So please come!

First Church, Winston.—"A Tea Party"—Circle No. 2, of the auxiliary, Mrs. W. C. Tise leader, sponsored a "Silver Tea" at the home of Mrs. J. W. Hester. Mrs. J. W. Hester, Sr., and Mrs. J. W. Hester, Jr., joint hostesses. The hostesses were assited by Mrs. W. C. Tise, Mrs. H. F. Surratt and Mrs. R. N. Christopher from High Point. The above assistants formed the receiving line for the afternoon. There was quite a large attendance during the afternoon and the net proceeds were very encouraging.

The oldest member of our church was surprised on her birthday, Circle No. 2 sponsored this delightful occasion. Mrs. Smothers is still jolly and happy, and still appears among the congregation occasionally on Sabbath morning. Wouldn't you like to know how old Mrs. Smothers is?

A musical concert was given by Mrs. J. B. Winecoff on Tuesday evening at the church. The proceeds went to the choir. Mrs. Winecoff is pianist and choir director. If someone should ask what she knows best the first suggestion would probably be "music," if you should hear her sing or play your mind would be made up.

We are very glad indeed to be able to say that our "Dollar per Member" for High Point college, has been paid.

The Methodist Protestant Herald is a wonderful paper. It is hoped that it will be in every home of our entire denomination. Our local church still lacks two subscriptions having made its quota, but that isn't many.

For the month of June the attendance in our Sunday school averaged the highest it has for a long time. Although the weather began increasing in heat we still had a goodly number attending.

Each week on Wednesday evening our pastor gives very inspirational talks at prayer meeting. We wish that more people would allow themselves to be so inspired by attending. The choir rehearses immediately after prayer meeting.

The Leadership Training school we hope is going over in a large way. So many that really would like to attend, but could not are waiting the results and reports. Rev. H. F. Surratt is teaching a course, "Church School Administration," which is a very instructive course. Mrs. Surratt is attending the school. Mrs. R. H. Shouse and Miss Ruby Sapp are the couselor members from our church. Miss Nannie Watson, teacher of the Philathea class, is also attending.

Circles No. 1, 2, and 3 of the auxiliary are having their monthly meeting Tuesday evening at 3:00. The Home Circle does not hold meetings but deserves mention. Mrs. H. O. Sapp is leader of this circle, and it consists of the elder ladies, most of whom are unable to attend meetings regularly.

The Young People's circle, or circle No. 4, held its meeting Monday evening at 8:00 at the home of Mrs. J. A. Gwyn, leader of the circle. The devotionals were conducted by the President, Miss Pauline Branson and the study period was directed by Miss Annie Mae Hauser. The study book of the circle at present is "Blind Spots." The first chapter was given by Mrs. George Gwyn. After the study hour the hostess served an appetizing ice course assisted by her sister, Mrs. Self from Hamlet, N. C., and her daughter, Miss Jacqueline Gwyn. A goodly number was present and also two visitors.

The Daily Vacation Bible school was a big feature in our church this month. There were fifty persons enrolled; due to the strict standards of the school, if one day was missed a certificate was not awarded, only 31 certificates were received. We were very fortunate to have Miss Kathleen Paschall, of the Methodist Protestant Board of Religious Education, with us in this school. There were three departments. Mrs. J. A. Gwyn was superintendent of the beginners department, with Mrs. R. H. Shouse, Mrs. Roy Hauser, Mrs. A. A. Moser, assisting.

Mrs. T. L. Speas was superintendent of the primary department, assisted by Misses Ruth Hill, and Jacque Gwyn, also Miss Ruby Sapp, supt. of the junior department, was assisted by Mrs. H. D. Paschall and Mrs. H. F. Surratt. Rev. H. F. Surratt helped a good deal in the work here also. These splendid workers and assistants are to be thanked and complimented on the hard work and untiring efforts put forth. Mineral Springs church co-operated with us and we are indebted to them for their support and help. Mrs. T. L. Speas is from Mineral Springs Methodist church.

To all that helped in any way at all we wish to say "Thank you." The children did a good work, they heartily cooperated by doing the requests of the leaders as well as possible. The work was of a very fine nature. Commencement exercises were held on Friday morning, the last day of the school, and a sample of the work in each department was given, the certificates were awarded and the school closed. Last year the Daily Vacation Bible school was a success but this one was even better.

Mount Pleasant Church, Mount Pleasant Charge.—The third quarterly conference of the year will be held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at Mount Pleasant church.

On Saturday evening, July 19, at 7:30 o'clock the Ladies' auxiliary of this church will hold a sale of ice cream and cake on the church grounds. The public is cordially invited to be present.

Children's Day services were held here the first Sunday in July and at Pleasant Union church on the second Sunday.

The annual revival services will begin here on the third Sunday in August, as usual.

The pastor's help will be Rev. Mr. Trollinger, of Graham.

Miss Josie Amick represented the Philathea class of the local Sunday school at the Baraca-Philathea convention which was recently held in the western part of the state. She brought back to the class a vivid description of the doings of the conference.

Miss Maude Clapp, one of our most popular young ladies and teacher of the intermediate girls in our Sunday school, was married to Elmer Smith, Monday, June 30, in Danville, Virginia.

First Church, High Point.—The Conference Leadership Training school was formally opened on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock with an address by Dr. Lawrence C. Little of Durham, director of Department of Religious Education. The registration of young people, about 75 in number, is representative of the entire state, and they are being entertained in the dormitories of the college. The faculty in charge of the various courses is the following: Rev. F. W. Paschall, Asheville; Rev. H. F. Surratt, Winston-Salem; Rev. C. W. Bates, Greensboro; Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Durham; Dr. S. W. Taylor, Greensboro; Rev. E. Lester Ballard, High Point; Rev. T. M. Johnson, Whitakers, and Rev. J. F. Minnis, Graham, returned missionary to India. Dr. Little spoke again Monday evening, and will deliver another address Tuesday evening. The addresses for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings will be given by Dr. R. L. Shipley of Newark, New Jersey. All these evening meetings are open to the public.

At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday, Mr. Norman Fidler sang a beautiful solo, "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes," with organ accompaniment by Mrs. R. I. Farmer. Rev. Fred Paschall of Asheville, President of the Leadership Training school, read the Scripture lesson, and led in prayer. The minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered an impressive sermon on "The Pageantry of Christian Living," from II Cor. 2:14: Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his konwledge by us in every place." Moffett says "Wherever I go, He makes the life a constant pageantry of triumph." The minister said in part: "It is a glorious thing to see a nation saved by educated people, and the more perilous the times, the more efficient is their leadership. This Leadership Training school in session at High Point College is a most worthwhile organization with its corps of eight instructors and young people from all sections of N. C. We must admit that we are not always victorious. Paul did not always have triumph, but his life was a series of oue defeat after another, more like that of a slave, shipwrecked, beaten with stripes, imprisoned often, but he was giving thanks unto God that his life was a victory because he was being led by Christ. God had given Paul a life of service instead of selfish existence. Paul was not a victorious Roman general riding in a chariot with slaves chained to the wheels as Pompey, Caesar, Anthony, Titus, Hadrian, and many others rode, but he was slave for the sake of Christ. The same power that made Paul's life a pageantry of triumph is available in our lives, when we open our hearts and let his spirit come in. We may not be guilty of heinous sins such as murder, drunkenness, but the majority of us must admit the secret sins of envy, jealousy, petty spite, neglect of duty to the church, and a host of others. St. Augustine once prayed, "O Lord, give me charity, but not yet." I want to challenge the leaders of our Training school with the thought that to enter the pageantry of Christian living we must enter definite Christian service. The Century magazine says, "Our business as Christians is to make men better." Sir Herbert Taylor said, "All my life I have held in greatest respect the man who takes up his cross and goes forth unconquered by life's bitterness and sorrows."

We were much pleased to receive Miss Madge Smith, a nurse at High Point hospital, into membership by transfer from Moriah church.

The circles of the Woman's auxiliary held meetings on Monday afternoon at 3 o'colck as follows: No. 4, Mrs. Douglas, chairman, with Mrs. A. A. York, 700 Montlieu Ave.; No. 5, Mrs. Rankin, chairman, with Mrs. J. H. Everhart, 601 Jones St.; No. 6, Mrs. Kennett, chairman, with Mrs. R. M. Andrews, 821 W. College Drive; No. 7, Mrs. Moore, chairman, with Mrs. A. G. Payne, 1106 Blain St., and No. 8, Mrs. Snipes, chairman, with Mrs. J. C. Welch, 406 N. Main St.; No. 1, Miss Margaret Snipes, chairman, has been postponed until Thursday of next week. No.2, Miss Young, chairman, will meet Wednesday evening with Mrs. L. J. Harper, 220 Montlieu Ave., and No. 3, Miss Blanche Burgess, chairman, will meet with the chairman Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Penny returned last Friday from a two-weeks trip to Cleveland and other points in Ohio.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett and sister, Miss May Eller, Mrs. John S. Pickett, Mrs. Winnie P. Harrell, and Mrs. J. H. Walker, Jr. spent several days of last week at Myrtle Beach, S. C., returning home on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. David E. White have returned from a trip to Norfolk and Virginia Beach, Virginia.

Miss Lois Snipes left last Friday for Norfolk and Ocean View to spend a week.

The many friends of Miss Elizabeth Reitzel will regret to learn that she underwent an operation for appendicitis at High Point hospital yesterday.

Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon and daughter,

Vista, have moved into the attractive new superintendent's house, at the Children's Home.

We are much pleased to announce that Mr. D. A. Neese, who has been seriously ill at the High Point hospital, has recovered sufficiently to be moved to his home on Montlieu Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Ferree and small son, Calvin, have returend from an extended motor tour through western states and Mexico, having visited 24 states and many points of interest including Yellowstone Park, Wyoming, Grand Canyon of the Colorado, Yosemite Park in California, Salt Lake City, Utah, Pike's Peak, and the Columbia River region of Oregon. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Robrt L. Parker. The party enjoyed the splendid trip, but found no state comparable to North Carolina.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker is spending the week at the college during the training school.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—My report will be short but I saw in the Herald that Editor McCulloch will rest from his continuous job the week of the 24th.

We were disappointed Sunday morning; our pastor was called elsewhere, but we had a sermon. Rev. S. B. O. Thompson filled his place.

Our revival will start the second Sunday in August as usual if nothing prevents. But it was not decided Sunday how it will run. Sunday school teachers were elected to get up a Children's Day program.

Our C. E. sent in 194 coupons to Dr. A. G. Dixon.

Our Sunday school is improving.

We welcome visitors far and near, to attend our services.

Hope Mr. C. F. Smith will fill his appointment Sunday night.

Sorry to report that Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Pain are not able to come back to church yet.

Mrs. Mollie Hawkins, 82, from Rosemary spent last week with her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Hawkins. She stayed with her son, Mr. Willis Hawkins; his little son about two years old got upset about grandma, and went under the bed to find her.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED

The many friends, relatives and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. McKinney gathered at their home near Forest City on the Bostic road Sunday, July 13, to celebrate their birthdays. Mr. McKinney was 74 years old July 9; Mrs. McKinney will be 71 years old July 15. Two of their daughters' birthdays are also in the month of July, one on the 7th, the other on the 21st.

Mr. and Mrs. McKinney enjoyed the day very much talking to their friends and relatives that they had not seen in a good while.

The table was loaded with all kinds of good things to eat. Rev. Z. D. Harrill, of Ellenboro, made a short talk, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, of Shelby, led in prayer, then the people were ready to unload the table of its burden.

Everyone went away wishing Mr. and Mrs. McKinney many more happy birthdays.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Johnson

The seemingly merciless hand of death has again visited our ranks and claimed another member, Mrs. Rhoda Johnson. She was born November 15, 1866, and departed this life July 5, 1930. She was in bed only a few days, but had been in declining health for some time with cancer.

She was converted and joined Knob Creek church in 1900 and remained a member until God saw fit to call her away. She leaves to mourn her loss nine children and 29 grandchildren, three sisters and three brothers.

Funeral services were conducted at Knob Creek church July 6, 11 a. m., by her pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan. Interment was made in the church cemetery. She now sleeps to await the Resurrection morn.

KNOB CREEK REPORTER.

Richard

W. W. Richard died at the age of 56 years, ten months and four days. He had been sick for several years with heart dropsy. He was married to Miss Ella Warlick and to this union were born eight children; one child died in infancy.

Mr. Richard was a faithful church member, always attending when he was well.

The funeral service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, June 5, and he was laid to rest in the church cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers. The family have the sympathy of many friends.

Jennings

Mrs. Rosa Louannie Craven Jennings of Worthville, N. C., died at her home in Worthville, N. C., on Monday, July 7, 1930, having sustained a stroke of paralysis on July 1st, from which she did not rally.

Mrs. Jennings was the daughter of the late John Craven of Cedar Falls, N. C., and was 56 years old. On June 9, 1895 she was married to W. A. Jennings, who together with four children, Mrs. Thelma Jennings Darr, of Lexington; Ralph Jennings and Mrs. Ressie Jennings Crotts, of Worthville and Geo Jennings of Asheville, N. C., survive her. She also leaves four grand children and the following brothers and sisters, Mrs. Hannah Craven Pepper, of Hamlet, N .C.; Mrs. Mattie Craven Cox, of Greensboro, N. C.; Mr. Johnie Craven, of Cedar Falls, N. C., and Mrs. Josie Craven Cox, of Worthville.

Mrs. Jennings was a tender and devoted mother, the care of children being her chief concern.

As a girl of 16 years she joined the Methodist Protestant Church of which she remained a member until death. In her younger life she was very active in Church work and ever remained a lover of the church and particularly the Sunday School.

The funeral was conducted from the Worthville Methodist Church Tuesday afternoon, July 8th, at 3 o'clock by her pastor the Rev. T. A. Williams. A throng of people crowded the church to overflowing. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, showing the high esteem in which she was held by the people of the community.

The pall bearers were W. G. Aldridge, O. R. Blalock, C. F. Allred, W. H. Prevost, L. C. Smith, W. H. Trogdon, Leonard Ward and C. O. Byrd. Interment was in the Worthville cemetery.

TO SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS

On March 20th we sent out letters to all the Sunday Schools, requesting them to remit to the Young Peoples' Board, as authorized by the last Annual Conference, assessments based on the following schedule:

Sunday Schools with enrollment of 100 or less, $1.50; Sunday Schools with enrollment of 101 to 200, $3.00; Sunday Schools with enrollment of 201 to 400, $5.00; Sunday Schools with enrollment of 401 or more, $7.00.

Thus far forty-eight Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor societies have responded.

At the present time our board faces a deficit, as we did not have the attendance at our summer conference that we had hoped, and we trust that the treasurers of the various Sunday Schools that have not as yet remitted will give this matter early attention.

We are at the present time very much embarrassed for lack of funds, and if you will send your check to J. Clyde Auman, Treasurer, Enfield, N. C., it will be greatly appreciated.

NEWSPAPERS SUSPENDED

The minister of justice of the Irish Free State suspended four English newspapers for three months because they "devote an unduly large proportion of space to the publication of matter relating to crime." They are the People, News of the World, Thomson's Weekly News, and Empire News. Several weeks previously The World's Pictorial News and the Competitor's Guide were barred from circulation in southern Ireland for similar reasons. The New Leader, English Labor paper, was suspended because of an article advocating birth control.—Pathfinder.

PAINTER'S GRANDSON JAILED . .

Jean Charles Millet, grandson of the famous French painter of the same name, was sentenced by a Melun court to a year in jail for obtaining money under false pretenses. The grandson himself is an artist and he copied the masterpieces of his grandfather, forged the great artists's imprint, and sold them for large sums as originals.—Pathfinder.

—Farmers of Davidson county report a good quality of grain but no large yields this season. The average for barley is reported at 35 bushels an acre; wheat, 22 bushels, and rye 22 bushels.

REDUCING HOURS OF LABOR

A final elimination of the twelv-hour working day, involving shorter hours for men or others, is being worked out by the Universal Atlas Cement company at Leeds, Alabama, according to B. E. Merrell, plant superintendent.

The Leeds mill, built in 1907 and owned since 1919 by the Atlas company, came under United States Steel corporation rules through its merger in January with the Universal company, a Steel corporation subsidiary. One of these rules is that no man may work more than ten hours per day or more than six consecutive days.

Formerly men employed in the grinding departments for rock, coal and clinker, and in the burning department, were working more than ten hours, most of them twelve hours. Substitution of an eight-hour basis will be completed by July 15, said Mr. Merrell. Shop employees, whose "day" is ten hours, were not affected.

The Leeds plant is located 17 miles east of Birmingham. It has a production capacity of 5400 barrels of cement per day. As cement making is a continous process which keeps the kilns burning 24 hours a day, three shifts are needed.

A similiar adjustment is being worked out at the Universal Atlas mill at Waco, Texas. This will place all company plants on the same working-hour basis.

COTTON BOLL WEEVILS IN DESTRUCTIVE NUMBERS

With a ten per cent infestation common over the entire cotton growing section of North Carolina and with some fields showing from 40 to 60 per cent infestation, the boll weevil problem appears to be serious this year.

"It is unusual to have such a heavy boll weevil infestation so early in the season," says C. H. Brannon extension entomologist at State College. "In some fields, our inspections shows 40 per cent of the squares have been punctured. One field showed 60 per cent and a ten per cent infestation was found almost everywhere. However, there is no reason to be unduly alarmed if growers will begin dusting before it is too late. One must examine the squares on the cotton plant to determine how the weevil is infesting the cotton. Merely looking over the field will not tell the whole story."

Mr. Brannon urges growers to prepare at once to meet this emergency condition. Where infestation is as high as ten per cent, growers should begin dusting at once. At least three applications four days apart should be given. In no case should the dustings be more than five days apart. Then examine the new squares again and if the damage reaches the ten per cent point once more, additional applications of the poison should be made. It may be necessary also to make later applications to protect the cotton bolls.

A GOOD NAME SPOILED

In all our town and country round
Not anywhere could there be found
A man whose name was honored so
As was the name of good John Doe.

In bank and store and everywhere
Was his a name by which to swear.
His checks were honored on the spot,
His notes when due were ne'er forgot.

But Jennie Doe, his youngest daughter,
Has done a thing she hadn't "oughter":
She's spoiled his name and her name too
By ugly deed she stooped to do.

Her wedding day was just at hand,
As all in town did understand.
Her thoughts were filled with wedding tour—
To have things ready she'd make sure.

She bought her gown and dainty shoes,
The very finest she could choose.
She paid for this and paid for that,
And found no money left for hat.

What did she do? Worst thing of all:
She slipped a hat beneath her shawl.
And that's the reason her wedding day
Was changed—to hear what judge would say.

BE CLEAN I NMIND AND BODY

The consciousness that you are clean in mind and body will enhance your feeling of self-respect. Bathe the entire surface of your body every day. Use water of a temperature to suit your needs. Use it regularly. Keep the pores of your body open by thorughly, daily cleansing. Use pure castile soap and warm water. Finish with cold water, and rub your body briskly with the palms of your hands. Self-massage is a beneficial exercise for imparting vigor. Proper care of the body is vital to happiness. The consciousness of being clean will increase your confidence. It is your duty to be physically and spiritually pure. Health and goodness are inseparable A clean mind and a clean body are essential to good work and a good life.—Grenville Kleiser.

The Works and Ways of Men

Some choose their work and choose their way
And spend in life no idle day.
But these are not the noblest men,
They have not God in all their ken.

Some do their work in God's own way;
Just how, not what, they let God say.
They win in life a poor success,
The thing they've done their own ill guess.

Some do God's work in their own way—
Mistaken course in Moses' day:
The end falls short of full success,
And may result in fearful mess.

But let God choose both work and way,
Assign the task for every day,
And life will reach its very best,
And man will find completest rest.

Misrepresenting the Bible

There are several ways of misrepresenting the Bible. The manner of its production may be misrepresented. The nature of its contents may be misrepresented. Its value for specific purposes may be misrepresented. Its mode of influence may be misrepresented. All these misrepresentations are harmful. They lead to wrong uses of the book or to neglect of the book or to unwarranted trust in the book. Some lose the great value of the book through a misconception of the book in regard to lesser values it does not possess.

The Bible is not an encyclopedia, though many try to use it as such. The assumption that the Bible contains all that God would have us know is utterly false. The assumption that the Bible is out of date in this age is also utterly false. Estimates of the value of the book vary from zero or less than zero to infinity. It is evident that many who speak glibly of the book do not know what they are talking about. People who know the Bible in an experimental knowledge of its spiritual worth cannot speak disparagingly of the book. They feel like hugging it to their bosoms as a precious treasure. People who keep the Bible on their tables as a fetish and do not read it are blind to its real worth and are missing its great value. Those who snatch a verse at random to settle a question of conduct are we believe gambling with duty.

We heard a distinguished evangelist declare that a scientist had found the Bible an authority in chemistry. We think such declarations misrepresent the Bible and do harm. Men do not find it as they say and turn away disappointed and displeased.

Here comes a representative of the Gideons telling about a picture of automobiles which he thinks he has found in the Bible. He refers to Nahum 2:4: "The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings." But the mention of horses in the same connection indicates that the prophet had in mind horse-drawn vehicles.

The Bible is not a repertory of curiosities. It is not an array of proof-text paragraphs. It is a collection of books, the most valuable library in the world, because it deals in an authentic way with the most important subject, man's relation to God.

We are to read and study the Bible in a rational way, not imagining that we can find eternal life by searching the Scriptures, but searching them that we may find the way to Him who is the true way of life.

—The weather is warm, but don't commit suicide: it will be cooler.

—The United States Senate before adjourning ratified the London naval treaty, though there was some opposition to the last.

—We print this week a letter from Dr. C. E. Forlines which was mailed February 13 and reached the editor's desk July 28. Not very rapid transit. If people generally would take the Doctor's advice and stop all papers that oppose prohibition of the liquor traffic, many papers would have to cease publication. And isn't the Doctor's advice good? What right has an editor to oppose real moral reforms?

—This is the season of many evangelistic meetings. The object of these meetings transcends in importance all others for which we labor—the salvation of souls, the bringing of human lives over from the dominion and rule of Satan into the glorious and everlasting Kingdom of Jesus Christ. Surely all of our hearts should be in this matter of the conversion of people of the world into saints and servants of God. If we are not much interested in this, we may well doubt whether we are Christians. May the spirit of Christ fill us all and prepare us for our part in this momentous work.

—What a bungling, blundering thing human justice is! Fourteen years ago a bomb was thrown into a California street parade which killed ten people and injured forty others. Thomas Mooney was convicted of the offence and sentenced to death. Later the penalty was changed to life imprisonment and he is still in prison. Now the witness who testified against him comes out with a confession that his testimony was false. But there will still be doubt as to whether he was telling the truth then or is telling it now. Human justice errs and fails often: divine justice never. If divine penalties were more loudly proclaimed and were more appreciated, there would be far less need of the penalties of human courts.

LETTERS OF TRAVEL

By Miss Mary Young, Dean of High Point College

Edinburgh, June 28, 1930.

My Dear Girls:

I had no idea I would have gone this far on my trip before I started my letter to you, but every minute has been so thrilling that I haven't had time to start. I'm just afraid I'll miss something while I write.

First, the trip over was just grand. I wasn't sick one minute. We were to have started Friday, the thirteenth, but a dense fog kept us in New York harbor until about noon the fourteenth. However we were so busy getting used to a stateroom, reading steamer letters, opening packages from friends and meeting our party of forty that we didn't mind, then, too, we were perfectly willing to trust the pilot to stay in port until it was safe to leave.

We were on the way a week. During that time we got up at seven, had breakfast at 7:30, then we played deck games until ten, when we were served soup and ship biscuits. After that we read or wrote letters or slept in our deck chairs until 12:00 when we had lunch. After lunch we usually slept awhile then walked and talked until time for tea at 4:00. Dinner came at 6:00. After dinner we usually watched the fish play on the water for awhile and enjoyed the sensation of "sitting on top of the world." You know every night we had to run our watches up an hour so it didn't take long for bed time to come. Of course many people got drunk and gambled but our party isn't that kind. There sin't even a man in the party who smokes. We had fine weather all the time except rain one half day—the last day and we were too excited over getting here to mind that. One day we had a rough sea, but that made the trip more exciting. I never would have had the respect for the ocean I now have, if it hadn't rolled me upthe side of the stateroom one night; then the next morning our dishes all had wet spots under them to keep them on the table. Just before breakfast was over there came a great roll and turned over the table in the center of the room that held the syrup cans, conserve dishes, etc. That was really exciting.

We landed Sunday A. M., got through the custom's house about 8 o'clock and boarded our buses for London. On the way we visited Windsor Castle. We couldn't go through because the King was there and we couldn't get anybody to take our cards in to him. We felt awfully bad because we were sure he wanted to see us. But such is life. However, we rode through the King's private park and saw his grand walk. Then we went to Hampton Court, passing on the way, Eton School and King's College. You know the little fellows at Eton wear a funny short coat, from which we get our name Eton jacket, and the upperclassmen wear dress suits and high silk hats all the time. It looked too funny to see those boys out playing in that get up. But they are making gentlemen, you know, and I suppose they want them to feel at home in a dress suit.

If you remember your history Hampton Court is the fine palace that Cardinal Wolsey built for himself out of the church money. When he got it all finished he invited Henry VIII to spend the night with him to show it off. Henry, you remember, had very taking ways. He told Wolsey that this place was too fine for a subject and only fit for a king, so Wolsey, to save his head, said, "Your Majesty, you don't know why I built this. It was for you, to show you what a loyal subject I am. It is yours." My, but it is handsome.

Then we went to Stoke Pogis, the church yard in which Gray wrote his eulogy and I sat where he sat when he wrote it. I don't wonder he wrote it. Really if I could have it quiet there like he did I believe I could write a poem myself. I've never seen such roses in my life. You know they have rose trees over here—wonderful ones.

After leaving here we went to Oxford for the night. We visited two of the twenty-six colleges. The next morning we heard the proverbial bells of Oxford and set out for Warwich Castle. They tell us that this is the only privately-owned castle in England that is open to the public. The present Earl of Warwick is only 19 years old and is in college. His father was killed in the World War only a young man. The guide was very proud of the young Earl and took great delight in showing us everything. It just beggars description and when I think that it was the home of old Warwick the king maker whom I have such a time teaching about and that Oliver Cromwell and all of my other old English historyfriends used to come and visit and live and fight there I can hardly believe that I really have stood just where they stood so long ago and looked at the same walls, pictures, furniture, etc. It just fills me with awe and wonder and thrills me to the highest degree. How I wish you could be here.

Then we went to Kenilworth Castle. This is only ruins, but Scott has made it live forever and the old guide, a wonderful old Shakesperean lecturer, just made us see it all in all of its splendor. We looked at the spot on the wall which made Tennyson write "When splendor falls on castle walls" and saw the splendid sunshine fall like gold on the grand old stone wall. We saw where Simon de Montford made his demands for the common people and got the first representation for them.

The next day we visited Stratford-on-Avon and I sat in the very chair (so they say) in which Shakespeare sat when he wrote. Then we visited Anne Hathaway's cottage and saw the love seat on which Shakespeare proposed. It was called a courting settle. That night we spent in Wales by the river Dee. The next morning we visited Chester. We walked a long distance on the wall that the Romans built during the last Roman invasion. We passed under the watch tower in which Chas. I. stood when he saw his army go down in defeat in Rowdon Moor.. Next we went to Kendal where we saw the ruins of the home of Catherine Parr, sixth wife of Henry VIII. Near here we visited the ruins of an old Abbey and an old monastery which were destroyed by Henry VIII. when he was trying to establish himself as head of the English church.

We crossed twice over the Cumberland Mountains. Once through Horseshoe Pass and once through Kirkstone Pass. The scenery was as beautiful as any in Western North Carolina or the Shenandoah Valley and you know I couldn't say more. The country looks very different. These mountains have very few trees on them but they have thorn hedges, the heather, the stone walls and the sheep and cows everywhere keep you interested and you don't miss the trees. Then the scenery! Such lovely look-outs, such pretty little water falls and flowers everywhere. Rhododendron, daisies (white and yellow) and fox gloves just grow like weeds everywhere. I was so surprised to see fox gloves grow wild in the fields, and poppies everywhere.

The night of the twenty-fourth we spent at Ambleside on Lake Windermere in the poet's country and no wonder they were poets. The next day we visited the homes and haunts of Wordsworth, Hartley Coleridge, De Quincey and Ruskin.

We passed several of the beautiful lakes and sat and stood where these men were when they got their inspiration for writing. I saw the real rainbow from the same spot that Wordsworth saw it when he wrote, "My heart leaps up when I behold a rainbow in the sky." I stood in the room in which De Quincey made his confessions as an opium eater.

July 3, 1930.

Many, many sights have I seen since this was started but I can't stop now to write about them at length. I've been up into Scotland and down the east coast of England to Hawrich where we took the boat for the Hague. After a day at the Hague we took one of these funny little continental trains for Amsterdam. We took a bus and saw Amsterdam yesterday afternoon. Among the other interesting things that we saw was a diamond factory. We went through the museum and saw many of Rembrandt's original paintings. My! but they were wonderful.

Now we are on the Hotel Yacht going over the North Holland Canal to the Isle of Marken where we are to visit a cheese factory, a fishing village and see the natives in their original dress and homes and customs. We are anticipating the most unique day we have yet had.

I'm going to stop and mail this or you will not get it in time for your July meeting.

My! but I would love to describe this trip. We are riding down the canal and the pilot is singing Dutch love songs for us. To the left, natives in native costume, shoes and all, and to the right a Dutch train—funny little top!

A LETTER THAT EXPLAINS ITSELF

The Outlook Company, February 14, 1930.
120 East 16th Street,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

It is with keen regret that I must ask you to discontinue my subscription to The Outlook. My reasons both for the regret and the request are brief.

Why I regret. For more than thirty years I have been a reader of The Outlook. For a great number of years I have placed it in the library of the Westminster Theological Seminary. I have commended it to my students and to a great number who have asked me concerning a good weekly journal. I have frequently given, as Christmas presents, annual subscriptions to The Outlook. This is evidence of the regard which I have had for the journal. I therefore regret that I must have it discontinued.

Why I request its discontinuance. For some time I have been losing respect for The Outlook. I have suspected that its editorial staff was in sympathy with the anti-prohibition forces. Your announced policy in the number of February 12th leaves me no room for doubt. The reason which you offer for this policy is so inadequate that I fear it is but an excuse. The real reason, I suspect, was not stated. I get enough free information from anti-prohibition forces. There seems to be no reason why I should pay you for such information. Besides, we have enough papers here in Maryland that make heroes of bootleggers and cowards and criminals of dry officials who try to enforce the law.

To set myself right with any of our people who may have subscribed for The Outlook through my influence I am sending a copy of this to our church papers.

READING AND CRIME

A dispatch from Vancouver publisher in eastern newspapers the other day, told a ghastly story of the murder by a husband of his wife and children. Evidence showed that the man had been reading a murder story just before the terrible deed was committed. And while his mind may have been affected for some time, it was the sordid tale of crime, doctors believe, that drove him to his desperate act. If the truth were known it would be found that reading of this type has been responsible for more crime than most people imagine. In a story from London, England, it was stated that a boy of nineteen had been sentenced to receive twelve lashes, despite the plea of his counsel that crime stories were responsible for his condition.

Any one with the best interests of the country at heart cannot but deplore the tremendous vogue of what has been called by the people of another generation "pernicious literature." Particularly regrettable is the circulation of so much of this trash among young people, with many of whom it appears to be their sole mental diet. It is thus that the minds of many boys and girls are becoming perverted. Their whole view of life becomes distorted, and takes on the color of the matter they take into their minds daily. Reading is one of the greatest blessings for which humanity has to be thankful. It may be the magic door that leads into realms more golden than gold, if wisely used and judiciously applied. On the other hand, it may lead to the sewers of life. It may elevate or it may degrade. It opens the way to converse with kings and queens or with hostlers and stable-boys, and men and women inevitably grow like the company they habitually keep. One of the great Apostles of the New Testament urged upon the Church to "give attention to reading." The admonition is badly needed today.—Selected.

THE AGE OF COMPROMISE

We are living in an age when compromise is the word of the hour. If one believes something to be the truth and his neighbor holds an opposite view, the popular thing to do is to find some common ground in between where both can stand together. The big idea is for each to surrender something; that is to compromise. That has always been the plan of the devil. He will fight to the last for what he wants and if he sees that it is utterly impossible to get it his way he will offer to compromise. It is being done today with regard to the Scriptures: The popular thing today is not to contend for what you believe the Scripture teaches but to seek a middle ground with those who deny the verbal inspiration, the blood atonement, and other vital doctrines.—Dr. C. C. Morris, Ada, Oklahoma.

JOYFUL DEATHBEDS

"Have you long been a Christian?" I once asked a doctor. "No, I was an unbeliever until a few years ago." "What made you become a Christian?" "Seeing many deathbeds," he replied. "It so happened that the duty of telling patients that their case was hopeless, and that their days were numbered, very frequently devolved on me, and I observed that while some feared and others were brave and died game, the Christians were filled with joy as though I had told them some piece of rare good news. Assured that the faith that could do that must be the true one, I became a Christian."—C. T. Studd in Good Tidings.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

North Davidson

July 19-20.—A two days' visit on this charge gave us an opportunity to be in all the churches. On Saturday morning we conducted worship at Spring Hill church, and held the quarterly conference there in the afternoon. Both the preaching service and the quarterly conference were well attended, every church on the charge being represented. However, to accommodate some who can not well attend the quarterly conferences on Saturday, because of business obligations, a motion was duly passed, recommending to the pastor that he call the next quarterly conference on Wednesday. The reports from the pastor and the various organizations indicated a good condition on the charge, with an exception, perhaps, in finances. The charge is considerably in arrears on both salary and budgets. But we are in the last quarter now, and marked improvements will be made in this phase of the work. Each of the four churches has a good Sunday School, and all, we believe, make regular contributions to the Children's Home. Spring Hill and Mt. Pleasant schools have paid their allotments to the Conference Council of Religious Education (Board of Young People's Work) Bethesda church has a good Woman's Auxiliary, and Spring Hill an active Aid Society. There is, likewise, a good C. E. Society at Spring Hill. It would be difficult to find a group of four churches more desirably located, more easy of access, and with better constructed buildings than are those of the North Davidson charge. All of the churches are within ten miles of each other, and ten miles from the pastor's home. A substantial, thrifty, dependable citizenship makes up the roll of the various churches. Each church on the charge has been built anew, or remodeled, in recent time, and all are provided with Sunday School rooms. From every standpoint, North Davidson is a promising and desirable charge. On Sunday, we spoke at Spring Hill, following a pleasing Children's Day program; in the afternoon the appointment was at Mt. Pleasant, and at night we were at Canaan. On Saturday night, it was our pleasure to be at Bethesda. Thirty years ago, this coming August, we were licensed to preach in this church. It was a pleasure to us to be on the charge, and to visit all of the churches. A good spirit prevails on the charge, and Brother Powell, the pastor, is going forward with the work wisely and hopefully. We are grateful to him and to his people for their courtesy and kindness to us.

Glad

We are glad that the HERALD family has had respite from the weekly round of getting out the paper. The extremely hot weather has added to the necessity of this well-earned rest. We trust that the Editor and his helpers may return to their task refreshed in every way, and that the readers of the paper may find a new zest in this issue by the very fact that they have been without the paper for a week. It is oft times true that our appreciation of both persons and things is enhanced when some circumstance takes them from us. We miss the HERALD when we fail to get it, even for one week.

Overworked

It is true that there is a money stringency abroad in the land now; but if we are not on our guard we will over-work that fact, and in doing so, we will withhold from God what we ought to give to him. The fact is, there are many things that do not indicate a money stringency. For instance, the number of automobiles on the highways. The roads are full of them, and most of them are good cars. The movies, ball parks, and other play places are well patronized, and many people are going away on summer trips and vacations. All of this costs money; and while there is so much spent for these things, we certainly can not excuse ourselves if we fail in the support of God's work. It is true, of course, that many people who are liberal supporters of the church under normal money conditions, can not give now as they are accustomed to do; it is also true that many others are not affected in the amount of their income by the prevailing business conditions. They make now just as much as they have been earning in former years, and some perhaps, more. This is a case in which the strong will have to bear the infirmities of the weak. It is a case, also, in which we will have to be guarded against the over-deterring effort of tight money. If we are not careful we will allow it to be overworked.

This is a time in which we need to lean hard on the promise of Jesus: "But seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." (Mat. 6:33).

Last Lap

Has it occurred to you that we are now in the last lap of this conference course. Three months more and this conference year will be ended, and we shall be in annual conference, passing on our records, and planning the work for a new conference year. No, it does not seem possible, but it is even so. And before we are aware of it, these three months will be gone. I am, therefore, calling your attention now to the shortness of the time, despite this hot weather, and despite the fact that this is vacation period. Much, very much, depends upon these three months. Most of our revival meetings will be held during this time, and what we do in soul-saving during the year will depend a very great deal upon the success of these meetings. The major part of the salaries of many pastors is to be raised during this last quarter; and by far, the bulk of our budgets is yet to be raised. With these facts before us, we can readily see what a very important period this is. We can also see how exceedingly important it is that every week should count toward these final results. If we put these matters off, we shall have more on us than we can attend to when the end comes. Despite hot weather, vacation, and any other thing, let's keep the work going at the very best possible pace.

"Prayer Changes Things"

This is the simple but striking way in which Dr. S. D. Gordon puts it. Scripture, and the experience of men, confirm his statement. Why shouldn't we pray unitedly for the special blessings of God upon us for these remaining three months. We have already called attention to the amount of work that is yet to be done before we can close this year with a worthy record of accomplishments. All of this work that is yet to be done is God's work, and we are his workmen; surely he will help, and bring things to pass for his glory that we have not yet encompassed by our faith. Let us pray, then, unitedly and daily, for his special blessings upon every charge and every program, that these remaining months may abound in success to his glory. Let us pray daily for the special meetings everywhere throughout the conference; for our institutions; for our churches that are heavily loaded with debt and struggling to meet pressing obligations; for our budgets; for the success of the Herald; for the women's work, and for everything that we are trying to do locally, and through our conference programs. "Prayer changes things," and if we will put this to the test on behalf of our conference work, God will give us abundant blessings during these closing months.

HARRY'S MISTAKE

Long ago, before the days of railways, people could only travel on horseback or by the rumbling stagecoach. The arrival of the coach in town or village was a great event. What I tell you happened in these times.

As Harry, a bright but careless boy, came out of school he waited to see the visitors come off the stage. Amongst them was a queer looking man who swayed from side to side as he walked. Harry laughed loud, and imitated the funny walk of the stranger to the rest of his chums. When he reached home his father said, "Come into this room and see a very old friend of mine."

Harry was glad to go, but, oh! how ashamed he felt. Here sat the stranger who had arrived by the coach, whom he had laughed at and made game of. But the gentleman smiled and was so kind. Then Harry's father told him how, when he was quite little, Harry had fallen into the canal; the stranger had plunged in to save him, but he got such a wetting and chill that he became a cripple for life. Oh! how Harry loved him now. He would do anything for him; and blushed when he thought of his bad behavior.

The Lord Jesus has more than risked His life to save you —He gave Himself. Oh! such a cruel death He died upon the cross. "He gave Himself a ransom for all" (I Tim. 2:6). You may not love Him now, because you know Him not—but to know the Lord Jesus is to love Him. Will you trust Him as you read this and be saved for ever?—L-W., in The Life Line.

A REMARKABLE WEDDING

"In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy paths."

A young Chinese girl in Malay became very anxious to learn to read, quite an unusual thing. One day, while a lady missionary was teaching a woman to read, a friend dropped in and begged her with much enthusiasm to go to teach a girl who was keen to learn. Knowing it was a heathen home the missionary hesitated, but being greatly pressed she went.

The girl, whose name was Chinnyeo, was the youngest of three grand-daughters. The grandmother made no objections, and even consented to the conditions that Chinnyeo should be taught the Gospel also, thinking no doubt that no great harm would ensue.

In five months she could read the New Testament, and soon after, she very simply trusted in Christ as her Saviour and told the missionary so. Her family tried to laugh her out of it; failing, they tried persecution, and the poor child suffered greatly, but continued to testify of great peace in her heart.

At last her family decided to get her out of the home by marrying her. She prayed night and day to God to undertake for her. She never saw her husband till after the wedding, and the first thing she said to him was that she was a Christian—a very brave thing to do. She might have expected anything from a heathen husband, but to her surprise he said nothing but fell on his knees and gave thanks to God for giving him a Christian wife. For he was a Christian too, though his mother and sister were heathen. So God answered Chinnyeo's prayer, and through her testimony many other members of that family beside the mother and sister were brought to Christ.

In her mother-in-law's house she at once set to work to teach the young sister of her husband to read, with the result that she too was soon happy in the Lord.—Publisher Unknown.

THE CAPTIVE GIANT

There are few more impressive illustrations of the shame and degradation which comes through departing from the Living God, than that exhibited in the downfall of Samson, the judge of Israel. Consecrated to God from the earliest period of his existence; chosen and appointed for a specific work, endowed with a magnificent physique, and bound by the solemn vows of Nazariteship; while true to God he was the terror of Philistia and the deliverer of Israel. But when he yielded to the influence of sensual delights, and told all that was in his heart to a wheedling, coaxing, treacherous woman, suddenly he found himself a captive, shorn of his strength, forsaken by his God, and led away, the slave and scorn of those who had feared him in days gone by.

How different from Samson the mighty athlete on the wild hills of Judea, was Samson the poor, blind captive, grinding in the Philistine prison-house! No longer a hero, a warrior, a conqueror, but degraded to do the work of the meanest slave; he was helpless in captivity and bondage, and was forced to toil on in bitterness and disgrace.

And is not this ever the fate of those who, chosen of God to do His work, fall from high estate, and are led captive by Satan at his will? Are there not today many men who might have been heroes of God, but who are condemned to grind in the Philistine prisonhouses, and bear the deep disgrace of Philistine chains? Are there not many who have been led astray by appetite and passion and temptation, and who now in bondage and dishonor lament the high estate from which they have fallen, and loathe the bondage from which they cannot escape?

Let the Nazarites of God take warning from the fate of Samson, and flee from temptation; and let those who are beguiled by the tempter and led astray from their allegiance to God, consider how their course must end; and let them turn with all their hearts to the Living God, and resist the devil, steadfast in the faith, and unshaken in their loyalty to Him who has reedeemed them by His Blood and saved them by His grace.—Publisher Unknown.

A MARKED DIFFERENCE

There is a great difference between believing in the pre-millennial coming of our Lord, and waiting for the Lord. A large number of Christians believe that the Lord Jesus Christ will come the second time, and that the age of righteousness and peace, generally called the Millennium, will be the result of His return. Such a belief has all Scriptures on its side.

But one may assent to it, believe in the second coming of Christ, know theoretically from the Bible different predicted events in connection with His second appearing and yet know little of the true waiting for Himself. It is very much evident that many hold the premillennial coming simply as a belief, without having the blessed hope as a living reality before their hearts and as a practical and separating power in their lives.

Some pastors of churches preach this truth and yet the church members continue in their worldly ways. Business men accept the pre-millennial teaching, believe in it and speak of it and still they enter into doubtful speculations and are in the mad race for earthly gain and pleasures. Christian workers sing and speak of the return of the Lord and still they support movements which aim at the improvement of the world and which deny this great fundamental doctrine.

A true belief in the second coming of our Lord must lead the heart into a real waiting for the Lord, who is coming. It must make the Lord Jesus Christ a greater reality to the heart. Such true waiting for Him, as the result of believing His return, must lead to separation from all that is evil. This should be the blessed fruit in the lives of all Christians who believe in the pre-millennial coming of Christ. The Lord keep our readers from holding such a precious truth as a doctrine and not walking in the power of it. If we believe the Lord Jesus Christ is soon coming to receive us into Himself, then let us daily wait, not for events, but for Himself. And if we wait for Him we shall walk close to Him. The Lord through His grace grant this unto us.—Our Hope.

THINGS WITH STINGS

Bees may live in old-fashioned stray beehives; bees are noted for two things, honey and stings; and in seeking the first, beware of the second. Sins have their sweets; "the pleasures of sin" which are but "for a season" (Heb. 11:25), always end in the penalties of sin, which are eternal. Doing victs, terrible are its stings. Stings and sins are connected: wrong may be like eating honey; but when conscience con-take away the "t" and the "g" from stings, and you have sins.

Sins like bees are numerous. There are in some hives 30,000 bees. Who can tell the number of sins in our minds and hearts. They are countless. How they buzz around, sins of speech, sins of action, sins of thought. Try and count the bees flying in and out of the hive, and then try and number your sins.

But thousands of bees are inside and out of sight. A young friend of ours, who has made his own wooden hive, opened it one evening and let us see the black swarms of bees moving within, though not a bee could we see outside. We cannot see the sins that are in in our hearts and minds; but God can, and says, "I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them" (Ezek. 11:5). Jesus, when on earth, knew what was in people's hearts (Luke 9:47). He knows what is in our hearts today. One day He opened the human heart, as my young friend opened his hive, and showed some of the evils working within (Matt. 15-19). We should not like father or mother to know the black bees within us, yet God says, "I, the Lord, search the heart" (Jer. 17:9, 10).

This ought to humble us. A gardener I knew kept bees and bantams: one day an impudent little bantam cock perched on top of the hive, and prepared to crow; but at that moment a bee settled on top of his comb and stung him. He flew down without crowing. Humbled, as we should be.

Did you ever have a bee follow and try to sting you? One thus made for a friend of mine. He started beating the air, and flicking and flacking until he thought he had beaten it off. When he stopped, I saw the bee was quietly crawling inside his coat. It is hard to get away from sin: and when we think we have succeeded, it may be nearer than ever.

I knew a lady who, when a swarm of bees were threatening an attack, shut the garden gate to keep them out: which was as effectual as our good resolutions to keep away evil thoughts and desires.

Shall I tell you a secret? A bee cannot sting two persons. Its sting is barbed, like a broad arrow, and when inserted, cannot be withdrawn, but is left in the wound: hence that bee is stingless, and cannot sting again. Will you learn and think over this verse?

My sins the Saviour stung,
  And caused His painful death;
When on the cross He hung,
  And yielded up His breath:
My sins will never sting me now,
  They left their stings in His blest brow.

May I commend two honey bees without stings? "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt Be Saved" (Acts 16:31).—William Luff in The Life Line.

CLEAN LIPS

"Amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of Jehovah." A missionary worker in Australia among Kanakas from the Solomon Islands led a number of these men to Christ. Among them he noticed one that had evidently stopped smoking. He was no longer seen with the inevitable cigarette between his lips. The missionary asked him why he had stopped smoking. The Kanaka answered, "Him no likee me play (pray) along dirty fellow lip." "Who doesn't like it?" asked the missionary. "Him, Jesus," said the Kanaka. "But who told you that Jesus didn't like it?" urged the missionary, for he thought that some one must have had a word with the new convert about the tobacco habit. Then the man in response smilingly said, "Him."—The Sunday School Times.

THE PROPHET MALACHI

Malachi looked out on the sunset of the Old Testament. It was a dark outlook. There was little glory in the sunset clouds. His prophecy reveals to us a condition of religious indifference and degeneracy not unlike the conditions we may expect in the closing days of the New Testament. But as he gazes upon the darkening picture, lo, in the east there begins to glow the dawn of a brighter sunrise, and he portrays the beautiful picture of this text: "Unto you that fear my name shall the Son of righteousness arise with healing in His wings!"—A. B. Simpson.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

BY J. T. BOWMAN

President C. E. Society, High Point College

AUGUST 3: "CHANCES TO SERVE CHRIST IN SUMMER"

(Consecration Meeting)

Scripture Text—John 6:1-14

Daily Bible Readings

Monday, Acts of Courtesy—Acts 28:1-6.

Tuesday, Healing Ministry—Acts 28:7-10.

Wednesday, Doing What We Can—Matt. 25:31-36.

Thursday, Helping in Need—Acts 3:1-11.

Friday, Talking With a Traveller—Acts 8:26-35.

Saturday, Making Visits—James 1:27.

A "GOOD DEED" MEETING

This meeting should be well advertised at least one week ahead. Ask each member of your C. E. Society to do some good deed during the week and write it down on a slip of paper and do not sign his name. Bring these slips of paper to the meeting and at the door have a doorkeeper, and a box with a hole in the lid through which the slips of paper are dropped. The slips of paper represent "tickets" for admission and should be advertised as such. For those who fail to bring a slip, have a few "passes" prepared to admit them.

During the meeting distribute the contents of the "ticket-box" to as many as possible to be read. A meeting like this should bring a number of fine suggestions by which others may later profit.

Suggested songs: "Will There Be Any Stars," "Following Jesus," "Oh, Do Some Good Deed Every Day," "Keep the Heart Singing," "Help Somebody Today," and "Somebody Did a Golden Deed."

The Leader's Talk

In this topic two great words, "Opportunity and Service" stand forth, but if they are to be effective they must be united. When these two words are placed together they constitute the team which is responsible for all the progress that has ever been made.

Some of us feel that our opportunities for service are so small, that in some way we are off the beaten pathway of the world, and that what we do or do not do, makes but little difference so far as the effect upon the world is concerned. It is up to each of us to make ourselves indispensable to the world. There are no small opportunities, except as we make them small. Each one has limitless possibilities.

Summer presents some of the finest opportunities for serving Christ to be found in the whole year. It is a great time of the year for the Christian to show his true colors.

Questions to Be Answered

1. Should religion ever go on a vacation?

2. Does summer limit or increase one's chances to serve Christ?

3. Did summer stop the activities of our Lord while He was on earth?

4. What may an individual do to serve Christ in summer?

5. What may our society do in summer?

Poetry Corner

"Somebody did a golden deed,
Proving himself a friend in need;
Somebody sang a cheerful song,
Brightening the skies the whole day long—
Was that somebody you? Was that somebody you?"

We can never serve Christ unless we are thinking of Christ. We can never find opportunities to serve Him unless we are on the outlook for them.—Anon.

OPPORTUNITY

They do me wrong who say I come no more,
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand without your door,
And bid you wake, and rise, and fight and win.

Wail not for precious chances passed away,
Weep not for golden ages on the wane;
Each night I burn the records of the day—
At sunrise every soul is born again!

Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped,
To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb;
My judgment seals the dead past with the dead,
But never binds a moment yet to come.

Though deep in mire, wring not your hands and weep,
I lend my arm to all who say "I can;"
No shamefaced outcast ever sank so deep
But yet might rise and be again a man.

Dost thou behold thy lost youth all aghast?
Dost reel from righteous retribution's blow?
Then turn from blotted archives of the past,
And find the future pages white as snow.

Art thou a mourner? Rouse thee from thy spell;
Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven;
Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell,
Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven.

—This beautiful verse was copied from the bronze memorial to Walter Malone, in the City Park, Memphis, Tenn.

AUGUST 10: "HOW TO BECOME TRULY POPULAR"

Scripture Text: Phil. 6, 8; I Peter 3:8-11

Daily Bible Readings

Monday, Be Kind—Eph. 4:32.

Tuesday, Be Unselfish—Phil. 2:4.

Wednesday, Be Modest—Luke 14:7-11.

Thursday, Be Generous—Acts 20:35.

Friday, Be Hospitable—Heb. 13:1-3.

Saturday, Be Helpful—I Cor. 16:15, 16.

Suggestions for the Meeting

It would be interesting to call this a "Beehive Meeting." You might advertise by drawing the picture of a beehive surrounded by bees on a poster. Place this on the church bulletin board or where it will be seen by all. Give the topic of the meeting, date, and a warm welcome. You might print across the topic in large letters, "Beehive Meeting."

At least one week before ask some member of the society to prepare a list of "Bs" by which one might become popular, as Be kind, Be true, etc. Ask someone else to prepare a list of Bible verses beginning with "Be" which they will read in the meeting.

Suitable songs: "If Your Life Rings True," "More Like The Master," "Keep the Heart Singing," "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart" and "Love Lifted Me."

Leader's Talk

It is the desire of everyone to be popular in some way. It is an all-but-universal wish of humanity. In order to become popular men and women often do things that otherwise they would not do, and keeps them from doing many things that they know they should do. Often it is not worth the price that has been paid.

The popularity of which this lesson speaks is that of an individual which comes through sheer beauty and strength of character. Some of those splendid qualities which help to make for character and true popularity are kindness, goodness, patience, love, mercy and other ingredients of like nature. It is not easy. Nothing that is really worth while is easy.

Answer These

1. When is the price of popularity too high?

2. Did Christ try to become popular?

3. Would Christ be popular today?

4. Do ideals have anything to do with popularity?

5. What danger does popularity present?

6. What does the world usually do with her popular idols, sooner or later?

7. What should be the chief aim in life—to be popular or to be right?

8. What responsibilities has the popular person?

Poetry Corner

Popularity is not bravado. It is won through the calm exercise of such qualities as kindness, courtesy, ability to see the right thing to do, and a sense to propose it gracefully.—Mabel Walters.

A SWARM OF BEES

Be hopeful, B happy, B cheerful, B kind
B busy of body, B modest of Mind,
B earnest, B truthful, B firm, and B fair,
Of all Miss B havior B sure and B ware;
B think ere you stumble for what may B fall,
B true to yourself and B faithful to all;
B brave to B ware of the sins that B set,
B sure that one sin will another B get,
B watchful, B ready, B open, B frank,
B polite to all, whatever their rank.
B just and B generous, B honest, B wise,
B mindful of time and B certain it flies;
B prudent, B liberal, of order B fond.
Buy less than you need before buying B yond.
B careful, but yet B the first to B slow;
B temperate, B steadfast, to anger B slow.
B thoughtful, B thankful, whatever may B tide,
B just, B joyful, B cleanly B side.
B pleasant, B patient, B fervent to all.
B best if you can but B humble withal.
B prompt and B dutiful; still B polite;
B reverent, B quiet, B sure and B right.
B calm, B retiring, B ne'er led astray;
B grateful, B cautious of those who B tray.
B tender, B loving, B good and B nign;
B loved thou shalt B, and all else B thine.

NOTICE TO PASTORS, DISTRICT CHAIRMEN, AND AUXILIARY PRESIDENTS

I have just written the Missionary District Chairmen asking them to help you with your work. Now I want to ask you to let them help you. Please call on them or me at any time we can be of help to you. A list of the District Chairmen was published in the Herald of June 19. If you do not have that copy, write me and I will tell you who your chairman is.

Our slogan — "An Auxiliary in Every Church." It can be done if everyone will help.

VACATION NOTES

The editor was caught up in Greensboro by an automobile and after enjoying a moving picture show two hundred miles long found himself in Wilmington. The pictures were of great beauty and interest, including forests, farms, fields, flowers, rivers, floating clouds, and folks, though some of these were not entrancingly beautiful. Another swift automobile ride took us to Wrightsville Beach where we spent six pleasant and restful days. Ocean breezes fanned away excessive heat and the quiet lulled to repose. Land and water vied with each other in laying before us a varied display of their edible products. We could not even take a taste of all. The chariot that bore us from home to Wilmington was in control of two of our good nieces. (We have twenty good nieces. There are just 190 ways of selecting two from 20: we may be in for quite a number of chariot rides: the other 18 will please take notice.) But the swiftest charioteer of all is our brother in Wilmington. His long connection with the railroad service may account for his run-away speed. He never seems to fear collision, but you are all the time wondering whether you will still live to tell the story when the ride is ended. But he made a successful flight with us and we are indebted to him for some delightful scenic views declared by a traveler who had gone round the world to be the prettiest he had found. We are also indebted to the members of his family for many kindnesses enjoyed by us during the days we spent in their home on the Beach.

Money Island near Wrightsville Beach was pointed out to us. A rumor that Captain Kid, the pirate chief, hid his money there gave to the island its name and led to much search for the buried treasure. It has not yet been found.

Work on the inland water way by the United States government has reached Wrightsville. This way when completed will enable small ships to carry freight without the danger of ocean travel. It is expected that it will be extended as far north as Philadelphia and maybe to New York and Boston. In the work near Wrightsville the skeleton of a mastodon was found.

Judge Parker who came so near to a seat among the U. S. Supreme Court judges was among the bathers at the Beach last week and met with an accident which injured one of his legs; he was led to shore by some friends.

Wilmington shows its appreciation of distinguished visitors by inscribing names and dates on blocks of stone by the sidewalks. Taft and several others have been so honored. The house Lord Cornwallis occupied in Revolution days still stands in a good state of preservation.

Some time ago the governor of the state was to speak in Wilmington. It was a great day for the city. They selected one of their very wealthy men to introduce the governor for his speech. To the astonishment of everybody he introduce him as "Governor Aycock," though Aycock had been dead for years. Such was the respect for the man of dollars that nobody corrected the error.

Some time ago there was a tragic happening that had ludicrous features. Colonel Stern while away from home received word that his daughter in handling a pistol had accidentally killed one of her best friends. He was of course deeply troubled. Perhaps he had some feeling of reproach for his daughter, thinking that greater caution would have prevented the grievous occurrence. In a highly excited state of mind he started home. On the way he met the funeral party and drove into it, killing one or two more persons.

I must not fail to tell you about a wonderful sight I saw one morning. I went down to the beach during low tide and saw an army of perhaps ten thousand soldiers all armed and standing as if waiting for a command. I summoned up courage and approached them at a rapid gait as though I had no fear. Would you believe it? Every last one of those armed soldiers took to his heels and fled and before I could overtake them they had hidden themselves in their dugouts in the sand. They were an army of Sand Fiddlers.

Our vacation is ended and a great heap of work now stares us in the face as if looking to see whether we are equal to it. We feel that there has come to us at least a small increment of strength and we hope to be able to carry on for a time. We come back to our readers with the wish that they too may enjoy the privilege of a good vacation when they need it.

Woman's Missionary Department

TO THE SPIRITUAL LIFE DEPARTMENTAL SECRETARIES

May we, as the secretaries of Spiritual Life, talk with each other this morning through the Herald about the responsibilities of this department. Are we equal to the task which it involves? Not without the help of God, we know. We feel so unworthy and we plead for your help to carry on in this great work.

As we enter this second quarter of our missionary year, may we do so humbly and prayerfully, and strive to make our department one full of encouragement to all our women. In these days we realize the great need of more spiritual thought. Prayer life is so essential. Are we putting our best in our department?

Will you, the secretary of Spiritual Life in your own local auxiliary, write me suggestions as how best to carry on our part in this great program for our church and auxiliary? Then I can pass on your ideas to others through these columns. You know each secretary will, by experience in her own department, have good methods others will be glad to use too. All of us will get splendid thoughts for a program in using Mrs. Stephenson's Spiritual Life Department pages in the "Missionary Record." You will find especially good material in the June number of "Missionary Record" for the program in any auxiliary meeting.

We are hoping to hear that you have arranged with your local president and program committee to have charge of one program in each month. It has worked out very nicely for a local auxiliary for the opening program of the business meeting to be in charge of the Spiritual Life secretary, who carried out Mrs. Stephenson's suggestions in the "Record" and had different ladies take part in this devotional service.

Sometime when needing material for your program, perhaps you will like this one, entitled "The Rose Jar."

THE ROSE JAR

Voluntary (instrumental or vocal)

Singing from the Hymnal, No. 533:

Jesus, the very thought of thee
With sweetness fills the breast;
But sweeter far thy face to see,
And in thy presence rest.

Devotional—

THE ROSE IN SCRIPTURE

The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose.

It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord and the excellency of our God. Isaiah 35:1, 2.

I am the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys. Song of Solomon 2:1.

READING—THE VALLEY OF ROSES—

The spirit of a missionary meeting depends upon its devotional period. In it is created the atmosphere, the fragrance that permeates the hearts of those present and the program itself.

There is in southern Europe, in Bulgaria, a beauty spot known as the Valley of Roses. Therein are grown innumerable roses on bushes that cover thousands of acres. From the rose petals is made the far-famed and wonderful perfume "Attar of Roses." A pound of this essence retails in London or Paris for more than six hundred dollars but it takes two thousand pounds of petals to produce one pound of the product. Truly it is like the spikenard in the alabaster box of Mary of Bethany, very precious.

The rose petals are gathered early in the morning before sunrise, placed in rose jars and covered with water. Gradually from the depths the oil rises to the surface.

We may learn a lesson from the roses beautiful, colorful and fragrant. One brief and simple prayer like the single rose petal seems valueless and insignificant but when there are thousands, yes, millions of them ascending to heaven from the Christian women of the world they produce by the divine alchemy, an aroma, an influence, which is invaluable in the church, in the country and in the world.

A sad rumor comes to us of late from this valley that a blight is touching the bushes and unless it can be overcome failure is ahead. Be very careful that no blight touches our prayer life. Let the Rose Jars of heaven be kept full of prayer-petals.

AN EXHORTATION BY LEADER—

To your knees, O Christian Women, for yours is the task of uplifting the world. To your knees, Women of Methodism, for you have a share in the task.

ALL—A SILENT PRAYER—

A POEM OF JOY—

Look up and catch the sunbeams!
See how the day doth dawn!
Gather the scented roses
That grow beside the thorn!
God's pitying eye doth seek us;
He leads up to his rest;
And from a thousand pathways
He chooses what is best.

—Author Unknown.

Will you, secretary of Spiritual Life, write me about your department? I am anxious to know my family in the work that we may be mutually helpful each to the other.

Yours for service,

MRS. J. M. STONE,
Sec. of Spiritual Life of N. C. Branch.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY, FIRST CHURCH, BURLINGTON

The Woman's Auxiliary of the First M. P. Church, Burlington, met at the church 7:30 Monday evening, July 21st, and drove out to Mrs. F. J. Loy's country home and held their July meeting.

When the ladies arrived they were received by Mrs. J. M. Crawford and Mrs. F. J. Loy, who showed them about the house. The next thing that they reminded themselves of was being "thirsty" and everybody crowded around the pump to get some good pure drinking water. Before the meeting the ladies were grouped around on the lawn enjoying a sort of social chat or getting together and becoming acquainted.

The guests were then directed to a beautiful grove, only a few feet from the house, where chairs were arranged in circle form. Lanterns were posted on four sides in order to give sufficient light.

Mrs. L. W. Gerringer presided over the meeting. The meeting opened with the hymn, "Take Time to Be Holy." The program was in charge of Circle No. 3. They used the printed program in the Missionary Record. It consisted of responsive reading and songs. The theme of their program was prayer. It was very interesting as well as helpful.

The auxiliary then entered into the business. Reports from the circles and treasurers showed that each one was really doing hard work. Committees were appointed in regard to getting blank forms to be used for the reports of each circle and printed cards to be mailed to members advising them the time and place of meetings. The attendance was exceedingly good. There were 59 members and six visitors, making a total of 65 present. There being no further business the auxiliary was dismissed with prayer by Miss Ila Stafford.

After dismissal Circle No. 3 served tea, sandwiches, pears and apples. A very delightful social hour was enjoyed on the lawn. Yells and songs were given by the younger girls. At the end of the social hour everybody gathered together and sang, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," closing with prayer by Mrs. L. W. Gerringer.

This was quite different from the previous meetings held, but at the same time it was interesting and enjoyable, and it helped to avoid the "summer slump" in the auxiliary.

The above is our financial report for three weeks. Sorry for the omission the week before the Editor's vacation, but it was unavoidable.

We are thankful for every dollar represented in these three weeks of offerings, and we are trusting that, now since we have passed the crest of the summer, more churches and Sunday Schools will send us their offerings, and that there will be an increase in the amounts. In a little more than a month our school will be opening, and there will be so many things to provide for our large number of children.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Box 80 and 131, Randleman, N. C., 8 aprons and 2 kettle holders from Daily Vacation Bible School.

Miss Charlotte Johnston, Whitakers, one dress.

Miss Mollie Wheelis, Whitakers, 7 1-2 yards dress goods.

Emma Avent Outerbridge, Whitakers, one coat.

Mrs. S. B. Hammer, Lynchburg, Va., about 61 yards of sheeting for bed sheets.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Johnson, Lincolnton, N. C., 5 pieces of prints for dresses.

A number of our friends have sent Octagon coupons. The largest lot this time was sent by the ladies of Reidsville, and of these Lacy and Jennie Combs, Rebecca Gunn, Orene Gunn, and Irene Gunn collected the larger numbers. And our little friend, John Law Wood, of Handy, sent in the next largest number of coupons. In his splendid letter he says, "Please give the credit to the Lineberry Ladies' Aid Society."

We thank all those who have aided in swelling our number of Octagon coupons to 91,000. Just 15,000 more needed to enable us to install the largest sized General Electric refrigerator. Rally to our help.

Produce and Fruit

Summer is on and fall is approaching. My brother, Mr. J. A. Dixon, and the boys are working as faithfully as can be to raise all the produce possible on this farm, and our women and girls and boys will can all the fruit we can get. But you, many of you, can especially help us by donating wheat, corn, potatoes, canned fruits and vegetables, chickens and anything in the way of foodstuffs, or clothing used in any ordinary homes.

We know you will do this, and we are just writing this to remind you to be planning for your donations. We thank you.

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

WINNING FINANCIAL FREEDOM

The Layman Company's pamphlet, "Winning Financial Freedom," has proved so popular and effective that once more we offer it to any pastor without charge. On request we will send, postage paid, enough copies to supply all the lay officials of his church.

The pamphlet describes a simple method by which the pastor may carry on, quietly and steadily, the education of his people in the principles of Christian giving, without interfering with his other work, and at a cost purely nominal.

The Layman Company is a non profit, interdenominational Christian agency puts its resources at the service of all churches.

When you write please mention the M. P. Herald and give your denomination.

A HYMN OF PEACE

To Thee, O God, we render thanks
For all Thy mercies sure;
We pray for universal peace,
That it may long endure.

Teach us to know Thy perfect will
And truly humble be;
May we with gladness praise Thy name,
Thy peaceful purpose see.

Thou art our refuge and our strength,
There is no other power;
If sudden danger threatens us,
We find in Thee a tower.

To Thee, O God, we render thanks
And call upon Thy name;
A psalm of praise to Thee we sing,
Thy wondrous peace proclaim.

WORD TYPEWRITER

A German engineer, who prefers to remain anonymous, says he has invented a typewriter which can write up to 1,000 words a minute.

The machine is said to attain high speeds by permitting whole words to be printed with one pressure of the finger. The inventor made a study of ordinary business letters and found that 50 per cent of the words used in such letters were the same hundred repeated over and over again. Accordingly he worked on the idea of a machine which would print both words and letters. He found 164 keys were necessary to embody ordinary terms and to provide letters for forming other words.

The word-typewriter is understood to be practically perfected and ready for commercial demonstration.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Yarborough Charge.—We are glad to announce that Rev. G. H. Hendry will hold our revival meetings at both churches. He will be at Harmony the week beginning the fourth Sunday in July, and at Yarborough the week beginning the first Sunday in August. We are looking forward to a real revival in each of the churches.

The third quarterly conference will be held at Harmony church July 27, at 3:00 p. m.

The churches are progressing very nicely in spite of the hardships they are undergoing.

Harmony church had a splendid Children's Day program on the fourth Sunday in June. Yarborough church plans to hold its Children's Day service the third Sunday in July at 8:00 p. m.

Harmony C. E. is progressing nicely. This society is small but the workers are faithful and dependable, under the leadership of Miss Grace Killingsworth.

Yarborough Christian Endeavor, under the leadership of Miss Gladys Wilson, seems to retain its large number. This society has just carried ou a very interesting contest, worked out by the pastor, which proved successful. We feel that it has meant more to the society than any other one of previous years. This contest has not only more than doubled the membership but it has trained a large number of young people to participate in the programs in various ways, such as making calls, leading in prayer, and giving special music. If any Christian Endeavorer would like to know in detail more about the contest, the pastor of this charge will gladly give the information.

D. D. BROOME, Pastor.

◆

Tabernacle Charge.—Our Children's Day service was held at Tabernacle church on the first Sunday in this month. It was one of the most inspiring Children's Day services the writer has attended in a number of years. The children rendered their parts well, the music was unusually good, and the offering was $24.85. This church has recently purchased 100 Cokesbury Hymnals.

Miss Elizabeth Hanner is spending the summer at home with her parents. She is a great help to our church at Julian.

Mr. J. S. Deviney, of Julian, will represent Tabernacle charge in our next annual conference.

The pastor is grateful to Mr. and Mrs J. E. Hanner for peaches a number of times.

H. L. ISLEY.

◆

Elbaville-State Street, Lexington.—Attendance at Sunday school was unusually fine. We are striving to hold another year the banner of the Township Sunday School Convention, which will be held at the Cornatzer M. E. church the 7th of August.

There was much good accomplished during the revival held during the week following the first Sunday of July, although there were very few conversions.

Quarterly conference gave Bro. Hendry the first Sunday of August off to help hold a revival at Union Grove on Mocksville charge.

The singing services which have been held every Saturday afternoon since May came to a close at the church yesterday afternoon with singers from Davidson helping out in the service. We feel that much good has been accomplished.

The C. E. Society is still in progress, we gladly note.

With best wishes to the Herald.

◆

Matthew's Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—The revival services will begin August 3rd. Rev. C. L. Spencer will assist the pastor. Services all day on Sunday; remainder of the week, afternoon and night. The prayers of everyone are requested for a great success.

Great improvements have been made on our church recently: new floor laid, also a new choir loft and painting of top.

We are sorry to report that another one of our faithful members, Mr. W. W. Edmonds, passed away on July 14. He will be greatly missed in his church as well as his home.

We haven't had Children's Day services yet, but are planning for it in the near future.

J. Clyde Auman, of Enfield, N. C., will speak to us at Matthew's on the third Sunday night in August. All invited to attend.

Orange Charge.—The third quarterly conference met at Efland church Saturday, July 26. The usual business was transacted. The votes for delegate were counted. Bro. J. Sam Wilson, of Hebron church, was declared delegate-elect.

The revival services began at Efland July 20 and closed July 25th. Bro. F. W. Paschall, of Asheville, was the pulpit help. His preaching was of a convincing nature. Deep impressions were made. We feel much good was accomplished.

Visible results: 15 conversions, 7 additions to our church. Some gave their names to join other churches.

Revival services are planned for the other churches in August.

We are hoping and praying that the churches may be revived and sinners saved.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

West Forsyth.—We are in the revival meeting with Baltimore church this week. Rev. D. I. Garner, pastor of Randolph charge, is doing the preaching, and Rev. Wayne Curtis, of Burlington, is directing the song services. Large congregations attended the three services on Sunday.

We closed the revival meeting at Union Hill church last Friday night. Rev. E. C. Norman, of Yadkin county, did the preaching during this meeting, beginning on Sunday night. He did some of the best preaching that has been heard at that church in recent years. Some of the church people seemed to have been revived. There were two professions and there were a number of people seemingly under conviction when the meeting closed. New members will be received at the next regular appointment the second Sunday in August.

The most successful meeting on the charge this year was at Tabernacle church, which was conducted during the week following the second Sunday in July. Rev. C. G. Isley, pastor of South Lexington charge, was the help. There were 21 professions and 14 accessions. Three of those applying for membership are to be baptized by immersion. This baptismal service will be held at the Yadkin river the second Sunday in August at 2 o'clock.

This pastor and family are very grateful to the people of Tabernacle church for a nice pounding which was brought to the church at the last service of the revival meeting. Among the things given were sugar, flour, coffee, vegetables and other gifts. The estimated value of the pounding was about $10. We thank each one who had a part in the giving, and assure them that the gifts were highly appreciated.

A complete report of our Baltimore meeting will appear later.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Roberta.—Our Sunday school is progressing nicely with Mr. Z. D. Cochran as superintendent. Attendance for Sunday 268.

The revival meeting will begin Sunday, August 3. Rev. Mr. Cranford will be the pulpit help. All are welcome to come.

Lineberry Ladies' Aid.—The Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. B. E. Lanier. All members were present except two. New officers were elected. Mrs. M. T. Skeen was elected president. The visitors were Mrs. Cleon Loflin and baby.

The members carried in their Octagon soap coupons, which were sent to the Children's Home.

Everyone seemed to enjoy the evening. Ice cream and lemonade were served, which all seemed to enjoy.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Vann Wood. We hope to have all members present, also a report from each one.

Mount Carmel Church.—The first Sunday in August the revival meeting begins. Rev. O. C. Loy will be the pastor's assistant during the meeting. Let us give our time for the success of this meeting. May it be the best that has ever been held at this church.

Rev. Mr. Loy was with us three years ago. Our people like his work. We know that he is an able minister and the meeting will be a success if we pray without ceasing. Our Sunday school is still making progress. The superintendent, H. V. Swicegood, is always ready to welcome you with a warm greeting.

Mebane.—We are indeed glad for the editor to have a much-deserved vacation, but we very much miss the Herald. My home, too, is one in which the Herald has come since the very first issue. I learned to read and love it in my father's home and continued in my own. No Methodist Protestant in N. C. should neglect taking the Herald.

The Mebane church has had the privilege of having two of our best preachers with us recently. Our pastor was at Chase City helping in a meeting; in his absence on July 20 Dr. R. M. Andrews preached for us at 11 o'clock. Dr. Andrews was once our pastor and we learned to love him and he has always been a good preacher. So it was a real pleasure to have him bring us another splendid message. Dr. P. E. Lindley preached for us at night. Dr. Lindley preached a splendid sermon and it was very much enjoyed. Dr. Lindley has preached for us occasionally since his boyhood. We are always glad to have him.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Coble were among the visitors noted in the congregation at this service.

Our pastor gave us two good sermons yesterday and is away again this week in a meeting.

The Ladies' Philathea class conducted the mid-week prayer service last week. The study was famous women, both of Bible times and later. The service was very interesting and the attendance was very good. The Men's class will conduct the service Wednesday night, studying great men.

Miss Marjorie Welborn, of High Point, is visiting Alta Allen and Elizabeth Nicholson this week. Miss Katie Lee Barnette, of Greensboro, is at home for her vacation. Mr. John Jobe is ill at the home of his son, Mr. C. F. Jobe. Miss Margaret Nicholson, of Wesley Long Hospital, spent her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Nicholson.

Mr. Joseph Kirk, one of our church boys, graduated last week at State College, Raleigh. We are proud of Joseph and bespeak for him a successful career.

Miss Edna Nicholson is spending this week in Burlington.

Mr. June Smith and family and Mr. Fletcher Smith and family spent Sunday in Middlesex with their father, Mr. Sam C. Smith, who is ill. Mr. Smith is one of our members and we hope for him a speedy recovery.

◆

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We enjoyed hearing Mr. Tracy Burton last Sunday morning, and hope to have him preach for us again. We were sorry he could not stay for the Children's Day program which was held at the evening hour. We were also sorry our pastor could not be with us. The revival meeting at Fairview prevented this. Our revival begins the second Sunday in August. We do not know if Mr. Russell is to have help or not.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman.—Attendance at Sunday school Sunday was 111. That was pretty good considering the hot weather.

Attendance at the church service was also fine. Our pastor gave us one of his best sermons. He talked of the life of Moses basing his remarks on the fourth chapter of Exodus.

Our Daily Vacation Bible School, which was in session ten days, closed July 3. Miss Jewel Hughes and the writer had charge of the training. Twenty-three children received certificates. The hand-work was distributed as follows: Aprons and handkerchief cases to High Point Children's Home; laundry bags, cushions, table runners, scarf, and face cloths to the Bethel Home at Weaverville, and the china dolls and oilcloth dolls to the Alvin Drew School, Pine Ridge, Ky.

Prayer service continues to grow in interest. Not such a large number present, but always the faithful few. Two weeks ago, at the suggestion of Mr. L. R. Hughes, we began discussing the subject, "Man and His Sin, and God's Goodness to Man." The first Wednesday night Mr. Hughes discussed briefly the creation of the world and the origin of man. The following Wednesday night, the first sin, or the downfall of man, was the subject, with E. F. Garrett leading the discussion. On next Wednesday Brother Williams will tell us God's remedy for sin, or the provisions He has made for us, though sinners.

On next Saturday evening at 7:30 at Worthville the third quarterly conference will convene. Full attendance is desired.

Bessemer City Church.—Our Sunday school here is still growing. Sunday, July 20, we had 205 present. Also great intgrest in our mid-week prayer meeting; 55 were present last Wednesday evening. Our pastor, Bro. Morris, preached again Sunday morning and evening. The congregations are increasing in number. The people seem to like Bro. Morris very much and to enjoy his good sermons. Several came forward for membership and will be taken into the church later.

Pray for us that we may continue to prosper and that much and lasting good may be accomplished.

Spring Hill, North Davidson.—The third quarterly conference, held at Spring Hill the third Saturday, was very well attended. Rev. S. W. Taylor was present and gave a very interesting talk at 11 o'clock. After dinner had been enjoyed the business of the quarterly conference was transacted with President Taylor presiding.

We were glad to have President Taylor with us also the following Sunday for the Children's Day program, which was very good. His message was unusually interesting, urging the people to co-operate, and to say, "Without God we can do nothing."

The coming Sunday our Sunday school will be at 2 o'clock and preaching at 3 o'clock.

The C. E. met Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

The friends of Mrs. Cecil will be glad to know she is improving from an operation at the High Point Hospital.

Lexington, State Street.—In the absence of our pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, the Sunday morning worship service was conducted by Rev. Donald Wall, young Baptist minister of this city. His subject was "Walking With God." This ever-interesting subject was ably discussed by Mr. Wall, and was an inspiration to all present.

In the afternoon Mr. Blanton had charge of the service at Elbaville. This proved a very good service in many ways. There was special music by a chorus of men from Lexington that Mr. Blanton was fortunate enough to secure. The address of the hour was given by Mr. Blanton in a forceful and impressive way, the subject being "Loyalty."

At the evening hour the pageant, "Onward and Upward," was given by some of the ladies and young people of the church. The pageant was well rendered and very much enjoyed by a large audience. Those taking part deserve much credit for the excellent work done in a very short time. There was only a short time for practice, but everything went off beautifully. The singing was especially good.

We are expecting Mr. Hendry home about the middle of this week. He is enjoying a ten days' vacation Florida, visiting his parents and other relatives and friends and attending to some matters of business also.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Neal returned Saturday from Wrightsville Beach where they spent a week's vacation. Mrs. Neal's mother, Mrs. Hubbard, of Reidsville, is spending a while here with Mr. and Mrs. Neal. We were glad to have her attend the service with us Sunday.

For the past three Sunday mornings the Sunday school classes of Messrs. C. L. aand T. R. Koonts have had a perfect attendance. These fine boys and their faithful teachers are among our best workers.

Miss Lila Aron returned Saturday from Boone, N. C., where she attended the State Normal College for Teachers. Miss Aron is expecting to teach school this coming session.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely, although the attendance is not as large as we would like for it to be. Mr. R. H. Arrington is going to resign as superintendent of our Sunday school. He is going to move his membership back to his old home church at Arcola, N. C. We are very sorry to give up Mr. Arrington and family, as they are some of our faithful members.

Pastor Fogleman delivered a very forceful sermon Sunday morning to an attentive congregation. He used for a subject "The Supremacy of Love."

Our revival begins the fourth Sunday in August. We are expecting Rev. N. G. Bethea to assist us in this series of services. We are hoping and praying for a great revival.

Rev. and Mrs. Fogleman dined in the home of the writer Sunday. We enjoyed having them very much.

We are planning to have the church roof painted at an early date.

The third quarterly conference for Halifax charge will convene at Hollister church on Saturday, August 16, at 2 o'clock. All official members and any others that will come are urged to be present.

Miss Lillian Mabry and Rev. M. L. Mintz were married at Harris Chapel Baptist church near Hollister on July 20, 1930. The pastor, Rev. E. C. Shoe, performed the ceremony. They have many friends here who wish for them much success and happiness.

Albemarle.—The members of the Golden Links Society were delightfully entertained at the home of their leader, Mrs. C. S. Moton, on last Monday evening. As the guests arrived they assembled on the lawn, where many enjoyable games and contests were played. Salted peanuts were served during the evening and at the conclusion of the games a bountiful feast of watermelon was enjoyed. About 20 members were present on this occasion.

Mrs. J. Arthur Furr was called to Concord last week to be at the bedside of her mother, who is suffering with a stroke of paralysis. Her condition is unchanged as yet.

The third quarterly conference was held on last Wednesday evening. Quite a large number were present, despite the threatening weather.

Much interesting business was transacted, including the nomination of Mr. C. S. Moton and Mr. Marshall Hatley as delegate and alternate to the Annual Conference this fall

The Sunday school superintendent's report showed a gain of 66 members for the quarter.

The report of the Ladies' Aid Society showed a gain of three new members and the amount of $379.37 raised during the quarter.

Plans are being made for the entertainment of the Annual Conference, which is to be held at our church this fall. We are looking forward to this being the greatest week in the history of our church.

First Church, High Point.—The Woman's Auxiliary held an interesting meeting at the church on Monday afternoon, July 21st with 30 members in attendance. The president, Mrs. S. S. Coe, was in the chair and minutes of the previous meeting and also of the executive board meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. John H. Walker. The treasurer, Mrs. J. S. Pickett, reported a balance of $126 after having paid $375 to the treasurer of the building fund and $125 to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer. Mrs. Joseph Elkins, of the Children's Home family, then made upon invitation a most entertaining and illuminating talk on the Pine Ridge, Ky., school and its far-reaching work among the mountain people. Mrs. Elkins spent four years as a worker in the school and its vicinity as Miss Edna Dexter before her marriage, and upon the request of Dr. Woodford went out and became acquainted with the people, learned their customs, won their hearts, and founded Sabbath schools at several points and churches. Of course she met much sinister opposition at first because the people were prejudiced against women speaking in public, but by sheer patience, kindness and love won them over until now she prizes many of them as among her most cherished friends. Mrs. Elkins is a forceful and convincing speaker, and to those of us who have been working for this mission for several years her talk was highly interesting and much appreciated.

From the recent food sale held by the Auxiliary the sum of $75 will be realized. Plans for the bazaar in October are being made.

The church school enjoyed its annual picnic at Tar Heel Inn on Greensboro highway on Wednesday, July 23, with an attendance of 125. Numerous games and swimming were enjoyed, and everybody, young and old, joined heartily in the delicious supper and unexpected treat of ice cream.

Circle No. 1 of the Auxiliary, Miss Margaret Snipes, chairman, held its monthly meeting last Thursday evening at 8 o'clock with Miss Frances Bodenheimer on Sunset Drive.

The Sunshine Circle, once called the Junior Mission Circle, met Monday afternoon at the church with Mrs. Ross Davis and Miss Marget Welton in charge. This circle is composed of boys and girls of Primary and Junior ages.

The Senior C. E. Society enjoyed a picnic supper with Pastor and Mrs. R. I. Farmer at the parsonage on Monday, July 21st. At the last Sunday evening's service Mr. C. L. Gray, Jr., sang a beautiful solo with Mrs. Farmer accompanying at the organ, and the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered a very practical and forceful message on "Testing the Tests of Character," from the text in I. Cor. 3:11-16. He said in part: "Character after all is not a visible thing, but belongs to the inward spirit, and is religion in the making. Our acts of worship are religion in action. However we may define a man's character it is a shadow that always comes before him and follows after him. If there is evil within us, the world will be quick to know it. There is something that makes us know where a man or woman stands. Shakespeare said in Julius Caesar: "His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him that nature might stand up and say to all the world, This was a man!" God can't make a character unless the life is yielded in submission to His will. There are three tests of character; the professional test, or how do we conduct ourselves towards those who come in contact with us in our work. Character is not made or marred except by our own acts. Are you patient, kind, energetic, or are you a gossiper, busybody, loafer? It takes a lifetime to make a character, but one act may ruin it. Another test is the social; what is our deportment toward those who have not enjoyed equal advantages with us? We can test ourselves by our attitude toward the lost, and the community is judging us by that attitude. Still another test may be called the success test, or how do we behave toward our fellows when we are prosperous? Let us check up and see how we meet these tests in business, social and religious life.

The final Wednesday fellowship supper meeting of the season will be held at the delightful home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Robbins, south the city, on Wednesday evening, and it will be in the form of an old-fashioned barbecue in charge of the Men's Brotherhood. Following this meeting, the third quarterly conference is called to convene.

On next Sunday morning the election of delegate to Annual Conference will be held, the candidates being Messrs. C. C. Robbins and V. W. Idol.

Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer and children, Mary Elizabeth and Joseph, will leave next Thursday by motor for Wellsville, Ohio, to spend their summer vacation with relatives and friends. During his absence the pulpit will be supplied for the morning service. The Lord's Supper will be celebrated next Sunday morning, led by Rev. E. Lester Ballard. The entire congregation joins in best wishes for a safe trip and a happy, restful vacation among their friends and loved ones.

The large number of friends of Mr. W. C. Lyndon will regret to learn of his serious illness in Guilford General Hospital, where he has been a patient for two weeks following an operation for appendicitis and gall stones. He is holding his own, however, and is now able to take some nourishment.

Mr. D. A. Neese, who went to Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, for examination and treatment, accompanied by Mrs. Neese, has returned home. His numerous friends will be pleased to know that he is improving slowly and steadily.

Prof. and Mrs. L. R. Johnston and small daughter, Becky Holt, went to Elon College to attend the funeral services of Master Staley Wicker, Jr., of Atlanta, young nephew of Mrs. Johnston. They spent a week with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Wicker.

Miss Elizabeth Reitzel, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at High Point Hospital ten days ago, has recovered sufficiently to be moved to her home on North Main street, where she is rapidly convalescing.

Mrs. L. J. Diffee and Mrs. H. A. Moffitt returned Friday from a delightful trip of eight weeks to Europe. They visited England, Holland, Belgium, witnessed the famous Passion Play at Oberammergau, Italy, spending several days in Florence, Venice, Naples and Rome and France, where they spent ten days in Paris. Some of the battlefields and cemeteries of the World War were visited. Mrs. F. M. Pickett and Mrs. R. B. White, of High Point, accompanied them, and the party were members of Elliott's Tours. All report that they enjoyed a wonderful tour, but are delighted to be at home again.

Miss Rosalie Andrews is the guest of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Harris, of Henderson, this week.

Miss Elizabeth Welch and Mrs. Lucy Oakes Harper returned Monday from a trip to New York, going by boat from Norfolk, Va. They were absent a week.

The congregation is delighted to receive the following members into communion and fellowship: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whitlow, the former a ministerial student at High Point College; Mr. and Mrs. Sweat and daughter, Ellen, who were former members of our church, having moved back to High Point after a few years' absence.

Prof. C. R. Hinshaw has moved his family to Montlieu Avenue.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The following girls, Aline Loy , Mabel Crabtree, Flossie Thompson, Lois Coble, Ruby K. and Truth Isley, attended the Leadership Training school at High Point College and received credits. Ruby K. and Truth Isley were awarded Christian Worker's Diplomas for the completion of four years' work.

The revival meeting began the third Sunday and continued until Friday evening. Rev. D. I. Garner was the pulpit help. He gave us some good sermons; how much good was done time only will tell. Several persons were converted and reclaimed. So far only three have united with this church.

On Monday, August 4th, a daily vacation Bible School will begin under the supervision of Miss Kathleen Paschall. We are hoping the parents will cause all children between the ages of four and fourteen to attend.

The Woman's Auxiliary is planning a play to be given in the near future. The Kiwanis Club of Graham will be entertained at a picnic dinner. Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis will speak in the church Tuesday evening, August 5th, at 8 o'clock. The public is invited to hear Rev. and Mrs. Minnis tell some of their experiences in India.

The C. E. Society held its monthly business and social meeting at the home of Mrs. J. A. Crabtree Saturday evening. Sunday evening at 6:30 the society held a sunset program on the steps of the church. Then the Christian Endeavorers with a number of other church members went to Graham to hear Rev. J. F. Minnis' illustrated talk on India.

Mr. Alson Sharpe, our eldest member, is critically ill. We are hoping and praying for his recovery.

Mrs. J. A. Crabtree is representing her Home Demonstration Club in the women's short course in Raleigh this week.

Enfield Charge.—The revival services will begin at the Whitakers Chapel church next Sunday (first Sunday). There will be services at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Dr. T. M. Johnson, the pastor of our Whitakers church, will do the preaching.

During the month of August the churches of Enfield are having union services at the Sunday night hour. The first service will be held in the Methodist Pritestant church next Sunday night.

Since our last report the death angel has visited the home of Mrs. Charlie Neal and caught away her companion. Brother Charlie Neal had been in ill health for some time and his death was expected; but, alas! when death really does come we find ourselves unprepared for the great change which she always brings. His companion has our deepest sympathy and prayer. A fuller account will be given next week.

P. S.: The third quarterly conference will be held at the Whitakers Chapel church on Wednesday night following the first Sunday immediately following the preaching service.

Palestine, Flat Rock.—Our pastor has filled all his appointments with sweet and inspiring sermons. Seems that each one gets better. They seem better to me, for the first five months after Christmas I did not get to attend my church owing to the long illness of mother, though mother is able to attend services occasionally now.

The revival meeting has closed. Pastor Pegg had for his help Rev. J. D. Cranford, of the Kernersville Charge. I am sure that all who heard him enjoyed his good sermons.

Brother Cranford left a warm place in our hearts (as all our M. P. preachers do), and we assure him if it's ever his opportunity to come our way again he will find a warm welcome at Palestine. There were 11 converted and 11 united with Palestine. One transferred to the Stokesdale Christian church.

Little Sarah Edwards Pegg was real sick the last of the meeting and we missed Mrs. Pegg very much from services. She is lots better now, we learn.

Our pastor will be away on the third Sunday in August and Brother G. A. Middleton will fill his appointment at Palestine.

Our Sunday school continues about as usual. The children are very busy learning their parts for the children's night that will be given in a short time.

GRACE TUCKER, Reporter.

Pleasant Grove.—Our Children's Day exercise was held the third Sunday in July. This was a success. The offering was $20.00.

Since our last report we have received two in the church by letter: Mrs. Fred W. Kennedy, from Calvary Reformed church, and Mrs. Erma Charles, from Spring Hill M. P. church.

The church voted some time ago to place a nice monument in the place of the old marker at the grave of Mr. J. B. Cecil. This has been erected and is very nice. Mr. Cecil remembered the church in a financial way.

The annual S. S. picnic was held last Friday evening at Holton's Lake, near Winston. Since this is a very busy time all did not go. Those who went reported a nice time.

We are glad Miss Helen Cecil is able to be back at church after missing several weeks on account of sickness. Mrs. Vivian Cecil is getting along nicely after her operation at the Guilford General Hospital. I hope she will soon be able to be back at church, as they have been missed very much.

Our third quarterly conference will be held Wednesday evening, August 6th.

MRS. RALPH KENNEDY, Reporter.

South Lexington.—The work is going along nicely. Our Sunday school is still looking good; we had 213 in S. S. today. As we entered our Sunday school today our hearts were made to feel sad. As we looked out over the crowd, for there was a familiar few we could not see, and which we will never see present again, for one of our scholars, James Lanning, who was faithful in attending Sunday school, was drowned while swimming in the Yadkin river on last Sunday afternoon about 4 o'clock. His funeral was conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, on Tuesday at 1:30 o'clock at our church.

Mr. Isley returned to his work today after being away a week helping Bro. C. B. Way in a revival meeting, in which he had good results. This makes two meetings Bro. Isley has helped in recently, the other one being at one of the churches which Rev. O. C. Loy serves, and they had a glorious meeting there with many souls saved. We are very glad to see Bro. Isley back on his work again, for when he is away from us we realize more than ever the great work he is doing for us

On next Friday evening our Christian Endeavorers will give a play at the Holt school and the money they clear will go to help pay the Dollar a Member on High Point College. It is hope that a large crowd will be present to repay the young people for the effort they have put forth in getting up the play.

Glen Raven Church.—Rain or shine, hot or cold, Glen Raven church carries on successfully its good works.

In spite of the fact that Saturday night, July 12th, was a very warm night to prepare and serve supper, a very large crowd came out to refresh themselves, enjoy the supper, and to help give full co-operation in the upbuilding of the church.

The supper from start to finish proved to be a success, having been donated by church members, Sunday school classes, and friends in the community and prepared by Christian Endeavor members. This supper consisted of chicken pie, potato salad, pickles, rolls, hot coffee, lemonade and ice cream. Every one seemed thoroughly to enjoy the supper and at the close the treasurer was very glad to make a report of $48 clear, which was to buy small chairs for the Beginners' Department in Sunday school.

Last Sunday the little children came to Sunday school with happy and shining faces, proud of the 50 new chairs in colors in their class.

On Sunday, July 13th, was held the annual Home-Coming Day. Rev. O. C. Loy, pastor, had charge of the morning service, after which a very beautiful dinner was spread and served in the basement on account of unfavorable weather outdoors. The evening services began at 2 o'clock with several visiting members and entertaining speakers for the evening.

We felt very fortunate to have with us in the Home-Coming service one of the first pastors of the church and the first Sunday school superintendent. How quickly they could point out to us the progress which has been made in the church within the past few years.

The Central Quartet, with Mr. Easley at the piano, added much interest to the evening service. One solo, "Jerusalem," from Mr. Easley, was thorouhly enjoyed by all. A special request was sent in for the quartet to give one spiritual, "Be Ready When the Great Day Comes." This was the closing number and was quite entertaining.

Bethel, Flat Rock Charge.—We were very glad to have with us on Rally Day our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, and Dr. George R. Brown, who were the principal speakers of the day. We enjoyed their talks immensely. We were also glad to have Bros. Kennett and Totten and several others, among them Mrs. C. W. Bates and Mrs. Brown, who made interesting talks on women's work. We had a large crowd and a good day.

On the night of the first Sunday in July we held our Children's Day services, and the second Sunday in July our revival meeting began with our beloved former pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, as help; we had a good meeting. Mr. Trogdon, as always, was full of the Spirit and preached some fine sermons. The meeting closed Friday night with 11 joining the church. We had splendid congregations all through the meeting, the house being filled to overflowing at night. On the third Sunday afternoon Rev. Mr. McCulloch filled Mr. Peg's appointment, he being at Palestine conducting a revival. Mr. McCulloch made a good talk; we were glad to have him. The attendance at Sunday school continues good, and our grass and shrubbery are looking fine since the good rains have fallen.

Best wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

Calvary, Greensboro.—It has been some time since this scribe has written a piece for the Herald, but that doesn't mean that Calvary church has gone to sleep. On the contrary, all our activities are flourishing in spite of the hot weather. Attendance at Sunday school is about equal to last year at this time, while the congregations, especially at morning service, are far in advance of last year. We are having between 30 and 40 at our mid-week services.

The Missionary Auxiliary is especially active. One of the circles has already raised its quota of $250, and has asked permission to apply all that it raises for the balance of the missionary year on the church debt. The other circles are active, and making good progress on their quotas.

With the first of September our "Calendar Plan" for the reduction of the church debt will have been in effect for two years. During that time the debt has been reduced more than a thousand dollars, besides all interest payments met. Not bad when the financial stringency is taken into account. And we are keeping up fairly well with our other obligations.

It has been the privilege of some of us at Calvary to broadcast over the local radio station, having had charge of the morning devotional service three times.

We had six representatives at the Young People's Summer Conference. They brought us a report last Sunday as part of the devotional service at the opening of Sunday school.

The preacher and his folks are to take a vacation over the second and third Sundays in August. On the second Sunday morning the president of the Conference will preach; on the third Sunday Dr. R. M. Andrews will occupy the pulpit.

We are not planning any Sunday school picnic for this summer. Instead, classes and other groups are having joint picnics and other social occasions. It seems to be more satisfactory than the old way.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

* * *

First Church, Burlington.—Our work is going very well, we believe. Attendance in the Sunday school today was 296 and the offering amounted to $16.82. The Junior orchestra is rendering fine service and we are indeed proud of this great help to the school.

The Baraca Class was taught by Mr. Geo. Smith and the lesson was enjoyed by the ones present. We have an enrollment of 80 now and there were 60 present today.

Our pastor brought splendid messages today and the congregations were very good.

By action taken at the regular business meeting July 9th, it was decided to suspend the mid-week prayer meeting for the rest of July and for the entire month of August, and also to hold only the morning preaching service during the month of August.

Our fall revival is scheduled to begin the third Sunday in September. Let us begin now to plan and think about this meeting.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

Last September while helping Bro. W. D. Reed in a meeting at Chapel Hill Camp Ground, he told the people one day that the helper lived in town, and that much they had that was of no money value to them specially were the very things that pastors who lived in town had to buy. Then he said, "Bro. Bethea's care is out there by the camp and the door is unlocked. Put into it any surplus produce that you have." Well, the result was that the night the meeting closed I had a car full of many good things that are raised on the farm. So much that the staple articles lasted us for some time. Of course all that was appreciated. We will not forget the favor at our house.

I had an experience somewhat similar while helping Bro. Whitehead at Concord, Saxapahaw charge, last week. The only difference in this and the first one was that the Concord people took me completely by surprise. I had no intimation of it whatever.

They filled the car all right, and I even had to open up my trunk on the rear of the car to take care of the canned goods. They went all the way from the pantry to the smokehouse, by the garden, the melon patch, the field, and back by the bee gum. Yum, yum! Are you envious? Well may you be, for there is much to last for several days that we can keep.

I understand that there were two good ladies that worked this, and the pastor must have been on to it from the broad grin that is a familiar thing on Bro. Whitehead's face. We thank you, friends, and assure you that this will not be forgotten.

Have had many liberal poundings on my own work, but these two are the first I ever received outside of just a few special gifts to take home when assisting away from home. The first one came as a result of the practice that these good people were giving Bro. Reed. This last one may be to keep in practice so that when the pastor brings a helper into the parsonage down there they can go right on with it, for THEM!

It does not matter to this preacher and his wife whether this or some other was the reason; we appreciate the gifts and they help us wonderfully at this time. Again we say, Thank you! God bless you!

Another unexpected favor: Bro. Gilbert Amick started to say yesterday, either by mistake or wilful aforethought, in a church meeting, "I want to know how you people feel about giving us a vacation from preaching—or I mean give our pastor the month of August for a vacation?" Well, however he or the congregation meant it, the vote was unanimous, and I will enjoy the rest just the same. Thank you, Fountain Place!

Lots of other good things, but in the words of Paul, "Ye cannot bear them now," or at least you will not have to. Thank you for reading all this.

MORAL: "Go thou and do likewise."

N. G. BETHEA.

TROLLINGER REUNION

The annual Trollinger reunion will be held at Haw River M. P. church on Wednesday, August 6th, and Rev. James Trollinger, president of the organization, assisted by the other officers, will have charge of the program for the day, and it promises to be one of genuine enjoyment, and all relatives and interested friends of the Trollinger family are cordially invited to be present.

At the noon hour lunch will be spread in the shade of the old walnut trees that have stood there for years, and at this annual picnic dinner, which is made up of a menu of varied and good things to eat, brought in well filled baskets by relatives and friends, is the main feature of the day, when they break bread together and mingle with their friends and relatives that they haven't seen in a long time.

It is hoped that every one that desires will not wait for an invitation, but come and enjoy the day with the Trollinger family.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR SOMEONE

A few days ago I was asked to see if I could find a girl to act as companion and nurse. The lady who asked me has two small children. Her husband works as night telegraph operator. She wants someone to help take care of the children and to be a companion for her. She will give room and board and five dollars a week. It is a splendid home, and a fine opportunity for some worthy young person. If you are interested write Mrs. E. D. Overcash, 1308 Randolph Ave., Greensboro, N. C.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Smith

The almost sudden passing of Mrs. Enos Smith on June 25, 1930, brought sorrow to many hearts. Her husband, Brother Enos Smith, preceded her to the life beyond only ten months ago. She looked on the sunny side of life, being one of the most optimistic persons the writer has ever known. In the midst of the disappointments of this life she looked beyond to the life where disappointments and troubles are not found. We believe she has now entered into that fuller and more complete life. At an early age Mrs. Smith united with Tabernacle M. P. church and remained faithful to the end. It appears that her life of 76 years was spent trying to make the world better. May the Lord bless the five sons and one daughter left behind.

The writer was assisted in the funeral at Tabernacle church by Rev. J. M. Millard. Her body was then laid to rest in the church cemetery.

Reynolds

Charlotte Elizabeth Hanner was born February 10, 1860 and passed from this life June 23, 1930, making her a little more than 70 years old.

February 1, 1881, she was united in marriage to Benjamin F. Reynolds, who preceded her to the grave about two years ago. Six sons and two daughters survive. Charles, Vernon, Gurlie, Peter, Cecil and Dewey Reynolds, Mrs. W. T. Neese and Mrs. W. M. Smith. For the last two and one-half years Mrs. Reynolds was unable to attend church because of her affliction, but her faith in God never wavered. She was a member of Tabernacle M. P. church more than 50 years. Surely a good woman has gone to her reward.

The funeral was held at Tabernacle church by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. M. Millard, and the burial took place in the church cemetery.

Lanning

James E. Lanning died July 13, 1930, aged 16 years, six months and one day. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Lanning, his mother having passed away a few years ago. Besides his father, he is survived by four brothers, John, Grady, Odell, LeLand Lanning, and four sisters, Jennie, Lizzie, Emma and Lela.

James was a member of the boys' class of South Lexington Methodist Protestant church and was faithful in attendance. His brother, Grady Lanning, was secretary of South Lexington Methodist Protestant Sunday School. He will be missed by the Sunday School and members of his class.

The deceased met death suddenly, which was a great shock to his father, his brothers and sisters and friends.

Funeral services were conducted in South Lexington Methodist Protestant church Tuesday, July 15, at 2 o'clock, by the writer, and the remains were taken to Reeds Baptist church where interment was made. The pallbearers were members of the Sunday School class of which the deceased was a member, and composed of the following: Oscar Koontz, Kearney Koontz, Odell Johnson, Cliff Koontz, Paul Grubb, Fred Cross, Clifton Russell and Charles Yates. The flowerbearers were members of the girls' class of the Sunday School and composed of the following: Louise Hardester, Margaret Shuler, Kathleen Turner, Virginia Richardson, Alpha McCarn, Gladys McCarn, Alma Koontz, Galeta Everhart, Mary Hedrick, Maggie Greer, Lecta Jarvis, Lila Richardson, Frances Cross, Lillian Gallimore and Lucile Cook. The many beautiful flowers and floral wreaths were evidence of the popularity and high esteem in which the young man was held.

We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family in the loss of their loved one and pray God's blessings upon them.

Tribute of Love

The Executive Committee of the North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Missionary Work, wishes to offer a tribute of love and esteem to the memory of our loyal and devoted sister, Miss Bettie Cox. She was interested in everything that upbuilt the cause of Christ. She was treasurer of her local auxiliary, and was at all times anxious to do her bit in the district work. While we realize and appreciate her gain is our loss, we rejoice for the privilege of knowing her. For to know her was to love her.

Therefore, be it resolved, that we follow her example in our lives by striving to do His will.

Resolved, that we extend to the family our deepest sympathy. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the brother and sisters and to the Methodist Protestant Herald, and Missionary Record for publication and recorded on the minutes.

MRS. R. M. ANDREWS,
MRS. H. C. NICHOLSON.

Resolutions of Respect

Mrs. Mary J. Hunter passed to her heavenly reward July 9, 1930, in her 83rd year, a member of Bethesda church and auxiliary.

Therefore, Be it resolved: First, That in her going Bethesda auxiliary loses the oldest and one of its most loyal and devoted members, who was interested in all the activities of her church and always served it faithfully. Her good works follow her , her Christian influence abides and her memory will be cherished by her many loved ones and friends.

Second, That a copy of this resolution be spread upon the records of our auxiliary and copies also sent to members of Mrs. Hunter's family.

Pearson

Mr. T. J. Pearson, better known as "Tommy," die din Roanoke Rapids Hospital, July 15th and the funeral was held July 16th in his home near Bailey, Va., and the body laid to rest in a family burying ground near his home.

Brother Pearson was taken very sick a few weeks ago, and it seemed the doctor failed to diagnose his case and finally he was carried to the Roanoke Rapids Hospital. He was treated there but he could not get well.

Brother Pearson was a faithful and loyal member of Ebenezer M. P. church and well-liked by all who knew him.

He was converted and joined the church at 17 years of age. He was 43 years and about seven months of age when he died.

He leaves a wife and nine children: three brothers, one sister, two half brothers and four half sisters, these have the sympathy of the entire church and community. The church, home and community have lost a good man. The funeral service was conducted by his pastor, assisted by Rev. E. G. Cowan.

Hanner

Julius Anderson Hanner was born October 8th, 1863; departed this life July 12, 1930. He was married May 20, 1894 to Nettie D. Wilson of Asheville, N. C. To this union were born six children, Mrs. A. B. Marley, Pleasant Garden, N. C., Mrs. J. L. Coble, Greensboro; A. F. Hanner, Greensboro, Mrs. J. E. Pickett, Worthville; J. C., and Adrian Hanner, of Randleman, all of whom survive, also one brother, Eli Hanner, of Greensboro, and twelve grandchildren.

He joined Mt. Lebanon M. P. church early in life where he remained a faithful member until about six years ago when he moved his membership to Level Cross M. P. church and here remained until death.

His health had been very bad for years so he was unable to attend church very much, but he was always thoughtful of his pastor. Funeral was conducted by his pastor at Level Cross, and the body laid to rest in the cemetery there to await the resurrection morn.

May the Lord comfort the widow and children in the sad and lonely hours.

"All Souls Are Mine"

The claim of God upon us all,
E'en since the day of Adam's fall,
Assurance brings of Heaven's care
And quick release from Satan's snare.

He's not ashamed to be our God,
In love He sends the chastening rod:
He'd make of us our very best,
He'd lead us on to endless rest.

If we are God's, then God is ours
And we can rise to princely powers.
His loyal sons God ever owns,—
At last promotes to heavenly thrones.

Man's Worship of Mankind

All idolatries are blind and stupid, but perhaps none is more so than the individual man's worship of the human race. It is true the human race has made wonderful achievements. It has learned to utilize powers of nature, to increase the productivity of the earth, and by rapid and long-haul transportation to save multitudes from famine. It has learned something of the nature of bodily diseases and in a few cases has discovered remedies or cures. But all that it has learned and done does not begin to justify the confidence that man can now get along of his own power. How stupid in men to trust in their own self-sufficiency. What folly to give up trust in God! The wisest and mightiest of men are still swept on in utter helplessness by the powers that make for death. The wealth of a Ford or Rockefeller cannot save him from dreaded bodily dissolution. Science and art may save from premature death, but they cannot prolong life. They may mitigate the pains of disease but they cannot prevent its fatal termination.

It is a fool that says there is no God, and a greater fool that says we can now get along without God.

—This will be remembered as a very hot summer. Rev. W. F. Kennett pronounces it the hottest summer he ever felt.

—Terrible conditions prevail in China. Groups of armed bandits are marching over the land burning cities, killing and robbing the people. What a contrast between those conditions and those brought about by the prevalence of Christianity.

—The Quakers in annual meeting at Guilford College pledge support to prohibition and the 18th amendment, though a lady member took occasion to express the opinion that legislation is not sufficient, there must be temperance teaching and example in the homes. The meeting reaffirmed its belief in peace.

The Early Christians and the End of the World

There is evidence that the early Christians, or at least some of them, expected Jesus to return in their day and wind up the affairs of the world. Since He did not do so, it is an interesting question how they came to expect that He would. We believe they were led into this error by a misinterpretation of Matthew's and Mark's report of what Jesus said. After describing the destruction of Jerusalem and also the ending of the age or world Jesus added, "This generation shall not pass until all these things are fulfilled." This remark seems to refer to both events, and the early Christians had no means of knowing that it did not refer to the end of the world as well as to the destruction of Jerusalem. But history has shown that the remark was meant to refer absolutely only to the things involved in the destruction of the capital of the Jewish nation. In the same discourse Jesus said that no one but God the Father knows when the world will reach its termination and a new order shall be introduced. Matthew and Mark probably did not report all that Jesus said, and in his discourse there was probably something to indicate to those present his correct meaning.

While we know that the age did not end in that first generation, we do not know that it will not end in our present generation. It would be better for us if we bore about in our daily living some of the sense of imminence that the early Christians had. Jesus told us to be ever ready for His return.

—Edison is still seeking a successor. He has just had another examination of young men, 49 of them, one from each state and one from the District of Columbia, to discover the most promising. Rhode Island wins this time. Perhaps the hardest question of all was this:

"You are the head of an expedition which has come to grief in the desert. There is enough food and water left to enable three people to get to the nearest outpost of civilization. The rest must perish. Your companions are:

"1.—A brilliant scientist, 60 years old.

"2.—Two half breed guides, ages 58 and 32.

"3.—The scientist's wife, interested mainly in society matters, age 39.

"4.—Her little son, age 6.

"5.—The girl you are engaged to marry.

"6.—Your best friend, a young man of your own age, who has shown great promise in the field of science.

"7.—Yourself.

CAN WE EXPECT A REVIVAL?

There was once a man who believed a revival was needed. He stood high in the court of the greatest empire of his day, Persia. He was a Hebrew, and had learned that the walls of God's city Jerusalem were broken down, the gates burned with fire, and the Jews who had returned there from the Babylonian captivity in great affliction and reproach. He believed in God, and he loved his people. The story of what followed is told in the book of Nehemiah. Nehemiah, cupbearer to King Artaxerxes, was the man who dared to hope for a revival. Nothing could have seemed less likely just then. But it came, in the face of deadness, discouragement, and attacks of the most determined and desperate sort.

If there was to be a spiritual revival of God's people Israel, there must be a revival of wall-building also, so that Jerusalem might be honorable instead of a public dishonor in the land. Nehemiah was both spiritual and practical—neither of these can really exist without the other. After he had secured the royal authority for his work in Jerusalem, and systematic plans for rebuilding the wall of the Holy City had begun, an enemy made an attack upon the movement. Sanballat, a influential Samaritan, prompted perhaps by political motives, ridiculed Nehemiah and his fellow-workers. "What do these feeble Jews?" he exclaimed. "Will they sacrifice? Will they make an end in a day? Will they revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burned?" Another enemy allied with Sanballat predicted with sarcasm: "Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall."

But Nehemiah's work went straight forward; the walls of Jerusalem were rebuilt; and one of the great revivals of history followed as God's people turned to the reading of His Word and the doing of His will.

Here is a lesson in revival that God's people need to take to heart today, when revival is sorely needed again. Revivals usually come to pass in the face of intense opposition, and in times of great darkness and declension. No intelligent observer can doubt that we are in such times today. Determined attacks are being made on the Word of God and the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the true Christian faith. Immorality is on every hand. Open atheism flourishes. Materialism grips the hearts of men. All these conditions make a call to revival.

Nehemiah's first move toward revival was significant. When he learned of the dire distress of the people of Jerusalem, he said: "I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of Heaven."

His very prayer was the sure pathway to revival. It began with worship of God "that keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love Him and observe His commandments"; and at once it went on to confession of sin. Then Nehemiah boldly reminded God of the divine promise to forgive and to restore if confession was made. God heard and honored that prayer.

Revival has never come in any other way; but it has come, over and over again in times of darkness and need, in just that way. There is a passage of Scripture that may well be used in prayer for revival today: "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him."

The enemy is coming in like a flood today, not only in Soviet Russia, not only in war-torn China, but also in every favored land where Christianity is a glorious reality—and where also the working of the powers of evil is a dread reality.

Not only are there plenty of dark signs that a revival is needed: there are also many bright signs of its coming. For almost a score of years many individuals and groups of Christian people have been praying persistently for revival. The Great Commission Prayer League of Chicago has been used of God to stir up people to prevailing prayer. At its world-wide call many Watch-Night meetings of prayer for revival were held as the old year died and the new year was born. Those who are in touch with the prayer life of the Church are continually receiving news of intense, persistent prayer in Europe, in Asia, in Canada and the United States, in South America, in Africa, that God's people are pleading for a Heaven-born, Heaven-sent revival.

In parts of the world where, humanly speaking, there is reason for the greatest discuoragement, there are also brightest signs of coming revival. Russia is one of these parts. In spite of—or shall we say because of?—the devilish and official activity against all true religious life, and indeed against God Himself and His only Son, heart-hungry people are turning to God in their tragic need and are finding salvation through Christ as Saviour. Revivals have broken out in various parts of China since—and because of—the political turmoil and tragedy of that land. The Jews everywhere are showing a readiness to consider the Messianic claims of Christ such as they have never manifested since they cried out to Pilate, "Crucify Him."

The distribution of the life-giving Word of God is going on in a way known to no other literature. China was sown with a million Testaments not long ago, and now the Million Testaments Campaign for Latin-American Lands is under way. The various Bible societies in a recent twelve months circulated 36,500,000 copies of the Scriptures, which means an average of about 70 per minute night and day. The Canadian Sunday School Mission, of Winnipeg, is doing a revival work by its campaign for the children, as is the Canadian Christian Crusade in meeting the attacks of atheism.

Yes, we can expect a revival. But our expectation must be from God: only He can send it.—Editorial from The Globe, Toronto, Canada.

IF THE ORGANIZED DRYS QUIT

Prohibition would be erased from the Constitution and quickly blotted from the statute books if the organized efforts of its friends should cease. Eternal vigilance is the price of freedom from the debauching, corrupting and enslaving liquor traffic.

So long as a group of wealthy men, some of whom control immense distilleries while others are interested in other possible phases of the exploitation of the people at large, heavily finance the assaults made upon this beneficent social legislation whose values are distributed to the bulk of the American people, it will be necessary for those who are concerned about American high-speed industrial civilization to guard their hard-won liberty from the return of the liquor traffic.

Should the friends of prohibition abandon those organizations through which alone they present an effective front to the enemy, the liquor consumption in this country would, unquestionably, far exceed any record set in the past. The wealth of the land which has been so greatly increased under prohibition would make possible larger consumption of intoxicants. The increase in population during the dry decade would offer more potential liquor customers. Like that man from whom seven devils were cast out and to whom they later returned, the last state of this nation would be worse than the first.

The discouraging effect of a repeal of the prohibitory laws would break down inhibitions which have been built up during the dry period. Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment would be equivalent to a confession that the theory of prohibition was wrong, that the use of intoxicating beverages was right and proper and that society deliberately placed its seal of approval on their consumption.

Coupled with the return of the licensed liquor traffic under whatever system might be adopted, there would be a like return of that political corruption which seems to be its inevitable accompaniment, whether legalized or illicit. There would also return those vice centers which were plague spots in the life of our great cities. Inevitably slum sections would develop. The standard of living which has been raised so high under prohibition would be lowered since the diversion of large sums of money to the liquor trade would make it impossible for hundreds of thousands to continue payments upon homes they are buying, to meet rentals in desirable neighborhoods, to continue that scale of living which has been possible to the great body of the people only since the licensed liquor traffic.

The effect of the return of this traffic would be felt throughout our whole economic life. A large part of our business structure is built on the deferred payment plan or installment buying. We have erected an inverted pyramid by spreading out the purchase price of costly articles such as automobiles, radios and the like over extended periods of time. Through this system we have made possible a much greater consumption than could have been had these been purchasable only for cash. Prohibition has made this inverted pyramid stable. It has strengthened the credit of nearly every man and woman in the country. That credit would be shaken and that inverted pyramid would topple if the supporters of prohibition should disband and their organization no longer function effectively.

The death rate, whose decrease under prohibition has been equivalent to saving approximately 200,000 lives per year would increase if once more liquor stores were allowed to purvey this narcotic habit-forming drug. Alcoholic insanity would increase. Deaths from alcoholism would reach the pre-prohibition ratio. Drink cures, reduced from 275 to a score of institutions, mostly small, would revive. In brief, that long chain of evils fostered by the liquor traffic would again plague the American people if they do not present a united front to the assaults made by the liquor element.

Only through organized effort can the supporters of an alcohol-free civilization give to men in public life that assured support to which they are entitled. Legislators, administrators, judges, police officials and the great body of public servants who are related to the enforcement of prohibition have a positive right to that whole-hearted popular support which is only possible through organization. The foes of prohibition are organized. The friends of prohibition must continue and reinforce their organization.—Ernest H. Cherrington, LL.D., Litt.D., General Secretary, World League Against Alcoholism.

GAINED THROUGH GIVING

Isaac gave the jewels to Rebekah, and Rebekah gave herself to Isaac (Gen. 24:22-58).

Ruth clave to Naomi in her affection, and Naomi clave to Ruth in her service (Ruth 1:18;4:16).

David received the men in the hold when they were in distress, and David was helped by them when he was distressed (I Sam. 22:2; I Chron. 11:15-19).

Abigail ministered to David in his need, and David honored her in her widowhood (I Sam. 25:18-27, 39).

The widow of Zarephath gave out of her penury to Elijah, and Elijah was the means of bringing her the Lord's plenty (I Kings 17:12-16).

The Shunamite woman entertained Elisha to his comfort and the prophet obtained a child for her, to her consolation. (11 Kings 4:8-17).

The lad gave his five cakes and two fishes to the Lord, and was rewarded by seeing twelve baskets full after the multitude was fed (John 6:9-13).

The greatest Example of all is He who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and who obtains by His love a willing and loving ministry in return (Matt. 20:28; II Cor. 12:15).—F. E. Marsh in The Repairer.

STILL UPWARD

Still upward be thine onward course,
For this I pray today;
Still upward as the years go by,
And seasons pass away.

Still upward in this coming year,
Thy path is all untried;
Still upward may'st thou journey on,
Close by the Savior's side.

Still upward e'en though sorrow come,
And trials crush thine heart;
Still upward may they draw thy soul
With Christ to walk apart.

Still upward till the day shall break,
And shadows all have flown;
Still upward till in Heaven you wake
And stand before the throne.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

The Bible is the best seller. It comes near to outselling all other books put together. Last year's figures for the United States were 14,000,000 and for the world 36,500,000! Who buys them? Where do they go? What do people do with them? Who reads them? These millions of Bibles, abounding with life and light, but all that life and light banked up within the lids, idle and inert until some soul breaks the seals, and releases the throb and the radiance! When once considers how many homes harbor silent, unused Bibles, one feels like saying to the Bible societies, Hold! Let us have a moratorium on Bible selling for one year while we read what we already have. Some one has said, "We shout, 'O for a thousand tongues o sing,' when we don't praise our Redeemer, even with the one tongue we have in our heads!"—Cadman.

OPTIMISM | EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Grace Church

July 27, Sunday.—It was our privilege to worship with this church on this date, and to be the speaker at the 11 o'clock hour. Dr. S. K. Spahr, pastor emeritus of this church, was present, and pleased us much by assisting in the service. We were most cordially received by the congregation, and heard with worshipful attention. It was a pleasure to us to be with them. Brother Tamblyn, the pastor, was away on his vacation. He is back now, we understand. We trust that he may be able to resume his work with added strength, and that the remaining three months of this conference year may be full of hope and progress for his work.

Level Cross

July 27, Sunday.—This is Level Cross on Randleman charge. We were here in the afternoon. This was our first visit to this church, but we have felt a keen interest in it since we became acquainted with it as a Methodist Protestant church. It seems to us to be well located, occupying, as it does, a prominent place on highway number 70, between Greensboro and Randleman. We are told that it is in a community where it has wide opportunity for service. Paint on the church, inside and outside, and an attractive marker on the road, are improvements that should be made. A Sunday School is maintained, which of course is helpful to the work. We do not have information at hand as to other organizations in the church. Brother Williams, the pastor (Rev. T. A. Williams) has the confidence of his people, and is seeking earnestly to promote the progress of the church. He is hoping for a good revival here; let us join him in prayer. We enjoyed being with this church, and likewise a brief visit, on our way home with Brother and Sister Coletrane, members at Level Cross. Brother Coletrane has an interesting curiosity in a bedstead, made in prison by a penitentiary prisoner in St. Louis, Mo. After serving twenty years of life sentence, he established his innocence and was released.

Shiloh

August 3, Sunday.—There are three Shilohs in the conference. This is the one on Richland charge. Our appointment here was at 11 a. m., following a brief intermission of the Sunday School. This was a regular appointment though Brother Trogdon, the pastor, could not be present, owing to revival work that he was assisting in. The people received us cordially and heard us with helpful attention. We enjoyed being with them. This church is happily located on highway number 90, about four miles west of Asheboro. It is just far enough from the road not to be disturbed by the noise of travel. There is talk of building a road straight in from the highway to the church. This would be an improvement, and we trust that it may be done. The church is ample in size, and well kept on the inside. The exterior needs a coat of paint and a new roof. These improvements will be made, no doubt, in due time. We were glad to find them interested in a marker for the church, and shall expect to find an attractive one on the roadside in no distant future. The public press carries the information that the Baptists of the state are to mark every church that they have in North Carolina. This is commendable zeal and we trust that it may be contagious. Every church should be designated by an appropriate marker. We were glad to hear the pastor of the charge well spoken of. Brother Trogdon is consecrated and earnest, and we trust that his labors on this field may be richly rewarded this year. We are indebted to Brother McCain and his family for dinner and the hospitality of their home.

John Wesley Stand

This is a Pilgrim Holiness church. By the courtesy of their pastor, Brother J. F. Burkhead, we were present with them in the afternoon, and preached in that service. Brother Burkhead gave a brief history of the name of the church and the work there. Long years ago there were many deer in that section. When they were "jumped" by hunters they would invariably go from one mountain to another by the place where the church now sits. A hunter was always placed on this spot to shoot the deer as they passed. It was therefore known as the "stand." This explains a part of the name of the church. The other part is explained by the fact that John Wesley preached there in 1737, probably when he was on his way from Georgia back to England. From these circumstances, the church here is known as, "John Wesley Stand." By request of Brother Burkhead, we carried the John Wesley pulpit down, and had it on exhibition during the afternoon. This certainly gave to the occasion unique and interesting historical connection with early Methodism. Here was the ground made historic by his presence, and here was the pulpit from which he preached. (Tradition has it that he used this pulpit in eastern North Carolina). The Holiness people were beginning a revival meeting here. We trust that Wesley's spirit of evangelism may rest mightily upon them, and that many souls may be saved through their efforts. Brother Burkhead has been holding meets there on this date annually for twenty-seven years. We enjoyed being with them, and pray God's blessings upon their labors.

Special Meetings

We are now in the midst of our revival meetings, and on many of our charges these meetings are the chief dependence in soul-saving. Some good meetings have been reported, and we earnestly trust that many such are yet to follow. We had the pleasure of attending one service in the meeting at Friendship, Haw River charge, accompanied by Brother Hutton. Brother J. D. Williams was assisting Brother Trollinger in this meeting. The service that we attended was good, and other like services had characterized the meeting. We urge again that daily prayers be offered all over the conference for these meetings. Saving sinners and edifying saints is the one big work of the church, and surely all of us should be much in prayer when the church is making special effort toward that end. We can not urge too strongly that earnest, united, daily prayer be offered for these meetings.

And Remember Always

That we are coming rapidly to the close of this conference year. Just three more months remain. And how quickly they will pass! Almost before we are aware of it, we shall be gathering at Albemarle to hold the one hundred and third annual session of our conference. Are we ready for it, brethren? Will we be ready? Of course we are not ready now, and before we can be ready, a great deal of work must be done. But we are all going to do our best, and when we have done that, we can do no more. But let us begin doing that now. There is always a good deal of extra work that must be done during the closing part of the conference year. If we begin now with this extra work, the chances are much more in our favor. And especially is this so this year. The depression in business will make it harder for us to raise our finances. But we must not let this keep us from doing our best. If we do our best, and then fail, neither conscience nor the conference can blame us; and surely God will not. Despite these hard times the assurance of His word is still ours: "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work."

OUR TRIP TO WASHINGTON

Last fall when our children started to Jamestown school we promised them that if they would make their grades for the year, and make a good grade on both conduct and work in the Home and on the farm, we would take them to Washington, D. C., this summer.

When the grades were averaged up in June it was found that 26 boys and girls were entitled to go. Even then we had fearful misgivings because of the expense of the trip.

But our promise was out to children, and we dare not break it. So we planned to start on Monday morning, July 28th and return Saturday, August 2nd.

Mother Dixon and I, with Brother J. A. Dixon and his wife, and their son, Rogers to drive the bus, started out with two cars and our new bus with 31 in our party. The first day took us to the Shenandoah Caverns. We made a brief stop at Natural Bridge and the management permitted our group to view the bridge free of cost from an entrance at the top.

The management at Shenandoah Caverns furnished us a guide and showed us the wonders of these beautiful caverns without cost, and then treated us to ice cream when we came out. And a stranger standing by and being attracted by our children gave us all cold drinks. We slept in tents on the grounds wtihout cost. A delightful visit to one of God's beauty spots. If you pass that way visit these caverns.

The second day we went to Gettysburg and over the battlefields. A short stop with Miss Annie L. Forrest in Littletown, Pa., and then on to Westminster, Md., where we had a most delightful evening and night through the kindness of Drs. Elderdice and Ward. Our girls slept in the Seminary building and our boys slept in the gymnasium. This gave us a most delightful short visit to our College and Seminary.

The third day took us through Druid Hill Park and the Zoo in Baltimore, on to Lexington, Market, and the head of Chesapeake Bay, thus giving us a short but wide view of the city of Baltimore. Then on to Arlington and back to Congress Street church, Georgetown, where Pastor Kester and his people served us a very bountiful dinner. We then went into camp by the Potomac where the Rhode Island Avenue people paid for sleeping quarters for us for two nights.

The fourth day was one sight-seeing day in Washington and before starting out the ladies of First Church, Washington, put into our hands 31 box lunches for the noon day hour. When we tell you our round, those knowing Washington will know that we saw as much as is humanly possible to see in a day.

We went to Lincoln Memorial, Washington Monument, the Pan-American Building, the White House, the Capitol building, the National Museum, the Bureau of Engraving, the Congressional Library and the Union Station.

At this latter point we cleaned up to get ready for another bountiful dinner at Rhode Island Avenue church. Oh! how tired; but how we did enjoy that dinner.

At both the Congress Street church and the Rhode Island Avenue church our children sang several old-time Southern melodies. And at Rhode Island Avenue the good people took a collection for us and gave us $42.54 to count on our trip.

The fifth day started us on our homeward journey with a short stop at Christ church, Alexandria, Va., and a little longer stay at Mt. Vernon.

Thus ended the sight-seeing of a most wonderful trip for our children, and also for the older ones who had not been over the grounds before.

One night in a splendid camp near Petersburg, Va., and a delightful drive brought us home about the middle of the afternoon Saturday.

It was a most wonderful trip for our children, and they will never forget many of the places of interest. The people on the way, both our friends, and the strangers, were exceedingly kind to us.

The Cost of the Trip

Well would you like to know? From the time we left until we reached home the entire cost in money was $112.73, or $3.64 per person. Besides giving us meals and paying for our stay two nights on the camp grounds in Washington, the friends along the way gave us $53.54 in money, which reduced the cost of the trip to the Home for its honor boys and girls to $59.19, or $1.91 per person. It seems too good to be true, but through the kindness of friends and strangers, and through close planning and calculating on the part of Mother Dixon we made it.

We are so thankful to everyone who helped to make this trip possible. And the dear Lord be praised for helping us on an 882-mile trip, and for bringing all of us home safely.

Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. Dixon.

The unlearned faithful Christian knows more about God and His ways than the unregenerated scholar with his pride of intellect and self-sufficiency. This is true, because God and spiritual truth are spiritually discerned.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE LITTLE RED DOORS

I know a house where many, many little people live. There is just one opening to this house which has two little red doors parting at the center.

One day a little person came running to the doors and said "May I go out, please?"

Immediately a soft clear voice was heard saying, "What will you do if the doors open?"

I am going to tell Charlie that he is a mean, greedy boy, for he took my apple."

The clear voice spoke again, "I don't believe you're much better than Charlie because you are going to do a mean thing too."

"I don't care, I am mad at him," snapped the boy.

"All right, the doors will let you out." The little red doors reluctantly opened.

Charlie was not far away. In fact he was just coming back with the apple for he knew that he had done what was wrong. He was sorry now that he had even thought of doing such a thing.

Never stopping to think why Charlie was coming back, the boy shouted, "You mean, greedy boy; I won't play with you again."

Charlie's face turned red. He hid the apple behind his back and stuck out his tongue. He wasn't sorry any longer when he heard these words, so he ran off with the apple grasped tightly in his hand.

A small, fair-haired girl came to the doors. "May I go out, please?"

Again the voice spoke, "What will you do if the doors open?"

"I'm going to tell the teacher that I don't want to do my spelling," she replied crossly.

"I just saw your teacher and she had a tired, worried look. Are you very sure you want to tell her that?" came the chiding voice again.

"I'm going out. Do open the doors," said that determined girl and the little red doors opened slowly.

As soon as the little girl had spoken the cross words she was sorry. She really did love her teacher. She saw the tired face look more tired and imagined she saw tears come into the weary eyes.

Soon a shaky little voice asked the doors, "May I go out, please?"

The clear voice repeated its question in turn, "What will you do if the doors open?"

"Mother's medicine got spilled—and—and I didn't do it," she said with her eyes on the floor.

"What!" cried the shocked voice, "I saw you knock the bottle down myself." And the little red doors opened slowly and sadly.

Mother was not well and when she heard her little girl's untrue story it made her more ill than she had been. She had seen her daughter at the cupboard and guessed what had happened.

A quick eager step was heard at the doors and a clear call, "May I go out, please?"

"What will you do if the doors let you out?" came the question as before.

"I just want to smile at the lady who is passing. She looks so sad that I am sorry for her."

"How thoughtful you are!" commended the voice. And the little red doors opened willingly.

The smile was given and a happier look appeared on the lady's face than had been there for days as she returned the smile and went on her way.

"May I go out, please?" This little boy had evidently been running.

"What will you do if the doors open?"

"Do you see that boy?" asked he. "Don't you think he looks as if everything had gone wrong with him? That's how it looks to me, and I am sure I can help him even if it's only telling him I am sorry."

The little red doors opened wide to let him out. If you had seen the boy a little later you would have know that somehow he had been made happy and content again.

Have you guessed the secret of my story? I'll tell you what the little red doors are and you can guess the rest. Listen carefully while I whisper—"Our Lips."—D. K. Hunter.

NINGA'S GIFT

She was only a little African girl ten years old but she had learned to love Jesus, and her heart was so overflowing with joy and happiness that she longed to share her blessing with everyone she knew. Her life had been a very sad one, for she was a little slave girl. Her father had sold her in payment of a debt to a wicked young man, who bought her for his wife. He treated her very cruelly, and, finding that she was too young for the hard work in the fields, he brought her to one of the schools of the Africa Inland Mission.

"I have heard that you train the boys and girls to be good workers," he said to the teacher in charge. "This is my wife, and I want you to train her so that she can do good work in my fields by and by."

Poor little Ninga! She was so shy and frightened that for some days Miss Emily could hardly get a word from her, but her big black eyes seemed to be pleading, "Don't beat me; I will do the best I can." Soon her fears vanished in the atmosphere of love and kindness which surrounded her.

Her husband visited her occasionally, and after one of these visits Miss Emily found her sobbing bitterly.

"What is the matter, Ninga?" asked her teacher.

"He says he is coming soon to take me away. Don't let him take me, teacher. He will beat me again, and I want to stay in the school with you."

Now Miss Emily had been talking with the government officials, for this was in British East Africa, and she knew that she could save the child by paying her father's debt, so she answered kindly, "Don't cry, Ninga, I will try to keep you at the school."

She paid the money to the husband from her own small salary, and Ninga was free.

Oh, how happy the poor child was! "Dear teacher, how I love you," she said, "I wish I could be your slave for ever."

"Be a good girl, Ninga," said her teacher kindly. "That is all I ask of you."

As the days went by Ninga, sitting in the mission chapel, heard often the story of the wonderful love of Jesus, who died to save her, and her young heart took in the message gladly.

One day she lingered in the schoolroom till all the others had gone out, and then said timidly: "Teacher, I love Jesus, and I am going to be His child always. I did not know till I came here that it was wrong to lie and steal and say bad words, but I have given them all up."

A few weeks after this Ninga came running in one day much excited.

"Teacher," she cried, "there is a little slave girl down in the village, and her master treats her dreadfully. She is nearly starved, and he beats her every day because she can't do the heavy work in the fields. Please take her into the school or she will die."

"I should like to take her, Ninga," answered Miss Emily, sorrowfully, "but I have not the money. I might spare enough to pay the debt, but there is only mission money enough to feed and clothe the children who are here now."

Ninga turned sadly away, but the next day she came back, crying: "Oh, Miss Emily, please, please take that poor little girl in! He has beaten her till she can scarcely move, and her back and arms are full of bruises."

"How can I take her, Ninga, when I have no food for her to eat, nor clothes to wear?"

"I will give her half of mine," said Ninga eagerly, "and she can sleep with me in my bed."

Ninga was so proud of this little bed, for she had never known such a luxury till she came to the school. It consisted of four upright posts, with a bottom of woven ropes. On this were laid two blankets to serve as mattress, and two more for covers, as nights are often cold in this part of Africa. "I don't mind if I am a little crowded," she added anxiously. "Please take her in, and let her sleep with me."

"Will you give her one of your dresses, Ninga?" asked the teacher. Now Ninga's sole earthly possessions consisted of three little cotton dresses. One, a red calico, sent by a kind friend in America, was Ninga's special delight and carefully kept for best.

"Yes, I'll give her a dress, and half of my food every day."

Each child at the mission received a daily allowance of a quart of dried peas or beans, which they were taught to prepare and cook for themselves, or else a very small basket of potatoes. Small as this allowance may seem, it was more than they had lived on in their own wretched homes, and they grew and thrived upon it.

"Very well, Ninga," said Miss Emily. "I will go to the village, and see what I can do."

Again she paid the ransom-price out of her own purse, and after about an hour's absence returned with the little stranger.

Ninga, who had been watching the gate, gave a shout of joy.

"May I give her a bath, teacher?" she asked, and receiving permission, obtained a cake of soap, and started with her charge for the river.

The poor child sadly needed a bath, for she had never had one before. When at length the two little girls returned, Miss Emily's eyes filled with tears, as she saw the stranger was wearing the little red dress, Ninga's most precious treasure. Which of us would have been so generous?—Nettie Carlisle in Kind Words.

WINNING THE PRIZE

"I wonder who will win this large red apple?" called Uncle Jack as he rolled it to the farther side of the lawn.

Martha and Dorothy sprang to their feet and raced across the yard after it. Both were barefoot and their feet fairly flew over the short velvety grass.

Dorothy wanted, oh, so much to win! With all her strength she hurried along; but no matter how fast she ran, Martha ran just a little faster and kept a step or two in front.

"I must win! I must win!" Dorothy whispered to herself as she tried to pass Martha. They flashed by the cherry-tree, the grape-arbor, and on toward the fence where the apple lay, a spot of red on the green lawn.

Martha was still a step in the front as they neared the prize, and Dorothy realized with sinking heart that she would lose the race. But just at that moment something happened. With a cry of pain Martha sank to the ground.

"Oh!" sang Dorothy joyfully, "I win! I win!" She leaped forward, snatched up the large apple and held it up for Uncle Jack to see. Then she caught sight of Martha's tear-stained face.

"What's the matter?" she asked coming closer.

"I stepped on a thorn," Martha explained, pointing to a bruised spot on her foot, "and it hurt so bad I had to stop running." She wiped away a tear. "Aren't you glad you won the prize?"

Dorothy had been glad, very much so, just the moment before, but now she felt uncomfortable about keeping it. If Martha had not stepped on the thorn she would have won; one step more and the apple would have belonged to her.

"I think the prize really belongs to you," Dorothy said at length, as she bent over the injured foot. But Martha only smiled sweetly at her. Then the apple rolled into Martha's lap and her hand closed it.

"Keep the apple, Martha," said the winner. "Maybe it will help you forget the hurt place on your foot."

"Thank you, cousin," the little girl cried happily. "Let's go to Uncle Jack and ask him to cut the apple into halves. Then we can both have some, and both be prize-winners."—Publisher Unkonwn.

WHEN IS THE TIME TO TRUST?

When is the time to trust?
Is it when all is calm,
When waves the victor's palm,
And life is one glad psalm
Of joy and praise?
Nay, but the time to trust
Is when the waves beat high,
When storm clouds fill the sky,
And prayer is one long cry,
O help and save!
When is the time to trust?
Is it when friends are true?
Is it when comforts woo?
And in all we say and do
We meet but praise?
Nay! but the time to trust
Is when we stand alone,
And summer birds have flown,
And every prop is gone,
All else but God.

AUG. 17: WHEN JESUS TRAVELED AND WHAT HE SAW AND DID

Scripture Text—Luke 8:22-48

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—A Question Asked. Matt. 11:1-11.

Tuesday—Viewing Great Cities. Matt. 11:22-24.

Wednesday—An Invitation. Matt. 11:25-30.

Thursday—Meeting An Objection. Matt. 12:1-8.

Friday—In a Synagogue. Matt. 12:9-13.

Saturday—Family Opposition. Matt. 12:46-50.

A "Travelogue" Meeting

Tell every one before hand and let them know that this meeting is one in which every one will be given the opportunity to follow Jesus through Palestine. Be sure to have a good starting point and end up at Jerusalem. This should make a lasting impression upon every one. Ask your pastor to help outline this journey, then be careful in selecting the ones to take active parts.

Draw a large map of Palestine and place on it large crosses where the towns are that are to be visited. To advertise this meeting take the map and place over it in large letters "Taking A Trip With Jesus." Give date, time, and welcome to all.

Suitable songs: "If Jesus Goes With Me," "Where He Leads Me I Will Follow," "Follow Jesus," "The Old Rugged Cross," "Jesus With Me All the Time," and "Master the Tempest Is Raging."

Leader's Talk

We all like to travel, especially during the vacation season when it seems that every one else is on his way somewhere. We enjoy thinking about our trip before we start. The joy of the trip itself. Then best of the new sights the new faces and the renewing of friendships of former years. Almost always our journeys are made even more interesting and enjoyable by the presence of an intimate friend who travels with us. A joy shared with others is doubled.

This evening we propose to turn back nineteen centuries of time, eliminate distance, and in company with Jesus visit some of the cities and places of interest to find out what our Lord saw when He traveled.

Questions To Be Answered

1. Explain why some people never see opportunities to help others.
2. Tell some of the things which Jesus saw when He travelled.
3. When did Jesus perform His first miracle? What did He do?
4. What do we see about us in the world that proves God's presence?
5. What could Christ see as He traveled that His disciples could not see?
6. Do modern methods of travel help or hinder one's ability to see? Tell why.
7. How can we "travel with Jesus" today?

Poetry

Oh, sweeter than the marriage feast,
'Tis sweeter far to me
To walk together to the kirk
With a goodly company.

—Anon.

WHAT DID YOU DO?

Did you give him a lift? He's a brother of man,
And bearing about all the burden he can.
Did you give him a smile? He was downcast and blue,
And the smile would have helped him to battle it through.
Did you give him your hand? He was stepping downhill,
And the world, so I fancied, was using him ill.
Did you give him a word? Did you show him the road,
Or did you just let him go on with his load?

Did you help him along? He's a sinner like you,
But the grasp of your hand might have carried him through.
Did you bid him good cheer? Just a word and a smile,
Were what he most needed that last weary mile.
Did you know what he bore in that burden of cares
That is every man's load and that sympathy shares?
Did you try to find out what he needed from you,
Or did you just leave him to battle it through?

Do you know what it means to be losing the fight
When a lift just in time might set everything right?
Do you know what it means—just the clasp of a hand,
When a man's borne about all a man ought to stand?
Did you ask what it was, why the quivering lip
And the glistening tears down the pale cheek that slip?
Were you brother of his when the time came to be?
Did you offer to help him, or didn't you see?

Don't you know it's the part of a brother of man
To find what the grief is and help when you can?
Did you stop when he asked you to give him a lift,
Or were you so busy you left him to shift?
Oh, I know what you mean—what you say may be true,
But the test of your manhood is, What did you do?
Did you reach out a hand? Did you find him the road,
Or did you just let him go by with his load?

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

EFFICIENCY CHART

As Amended by the Committee on Education of the Convention

Please notice the changes in questions 1 and 3.

Some auxiliaries find it more convenient to meet quarterly, so the committee decided that circle meetings would count as an answer to question 1.

Some branches do not have a separate budget for branch interests, as North Carolina does, so special emphasis is laid on raising branch contingent—question 3.

The following list of ten questions constitutes the standard of efficiency. Each Auxiliary answering "yes" to all questions shall be called an Honor Auxiliary.

Each Auxiliary answering "yes" to eight of the questions, the second question being one of the eight, shall be called a "Standard Auxiliary."

1. Have you held twelve meetings (Circle or Auxiliary) during the year? ....
2. Have you paid your apportionment?..... ....
3. Have you paid your Branch contingent fund? ....
4. Does your membership include two-thirds of the women of your church? ....
5. Did you send in funds monthly, and answer all official letters promptly? ....
6. Are you having missionary educational work done among the young people or children of your church? ....
7. Did you hold two thank-offering services during the year? ....
8. Do you have secretaries of all departments to correspond with the Branch Secretaries of the Women's Missionary Work?......
9. Do you have Record subscribers equal to one-fourth the number of families represented in your Auxiliary? ....
10. Was your Auxiliary represented at each Branch or District meeting? ....

...................................Aux.

.............................Church

The constitution was amended in a few places, the more important of which are the following:

Article II.—Duties of Officers, page 6, perpetual members. The payment of $30. shall constitute a perpetual member, but shall not count on the Auxiliary budget as heretofore This money is invested in a trust fund and only the interest, four per cent. is credited to the branch or auxiliary.

Article V.—Meetings. The circles shall hold monthly meetings, auxiliaries may hold monthly, or at least, quarterly meetings.

By-Laws, Article II.—Election of Officers. There shall be an annual election of officers in February, the newly elected officers assuming their duties the first of April.

There are minor changes in sections 3, election of officers, and sections 7 and 8, Duties of Officers.

Please consult your old constitution and by-laws, and new ones will be distributed as soon as possible.

Mrs. Thompson wrote me that any auxiliaries failing to send in funds during April of this year could still be eligible as Honor Auxiliaries, since the new charts were not out.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN, Cor. Sec.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

ALL HOLDING OUT FOR TEN A DAY

Just why it is that work has stopped
And store men's trade has sadly flopped
Is puzzle sore to many men
As they compare just now with then.

A reason plain is near at hand,
If you the scene will closely scan:
You'll see ten thousand thousand men
All stiffly holding out for ten.

They gladly wrought for three or five
And made it out to live and thrive;
But stress of war demanded men
And quickly wage rose up to ten.

But war has passed and peace has come,
And men can work for lesser sum.
A war-time wage in time of peace
It's clear enough should wholly cease.

But men of greed who would take more
Cannot accept a rate that's lower:
And these ten thousand thousand men
Are idly holding out for ten.

—A healthy supply of toads about a place is an insurance policy against heavy insect infestation as about 90 per cent. of the toads food consists of insects.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Lincolnton.—Sunday School is moving along fine -good collections, good attendance with Mr. E. E. Eurey as superintendent, C. L Barger, assistant superintendent.

Our C. E. society has good lively wide awake young people that believe in a full salvation that saves and keeps and satisfies the soul.

Our revival has just closed today. Rev. Mr. Sharp of Indiana M. E. church did some wonderfully good preaching. Many saved, backsliders reclaimed Christians sanctified. We thank God for sending Brother Sharpe our way, a man like we needed. We were not able to pay him very much because of the mills not running much. But our prayers will follow him where ever he goes.

Some of the consecrated young men of our church stayed at the church and prayed until two and three o'clock in the morning. And, praise God, he is always willing to give a revival when people earnestly pray for one.

We are very glad God has laid his hand on one of our young men to write Gospel tracts, and spread them among the mill people especially. But wherever man is found.

Our pastor has been away while our meeting was on, assisting J. L. Love in a revival. We closed the meeting with a real good class meeting Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The Lord gave us a good time there. Seventeen was at an altar of prayer. Eight joined the church at the morning service. There is joy in the camp with us.

O. G. CARPENTER.

Fairfield Church, Guilford Circuit.—The attendance at Sunday School fell below the average last Sunday. This was probably due to the fact that the Sunday School was in the afternoon, and some of the members had prearranged appointments to fill; then, too, it was rather warm. Fans were seen waving about over the church during Sunday School and meeting for worship. The children took part in the closing exercise of the Sunday School.

Rev. E. O. Peeler filled his afternoon appointment with a message on the topic of "FindingY our Place in Life." He urged the young folk to choose that career in which they could do the most good, and which took the best they had. He also suggested they select a work by which they could best serve humanity and render the most service to mankind. He told his audience that money had not bought and never would buy the big things in life—they were unpurchaseable. Their attention was called to the fact that one must select his own career ,and not do what others advised. He urged the young people to attend their denominational school—the High Point College—in preparation for their work. He called attention to the fact that this was an unusual topic to preach from; however, this is no sign of its unessentiality, he said.

Mrs. E. O. Peeler met with the women of the community Sunday for the purpose of organizing a Women's Community Service Circle. Officers for the circle were elected at that time. We are expecting them to do a great work in the field which is open in the rural district.

Revival meetings have been and are still in progress at three of the neighboring churches, so prayer meeting was still discontinued in order that the people might attend these meetings.

Shiloh.—On the first Sunday of July, Brother Troxler delivered a stirring message on "Fireproof Religion." His sermon was based on the experience of the three Hebrews in the fiery furnace.

Today we heard another message that strengthens our faith and gives us greater courage on "Said I not unto thee, that, if thou wouldst believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God?" Jno. 11-40.

Lazarus, the friend of Jesus, and brother of Mary and Martha had died. Jesus came and mingled his tears of sympathy with theirs. But he had a living message for them, that if they would only believe they should see the glory of God. Jesus did not do for them what they could do for themselves. "Roll ye away the stone" was his command, and when they obeyed, He did what they could not do, that is to raise him from the dead. God can't do the work that he wants to do till man does his part. We must roll away the stones that hinder. Some stones that we must roll away are, unbelief, prejudice, jealousy, criticism, and excuses. There may be more, but whatever they are may we roll them away that God may have His way and do the works that He wants to do in Shiloh.

Our attendance at Sunday School increased some today, it being about 275. There are still many who need to be in God's house on Sunday morning who are not there. Won't you ask them to come? Get in your car and go give them a special invitation. There is lots of gas burned in the service of the devil. Can't we burn some for Christ? Try it, you will get a blessing.

Pray for our coming revival.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Everything has been moving along very nicely. Sunday School shows a gradual increase in attendance. We gave our Children's Day program on the Third Sunday night in June. The program consisted of songs, recitations, pantomimes and a pageant. Each part was well rendered and the large audience declared the program quite a success. The offering which was very good was applied on the G. C. B. We are very much indebted to the Gray's Chapel choir for their splendid music rendered. It added greatly to the occasion and was enjoyed by everyone present.

Rev. A. O. Lindley has been filling his appointments and giving us some splendid sermons.

Our revival meetings will begin the second Sunday in August. Rev. L. W. Gerringer will be the pulpit help and we are all looking forward to his being with us with great pleasure, and we hope with proper co-operation on the part of the church and pastor that we may have a great meeting. There will be two services on Sunday. One at 11:00 o'clock and one at 2:00 o'clock p. m. During the week services will be in the afternoon and night. We would like to take this opportunity to extend an invitation to any distant members, former members or friends of this church to be with us during this meeting.

W. H. Andrew who underwent a successful operation at St. Leo's hospital a few weeks ago is back at his home again. His friends are glad to see him back and to know that he is getting along so nicely.

Friends of Mr. John G. Hanner regret that his condition continues serious.

Your reporter is at home again, after attending summer school at N. C. C. W.

Lineberry, Davidson Charge.—Our Children's Day service was rendered the third Sunday at 8 o'clock. The program was very interesting, and the church is proud it has members which it can trust in training the children. All members appreciate the efforts and hard work the ladies did in preparing the splendid program.

The crowd was large and the church packed. We were glad to have some people from Denton and we invite you again and again, and all others. We were delighted that Rev. Mrs. Reed was able to be out. We are thankful she is improving but sorry Mr. Reed's hand is giving him trouble. We do not have a hand to give him, but we surely can lend him a helping hand.

The community is sorry Mr. B. K. Taylor is sick; he has the prayers of the people; also Alma Smith, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Millard Smith. All of us are interested in Camie Smith, one of our children who is in the N. C. Sanitorium; hope she gets to come home in the fall as she is planning.

Rev. Henry Belle will be the help at Pine Grove in the special meeting.

FLADA SMITH.

Baltimore, West Forsyth Circuit.—Owing to the beginning of the revival meeting at Stony Knoll and the Farbush township Sunday School convention, we failed to have our regular Sunday School and preaching service at Baltimore church the first Sunday in this month. The Christian Endeavor Society met that afternoon at 6 o'clock.

We are very glad to see the children and young people taking so much interest in the Christian Endeavor work, and I am sure that they will be benefited by doing so.

The ladies of the church met last Sunday afternoon and held their monthly auxiliary meeting. A number of members were present. The collection amounted to $1.75.

We were very sorry to lose from our church one of our splendid church members, Mr. W. L. Doub. Mr. Doub who was 75 years old had been a member of Baltimore church since early in life.

We are continuing to have a splendid attendance at Sunday School each Sunday for which we are very thankful. We have been having from 85 to 100 most all the time. The collection last Sunday amounted to $1.00.

The prayer meeting committee of the Christian Endeavor society will hold choir practice and prayer meeting next Wednesday night. The prayer meeting is special to pray for the revival meeting which is scheduled for next week. We are eagerly looking forward to the revival and hope that it may be a blessing to Baltimore church and the community. There will be an all day service on Sunday and everybody is asked to bring well filled baskets and stay all day.

The people of the community are asked to meet at the church next Thursday morning to do some work on the cemetery and church yard.

Owing to the revival service Sunday night the Young People's society will hold its services earlier than the usual hour which will be about 6:30 o'clock. Everybody invited to come early and enjoy the young people's program.

Fair Grove, Haw River Circuit.—Our revival began July 13th, with our pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, preaching at the morning hour.

Rev. J. R. Hutton came in the afternoon and preached till close of meeting Friday night. Our pastor led the singing. Congregations were not as large as should have been, but very attentive. I think all who listened to Brother Hutton's messages should be inspired to live on a higher plane. Thank you, Brother Hutton, for the messages delivered; would be glad to have you come again when convenient.

Lebanon, Spring Church Charge.—The third quarterly conference met with us last Friday evening at 8 o'clock. All of the churches were represented and the usual interest manifested.

Mr. J. W. Crew was elected as delegate to go to conference. We held Children's Day the second Sunday in July. The children all did their part well; the offering was $12.60.

Our revival will begin the second Sunday in August. I am expecting a great meeting. Brother Auman will be with us.

Mrs. Ida Rowell does not get any better; she has been sick nearly all this year. Mrs. Rosa Worrick has been confined to bed nearly a year, she is no better.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—"Picnics"—it's eating time with us, however, it's almost too hot to enjoy it. Circle No. 4 of the auxiliary (the Young People's Circle) enjoyed an outing and picnic Monday night at Crystal lake. On Thursday night the Mission Band, Mrs. H. F. Surratt, leader, had a jolly good time picnicing at Crystal Lake. Thursday afternoon and night of this week is the annual Sunday School picnic, to be held at Holton's Lake. A good time is anticipated by all.

On Tuesday night a joint meeting of the auxiliaries was held. Circle No. 3, Mrs. N. F. Carroll, leader, conducted the devotionals for the evening. After the devotionals the regular business session was carried on by the president, Mrs. H. G. Paschal.

Circle No. 4 is enjoying the work it is doing for Edna Doby, a little girl at the Children's Home.. The circle corresponds with her and sends her boxes quite often. This is done over the regular budget.

Three other bright and cheerful girls returned with a lot of learning from summer conference whose names did not appear last times. They were Misses Ruth Hill, Ruth Braswell and Helen Vass. From their reports they seem to know quite a lot more upon returning than upon leaving

Last Sunday all who stayed for church worship enjoyed a very effective sermon by our pastor. He discussed some of the "Follies of Life." One was "laziness." It is hot weather in Winston-Salem and helps even the most industrious to want to become lazy, however, all who heard Mr. Surratt's sermon will not give up to a little heat and lie down on the job.

The choir rendered a very beautiful anthem Sunday morning. All who sit and listen to others sing should feel indebted to them for the effort put forth in making the worship more impressive. Choir rehearsal and singing is really work and our choir should be commended on their wonderful work.

All who are vacationing we hope are having a jolly good time.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Our work during these hot summer months has been moving on most encouragingly and our people seem very loyal both in Sabbath school and other church services.

On the third Sunday evening at 8 o'clock Children's Day program, consisting of a few recitations and exercises by the children and a pageant by the school was successfully delivered to an attentive audience.

The revival meeting in progress during the third week in July came to a successful close Friday night the 25th, there being between forty and fifty professions during the week. Twenty-eight new members were added to our list. Rev. Wm. Ashburn assisted our pastor in these services and we are grateful to him for the good messages which he so impressively delivered. Also we have great respect for the good singing by the choir which our pastor so carefully and prayerfully conducted. The prayerful spirit which was manifested by all who took part in these services as well as others in attendance seemed to prevail during the entire meeting, and we feel has greatly revived and strengthened our church spiritually.

We are sorry to report that Brother R. S. Barber has been absent from services for a while on account of feeble health and hope he will soon be able to be out and worship with us again. We are glad to know that Odria, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Edwards who has been sick for some time, seems to be much improved and we hope she will soon be restored to health.

On their return home from a trip to Elkin Friday of last week Mr. Dock culler and family of our community were in a car wreck. All occupants of the car were injured and received treatment, two of the less injured being able to come away while the others remain at the hospital. We hope they will soon be able to come home and that none of their injuries prove serious.

Best wishes to the Herald.

Liberty.—Our Children's Day service was held the fourth Sunday night in July. The children rendered their parts well. The music and singing was unusually good. The pageant, "Onward and Upward" was a great success. The costumes were impressive and the program was exceptionally well rendered. The offering was $9.45.

Circle No. 1 met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Cecil Frazier as hostess at her home. Mrs. J. W. Curtis, chairman, presided over the business period. Mrs. V. H. Dameron had charge of the program which was a discussion of the "Old People's Home." The hostess served a delightful course of refreshments at the close of the meeting. The circle reported a very successful cake sale.

Circle No. 2 met with Mrs. Royal Reitzel as hostess at her home on Fayetteville street. Mrs. Joe Swann had charge of the study period; an interesting discussion of the "Old People's Home." was followed with a delightful course of refreshments assisted by Mrs. A. J. Brower. Guests of the circle were Mrs. V. H. Dameron, Mrs. A. J. Brower and Mrs. Lawrence Brown.

Our revival will begin on the fourth Sunday in August. Our pastor will do the preaching. Pray that we may have a real "Old Revival."

Prayer meeting every Thursday night, and these meetings are a real treat to all who attend.

C. E. every Sunday night at 7 o'clock.

The teachers in the Sunday school gave a picnic to the small children in the Sunday school at Ritter's Lake on Monday afternoon, August 4. Everyone seemed to have a nice time; and the delicious supper was enjoyed by all.

Why Not.—Our special meeting at New Hope began the third Sunday in July with a fine Children's Day program.

In the meeting the writer was assisted by Brother J. L. Moore, a local preacher. The attendance was off somewhat, due to the fact that the road force was rebuilding the road leading to the church.

On Saturday night before the fourth Sunday in July Children's Day exercises were held at Seagrove. A fine service was held here also.

On the fourth Sunday our meeting began at Fairgrove. Rev. J. Clyde Auman was pulpit help. This is Brother Auman's home church, and everybody was delighted to have him with us. His messages were well received and the church was revived. Two young people united with the church—Layton and Louise Lawrence.

On last Saturday the annual circuit rally was held at Seagrove. Every church was represented and had a part on the program. A good progrram, a fine dinner and many people all combined to make a great day.

Our special meeting will begin at Macedonia the second Sunday in August.

On the third Sunday the special meeting will begin at Flag Springs, Rev. M. P. Chambliss is the engaged helper.

Taken as a whole we think the charge is about normal. Nothing sensational has happened.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Asheboro.—During the pastor's vacation our congregation had the privilege of hearing two good sermons, one by Dr. P. S. Kennett of High Point College and the other by Brother Robert Lloyd of our own church. Our people speak highly of both of these preachers and of their sermons.

Yesterday we had 243 in Sunday school which was right good when we consider the many hindrances of vacation days. We were glad to have present at the morning service Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Cox who are pillars in the State Street church at Lexington.

In the afternoon yesterday a number of our people including the writer went out to John Wesley's Stand, a holiness church a few miles from Asheboro, to hear Dr. W. S. Taylor preach. As usual he delivered a fine sermon.

Mr. R. R. Ross, Miss Esther Ross and Lucy Clyde and Annie Gilbert Ross went to Tabernacle church yesterday for the annual revival. We miss our regular church folks from the services when they are absent, however, we are not selfish enough to try to keep them at home all the time.

Miss Kate Bulla, the Superintendent of our Junior Department, and of the Intermediate C. E. society, is to go to Lexington the first of September to teach in the public schools there. She has taught here in Asheboro for a number of years and we shall miss her greatly.

We expect to have morning service each Sunday but there will not be any more evening services until the first Sunday in September. It is quite a relief these hot days for the pastor not to have to preach Sunday evenings. Perhaps it is a relief also for the people to have this time off.

During the time we are not having evening services the three C. E. societies are going right on with their meetings. A goodly number were present for the meetings last evening.

Antioch, Mecklenburg Charge.—The reports from our church are few in number, but we are moving along. We have Sabbath school every Sunday with very good interest. We held our Children's Day program in June, which was largely attended. Our pastor has filled all his appointments with some fine sermons. He seems to get better each time.

Our revival meeting begins next Sunday, Rev. Mr. Cranford being our help. Everyone is welcome. Pray for us that we may have an old time revival.

MRS. MATTHEWS.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—We are having good attendance at Sunday School in spite of the unusually hot weather and in the midst of revival meetings.

The third quarterly conference convenes here July 19 with all the churches represented except Union Grove. We are sorry that they have failed to co-operate with us. We would be glad to have them with us. We also had in our midst at this time two splendid young ministers, Mr. Killiam Howard, Jr., of Bethel church and Mr. Madison, of Union Grove. These young men are preparing themselves for the ministry.

Our revival meeting will be held here the fourth Sunday in August; we extend a cordial welcome to any of our former pastors to come and be with us. Mr. Henderson is going to be our pulpit help. We want to ask all our former pastors and readers of the Herald to join us in prayer for the greatest revival in history.

Due to revival beginning at Union Grove yesterday our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, wasn't able to fill his regular appointment.

◆

Kannapolis.—Since our last report we have held a ten-days' revival meeting with Rev. Fred R. Love of Lincolnton, as pulpit help. Brother Love did some splendid preaching. We had a good revival. Twenty-seven conversions and reclamations, six additions to the church.

On Sunday, August 3rd, we had a baptizing at Rogers lake. Mr. Ed S. Tilley and son, Raymond, were baptized by immersion, Brother Milloway of Concord, had charge of the service. We are very grateful to our good Concord folks, any time we call on them for any help they never refuse and as our pastor was not well at this time it was necessary that we call on them.

We are planning our Sunday school picnic on Saturday, August 9th at Corriers Springs, which we hope will be enjoyed by all who attend.

Our Sunday school attendance was 107 today and attendance is good at all church services.

Fairview.—We are still moving along. Our Sunday school and preaching services are very well attended, for this scorching weather. We have preaching services the second Sundays, 11 a. m., and 8 p. m. each month.

The Ladies' Aid Society met on July 14 with Mrs. J. T. Barker. Mrs. O. B. Williams had charge of the devotional service. It was decided to have an ice cream supper the 26th of July. We had one new member, two visitors and twelve members present. The aid planned a picnic for August the 9th, accepting an invitation to go to the home of our pastor, Mr. O. B. Williams. The society will meet August 11 with Mrs. W. J. Apple. Immediately following the adjournment our hostess' daughter, Mrs. Hugh Winn, assisted by Mrs. Lowell Smith, served dainty frosted cup cakes and home-made ice cream. The meeting was enjoyed by all.

Our annual home-coming day will be next Sunday, August 10. We wish everyone that has ever attended church here and especially all old members and former pastors would come and be with us on this day.

Our revival meeting will begin the second Sunday in September. Pray for us that we may have a real revival.

First Church, High Point. — The final Wednesday evening Fellowship Supper of the season was held last Wednesday evening at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Robbins, south of the city, and it proved to be a delightful occasion. The Men's Brotherhood was host to the members of the congregation, about 200 being in attendance. A delicious menu of barbecue meat, cold slaw, iced tea, and buttermilk was served, after which the usual weekly prayer service was held with the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, leading. Following this service, the third quarterly conference convened, and transacted its routine business, after which goodbyes and good wishes for a happy vacation were expressed to Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer and children, who left next morning for Wellsville, Ohio, where they will spend the month of August with relatives and friends.

An impressive communion service was celebrated on Sunday morning with Rev. E. Lester Ballard presiding, assisted by Dr. Paul S. Kennett. A pleasing feature of this service was a beautiful solo by Arthur Fiddle with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Minnie Pickett Harrell.

On last Wednesday Mrs. George T. Penny was hostess at a delightful luncheon in honor of her mother, Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., who celebrated her birthday on that day. She had as her guests on this happy occasion at her magnificent home near Jamestown twelve of her mother's close friends. The house was unusually lovely with its numerous bowls and vases of vari-colored flowers from her own garden. At the beautifully appointed table the guests found their places by unique cards, containing clever little couplets in rhyme, which when read aloud provoked much merriment. A dainty nosegay of bright, old fashioned flowers was placed beside each plate. A lovely birthday cake with icing in pastel shades and numerous candles adorned the centre of the table. The candles were afterward blown out by the honoree, and a tea wagon laden with pretty and useful gifts was rolled to her side. An elegant luncheon in three courses and consisting of fruit cocktail, fried chicken, baked ham, stuffed celery, creamed potatoes, sweet pickles, iced tea, a salad of tomatoes, cucumbers and asparagus with mayonnaise, ice cream molded in the form of roses, cake, mints, and salted nuts was served by Misses Elizabeth and Ruth Welch and Blanche Burgess. Those enjoying Mrs. Penny's charming hospitality were the following: Mesdames G. R. Brown, of Reidsville; J. M. Millikan and S. K. Spahr of Greensboro; H. A. Moffitt, H. U. Oakes, W. P. Pickett, S. A. Holleman, W. C. Beavans, E. T. Harmon, E. J. Hearst, R. T. Pickens, and J. C. Welch, Sr., of High Point. Mrs. Penny is always a gracious hostess, and was unusually happy on this occasion while complimenting her mother and giving great pleasure to her guests.

The executive board of the Woamn's Auxiliary held its monthly meeting in the assembly room of the church on Monday afternoon.

We are pained to announce the illness of Dr. R. M. Andrews, who went to High Point hospital on Sunday to take treatment. He expects to undergo an operation in a few weeks. His large number of friends unite in best wishes for a safe and early recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Neese and Margaret spent the past week-end with Mrs. Neese's sister, Mrs. W. C. Kirkman at Pleasant Garden. Many friends were pleased to know that Mr. Neese who has been very ill, stood the trip well, and enjoyed the outing.

Capt. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin and children, Bobby and Jean Blair, left Monday morning for a motor trip to Washington City and other points of interest.

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard went to Graham Sunday, where he filled the pulpit of Rev. J. F. Minnis that evening, and remained over until Tuesday afternoon. Rev. and Mrs. Minnis and children will leave Graham September 1st to visit relatives of Mrs. Minnis in Maryland before sailing for India.

Miss Rosalie Andrews, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Andrews, will be a member of the faculty of High Point city schools next year. The schools will open September 8th. Among the 204 teachers in the system, High Point College is well represented by nine graduates, five having been members of class of 1930, namely: Misses Annabel Thompson, Rosalie Andrews, Kalopia Antonakos, Betty Bloom, and Lorraine Ellison. James Ellington, class of 1928, and his bride nee Miss Margaret Perry of Thomasville, are in New York City, where Mr. Ellington is taking work in the Summet School of Columbia University. He will teach in the junior high school the coming year.

Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon have given 25 children of the Home family a delightful outing in Washington, leaving here by bus on Monday, July 28th, and returning last Saturday. The children who enjoyed this trip, made high grades in the Jamestown high school last year, and were rewarded in this happy manner. For young people nothing is more educational and profitable as well as enjoyable than a trip to Washington with all its public buildings, historic places, and many beautiful sites in and around the city, such as Arlington, the home of the Lee family, Mt. Vernon, Washington's charming old estate on the Potomac, and many others.

Mr. Vernon W. Idol was elected delegate to Annual Conference last Sunday morning, and will represent First church in November.

We are grieved to note the illness of Mrs. Ed Johnson, and many friends join in good wishes for her speedy recovery.

Miss Alice Faulkner of Henderson, who has been the guest of Mrs. Robert Garland, left Sunday for Danville, Va., to visit friends.

Oak Grove, Cleveland Charge.—Our revival meeting which closed the 17th of July was very successful.

Rev. Charles Packard, a young minister of the Palm Tree church, filled the pastor's appointment Sunday, July 27th. He made a very interesting talk, a large congregation was out to hear him.

We are having a good attendance at Sunday school. All seemed to be interested in their work. The intermediate class of girls are looking forward to an ice cream supper which their teacher, Mr. P. S. Gettys, is going to give them some time soon.

Several from Oak Grove have been attending the revival services at Kistlers this week.

Rev. Charles Grant preached at Palm Tree last Sunday night, August 3rd.

Yarborough Charge, Harmony.—We were ery sorry that our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, could not be with us for the usual services the fourth Sunday in July. The Sunday morning worship was conducted by Rev. Edgar Davis. He rendered an interesting sermon which touched the hearts of many that were present.

The third quarterly conference was held at Harmony the fourth Sunday afternoon in July.

The revival meeting closed at our church Saturday evening. We were very fortunate to have with us Rev. G. H. Hendry. The services were well attended and his sermons were enjoyed by all. The members of our church and community wish to have him preach for us again in the future. We had a splendid chorus during the revival and we wish to thank all who took part in it. During the meeting we had five young people to join the church and we welcome them into the church and its work.

We are sorry to report that our pastor has been sick; he is improving now and we hope that he will continue to do so.

Our Sunday school is gradually increasing. We had a good attendance Sunday.

Our C. E. society was well attended Sunday evening. It seems as if more of the young people are taking more interest in the society. The society enjoyed a social given at the home of Mrs. Henry Balentine last Friday evening.

The Woman's Missionary society met at the home of Mrs. Kemelia Taylor on the third Friday afternoon in July.

Lexington, State Street Church.—For the past week our pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, has been at Cross Anchor, S. C., assisting Brother Broome in revival services. Our pulpit was filled Sunday morning by Mr. Brooks of Erlanger. Mr. Brooks brought us a timely and helpful message on "Love."

The ladies of the missionary society are preparing for another cake sale Saturday. The returns from the cake sales have helped out quite a bit. All who are willing to bake cakes this hot weather deserve at least, a pat on the back.

On Thursday, July 24, a surprise birthday party was given Mrs. J. A. Walser. Mr. Walser and the children, Miss Donease and Master Arnold, conspired with friends of the family to have everything set for the most complete surprise. The occasion was one of the most enjoyable. The large birthday cake was magnificent in appearance and was also most delicious. Friends of Mrs. Walser sent in love by flowers and the spacious living room and dining room were beautifully decorated. There were more than fifty guests. Four expert musicians were present and all enjoyed a musical treat. Mrs. Walser received many pretty and useful gifts. All her many friends wish for her many more happy birthdays.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Kanouse of Winston-Salem, are spending a while here visiting relatives and friends. Mrs. Wilber Sink is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Kanouse, and we were very glad to have her bring them and their grandson, Z. J., to the services Sunday morning.

Mrs. Mosley and her lovely baby, Sarah Elizazeth, of Madison, N. C., are visiting in the home of Mrs. Mosley's brother here, Mr. Neal. Mrs. Neal brought her guests to the services too. We were glad indeed to have them. Our folks are all good about bringing their company to church, which is a much better way than staying away because of having company.

Baltimore, West Forsyth Circuit.—Our revival meeting came to a close Friday night. We enjoyed some wonderful sermons by the helper, Rev. D. I. Garner. While the visible results of the meeting were not what we would like to have seen, we fel sure that seed were sown during the week in preaching and in the song service that will bring forth fruit many days hence.

The pastor and Mr. Garner were assisted in the meeting by Rev. Wayne Curtiss who directed the singing. Mr. Curtiss is a fine singer and we enjoyed having him with us to direct the singing. He arranged a number of special selections of duets, quartettes, etc., and at a lare number of the services we enjoyed a solo selection by him. The singing was very inspiring and was an important part of the meeting. On last Wednesday night we enjoyed some fine singing by Mr. Luther Poindexter and his quartette from Union Hill church.

Six persons joined the church at the close of the services Friday niht, five of them by removing their membership from another church and one by profession of faith. They were all members of our Sunday school and we heartily welcome them into the church as members of this church.

We did not have our regular preaching service on last Sunday. The pastor had been working in revival meetings for four weeks and we felt that he deserved a little rest, so it was decided to give him a vacation last Sunday.

The Ladies' Auxiliary will hold its regular monthly meeting on the third Sunday afternoon in this month. All the members are urged to be present.

The Yadkin County Sunday School Convention will convene at Baltimore church next Sunday, August 10th. Miss Flora Davis, of Raleigh, general superintendent of the North Carolina Sunday School association, will be the principal speaker. She will be assisted by talks from a number of ministers and Sunday school workers of Yadkin county. The theme of the convention is "Building the Kingdom of God On Earth," and the text is "Seek Ye First the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness." Matt. 6:33. Everyone is invited to attend.

We were glad to have several visitors with us in our Sunday school last Sunday. Total number present was 87. Total collection $2.00.

Quite a large crowd of the young people attended the Christian Endeavor Society meeting last Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. We are always glad to see them present.

THE USES OF LIFE

The mystery of life may be variously approached. Science would fain discover its origin and catalogue its laws. Philosophy would solve the riddle of its tragedy. But religion professes to bring the light of another world to bear upon the problem. What interests here is not the origin of life or the tragedy of it, but its use and intention. What is life's objective? is her inquiry.

The religion of the Bible makes the daring claim of being the result of Divine revelation. It stamps as idolatry the worship of the work of our own hands, the carved wood or stone images supposed to represent the Divine. No less is it idolatry to set up the guesses or the reasonings of the natural mind—metaphysical speculations, ever changing and contradicting each other, as religious standards. We bow before the imperative note of the commandments because we feel that behind them is the authority of the Divine Commander. Now only by such Divine light could man have discovered that life is not an orange to be squeezed for his own benefit, nor an end in itself; that it is a mission charged with tremendous significance. It is the duty of everyone to find out what the great mission of his own life is.

There is not a single human being without a mission. Whatever his standing in the social scale; whatever his racial background, or his daily environment, or his mental outfit; whatever the particular lines of activity his capacities and opportunities enable him to be busy in; above them all is the great mission of his life.

That mission is that he, as an individuum, might become a personality, having moral worth surviving the brief span of time allotted to him on this earth-plane.

This great objective of human life was clearly stated at the very beginning: "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness."

The old mystics were in the habit of distinguishing between "image" and "likeness." The image is the spiritual nature with which each human being is endowed. The Divine likeness is that moral conformity to the Divine character which the right use and expression of that spiritual nature will produce. Because we have the Divine image we hunger for the Divine likeness. We want to become God-like men and women. As the Psalmist exclaimed long ago: "As for me, I shall behold Thy Face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied when I awake in Thy likeness."

Now because life is a mission it must perforce be also a discipline. How other can the mission be carried out? In such a world as this, and with such tendencies as ours in our lower nature, discipline is an imperative necessity. Pathetic indeed is the lament of one of Israel's prophets: "Moab hath been at ease from his youth, and he hath settled on his lees, and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither hath he gone into captivity; therefore his taste remained in him, and his scent is not changed." (Jer. xlvii:II.) Even unfallen Adam in the garden of innocence needed the daily task of dressing and keeping the garden, and "in the midst of the garden," in the most conspicuous place, was the daily temptation to gratify his fleshly appetites which he had to overcome and deny. He failed in this and lost the garden, as we all have after him, for innocence once lost is like the bloom on the peach, when wiped off, no artifice can restore it.

But by the quiet performance of our daily tasks, and the daily overcoming of our temptations, heavenly qualities are formed in us, as Emanuel Swedenborg pointed out long ago—we become personalities, we attain unto God-likeness. Our finite individualities cry out for personal relations with the infinite Personality of the Living God that by that means we might assimilate His mind and character and qualify for eternal fellowship with Him when life's tasks have been performed.

And this is what our Divine Lord has brought us and still brings. His supreme Personality is the revelation of the Father of our spirits. He says: "This is life eternal that they might know Thee and Jesus Christ whom Thou has sent." His whole life, too, was a mission and a discipline to Him. "Though He were a Son, yet learned He obedience by the things which He suffered." His "meat" was the doing of the Father's will; His "business" to glorify Him on the earth, until at last, on the cross He cried out: "It is finished." He thus, through the acceptance of the discipline of suffering, accomplished His mission on the earth.

And we, His poor disciples, looking unto Him, find in Him not only an Example but an Inspiration, and a reservoir of grace and power, enabling us to run with patience the race set before us, in which faith transforms stumbling blocks into stepping stones and crosses into wings, so that life becomes worth while, however lowly or obscure, as a mission charged with a significance reaching on into the boundless eternity that lies before us.—M. I. Reich in Pennsbury Leaflet.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, God, in his infinite wisdom has called to Himself His devoted servant and hand-maiden, on July 9, 1930,

Therefore, Be it resolved by Bethesda M. P. Missionary Auxiliary that in the passing of Mrs. Mary J. Hunter, we have sustained an irreparable loss.

We shall miss her loyal and faithful service and devotion in all our church and missionary work.

To her family we extend our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to our Heavenly Father, to whose keeping she constantly committed herself.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolution be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald, a copy to the family and a copy placed upon the minutes of our missionary auxiliary.

MRS. F. M. TAYLOR,
MRS. J. R. TAYLOR.
MRS. N. M. HARRISON,

In Memorial of Mrs. S. W. Reavis

Blanche Mabry Reavis quietly passed away at the Maria Parham Hospital, Henderson, on July 20th, just as the holy Sabbath day was drawing to a close. Death followed an illness of eight weeks, five of which were spent in the hospital, where she was rushed when her illness assumed an alarming nature. Every thing possible was done for her recovery; one complication followed another, proving too much for her strength.

A truly good and useful woman has been taken from among us, unto the rest that remaineth for the people of God.

Mrs. Reavis was the eldest daughter of Stephen and the late Lena Harris Mabry. She was 44 years of age. Twenty-three years ago she was happily married to Samuel W. Reavis. Besides her husband, she is survived by three children, Katherine 16, Margaret 12, and Stephen Wilson 10; also a father, two sisters and two brothers.

At the age of 14 Blanche became a member of Cokesbury M. E. church, remembering her Creator in the days of her youth. Six years ago she joined Flat Rock M. P. church which was nearer her home and to be with her husband and children. A more faithful worker the church has never known. For years teacher in the S. S., president of the Ladies' Aid Society, she led in all activities for the upbuilding of the church. Unless in case of illness or death, her seat was never vacant, her sweet smile of welcome and cordial manner a joy to everyone. Few women were ever more beloved by a community at large; her passing has caused universal regret. To replace her is an impossibility.

A truly faithful wife, gentle, kind and loving mother, loyal friend has gone from among us; we sorrow that she is no more, yet rejoice as we realize she is peacefully resting from her labors, and her works shall follow her. In her home she was at her best, where with untiring hands she willingly ministered to those about her. To her friends Blanche was an inspiration, blessed by nature with a cheerful disposition, attractive manners, 'twas a pleasure to be a guest in her home, where she ever loved to entertain her friends and relatives. Where charity called she answered. To the sick and suffering she was ready to do all in her power to relieve. Though cut down, as it were, in the prime of life, she has left a wonderful example of Christian womanhood. We deeply sympathize with her loved ones in their sad bereavement, yet their loss is her eternal gain, she is living now where the trees are ever green. May her presence on the "other side" serve as a mighty power to influence the lives of those dear to her to follow in her train.

We pray the healing power of God's Almighty grace to so guide and direct their lives that they too may join her when they come to the end of the last long mile.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

BE AN OPTIMIST

Be an optimistic optimist
No matter how you feel;
If doubt or gloom assails you,
Work on with greater zeal.

Think always of the sunshine
Behind the lowering sky;
You can rise above depression
If you let ill-thought go by.

It is better to be pleasant
Than to wear a frowning face;
All good things work together
To promote a happy race.

What you think within your heart
Will shape your life each day;
The antidote for worry
Is to smile dull care away.

The pessimistic pessimist
Is complaining all the while;
Unhappily he does not know
The face-value of a smile.

Be an optimistic optimist,
Try today this simple test:
If doubt or gloom assails you,
Just smile your very best!

O my! How we did rejoice upon receiving the splendid gift from Mrs. M. E. Moser of Siler City. The dear Father Himself only knows just what relief it brought to us at this time when the collections for the spring and summer have fallen so short. Our creditors are insistent in their demands for pay. This will help to hold them off for awhile. Thank you, Mrs. Moser and may God continue to bless you abundantly.

And thank you everyone who helped contribute toward the other amounts herein reported. God bless all of you who are thus sharing with us in caring for God's dependent little ones.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mr. J. T. Maness, Rockingham, N. C., one bushel of peaches.

Mr. M. C. McDonald, West End. N. C., about 50 bushel sof peaches.

Mrs. Geo. R. Wright, Midway, Haw River, one dress and two pair combinations.

Missionary Society, Ranola, Ala., one pair beads, two pair hose, one fan, one pair boys shoees, one tie, three shirts, two hats, three suits for small boys, three pieces underwear, one gown, fourteen dresses, two pair rompers, and nine little dresses.

Mrs. Sallie Cherry Davenport, goods for one dress and Octagon coupons.

Rev. and Mrs. Bates for Calvary, a lot of Octagon coupons.

We thank you for these gifts.

The Coupons and the Refrigerator

You will rejoice with us, we know, when we tell you that we now have 95,000 coupons, and that 106,000 will get for our Home one of the largest sized General Electric Refrigerators. We are almost in sight of the goal. Just 11,000 more coupons. If some woman or child will work faithfully for a few days in each church community in the conference we will soon have this much needed refrigerator. It will save us at least $10.00 per month, and will give our milk and butter and other foods so much better protection. Please help us quickly on this last lap.

Bethea's Pounding

Read about Brother Bethea's country pounding in last week's Herald, under, "History Repeats Itself." You are canning and storing up supplies in your farming communities, for winter use. Please think of us and our big family at the Children's Home, and save some cans of vegetables or fruits, a bushel of grain, a bushel of potatoes, or some chickens, or good clothing no longer needed in your home, or just anything needful for children to eat or to wear. Collect it at some central place, and send to us, or notify us and we will come for it. We know many communities will and we thank you.

We have canned all the peaches we could get, also a few berries. We are now canning tomatoes and will can corn later; but we will still need your gifts. Thank you.

I Wonder

We have not sufficient farm land here to raise our vegetables and feed for use in our barns, and yet raise wheat. Somehow it has been borne in on my mind that there are as many as 30 farmers in the Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina who will plant one acre in wheat this fall and call it the "Children's Home Acre," and then let us have the wheat next summer at threshing time. Will you do that? If so please let us have your name that we may know to depend upon you. We know some farmers will do this, and we thank you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

Seeing God's Face

"No one can see God's face and live."
Was fearful warning they did give:
"When He reveals His mighty power,
All men should fall and quake and cower."

Through half-closed eyelids I did peep;
Myself unseen I tried to keep.
I closely scanned what lay out there—
The smile of God was everywhere!

I caught the twinkle of His eyes
As He observed my keen surprise:
The smile of love now fell on me,
And I was glad as glad could be.

Another time I saw His face
'Twas marked with sorrow's tragic trace:
I had done wrong and God was sad!
O that some one could make Him glad!

Again I saw the face divine
And there was joy in every line:
He saw His only perfect Son,
Saviour from sins that we have done.

A Prey To False Ambition

When a young man passes under the sway of a false ambition he enters on a course that is sure, unless he soon escapes from it, to bring him to evil days.

I knew a young minister who left the Methodist Protestant church and joined the Methodist Episcopal church. I do not know that in the beginning he had in mind a bishopric for himself, but he came to entertain that ambition. He longed for it and worked for it. He was constantly thwarted in his efforts and became filled with bitterness toward those in authority over him because they did not make the moves necessary to promote the end he had in view. He is dead now and died not as a bishop but as an elder. How much happier and more useful he would have been in the ministry had he avoided that false ambition.

But it is not in the ministry alone that men may fall prey to false ambition. How many, many men have traveled the road to ruin by way of the ambition to be rich! The love of money is the root of all evil. What a growth of ugly weeds springs up from it to curse the life. And it is often the case that the pursuer of wealth becomes more unhappy in proportion as he becomes more rich.

Every evil passion leads on to serious trouble. The only safe and truly successful life is the life of godliness. It brings contentment and great gain.

—Don't become a hobo! The facilities of travel in these days may make it easy, but don't do it. It's a bad state of personality to be in.

George Muller's Venture In Faith

George Muller was born in Prussia in 1805. When he was thirty years old we find him in England launching a great enterprise for the care of orphan children. And, remarkable to tell, his prime motive was not interest in orphan children, but the desire to prove to men that God still deals with men and answers prayer as He did in Bible times. If he could get the means to care for orphan children simply by praying for it, would not this be a convincing demonstration to doubting ones that God does indeed hear and answer the prayers of men? He thought so and entered upon the noble experiment. His success was marvelous. He did not ask a single man for money for the orphans but looked to God for it and money came in from those whose hearts God had moved. Two great orphanages were built up, sheltering 2,000 children. Sometimes it looked as though God were about to forget, but He never did forget. Money or supplies came in just in time to prevent actual suffering.

In his diary notation for May 26, 1861, we find this statement:

"You see, esteemed reader, how the Lord in His faithful love helped us year after year. With every year the expenses increased, because the operations of the institutions were further enlarged; but He never failed us. You may say, however, 'What would you do, if He should fail in helping you?' My reply is, that cannot be, as long as we trust in Him and do not live in sin."

Mr. Muller's long series of experiments has great value as an aid to faith in God. It proves that God is neither absent nor unconcerned nor unable to help.

—"The Signs of the Times," a paper published in Mountian View, Cal., and "advocating a return to the simple gospel of Christ, and a preparation for His imminent second appearing," devotes its issue of July 1, 1930, to anti-liquor education. The benefits of prohibition are convincingly shown in an impressve way and also the futility of substitutes for prohibition. We reprint in another column the testimony of the editor of the Toronto Globe. This special issue of The Signs of the Times would make a good campaign document anywhere in the war against alcohol and can be had from the publishers for $2.50 per hundred copies. We thank the friend who sent us a copy.

—We reprint from Zion's Herald an article headed "Alone, Yet Not Alone." It reveals a decided difference of opinion regarding the bishops elected by the new central conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church. Are these bishops general superintendents over the entire church or will their jurisdiction be always limited to the central conference that elected them? It seems that the future will have to determine.

PINE RIDGE LETTER

It's a sad time in old Kentucky. The worst drought ever known. We have had only an occasional shower since April. There are many fields of corn and other crops that would burn quickly if a lighted match were applied. Live stock is practically worthless. A horse sold for seventy-five cents; a flock of sheep sold for one cent a pound and at a nearby stock market, calves were offered free to anyone who would take them away. Food and water are lacking everywhere. Surely we will realize more than ever, how dependent we are upon God. Our trust is in Him. We cannot believe He would have us suffer except for our good. and there must be a wise disciplinary purpose in it all. Have thine own way, Lord!

State officials are already making plans to help the needy poor as cold weather comes on. Very little supplies of any kind are laid up for the winter and there will surely be much distress.

We are glad we have our second hand store business established. There is greater need for it than ever before. Already the people are coming long distances to get clothing as cheap as possible for the winter. We cannot meet the needs unless you, our friends, and co-laborers, make it possible. We have quite a supply of women's coats, but we need children's clothes and more children's clothes. Could not your C. E. societies purchase some mill ends and the ladies get together in bunches or as individuals and make children's clothes; or could not the societies "gather in" the out-of-date clothes of their friends and neighbors and cut them over for children? The rural schools have started and the children must have clothes if they attend school. Many are depending upon our store to make it possible, and this means you. Perhaps you have not realized before the real need; now that you know, we believe that there will be a generous response to this appeal.

Ship by freight or express to Slade, Ky., or by parcel post direct to Pine Ridge.

We are planning to open high school August 20 and the grades September 2. Unless rain comes soon, we will have a hard task hauling water for general purposes for such a large family. Our two wells are still providing us with drinking water, but the supply in our reservoir is exhausted.

Please join us in prayer that all our plans and work Christ may be pre-eminent, and that He will lead us to do all as He wants it done. On the evening of August 6th just after the above had been written, a fine rain came while we were having prayer meeting and we praised God with sincere hearts.

SONGS BY THE WAYSIDE

By REV. LUTHER K. LONG

During the past several months I have had occasion to make frequent drives from southern Maryland to Washington and Baltimore and beyond, besides my regular Sunday drives of around fifty miles along the interesting, winding roads of Saint Mary's county.

Almost all these trips have been taken alone. The habit had been previously formed of singing hymns and songs of various sorts to while away the time. Recently I have felt more than ever the necessity of doing this in order to find relief from loneliness.

Of course, in making my way through thick traffic in Washington or Baltimore there was enough to do to attend to the business of driving. Out in the open again, with the air fresh and flowers blooming and birds singing by the roadside, the songs came back readily.

In the freshness of spring, with nature active and beautiful above and all about, nothing seemed more appropriate than the words of Maltbie D. Babcock's deservedly popular hymn:

THIS IS MY FATHER'S WORLD

This is my Father's world,
And to my list'ning ears,
All nature sings, and round me rings
The music of the spheres.

This is my Father's world,
I rest me in the thought
Of rocks and trees, of skies and seas—
His hand the wonder wrought.

This is my Father's world,
The birds their carols raise,
The morning light, the lily white,
Declare their Maker's praise.

This is my Father's world,
He shines in all that's fair;
In the rustling grass I hear him pass,
He speaks to me ev'ry-where.

This is my Father's world,
O let me ne'er forget
That though the wrong seems oft so strong,
God is the Ruler yet.

This is my Father's world,
The battle is not done,
Jesus who died shall be satisfied,
And earth and heaven be one.

I know of nothing more comforting to one who has passed through bereavement than Henry W. Baker's hymn

THE KING OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS

It penetrates all the ins and outs, follows all the ups and downs of one's life, and carries one safely "through all the length of days" to "thy house forever," where there is praise. The best tune to use is the one from Gunod's "The Redemption."

The King of love my Shepherd is,
Whose goodness faileth never;
I nothing lack if I am his,
And he is mine forever.

Where streams of living water flow,
My ransomed soul he leadeth,
And, where the verdant pastures grow,
With food celestial feedeth.

Perverse and foolish oft I strayed,
But yet in love he sought me,
And on his shoulder gently laid,
And home, rejoicing, brought me.

In death's dark vale I fear no ill
With thee, dear Lord, beside me;
Thy rod and staff my comfort still,
Thy cross before to guide me.

And so through all the length of days,
Thy goodness faileth never;
Good Shepherd, may I sing thy praise
Within thy house forever.

Driving with the car windows open, the air neither too warm nor too cool, one finds much comfort in the spring time sunshine and freshness. A rainy day is not bad. Protected from the wet, one enjoys the moist fragrance that comes from shrubs, trees and flowers by the road side. The good, wholesome earth-smell from new-ploughed fields is sometimes distinctly sensed. Even the motor, by its gentle humming, shows that it appreciates moving in a moist atmosphere.

The Negro spirituals mix in well with the hymns. Many of them I like very much—"I Got Wings," "Standin' in the Need of Prayer," " 'Ain't Goin' Study War No More," "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen." There is one, however, that particularly appeals to me—especially with the additions I have made. Here it is:

LORD, L DON'T FEEL NO WAYS TIRED
I am seekin' for a city, 'Alleluia,
I am seeking for a city, 'Allelu;
For a city into the heaven, 'Alleluia,
For a city into the Heaven, 'Allelu.

CHORUS
Lord, I don't feel no ways tired,
Children, O glory 'Alleluia;
O I hope to shout glory when this world is on fire,
Children, O glory 'Alleluia.

In this world is tribulation, 'Alleluia,
In this world is tribulation, 'Allelu;
But I have a great salvation, 'Alleluia,
Yes, I have a great salvation, 'Allelu.

There's a better day a-comin', 'Alleluia,
There's a better day a-comin', 'Allelu;
When I leave this world of sorrow, 'Alleluia,
When I leave this world of sorrow, 'Allelu.

When I've crossed the dark, cold river, 'Alleluia,
When I've crossed the dark, cold river, 'Allelu;
I shall see my blessed Savior, 'Alleluia,
I shall see my blessed Savior, 'Allelu.

There will be no sin nor sorrow, 'Alleluia,
There will be no sin nor sorrow, 'Allelu;
In that land of peace and gladness, 'Alleluia,
In that land of peace and gladness, 'Allelu.

CHORUS
Lord, I don't feel no ways tired,
Children, O glory 'Alleluia;
O I hope to shout glory when this world is on fire,
Children, O glory 'Alleluia.

ALONE, YET NOT ALONE

In discussing once more the question of Central Conference bishops, the editor of The Christian Advocate again tries to establish his thesis that bishops elected by Central Conferences constitute a kind of second-rate episcopacy. In the course of the editorial he also says:

> In fact, we believe that Zion's Herald remains the sole supporter of the theory of absolute parity (between Central Conference bishops and General Conference bishops).

That bogy does not scare the Herald one whit or embarrass it in the least. If we are alone on this question, it is not the first time we have been alone. During the Herald's 107 years' history, it has more than once been the "sole supporter" in Methodism of certain righteous causes. Says James Mudge, for example, in his "History of New England Methodism":

> For a long time it (Zion's Herald) raised its voice alone in the church in behalf of the immediate freedom of the slave.

Coming, however, straight to the issue itself, we reiterate that the wording of both the Central Conference constitutional amendments themselves and the statutory legislation must be interpreted to mean that Central Conference bishops have all the rights, privileges, and powers of General Conference bishops. And if intention counts for anything—and it certainly does in all legal interpretations—the intention of the Commission of Twenty-Five bears out the Herald's contention. What did the smashing majority, at the General Conference of 1928, of 768 to 6 for the adoption of Amendment No. II mean? What did the almost unprecedented enthusiasm of the delegates following the action at Kansas City mean? Did they think for one moment that they had provided for Jim Crow bishops? Did they rise and sing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" because they had condescendingly taken the first step in giving foreign fields some kind of new fangled missionary bishop? No, they were filled with joy because they thought they had done a big, generous, Christian thing, had recommended for the foreign field the privilege of electing bishops equal in every respect to any that had ever been elected in the history of Methodism.

But to return to the Advocate's statement concerning this paper. Is Zion's Herald the "sole supporter" of this "theory"? Has the editor of The Christian Advocate heard from China, from India, from South America? Has he heard from many independent leaders of the church in America, interested more in human brotherhood than in ecclesiastical prestige and the dignity of American general superintendents? Possibly the Herald is alone, yet not alone.—Zion's Herald.

A CANADIAN EDITOR'S REPLY

The editor of Canada's foremost daily newspaper answers seven questions on government control asked him by Mr. Gifford Gordon of Philadelhia, who wrote the editor of the Globe of Toronto, Canada, asking various questions as to the operation of so-called government control in Ontario.

1. Is it your opinion that government control makes for real temperance?

REPLY: No.

2. Does government control decrease or increase the consumption of liquor?

REPLY: Liquor consumption has doubled in Ontario in two years.

3. Does government control decrease or increase the number of drunken drivers of automobiles?

REPLY: Drunken drivers have multiplied by ten, while cars doubled.

4. Have deaths from accidents due to drunken drivers increased under government control?

REPLY: Yes—enormously.

5. Have industrial accidents decreased under government control?

REPLY: No. Increasing 7 per cent. faster than pay rolls.

6. Has government control eliminated the bootlegger?

REPLY: Large bootlegger eliminated, but small bootlegger multiplied.

7. Has government control proved any benefit to the young people?

REPLY: No. (Signed) ELMORE PHILPOTT,

HE KNOWS

'Tis sweet to know that He who tries
The silver takes His seat
Beside the fire that purifies,
Lest too intense the heat
That's raised to burn the base alloy,
The precious metal would destroy.

Thus in my life the roaring flames and devouring fires of affliction seem almost to consume me in their wrath. The intense heat of adversity cause my soul to wilt and shudder in its fiery blast. I know not why the blighting sorrows crush me to the earth. The forces of evil seem irresistible in their onslaughts. Like my dear Master, I pray that the cup may pass from me. Must I drink its bitter dregs to the last drop? I grope blindly in the valley of the shadow of death. I cry out for help and the echoes seem to mock me in my despair. Oh, for the strength of a sustaining hand! How I crave for just one word of comfort, one ray of hope. Hotter, still hotter the furnace becomes, until I am all but consumed in its terrible fierceness. Then I look pleadingly, despairingly, yea, almost hopelessly upward; and lo, I see my loving Saviour gazing at me with such love, tenderness and pity that my heart melts within me! Oh, that I had never murmured or complained. I look again and notice that his nail-pierced hand is resting upon the heat control. Looking at myself, lo, I see a form Divine in its beauty, Heavenly in its character, and lovely beyond all description; rising from the smouldering ashes of my self-life. Then I hear Him softly whisper,

"I know the way that you take, and when I have tried thee, thou shalt come forth as gold."

I am satisfied. No flames of affliction can blot out the Master's presence, so all is well. Come weal or woe, Jesus knows it all.—Leslie Rellim.

GOING TO HELL AND NOT TROUBLED ABOUT IT!

Poor B——was a man I had known for several years, as a steady, sober, upright and moral man. A person writing to me about him said that if it were possible for any to get to heaven upon the ground of morality, he believed B——would be there. But then it is not possible, as I knew he had not got Christ. When I heard that he was very ill, and not likely to last many days, my heart yearned to bring the Name and Person of Jesus to bear upon his poor dark, but self-satisfied mind. After some conversation about the Lord Jesus dying for and saving sinners, none but sinners, I asked him if he could take his place among that class for whom Jesus died, and whom Jesus had saved? He replied, "Perhaps he was not so good as he ought to be, but that he didn't know that he had done anything very bad."

"Well, B——," I said, "if you have only committed one sin, whether small or great that sin is in God's book, and He will not take you into heaven so long as that single sin stands against you. You are in a very solemn position unless you are quite sure that God has nothing in His book against you."

"Yes," he said, "it is rather solemn," but added in a satisfied tone, "I am not much troubled about it, you know."

"Then I think, my friend, that it is quite time you should trouble about it," I replied. "You are going out of this world not knowing what is to be your future destiny; you may be in eternity before tomorrow morning, and you are not troubled about it! Oh, think of it, going into everlasting darkness, and not troubled about it!"

Poor B——for the first time in his life seemed aroused; his conscience was reached, and for some days there was an awful struggle between the powers of darkness and light; but in the end the Lord Jesus triumphed, and shone into his poor dark mind with a light that scattered all darkness, and gave him sweet and blessed peace. In a very simple but expressive way he described the great change that had taken place. He said that all his life he had been "looking down," but now he could "look up." From that day to this he has been "looking up," for though this was some years ago, contrary to all expectation, he has lingered on in weakness and suffering, still "looking up," waiting for the coming of the Lord Jesus.

Alas! multitudes are hastening along that broad road as untroubled as if there were no sin, no God who must deal with it, and no everlasting perdition at the end of the journey. What a terrible awakening will be yours should you find yourself, spite of all God's warnings, plunged into that never ending condemnation!

Are you, my reader, one who may be on the road to hell and not troubled about it? Do you say you don't know, then let this dear man supply you with a test; are you "looking up," or "looking down"; are your hopes in Christ, or in this world? Oh, if you are looking down, may the Lord in mercy arouse and trouble you; if you are looking up may He continue to comfort you to the end.—The Lamp.

WHAT'S YOUR NAME?

Every person has three names: the name he was born with, commonly called his surname, the name which his parents gave him at birth, and the name he earns for himself in life.

The individual has nothing to do with his first two names. He was born with one and given the other without his knowledge or consent. But the third name which every person has is the name he makes for himself. What is your name? What do people think about you when they hear your name called? Something pleasant or something disagreeable? Does the sound of your name give high and noble thoughts, or low and mean thoughts?

When your name is called in connection with church membership, when the treasurer looks at it on his books, when the church officers and committees are considering names for positions of trust and responsibility, what do they think about when your name is called? WHAT'S YOUR NAME?—Selected.

YE ARE CHRIST'S

You are not to sit down in an arm-chair and say, "Now, the Lord will look after everything." He gives you your life to be kept for Him. That is stewardship, managing another person's property. How wonderful that your members and your body and your life are somebody else's property, and you are told to manage them for Him! If you are a good and faithful and wise steward, you will find a wonderful reward for having looked after your life for the Master. Do you not think it will bring gladness into your life to know that, just to rise morning by morning and say, "Well, I am His today, and I have to look after myself for Him."—Scattered Seed.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

A Correction

By some unhappy trick of the mind I have changed the name of Charlotte church, on Richland charge, to SHILOH. Just as soon as my attention was called to the matter, my sub-conscious knowledge came to the surface, and I was at once aware that I knew the name was Charlotte, and not Shiloh. The making of mistakes, like the "making of many books," has no end. It is always gratifying when our mistakes result in no harm, as in this case.

Brother Pritchard informs us that the church was named in honor of Mrs. Charlotte Redding. Her son Harris Redding followed the example of his mother, and for many years was one of the most devoted members. Since his death, his children are taking his place in the church. St. Paul rejoiced in the faith and loyalty of Timothy, but he first found these qualities in Lois and Eunice, mother and grandmother of Timothy. Brother W. F. Redding of the Asheboro church, is a distant relative of Mrs. Charlotte Redding. He says that this church has been built about sixty years, and that he remembers seeing the brethren dressing the lumber on the church ground by hand. Brother Redding doubtless goes out there occasionally and renews his fellowship with the people of this community. We were glad to note his presence on the occasion of our visit. Hereafter, we will write it Charlotte church.

Calvary

In the absence of Brother Bates, the pastor, we had the privilege of being in the Sunday School and preaching service of Calvary church last Sunday, August 10. At the invitation of Brother T. F. McCulloch, who was filling an appointment for Brother Cranford on the Kernersville charge, we taught his Sunday School class,—an interesting and promising group of teen-age boys, and then preached in the 11 o'clock service. Calvary is a well-organized, busy, and progressive church, and is serving well the community in which it is located. It was a pleasure to us to be with them.

Brother Bates and his family are spending a short while resting in their cottage at Weaverville. We trust that their stay in the mountains may be pleasant, and that they may return to their work greatly refreshed.

Tabernacle Revival—Tabernacle Charge

It was my privilege to attend three services in this revival, and to enjoy the fellowship of the people and the preaching of Brother Shelton, who was assisting Brother Isley in the meeting. The attendance through the meeting was good. The congregation in the last service, Friday night, filled well the large auditorium. It seemed a pity to close the meeting. The people were interested, as their presence indicated, and the harvest had not been fully reaped. But Brother Shelton had to leave to engage in another meeting the following Sunday, and without having previously arranged for a longer meeting, the pastor could not well make plans to continue. The meeting was planned and run according to our form, and like many other meetings, it had to close when it should have gone on.

Our revival work is a matter that should receive very thoughtful, prayerful, and united consideration. The financing system of the church has been changed; our program of religious education has been greatly improved; but our revival system remains about as it has been for many years. Could there be any changes here for the better? Instead of holding a meeting of a few days in each local church, how would it do for two or more churches to unite in a meeting, held at some central place, and continued for two or three weeks, if necessary.

Churches uniting in that way could make larger plans for the meeting, and put a great deal more into it than anyone individual church can do. Of course everybody could not attend every service in such a meeting, but enough would always go to provide congregations, and in many of the services the attendance would be large. Tabernacle seems to be well fitted for such a meeting. The building is commodious, centrally located, and easy of access. And the same can be said about several other rural churches in the conference. It is our opinion that this idea has merit, and it is our hope that some church will test it. If the co-operating idea, as to other churches, could not be worked out, we have a number of strong, well located rural churches that could run such a meeting, as we have indicated. Surely we are all agreed that no phase of our work needs to be more carefully planned than our program of evangelism. Soul-saving is the paramount purpose of the church, and if we succeed here, success will be easy in all other undertakings.

Anxious

When Cecil Rhodes, the great merchant of London, came to the end of the way, he summed up his life in these words: "So much to do; so little done." This was the feeling of a busy business man. I suspect that it is the feeling of most of us, as we approach the close of this conference year; not that we have not been busy and faithful, but because what we have accomplished is far short of our desires. And certainly it must be our feeling as we face the tasks yet before us: there is SO MUCH TO DO. I trust that a pronounced feeling of anxiety may seize upon all of us as we draw near and nearer to the end of this year's work. There is so much to be done before the year can close as it should; and to do what is to be done will require earnest, united, persistent, prayerful effort. We are trying to take time by the forelock, and press these matters now, so we shall not be overwhelmed at the very last by insurmountable tasks. It is our custom to put off a large part of our conference work until this period in the conference year. We are perfectly normal in that respect this year. However, I fear that we have put off our budgets this year, and salaries, beyond what is our custom. In the matter of salaries, the money stringency is the explanation; and "Dollar a Member" explains the shortage in budget receipts. The first half of the year was given to the college. We must press now these other financial obligations, and everything else that is necessary to a happy and successful closing of the year. Let nothing deter us, brethren of the ministry and the laity, from doing our best, our very best, to honor God by the best possible closing of this conference year. God's blessings on every pastor and every charge to this end!

Sick

We are sorry to learn of the illness of Dr. Andrews. He and his family will be remembered in the prayers of each and all of us. It is our earnest hope that his ailment may be timely corrected, and that his health and strength may be fully restored.

RELEASING THE HIDDEN FRAGRANCE

In Bulgaria and in certain parts of France, vast areas are devoted to the cultivation of flowers for perfumes. An observer writes: "It is almost pathetic to lovers of beauty to observe the torturing processes to which the poor flowers must submit before they will give up their fragrance. The roses seem most accommodating and willing, and readily yield up their aroma; but the greater part of the flowers, particularly the violet, migonette, and jasmine, do not yield so readily. They must be crushed and torn and mutilated, and their mangled remains spread on immense plates of grass coated with a preparation that extracts their perfumes before they will surrender up their heart secrets."

There is something of human nature in the flowers. There are some lives that yield the fragrance of their love and sympathy readily and freely, while others must be crushed and broken before they will surrender the virtues that the world so sorely needs. Like the psalmist, many of us come to a time when we are ready to say:

"Before I was afflicted I went astray;
But now I observe thy word.
It is good for me that I have been afflicted;
That I may learn thy statutes."

HAND OVER TO CHRIST

When you feel temptation approaching you, as a bird, by some quick instinct, is aware that the hawk is hovering near, then instantly lift your heart to Christ for deliverance. He cannot rebuff or fail you. "He will gather you under His feathers, and under His wings shall you trust." And when any petty annoyance or heavier worry threatens to mar your peace, in the flash of a moment, hand it over to Jesus; saying, "Lord, I am oppressed, undertake this for me." Ah! you sigh, I wish indeed I could live like this, but in the moment of need I forget to look. Then do this. Trust in Christ to keep you trusting. Look to Him so to abide in you as to keep you abiding. In the early morning entrust to Him the keeping of your soul; and then, as the hour succeeds to hour expect Him to keep that which you have committed unto Him.—From the Writings of Dr. F. B. Meyer.

AN UNWISE AND HURTFUL TREND

One of the most foolish endeavors of the present age is the effort that is being made to drag the church into everything. There ought to be a great deal of Christianity outside of the Church. Civil governments ought to be Christian, but the church ought not to operate them. Secular newspapers ought to be clean and stand for Christian principles, but this does not mean that the church should take them over and run them. Society ought to be Christian and its entertainments pure and wholesome, but it should not be inferred from this that every congregation needs to set up in the amusement business. Politics should be permeated by the ethics of Christ, but the church ought not to undertake to effect that result by going into politics. When the individuals composing society are made Christians, they will set in motion many moral agencies that can do their work best apart from the church. To divert the energies of the church from her one divinely appointed work of ministering spiritually to the souls of men would in the long run, as history has abundantly shown, weaken Christianity in the church and in every other activity of human civilization into which it needs to go. To try to make the church dominate in all human affairs would be to endeavor to go back to the position of the church in its most apostate days, and it would be a tragic mistake.—Selected.

CONFIDENCE

(Lead me in a plain path and teach me."—Psalms 27:11)

In peace apart—to ponder this—
My God is All-in-all;
My friend, my counselor, my guide,
Who hears me when I call.

Just to be led! Truth's guidance sure
Makes light the heavy task;
To work, to serve, to rest secure;
He answers when I ask.

He will not leave me nor forsake;
The plain path stretches on;
Though dark it seems,—I rise, awake;
He speaks; and night is gone!

O Thou my God, omnipotent!
Thy Word is life to me.
Forever near, Thy love is mine;
Alone I cannot be.

MERE EDUCATION NOT ENOUGH

A good many educators are getting their eyes open to the superior character of ethical and spiritual values. One of America's greatest educators recently made these significant statements: "I would rather see this country return to a modified program of intellectual attainment, giving more time and effort to the working out of moral problems as they affect the individual, than to see our colleges and universities sidetrack matters of honor, integrity and virtue, that their programs may be replete with intellectual effort and attainment. Surely we are not called upon to sacrifice one for the other; but if we are, there should be no choice. An honest ignoramus is much to be preferred to a smart and fully informed knave." Good and brave words! Needed, too!—The Bible Champion, Reading, Pa.

OUR STORY PAGE

JIMMIE'S FRIENDS

Jimmie Patton loved to wander up and down the beach in the warm, sunny days, watching the other little children frolic on the sand and have a happy time.

Sometimes they would let Jimmie play with them, but more often they wouldn't, because as likely as not he would only have one shoe and stocking on, or there would be a tear in his small trousers, and he never dreamed of the luxury of having a bathing suit of his very own. But in spite of it all, Jimmie had a good time and was always ready with a smile for everyone.

It was a red letter day for him when the Little Lame Lady appeared. She went up and down the sand making friends with all the children, and she actually patted Jimmie on his red, shining curls and said:

"What a fine boy! I'm sure that underneath these curls there are a great many fine ideas, and some day you will be able to help a lot of people."

. Jimmie beamed for his mind flew at once to his mother and all he wanted to do for her. How glad he would be when he got to be a big man and could take care of her. And how he longed to buy her a washing machine right now so her back wouldn't ache so badly at the close of a day's laundry work for the summer visitors at the shore!

Every morning when the Little Lame Lady came along the beach for a walk, Jimmie would have a present for her—a lovely shell, a tiny star fish, or a bit of feathery seaweed. And how pleased the Little Lame Lady always was!

Before very long she was gathering the children around her and telling them the most delightful stories. Sometimes they were fairy tales and stories of mermaids who lived in the green waters of the Cove near by. Sometimes she told of real boys and girls who were so kindly and thoughtful and helpful that they grew up to be men and women much beloved.

One day the Little Lame Lady appeared earlier than usual. She clapped her hands for that was the signal for the beginning of the story hour.

"I've a great scheme," she announced, "and I'm sure you'll all like it. I'm going to tell you the story of a Prince who lived in a castle and was never allowed outside of the garden walls. The King and Queen were afraid something would happen to the heir to the throne. He had all kinds of toys, and plenty of people to wait upon him, and nice things to eat, but he grew tired of these and what he wanted most of all was a playmate and freedom.

"So you see," the Little Lame Lady paused to remind them, "you children are really much better off than the little Prince was.

"But I'm going to tell you how a big wind came one day and blew down the walls, and the young Prince went out into the wide world, and about the friends which he found and what he saw and what happened to him.

"The story will not be finished this morning. It will take at least two days to tell. After I relate the first of it to you, I want you all to take your sand pails and shovels and spoons and build part of the story—the castle, the garden, the big high wall around the garden, the steps leading down to the little pool where the Prince would sometimes sit and watch the goldfish darting about. Then each day I'm going to see whose work is best, and when the story is ended, there will be prizes—three of them—a shining new silver dollar and two picture books. So do your best!"

The children listened to the entrancing story breathlessly, for the Little Lame Lady could tell stories remarkably well.

There was much discussion as to what each one would make, but finally they all began to work. Jimmie had no sand pail and no shovel, but Thelma Grant who was, Jimmie thought, one of the very nicest of all the children, let him use her pail and shovel. And when Thelma had trouble making the front of her castle stay up just as she wanted it to do, Jimmie lent a hand a brought some water in the little pail to dampen the sand so it could be moulded and windows and a door shaped in the front of it.

As Jimmie scooped up a double handful of sand, his fingers touched something hard. It was a penny. Jimmie looked at it thoughtfully a moment and then at his own part of the garden wall which he was building. Yes, he would buy a little flag over at the souvenir store!

Jimmie was off like a shot. He would put the flag on top of his wall. But when he got back, Thelma pleaded:

"Oh, let me put it on the very tiptop of my castle. It would look just lovely there!" And sure enough it did!

As the little flag waved in the breeze from the top of the castle, Thelma shook her head.

"We don't have princes and castles in this country," she said—"and so I don't think it's right to have the stars and stripes on top of the tower. Do you, Jimmie, even if it does make the castle look pretty?"

Jimmie paused. Here was a chance to get the flag back. Then he saw the questioning look in Thelma's eyes.

"Oh, that's all right," he replied grandly. "P'raps the King and Queen used different flags sometimes, or maybe the little Prince found some 'Mexican friends an' wanted to please them."

Thelma's face cleared.

"All right," she said. "I'll use the flag."

By the time the Little Lame Lady finished the story, Thelma was clearly the winner of the first prize which was a bright new silver dollar. She thanked the Little Lame Lady truly, at the same time turning the coin over and over in her small, brown hand.

"I don't believe I ought to take all of this," she said shyly, "Miss Clary (for that was the Little Lame Lady's name), because Jimmie helped me with my castle, and gave me his flag, and showed me how to dig the well so the little Prince could get a drink the day he was in the woods and was thirsty. And Jimmie brought me the branches with the little red berries on for apple trees so the Prince could find fruit when he was hungry. Oughtn't Jimmie to have half of the money?"

"I think that's just splendid of you, Thelma," Miss Clary nodded.

The Little Lame Lady's eyes were shining and her cheeks very pink.

"How many of you think Thelma is right?"

The rest of the group clapped their hands—every one of them.

"Then it shall be as Thelma says," agreed Miss Clary.

"What will you do with your part of the money, Jimmie?"

Jimmie drew a pattern with his bare toes in the soft sand. Suddenly he looked up.

"I'll give to my muvver," he said, "to help buy a washin' 'chine, so her back won't ache any more. I don't need it—an' it was jus' fun to help Thelma!"

The Little Lame Lady told the people at the hotel about the contest, and Thelma told her father and mother what she had done with half of the prize, and the other children talked about it when they went home.

And for the next couple of days Miss Clary was happy and talking with people and answering telephone calls. And the small boys and girls—all but Jimmie, were constantly coming to her, and their manner was very, very important.

And that's how it came about that a few days later a delivery man left a fine new washing machine at the weather-beaten little Patton cottage, and was marked, "To Mrs. Patton from Jimmie's Friends."

And Jimmie who didn't know what to say, turned a double somersault to show how happy he was!—Selected.

HOW A LITTLE DOG CARRIED A VERY IMPORTANT MESSAGE

A lady missionary in a lonely mission station on the borders of Thibet received as a birthday present a clever and most mischievous Aberdeen terrier puppy from her brother, who was the captain of a Chinese coasting steamer. This Christian lady and her helpers were trying hard to win a footing for the Gospel there by means of hospital work, but were often very discouraged.

The little dog, whose name was Rex, came to cheer them all by his antics, and he soon made friends with the patients, who regarded him as a curious "foreign devil" dog.

Even the timid women, who came in fear and trembling to get treatment, soon lost their dread of the doctor and nurses when Rex occasionally appeared full of fun and frolic. It was not long before the hospital staff declared that Rex was quite a useful member, and could on occasion render useful service.

The doctor was an earnest Christian missionary, and his great hope and desire was to get the Gospel into a large camp of Thibetan soldiers in the neighborhood, but all his efforts had been in vain hitherto, and he realized sadly that for the present there was nothing he could do but pray earnestly and wait for an opportunity to carry the message of the love of God and of the finished work and precious Blood of His beloved Son, by which the vilest could be cleansed in God's holy sight.

One lovely morning there was to be an operation in the hospital, and the missionary lady refused to allow her little dog to go with her. At the back of the building the Christian garden-coolie was busy piling up rubbish to burn, and was reverently laying on the ground a torn portion of Scripture, which a patient had thrown away. Suddenly Rex, who was keen on that particular spot, appeared and mischievously seized the damaged Book and dashed away across the compound. The coolie, whose name was "Sweet Brother," gave chase, and fast and furious the race began.

The compound gate was open, and out dashed the dog. Along the narrow paved road the puppy led, carrying the torn Book in his mouth. The natives, as they saw him, jumped down into the paddy fields, imagining the foreign dog to be mad, and terrified at sight of the uncanny animal, as no parish dog in or out of Thibet was given to racing in the manner in which Rex was doing. At last, somewhat out of breath, the terrier beheld the wide-opened gate of the Thibetan camp, and rushed in, past a frightened and helpless "guard." Then seeing a tall, important-looking man walking stiffly in his path, Rex halted and laid his offering at his feet. The Thibetan officer, Colonel Ah-lun, stooped in curiosity and picked up the Book. It was in his own language, and custom forbade him to step over, or on the sacred painted character in which it was written. The words on the damp and dilapidated page which caught the officer's eyes were, "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16).

Only a week before a friend serving in the Chinese army in the south had sent him the very same words in a letter, and his friend seemed terribly concerned about him. He had written, begging his former chum at any cost honestly to inquire into the Christian faith.

While these thoughts were passing through the officer's mind, "Sweet Brother" appeared breathless and apologetic, to capture the truant. The colonel had guessed where the little "foreign" dog belonged, and he also remembered how eager "The Heal-Disease Master" had been to visit the camp. He decided now to send him an invitation the next day. Needless to say that it was very promptly accepted.

When they met the officer produced the torn fragment of the Gospel portion which Rex had laid at his feet. He pointed to the printed words in John 3:16 and said, "I do not understand. There is no doubt much flavor to be found in this message, but it has no meaning for me."

"Let me light a candle for you," said the doctor eagerly; "it is such a wonderful thing, and you have as big a share in it as I." Then briefly, in a way the officer could appreciate, the old, old story of God's love, and the Saviour's sacrifice was told. Colonel Ah-lun paid great attention, and then asked, "But are you quite sure that this Jesus Christ died for me—to pardon my sins? How can so great a Spirit concern Himself about each individual?"

"The answer to that question is in your text," said the doctor. "It was because He 'so loved.' I am certain in my own mind that our little dog was allowed to bring you a despatch. I beseech you not to neglect the message from heaven, no matter how it came to you." The colonel was impressed and not long after he believed in the "only begotten Son of God," and received "everlasting life," and many of his men too received "the message from heaven." Dear reader, have you received it?—N. F. B., in The Life Line.

HENRY'S PRIZE

On their way home from school one afternoon Henry and three of his playmates stopped every now and then to make snowballs to throw at some spot on a tree or fence or telegraph pole. They made believe that whoever hit the mark would get a prize.

When they came to Granny White's house Henry noticed a star-shaped thing half-way between the old parlor windows of the little frame cottage.

"Look, boys," he cried, pointing to the spot; "let's see who can hit that star!"

"Whee, that's easy!" said one of the other boys, as he picked up some snow.

"This time it's my first turn!" shouted Henry and threw with all his might. But he had aimed a little too far to one side and his snowball crashed right against the window pane.

Frightened at what they had done, Henry and the other boys ran away as fast as they could till they were a long way from Granny White's house; then they stopped, all out of breath.

"Let's throw snowballs against that barn!" called one of the boys, but Henry did not feel like throwing snowballs any more. He kept thinking of poor old Granny White and the broken glass. She lived alone, and he wondered how she was going to keep warm with a big hole in her window. "I don't want to play any more," he said to the other boys, "I'm going home!"

He walked away as fast as he could toward Granny White's house. But when he reached it he could not bear to look at the parlor window. He went to the back door and knocked. Granny opened it with a smile on her kind old face. "Well, well, if here isn't Henry!" she said. "Come right in and get warm!"

Henry wondered how she could be smiling when one of her windows had just been broken. He sat down near the kitchen stove and turned to Granny. "I broke your window, Granny. But I didn't mean to. I was trying to hit that star on the front of your house between the parlor windows, and I missed it and struck the glass. I'm awfully sorry!"

Granny White smiled a pleasanter smile than ever. "You didn't break the glass, Henry," she said. "The snow must have been soft, for it did not go through the pane."

Henry was an astonished little boy when he heard that the window wasn't broken after all, and he was glad, too. "That's why you are smiling," he said. "You are so glad that the glass didn't break and let in all the cold air."

"It isn't that alone. I am happy that you were honest and manly enough so that you came back to tell me you did it, because you really thought you had broken the window. I never should have known who threw that snowball, because when I heard it hit the glass and hurried to the parlor window there wasn't a boy or girl in sight!"

As Henry ran home he was very happy to think that he hadn't broken good old Granny White's window after all. But he was still happier that he had gone back and told her who it was that had had thrown the snowball.—The Youth's Companion.

JESUS CHRIST AND THE MODERN CITY

The modern American city is not a wholesome place. But it is a fascinating place. Its glare and noise, its confusions and intensities, its crowds, its gaieties, and its opulence, entrance and captivate our fancy and challenge our ambition. The world, the flesh, and the devil are working overtime to subjugate completely these strongholds of our nation's life, and they are succeeding far too well.

The multitudes are crowding into our cities. The churches, for the most part, are weakened and moribund, and are being crowded out. Christ is being defied and denied, and we go on our selfish way unheeding. Even the moral law is set at naught. The thunders of Sinai are not heard in New York and Chicago. The Ten Commandments have almost as little binding force as they had in corrupt Corinth. Speaking broadly, the people of our cities are not only irreligious, but shallow, hard and loose-living. A Japanese of high rank who visited New York was shown about the city by prominent officials. In expressing his gratitude before his departure he said: "You have treated me with every kindness. You have shown me your high buildings, your clubs, your banks, your stock exchange, your gorgeous hotels, your lovely parks, the homes of your millionaires. But when you come to Japan I shall take you first to look upon our temples and altars. I see clearly that the Americans are not a religious people."

Greater, however, and far more terrible in its results than the sin of the irreligious worldly man is the sin of the easy-going churchman, dweller in city or suburb, who cares little and does less for the redemption of the people from their indifference.

Can the city be saved? Not by lavender and rose water, not by self-content, not by good wishes and pious prayers alone. The city can be saved only by the consecrated zeal and money, by the efficient personal service of men and women who believe with heart and soul that Christ came to save the lost, and that they are His ambassadors and interpreters to the modern world. The city can only be saved by the Great Savior working through men and women who believe mightily in His great salvation.—Selected.

LIFE'S MYSTERY

"Christ has no hands but our hands
To do his work today;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in his way;
He has no tongue but our tongues
To tell men how he died;
He has no help but our help,
To bring them to his side.

"What if our hands are busy
With other work than his?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's allurement is?
What if our tongues are speaking
Of things his lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help him
Unless from him we learn?"

WHY DO THE BIBLICAL WRITERS AGREE?

There were from thirty-six to forty different men engaged in writing the Bible. Yet they agree on every important doctrine. When men claim to be guided by human reason, they always differ, and sometimes very widely. Many of the greatest human philosophical teachers nullify one another's systems, so that if one is right the other is absolutely wrong. There is no other adequate explanation of the agreement of the Biblical writers except to say that they were led by the Holy Spirit. The ultimate author of the Bible is God, and of course God would agree with Himself in giving His revelation to men. A poet has aptly put the matter in the following lines:

Whence but from heaven could men unskilled in arts,
In several ages born, in several parts,
Weave such agreeing truths? Or how or why
Should all conspire to cheat us with a lie?
Unasked their pains, ungrateful their advice,
Starving their gain and martyrdom their price!

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By J. T. BOWMAN

(President C. E. Society, High Point College)

AUG. 24: IS EDUCATION WORTH WHAT IT COSTS? WHY?

Scripture Text—Proverbs 3:13-18

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—It costs sacrifice. Luke 9:57-62.

Tuesday—Its cost to parents. Duet. 6:1-9.

Wednesday—It calls for attention. Prov. 3:1-4.

Thursday—Educational opportunities. Prov. 8:1-11.

Friday—Religious education. Luke 2:41-47

Saturday—Danger of pride. Matt. 23:1-12.

A Progress Meeting

This meeting should be used to show something of the history of education. Have your high school members to take some definite part on the program as a special musical selection—voice solo, violin solo and group selections. Select some person who is well informed as to the history of education from the foundation to give a lecture thoroughly explaining this subject.

To advertise the meeting, have some one to draw a landscape scene with the sun just rising. In a half-circle over the sun print the word "Progress." Make a road leading up to the sun and print the word "Education" in the road. At one side of the road draw a picture of a familiar road sign, on which advertise the meeting, giving subject, date, time and cordial welcome.

Leader's Talk

What an education is worth depends on what use we make of it. If it develops the intellect and makes us clever scoundrels, it is not worth while.

Education is not always wisdom but when it is it is worth any price. Education can claim no exemption. "What does it cost and what does it produce?" "Is the ratio of cost to production too high?" "What is the quality of its product?" "Is there any danger to our moral welfare and spiritual welfare to be found in the present curricula?" To each of these and to others, a satisfactory answer must be given, or changes made.

In this meeting we shall be given a bird's-eye view of the history of education in order that we may see its relationship to the education of today, and determine its true value.

Topics for Discussion

1. Does Christianity have anything to fear from education, so long as education deals with proven facts?

2. When can a man be said to be an educated man?

3. Do you think an education pays? Why? In what ways?

4. What sacrifice must one make for an education?

5. When is the cost of a college education too high? Why?

Quotations and Poetry

A college cannot educate the student. Teachers put knowledge before him, but his own brain must assimilate it. That takes time and effort, and is part of the cost of education. Anon.

If one wishes to be useful in this world, the more education he can get, the more useful is he likely to be. What priec we are willing to pay for an education depends on what we intend to be.—Anon.

The Influence of Being Sweet

Said the corn to the lilies,
"Come not near my feet;
You are only lilies
Neither corn nor wheat;
Can one earn a living
Just by being sweet?"

Answered the lilies
Neither yea nor nay,
Only they grew sweeter
All the live long day.
Till at last the Master
Chanced to come that way.

While his tired disciples
Rested at his feet,
And the proud corn rustled,
Bidding them to eat.
"Children," said the Master,
"The life is more than meat:

"Consider the lilies
How beautiful they grow,
Never king had such glory,
Though no toil they know,"—
Oh, how happy were the lilies
That he loved them so.

AMBITIOUS BOYS

Hurried and flurried, Pa came rushing in,
Looking for help to move a big bin:
"Where in the world is that boy Ike?"
"He's over the smokehouse sitting on a spike."

"Then where under the sun is our boy Jim?
I've something to do and greatly need him."
"For a week and a day Jim's been on the barn, Resting himself on a sharp cowhorn."

"Then I must have Tom: where is he now?
Has he gone to the field to milk the new cow?"
"Tom is spending his time, though it seems odd, Perched on the point of the tall lightning rod."

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Resolutions of Respect

It is with hearts full of sadness that we, the members of Flat Rock church, record the death of one of our most consecrated and faithful members, Mrs. S. W. Reavis, whom Jehovah saw fit on the 20th day of July, 1930, to call home from this finite temple of clay, and habitat of tribulation.

In her passing the Ladies' Aid has lost its president; the missionary society, a faithful member; the intermediate Sunday school class, its teacher; the Sunday school superintendent, his wife; the community, a willing worker; the home, a devoted wife and loving mother.

She will be missed by everyone that knew her. The smiling face we all loved to look upon is gone, and the voice we loved to hear is still. A place is vacant in the home and church which can never be filled.

We can't understand just why she was called from us, but God knows best and doeth all things well. Therefore be it resolved,

First, that we accept God's ways and abide more than ever in His love:

Second, that we cherish her memory, appreciating what she has done for us by her unfailing love and faithfulness:

Third, that we try to follow her teachings and emulate her example of a mother, a lover and admirer of children, a daily adherent to the example of Him who walked the shores of Galilee:

Fourth, that we deeply feel our loss in the vacant place of Mrs. Reavis, and that we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy:

Fifth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family. A copy entered in the minutes of the Ladies' Aid, and missionary society of Flat Rock church, and a copy sent to the M. P. Herald for publication.

Mrs. T. P. Hester, Pres. Missionary Society.
Miss Annie Satterwhite, V.-Pres. Ladies' Aid.
Mr. Roy Davis, Ass't Supt. Sunday School.
Mr. Joe Davis, Pres. Intermediate S. S. class.

In Memory of Miss Bettie Cox

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of Hickory Ridge Methodist Protestant church, record with sorrow the death of our beloved member and co-worker, Miss Bettie Cox, who died June 9, 1930.

Miss Cox had been a faithful member of Hickory Ridge church and Missionary Auxiliary for years. She was a sincere worker in the Master's service. May her life of loyalty to Christ be an incentive to higher and nobler living to all who knew her.

Resolved, that we bow in humble submission to His will who doeth all things well.

Resolved, that we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family and that a copy of this tribute be sent to the family, also recorded in our minutes, and a copy be sent to the "Missionary Record" and "Methodist Protestant Herald."

TO THE AUXILIARY PRESIDENTS

The work at our Children's Home is going along in a splendid way. Some of the children have had a much deserved vacation and we are all indeed glad. Let's each of the auxiliary presidents organize our forces now in this harvest season and can or collect all the fruit, vegetables, grain, in fact anything that will help feed and clothe a family of 100 children. Have these brought to some central point and notify Dr. Dixon; he will come for them. Ladies, there is one thing we can do if we act quickly and that is help secure the refrigerator for the Home. We all realize how hard it is to keep food for a few and the saving would mean much to the Home, as well as the convenience. Only 8,000 more Octagon coupons are needed. Put on a contest in your Sunday school, auxiliary or Ladies' Aid for just one week and see the results. I am sure you will be pleased if 8,000 would be reported in the next issue of the Herald.

If you haven't a secretary of Children's Home in your auxiliary then appoint someone who is interested in the Home to do this work. The children can have a part in the collecting of coupons and thus be training them to work for and be interested in our Home.

MRS. H. C. NICHOLSON,
Sec. Children's Home, N. C. Branch.

TO SECRETARIES OF TEMPERANCE

By reference to the constitution you will see what is scheduled in your duties, and you have one of the biggest jobs in your auxiliary. Never before has temperance education been more important. Someone has said that outside of evangelism there is no more pressing need. The fact that we have national prohibition does not mean that there is nothing left for us to do. There is so much false propaganda to overcome, and as has always been true Christian women have a large part in moulding sentiment in favor of law enforcement. Be sure to use the ballot when it will help to elect the right kind of men for office.

If you wish any literature on the subject kindly let me know, and I shall be glad to furnish it as long as my supply lasts. I am going to suggest that you keep a scrap book of all interesting and instructive articles on the subject you can clip in your reading. If you are in reach of a W. C. T. U. attend their meetings, and learn of conditions through them.

The definite thing I am going to suggest is that you put on a program in your Sunday school on October 26th which is World's Temperance Sunday. I have no set program in mind, but if I can help you in planning yours kindly call on me.

VELNA MCCULLOCH,
Branch Sec. Temperance and Moral Reform.

WHY NOT LADIES' AID

The Ladies' Aid of Fairgrove church met Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock at the church, with thirteen active and two honorary members present. The house was called to order by the president and the following program was rendered:

Song—"Jesus, The Best Friend of All"—Society; Scripture Reading, Mrs. C. B. Frye; Prayer, E. W. Auman; A Humorous Reading, Mrs. E. W. Auman; Song—"Carry Your Cross With a Smile", Society.

The business part of the meeting was then taken up. I was decided that we have our quilt entirely finished by the meeting in September. Mrs. W. H. Neese volunteered to give the lining; Mrs. C. B. Frye, Mrs. L. E. Cagle, Mrs. R. R. Auman, Mrs. M. A. Cagle and Mrs. J. A. Auman volunteered to buy the cotton.

The society has recently installed electric lights in the church which are proving to be very satisfactory; and we are now working to finish paying for the piano which was bought recently also, and which is more than half paid for.

Immediately following adjournment the losing side for raising money on the quilt, entertained the winning side by giviing them a watermelon feast on the church lawn. Our next meeting will be held wiith Della Maie Graves.

MY TRIP

The engine said "How do you do
I'm awfully glad I'm pulling you!"
The flashing rails they laughed with glee
And sang a little song to me.
And all the little towns went by
And looked so gay I wondered why.
But the river bridge said 'twas his guess
They were but sharing my happiness!

I saw a thousand hills of green
And the loveliest pines I had ever seen,
I saw a cow and a little calf
And a small black pig that made me laugh.
Then a pile of coal and a section shack
And a friendly tunnel garbed in black
And o'er it all the engine blew,
And said "I'm glad I'm pulling you!"

I saw a brick yard gleaming red
Like funeral pyres of wicked dead,
I saw a lot of happy folk,
And smelled the mystic breath of smoke.
And some folks said 'twas a sorry ride,
But it made me feel all gay inside.
And when at last I left the train,
The engine said "Come back again!"

—The latest issue of the "Hartford Agent" tells a story about a mighty queer fire which occurred way up in Maine. The steeple of the Baptist Church at South Penobscot was struck by lightning during a thunder shower. Flames and sparks poured forth from the wooden ball on its peak. As there is no way to fight a fire as high in the air as that, it was feared at first that the whole church would be destroyed. But some one had a bright idea and all rushed for their rifles and shotguns and opened fire on the blazing ball high in the air. There are some good shots there and so many perfect hits were made, that the ball was literally shot to pieces, and the pouring rain did the rest.

A RELIGION OF POWER

There have been many ways of regarding religion, and different persons today think of it differently. It is very common to speak of it as something which one "gets" or "accepts." "He got religion," the neighbors say, or "he has always kept his religion through every trial." It is not uncommon to think of it as a statement of belief or faith which a person holds. "I accept the doctrine of the Trinity, of the atonement, and of eternal life, and eternal punishment, therefore I have religion;" thus many a person explains his religion. To such a one it consists largely of correct definitions. Another class of persons care nothing for definition; they consider religion to be a good life; they say: "I do about right, I live up to my light, and I do not believe God will be hard on me."

There is still another way of reviewing religion. It is the power of God manifested in life. It does not begin with definitions, it does not consist of living about right, it is not something one "gets." It comes and gets the person. He does not keep his religion, but his religion keeps him. It is a power, a force, just as real and just as persistent as that which we call gravitation, and its effects are just as sure. No definitions of electricity would ever light a man's house, or move a trolley car. The first step is to let the current in and the house becomes light, or the car moves. Everything bases itself on the ultimate, invisible power, which is simply RECEIVED. This is true of religion as it is of mechanics. There is no religion apart from God, and until a man comes to God and God gets him, the man is not truly religious. It consists first and last of possession—God's possession of us and our joy in the sense of His ownership. A religion without power would be like a gravitation which did not draw anything, or like electricity that had no force. Religion is spiritual gravitation. It draws the soul away from everything else to its true Central Sun. The first effect of it on a person is to beget love. Love is the unfailing sign of religion. A loveless religion is as impossible as a waterless ocean, or a treeless forest. If a man's religion does not flood him with love, it is the wrong kind of religion.

We have been speaking of what religion seems to us to be, now a word about how it comes. There has been in our world but one Person who was perfectly divine and perfectly human. He revealed God and He showed what it means to be a son. He also showed how to be a son, and He plainly said to the whole race, "I am the Way." Religion means getting to God. Christ is the way, and love is the sign.—Rufus M. Jones in Pennsbury Leaflet No. 4.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Bethesda, Halifax Charge.—We were very glad to have our former pastor, Mr. Spencer, with us at last appointment and to have him preach for us, which he was persuaded to do only after a passage at arms with Mr. Fogleman and on condition that the latter sing a solo. This condition, however, was not complied with. The only drawback to the arrangement was that in hearing either one preach, we had to mis the other.

The special meeting will begin here next Sunday, and we are expecting some good preaching from Rev. R. A. Hunter.

Our Children's Day service the fourth Sunday in June was pronounced good. The pageant was well presented and was made more effective by the use of many costumes. Some of the parts had to be taken by older people, as we had not enough of the younger ones. Audience was large but collections rather small, doutless owing to scarcity of money in the community.

West Forsyth.—We closed the last of a series of four revival meetiings on Friday evening, August 1, the last one being at Baltimore church. The reporter for this church has very ably reported this meeting. This writer desires to express his appreciation to tre people of Baltimore church for their generous hospitality shown to the pastor and helpers, Rev. D. I. Garner, and Rev. Wayne Curtis, during the meeting. The homes in the community were open to us and we thoroughly enjoyed visits into several of the homes. We wish to mention the warm hearted kindness and genuine hospitality of Mrs. Ella Doub, who so graciously entertained Bros. Garner and Curtis during the week except one night spent with the pastor and family.

While the results of the four meetings held during July were not what we expected, yet we are thankful for the good that was accomplished. A total of forty-five professions and a total of twenty-five new members were the visible results, besides the strengthening of the membership at each church in spiritual attainments. All of the preachers who helped in the meetings did splendid and effective preaching of the Gospel of salvation.

Our next revival meeting will be held with the Harmony Grove church beginning the fourth Sunday in next month, with the pastor doing the preaching.

Our services last Sunday were well attended. We were at Tabernacle at 11 a. m., and at Union Hill at three o'clock in the afternoon. At two o'clock we administered baptism by immersion to three members of Tabernacle church, Wesley Myers, Charlie Cline, and Mabel Whitman. This service was attended by more than 150 people, and was held at the Yadkin river.

The pastor and family enjoyed a visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Warden and family last Sunday. Mrs. Warden and four of her daughters are members of Tabernacle church, Mrs. Warden having transferred her membership from a Methodist Episcopal church in Surry county last month. After the service at Union Hill Sunday afternoon, we went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Turne Norman by a previous invitation, and enjoyed a brief visit and a good supper with these people.

The pastor and family are appreciative of gifts from Mrs. W. W. Whitman and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Allen, which were placed in our car while at Tabernacle church last Sunday morning. We are thankful for these kind remembrances, We thank Mrs. Sprinkle, a neighbor, who is a Baptist, for the gift of about two bushels of apples which were canned for use next winter.

This writer enjoyed a visit to two of the churches on Randolph charge the first Sunday in August. We accompanied Brother Garner, the pastor, to Bethany church in the morning and to Bethel church in the afternoon. Brother Garner prevailed on us to speak at each of the services and we enjoyed meeting the people at Bethany for the first time, it being our first visit with that church. We were glad to see the people at Bethel church again and greet them. It was my pleasure to have been with these people in their annual revival meeting last August and I was glad to see them and speak to them again.

Our Third Quarterly Conference will be held at Pleasant Hill church next Sunday, August 17. There will be preaching at 11 a. m., dinner on the church ground and fellowship during the noon hour, and the business session at 1:30 in the afternoon. We are expecting a good attendance from all of the churches.

Clark's Chapel, Weaverville. — Eager eyes will be watching the Herald to see what we will do. As a church and Sunday school we decided to say as the Psalmist did: "The Lord is my Shepherd." We are not promised anything unless we are faithful until death. If God is for us who can be against us?

We are glad to report fifty present at Sunday school and a good offering. About nineteen of our regulars were absent.

Plans were made to continue our weekly prayer meeting.

We appreciate our former pastor's interest and every past kindness rendered by him and his wife.

With best wishes,

LOUISE CHEEK, Reporter.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—My last letter to the Herald was lost in the mail. So I'll attempt to write again.

Our church hasn't been asleep by any means. The revival was held in July. Mr. Spencer was assisted by Rev. Wayne Curtiss, of Burlington. He directed the singing. Every service he sang a solo selection. These were enjoyed very much and the singing was a very important part of the meeting. In spite of the hot weather, Mr. Spencer gave us some good sermons. The aattendance was good and I think much good was done. Twelve young people were converted and joined the church at the last service. We were glad to have Mr. Curtiss and hope to have him again.

Our Sunday school seems to be rather active. We desire more members.

The Women's Missionary Society met at the home of Miss Crystal Bobbitt in July. There were twelve members present. A very interesting program was rendered and several took part in the meeting.

After all business was disposed of the hostess served ice cream. Everybody seemed to enjoy it as the weather was so hot.

The young girls gave a lawn party at the home of Mrs. H. L. Wright recently. The proceeds amounted to eleven dollars. This will go to make up our M. S. budget.

Miss Edith Wright is at home now since her summer school work at N. C. C. W.

Mr. R. W. Harris has almost recuperated from his operation.

Our pastor is away helping in a meeting. So he called in Mr. Sam Harris last Sunday. His message was fine. He brought his two daughters with him, Mrs. R. M. Andrews of High Point, also Mrs. Ethel Harris Kirby. We were delighted to have them worship with us.

Fairfield Church, Guilford Circuit. — A large crowd attended the community singing held at our church the fourth Sunday in last month. Much good singing was heard. J. W. Johnson conducted the singing while such singers as the Twin City quartet, Colfax Female quartet, Pilgrim Holiness quartet, the Sunshine Four, Roseville quartett, Pomona Mills choir and Mrs. Robinson and her two little girls participated in the singing.

Our Sunday school was considerably larger the first Sunday in the month than it had been on previous Sundays; the church was practically full for the meetting for worship also. Rev. Mr. Peeler brought a forceful message on "Heart Life." He brought out the essentiality of keeping impure things out of your mind as well as you heart. The mind feeds the soul, and the heart the body.

The attendance was a few less the last Sunday than it was the Sunday before. The attendance is usually better on preaching Sundays. We hope the attendance will increase rapidly soon when cool weather comes and the farmers here have harvested their crops so that they wont sleep so late on the Sabbath mornings.

Friendship, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The annual summer revival meeting was held at our church last week. Rev. J. E. Carroll preached at the Sunday morning service and Rev. N. G. Bethea brought the message at the afternoon servicee and did the preaching throughout the week. Several children dedicated their lives to Christ at the Children's service Wednesday afternoon and two members were added to the church. We hope that others will join later. We enjoyed Brother Bethea's splendid sermons and hope he will come again.

The Alamance church choir was with us on Tuesday night of the revival and gave us some spleendid music. We were glad to have them with us.

The Children's Day service was held the first Sunday in July under the direction of Mrs. J. M. Murray and Mrs. D. I. Offman. The service was an unusually impressive one.

Mrs. J. F. Homewood, one of our members, was honored by being made Master Homemaker at the state short course held in Raleigh the latter part of July. We congratulate Mrs Homewood.

The Christian Endeavor society is holding some very interesting meetings during the six weeks program contest which is now on. The attendance is very commendable.

The C. E. society with a little help from the church has bought a new battery for the light plant at the church. We have splendid lights for all evening services. Thank you, Christian Endeavorers.

Twenty-nine members of the Sunday school were awarded pins for perfect attendance at Sunday school for a year at the end of the last quarter. That is a splendid record and we hope others will soon deserve the pin.

The Woman's Missionary society will meet with Mrs. W. A. Patterson, Saturday afternoon, August 16. We hope every member will be present.

Misses Grace Murray and Bettie Emma Graves attended the Leadership Training school held at Hiigh Point college.

Your reporter is home again after attending summer school at N. C. C. W.

MAE. PATTERSON, Reporter.

Canaan, North Davidson Charge.—We are having good attendance at Sunday school and church services, even in the midst of revival meetings and months of summer vacation.

Our revival was held last month beginning with the fourth Sunday and continuing until the folliwing Thursday night. Mr. Powell secured as pulpit help, Rev. T. Glenn Madison of Thomasville, who brought to us some wonderful messages. We were also delighted to have present with us in each service and in our homes Mrs. Madison whom we loved very much.

On Saturday night, July 19, we had a nice lawn party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Smith for the benefit of the new piano which we have recently bought. A large crowd attended and through the help of the members and visitors both old and young, we made about forty dollars.

The young ladies' class is planning a party which will be at the home of their teacher, Mrs. J. M. Smith, at an early date.

J. L. Foust of Bethesda was elected delegate to the annual conference, to represent North Davidson charge. Love and best wishes to the "Herald" and its readers.

MISS HAZEL BERRIER, Reporter.

Eden, Halifax Charge.—Since our last report we have lost our oldest member, Mrs. Marilou Pulley. Mrs. Pulley who was in her ninety-third year, had lived alone since the death of her husband several years ago. She fell and sustained a fractured hip and lived only a few weeks after this injury. We deeply regret her passing and her presence is greatly missed in the church and in the community.

We are glad to say our Sunday school is coming along nicely. We won the attendance banner at the last District Rally held in Creswell the fifth Sunday in June. Seventeen of our members attended this meeting. We are continuing our attendance contest. First quarter of this year the men's class made the best average and were guests of honor at a supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Willey. The second quarter the primary class won and were given a picnic on the church grounds.

Following our established custom we had "clean up" on Thursday before the first Sunday in August. This resulted in quite a lot of improvement, some unsightly stumps were removed from the ground in front of the church and the driveways were improved. The cemetery was very nicely cleaned up.

Our revival meeting began on the first Sunday and closed the following Friday night. Rev. R. A. Hunter of Henderson, assisted our pastor. It was his first visit to us but he has greatly endeared himself to us, by his deeply spiritual sermons and by his charming personality. We had a wonderful meeting and seventeen new members were received in the church. Fifteen on confession of faith and two by letter.

Besides Mr. Hunter's good preaching we enjoyed some very good music. We thank Miss Sue House for playing for us. We also had the good fortune to have Mr. Leonard Harris of Chicago University of Music. Mr. Larry Gunter of Richmond,Miss Mildred Sexton, and Mrs. Exum Bellamy of Enfield, and Misses Marie and Grace Boon.

REPORTER.

Orange Charge, Union Grove Church.—The revival meeting began here August 3, and closed Auust 7th. Rev. E. A. Bingham did all the preaching. The attendance and interest held up throughout the meeting. Two new members were received into the church.

Brother Bingham's deep consecration and love for the work and people won the hearts of his hearers. We feel that much and lasting good was accomplished.

His preaching was of a high order and a sympathetic nature. Truth presented in such a manner will bring forth fruit in days to come.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

First Church, High Point.—It was an inspiration for many adult members of the congregation on last Sunday morning to visit the Junior church in its usual morning service at 11 o'clock in the Assembly room under the leadreship of E. Lester Ballard, Director of Religious Education. After a service of responsive readings and hymns in which the one hundred children joined enthusiastically, the theme being "Love and Service," Mr Ballard turned the meeting over to the juniors. Miss Juanita Wood was the leader on the topic, "What Good Turn Can I Do Daily," and she presided gracefully and efficiently. Miss Eliabeth Welch kindly played accompaniment to the hymns on the piano in the absence of Miss Ernestine Vuncannon. A pretty duet was sung by Misses Marquerite Lambe and Ruth Beam. Sentence prayers were then called for to which several of the boys and girls responded. Miss Dorothy Krieger then told the story of "The Other Wise Man" by Henry Van Dyke, in a very graceful and effective manner. The leader called for suggestions for a "Good Turn Daily" to be written on the ladder "that reaches from the earth to the vaulted skies," and the following were given: Help Mother, Preparation for School; Kindness, especially to the aged and infirm. These children have been trained exceedingly well, and we but feel that the future of the Methodist Protestant church in High Point is safe under their guidance when they reach maturity. They range in age from four to seventeen years, and a number of them belong to the Children's Home family. Rev. Mr. Ballard has done a wonderful and unique work as their leader for almost four years, and it was a source of deep and universal sadness to them that he had tendered his resignation as Director of Religious Education at a called session of quarterly conference. He and Mrs. Ballard will leave about September 1st for Boston, where he plans to take a course in Boston university for two years. Since coming here in Nov. 1926, just after their marriage, they have endeared themselves in an unusual degree to the people of our church and many outside of the denomination. They have been remarkably thoughtful to the sick, the bereaved, and shut-ins, and their kindly visits and ministrations will be sadly missed; and the children and young people of the Sabbath school, C. E. societies, and the junior church are almost inconsolable. Of course we rejoice in the happy service they look forward to in their new field and surroundings, and our love and good wishes will follow them there, but "'Tis hard to part when friends are dear," and it will be with aching hearts and misty eyes that we shall say goodbye to these splendid young people, who find their greatest happiness in Love and Service for others.

The general monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the church with the President, Mrs. S. S. Coe, in the chair and 37 members in attendance. A recommendation of the Executive Board to ask the pastor for a morning service in September for the Thank Offering service was accepted. A committee will be appointed to attend to the thorough cleaning of the church carpet. A demonstration of Wear Ever aluminum kitchen ware will be given at the church Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. If ten couples of married people attend this meeting, kitchen utensils to the value of $7.50 will be donated free of charge. The Children's Home family is invited to unite with the auxiliary in this enterprise.

After the transaction of all business, the program for the day under the charge of Mrs. H. A. Moffitt was rendered. Mrs. R. M. Andrews read an interesting article on the work among blind people in Tokio, Japan; Mrs. E. L. Douglas told about the Business girls' home in Baltimore, where fifteen girls have comfortable rooms of which Mrs. E. A. Craig is the head. Mrs. Paul S. Kennett read an article on the work among foreigners at Dillonvale, Ohio, where 26 children take kindergarten work, 55 girls from 7 to 15 years of age receive instruction, and a number of boys are also taught. Two new members are welcomed into membership; Mrs. L. F Sweat, Dalton St., has been assigned to Circle No. 5, Mrs. Rankin's; and Mrs. Robert Whitlow, Tifton Street, to Circle No. 7, Mrs. Moore's. The meeting was brought to a close with prayer by Rev. E. L. Ballard.

We are grieved to announce the illness of Mr. J. D. Koonce, one of our faithful and valued members, and his numerous friends unite in wishing for him an early recovery.

Much pleasure is felt over the fact that Dr. R. M. Andrews is better, and has left High Point hospital for his home.

Mrs. Ross Davis and little daughter, Lyna Jane, have returned from an outing spent at Minnesott Beach and Arapahoe, near Morehead City, N. C.

Mr. June Gray went to Charlotte Sunday to bring home his boys, Alson and Joe, who have been visiting their grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hutchinson, and they were accompanied by two young cousins, who are their guests this week.

Postmaster and Mrs. O. R. York have returned from a vacation trip to Wilmington and Wrightsville Beach.

Capt. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin and two younger children, Bobby and Jean Blair, have returned from an enjoyable trip to Endless Caverns, Va., Washington City, and other interesting points.

A wedding, beautiful in simplicity, was solemnized Saturday morning at 11 o'clock at the bride's grandmother, Mrs. A. G. Hough, 646 Willowbrook Street when Miss Mary Eugenia Woollen of High Point became the bride of Mr. Jason Reid Auman of Vass, N. C. Rev. R. G. Matheson of Jackson Springs was the officiating minister, and an impressive double ring ceremony was used. Mrs. K. G. Phillips, of Liberty, played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin as the bride and groom entered together, and during the ceremony she played Schubert's "Serenade." Only a small number of friends and relatives were present to witness the ceremony. The bride is a niece of Miss Mamie Hough, our popular and efficient Sunday school librarian, and a grand daughter of the late Mr. A. G. Hough and Mrs. Hough, is a graduate of High Point College, class of 1928, and taught last year at Kernersville. She is an unusually bright, popular, and attractive young lady, while Mr. Auman holds a position as teacher in the high school at Vass, N. C. where the young couple will be at home after a brief honeymoon trip. Many friends join in congratulations and best wishes for success and happiness to this popular and worthy young pair.

Misses Lillian and Grace Bulla, Mrs. W. L. Albertson, and Miss Dennyce McAdams left Sunday morning for Detroit, Mich. They will go over into Canada and plan to return via Niagara Falls and Washington.

A LONG AUTO TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Ferree of High Point, made an interesting tour of the West, traveling in twenty four states and Mexico, and covering 9,900 miles by automobile in 30 days.

Leaving High Point June 13th, the main route traveled by us, not including several short side trips, carried us through Asheville, N. C., Knoxville, Nashville and Memphis, Tenn., Little Rock and Forth Smith, Arkansas, Tulsa and Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Amerilla, Texas, Santa Fe and Albuquerque, New Mexico, Holbrook and Grand Canyon, Arizona, Needles, San Bernardino, Riverside and San Diego, California.

After driving over into Old Mexico from San Diego, we toured the state of California for six days, visiting San Juan, Huntington Beach, Long Beach, Los Angeles and the surrounding cities of Hollywood, Beverly Hills, and Santa Monica. We next visited Santa Barbara, Monterey, Palo Alto, San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento and Yosemite Park. From Yosemite Park we made an extra day's drive over into Nevada going by Lake Tahoe, Carson City and Reno, returning to California by Marysville, and going north to Red Bluff. We then drove to Portland, Ore., and Vancouver, Washington, following the route through Granite Pass, Eugene and Salem, Oregon.

Leaving Portland we started east following the Columbia highway down to Umatilla, Oregon. We then crossed the river again and drove to Ritzville, Washington, which is about seventy miles south of Spokane. Driving back to Pendleton, Oregon, from Walla Walla, Washington, we continued our journey to Yellow Stone Park by following the old Oregon trail through Boise and Pocatello, Idaho.

From Yellow Stone we drove back to Pocatello, down to Salt Lake City, Utah, and then over the valley route through Granger, Rawlins and Laramie, Wyoming, to Denver and Colorado Springs, Colorado. Leaving Colorado Springs we returned home by way of Kansas City, Topeka, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Dayton, Ohio, Charleston, West Virginia, and Roanoke, Virginia.

Among the principal things of interest to us was the mountain scenery of Tennessee, rice and cotton fields of Arkansas, the oil fields of Oklahoma, and the wheat fields of Texas. From Texas we entered New Mexico where many interesting things are to be seen. Here we find the old Spanish city of Santa Fe, Indians and their villages and mountain scenery. Between Santa Fe and Albuquerque, on old Santa Fe trail, is to be found one of the marvels of road building in America. The road is cut out of volcanic lava in the face of an almost sheer precipice. It has twenty three hair-pin turns, some of them having very steep grades, in a distance of one and one-half miles and the drop is one thousand feet. We also had much desert driving to do in this state, and made good use of the two desert bags which we purchased.

From New Mexico we next entered the state of Arizona, where we find the Painted Desert, Petrified Forest, and Grand Canyon. The Painted Desert is a canyon like formation of earth, containing many different colors, while the Petrified Forest consists of more than one hundred square miles of stone trees. The most noted tree in the whole reservation is the one forming the Natural Bridge. It is about four feet in thickness, one hundred and eleven feet long, and bridges an opening forty-four feet wide.

Passing on to Grand Canyon we find a trough 6,000 to 7,000 feet deep, ten to twenty miles wide, hundreds of miles long and peopled with hundreds of peaks taller than any mountain east of the Rockies. It was here that Mr. Parker and the writer walked the Bright Angel trail, a distance of eight miles, from the rim of the Canyon to the Colorado river. We had it very easy going down, but were almost exhausted after having finished our climb out nine hours after we started down.

Our next state was California where a variety of interesting places are to be seen. We find deserts, mountains and plains as well as the cities of San Diego, Los Angeles which is practically surrounded by mountains, some of them more than a mile high, Hollywood, Beverly Hills, and Santa Monica. Following the coastal highway north to San Francisco you either drive over mountains or right along between them and the sea most of the distance. Other points of interest are San Francisco and the Golden Gate, China Town, Sacramento the capital, Palo Alto, the home of President Hoover, and the Yosemite Park.

In the park, high up in the mountains, we find the Mariposa grove of big trees, the largest being the Grizzly giant, whose diameter is 29.6 feet and height 204 feet. There is also another tree of about 26 feet in diameter near this one, which has a road way cut through it. Yosemite valley itself occupies eight square miles, and is surrounded by huge rocks ranging in height from 2,500 to 5,000 feet. Here we find a number of waterfalls with a drop of from 320 to 1,600 feet.

Continuing our journey through the snow capped Sierras around Lake Tahoe we were soon in Carson City, Nevada. Here we were shown through the state penitentiary and saw the death chamber in which the state took the life of a man only a few weeks ago by using lethal gas. We were told that only five seconds were required to kill the man and the cost to the state was only 90c.

From Carson City we drove to Reno and on to Salem, Oregon, stopping long enough to inspect the capitol building, Portland and out to the Columbia highway which alone has thirty-two attractions for the tourist. Such as bridges, water falls, fish hatchery, tunnels, and winding roads.

Our next state was Idaho which has much desert and barren land with only 20% of the land under cultivation. However, there are rich farming sections around Boise, Pocatello and other cities and towns where irrigation can be carried on.

Next we come to Yellow Stone Park where one could spend two or three weeks viewing the mountain scenery, geysers, water falls, canyons, lakes and hot springs. Here "Old Faithful" can be seen about every hour shooting a two hundred foot stream of water into the air. It was here that we had the misfortune of having a portion of our groceries eaten by a large black bear, which happened around on the night of July 4th. We were sleeping in our car that night, as many others were doing due to crowded conditions, and this unwelcome visitor arrived early next morning and disturbed us by getting into our grocery box which was fastened to the running board of the car.

We also had another interesting and exciting experience when crossing the mountains going over into Nevada. While driving along one morning about 7 o'clock we were suddenly confronted with a man, who was standing in road crying for help. Then we saw a woman lying beside the road apparently injured, but for fear of a hold up scheme we kept driving. After getting past and seeing that the woman had mercurochrome instead of blood, on her face we really felt good. However, the test really came after driving for about one hundred yards more. Here we found two men with about fifteen horses with the road blocked. We gave them to understand that we were really in a hurry and finally got by without being molested.

From Yellow Stone we drove to Salt Lake City, a place that appealed to the writer in particular. Here is the beautiful city of wide streets which were laid off by Brigham Young, the founder of the Mormon church in that city. The population of the city is about 150,000, and 40% or about 60,000 are connected with the Mormon church. The Temple block is a ten-acre square enclosed by a stone wall twelve feet high and three feet thick with large gates on each of the four sides. Within the walls are the greatMormon temple, Tabernacle, Assembly Hall, Museum, first house built in Utah, and Bureau of Information. Visitors are allowed to see everything except inside of the Temple. None but Mormons are permitted to enter this building.

While here we took a dip in Great Salt Lake which is more fascinating than bathing in the ocean. This Great Dead Sea, the largest in the world, is located 18 miles west of the city. It is about 50 miles wide and 75 miles long with an average depth of 13 feet. The water is 22% salt and a person cannot sink, but bobbles around like cork.

The last point of interest is Pikes Peak, Colorado. After arriving in Colorado Springs we had a drive of thirty miles to reach the summit of the mountain. We drove the first twelve miles and arrived at the toll gate where we were relieved of a fee of $2.00 each. Our car was heavily loaded and we had to pull about fourteen miles of the last eighteen in low gear. We also had to drive in low gear a good portion of the distance back down. The road is wide enough in most places for cars to pass but is no place for careless drivers.

The total number of miles covered in making the tour was 9,900, and we burned 594 gallons of gasoline or an average of 16 1-2 miles per gallon. We bought high test most of the time paying from 13 1-2 to 30 cents per gallon or an averae of 24 cents. The other parties making the tour with the writer were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parker, Mrs. Ferree and our five-year old son. Our total expenses for the trip including car expenses, groceries, cold drinks and ice cream and cottage rent was $390.00 or an average of $78.00 per person.

One should have as much as sixty days to make such a tour; however, we had the different points of interest outlined before leaving home, and made our schedule fine by driving from 15 to 18 hours per day.

AN OPEN LETTER

Chancellor Charles W. Flint of Syracuse University sent the following "open letter" to Judge W. S. Andrews of Syracuse, former justice of the New York Court of Appeals, and James W. Wadsworth. former United States senator, on July 26. Judge Andrews and Senator Wadsworth had been recently announced as directors of the Association Opposed to the Prohibition Amendment.

Hon. James W. Wadsworth
Mt. Morris,
Hon. W. S. Andrews,
S. A. & K. Building,
Syracuse, New York

Dear Sirs:

Having received a few invitations to join the Association opposed to national prohibition of which you are announced as officers, and knowing several of my friends have received the same opportunity, I am interested in information on a few items regarding your principles and your program.

While you and I may differ on methods, I am sure we do not differ in our desire for the best possible social order and in our desire effectively to curb the liquor traffic and to lessen drinking and its Siamese, crime, to the lowest possible point.

I. If I, or any other citizen, became persuaded that your plan and program to attain this object would be more workable and more efficient than the present provision, we should co-operate with you to that end.

The prominent places you have occupied in public life make me sure you would not be parties to a mere "anti" movement, or that you would join in the chicanery of trying to capitalize dissatisfaction merely to get votes, without a definite and constructive proposal to be set forth as a substitute for the present base, or, in other words, some plan which, with similar support, in American conditions, would lessen drinking and crime. "Leaving it to the states" is, of course, recognized at once as an evasive answer. I am sure men like yourselves will not be content with such an attempt to sidestep the issue in a matter of such serious import.

What, then, is your proposal?

In the absence of a definite and announced plan, some have assumed you have favored the return of the saloon, the system which, after decades of experimentation with practically all other plans including state dispensaries, had been adopted as most effective.

Or is your plan "Government control?" If so, does your program include Government manufacture and importation as well as Government sales, or do you favor having the Government act as a sales staff for the brewers and distillers?

Or have you chosen some other method? What substitute would you make for the present legislation?

II. A second major point—what is the attitude of yourself and your fellow Association members toward the Constitution and the present laws so long as they stand in the Constitution and on the statute books?

I understand one of the purposes of your organization as stated in the Articles of Incorporation to be:

"To favor and encourage obedience to the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution and all laws passed to carry into effect the provisions of that amendment, at the same time conducting an educational campaign to convince the electorate that its repeal would be for the best interests of the country."

This is a high-minded attitude to which no one can take exception even if he disagrees with the object of the "educational" campaign.

But are your members, by this, definitely committed scrupulously to observe the laws and abstain from patronizing those breaking the law? Is this as binding on them as a "pledge" or "agreement"? If you and your members are so pledged or committed, making it clear to the public will immeasurably strengthen confidence in your Association, in the purity of the motives of its members and in the genuineness of their professions and claims.

In spite of the heavy financial contributions of brewers and distillers to your 1928 campaign funds, I understand those have been denied "voting membership," "so that the Association may be free from unfair accusation of financial interest in the subject of its work, a pledge of strict personal observance of the law and of abstinence from dealing with those violating the law would be quite impressive. It is surely implied in the declaration of purpose above.

From this same declaration of purpose, am I right in assuming that you and your Association will actively 'favor and encourage obedience" to existing prohibition laws? Pardon the query; I have no question regarding your attitude as an ex-United States senator and as an ex-justice of the Court of Appeals, but the attitude of some of your members and officials justifies a call for assurance on this point.

Your national leader, Mr. Stayton, who has had large funds to use for publications and for propaganda, is reported to have been asked before the Senate committee, "Have you any literature where you advise the people to obey the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act?" and to have replied, "I don't recall that I have, sir."

Do the members of your Association stand squarely with the declaration of purpose of the organization? Will you and they be active in suppressing bootlegging and all such violations of the law? If so, that announcement will cause consternation in the realms of the lawless, for the support of you and your Association added to existing efforts will go a long way toward cleaning up this brood. There is fear in some quarters that their present boldness and defiance is due to the mistaken idea that they have at least the passive sympathy of your Association and are serving it by furnishing the main argument.

Are we to understand that the members of the Association recognize they are committed by their membership to co-operate actively with the Government and all others in securing obedience to the prohibition laws? Will approximately fifty per cent. of the campaign receipts be used to "encourage obedience"?

Or, to put it more frankly and squarely, will you and the members of your Association by personal observance of the law and by active co-operation honestly "encourage obedience" to the eighteenth amendment and supporting laws, even if this may so improve conditions as to weaken the effectiveness of the argument most used by your group, viz., "It can't be enforced"?

You and I may differ or may agree on the advisability of handling the liquor problem constitutional amendment, also in your opinions regarding more or less drinking, better or worse social and political conditions. These can be discussed on a high plane with good spirit in due time and place; but is it not proper and pertinent to ask at the outset the above questions, which in summary are:

What definite proposal have you set forth to replace the present provision for dealing with the evils of the liquor traffic?

In view of the declared purpose of your Association, does membership in the Association imply scrupulous personal observance of the law, and are the Association and its members pledged to active support of efforts to secure obedience to the prohibition laws?

STUDENT LOAN FUND FOR HIGH POINT COLLEGE

We are receiving applications from students who need help to enter college this fall.

Will all the auxiliaries please see that they send in funds sufficient to meet these needs?

Our secretary for Student Loan fund says she will raise two scholarships outside the auxiliary. This is a fine spiriit since we get only 20 per cent of the budget for this fund unless special money is raised for it.

I hear from some who say: "I cannot come unless I can get a $100 loan." Let's get busy and make it possible to help as many as need the loan.

One young lady told me recently that she hopes to get her loan paid back this winter. She is a graduate who is teaching. Have you a secretary of Student Loan fund for High Point college in your auxiliary? You should have.

A Correction

Last week we had the pleasure of reporting a gift of $500 to the Home; but through our poor writing the name got into print wrong. It was Mrs. M. E. Moore, of Siler City, instead of "Mrs. M. E. Moser," who was so kind as to send check for that amount We gladly correct this error.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. Mary Deal, Washington, D. C., 1 suit of pajamas, 6 blouses, 2 pair hose.

The young women of First Church, Winston, clothing child, 2 dresses, 1 pair bloomers, 2 pair hose, and 1 gown.

Daily Vacation Bible School, Mt. Pleasant, Guilford, 3 aprons.

These gifts are timely and we thank you.

Rejoice With Us

The Octagon soap people have agreed to receive the coupons we have, 98,000 in number, and send us at once a large sized General Electric refrigerator, and permit us to send them the remaining 8,000 coupons at an early date. So we shipped the 98,000 coupons last Saturday, and just as soon as the refrigerator can be shipped to us we will have it installed in our milk house.

We are getting from 30 to 35 gallons of milk per day now, and need the refrigerator very badly.

We thank everybody who helped in any way to get it, and we thank the company for making this concession and shipping before the full number of coupons are in hand; but:

Hurry! Hurry!

Hurry and send us every coupon to be had in your home, or community. It is based upon our faith in our good people that we asked the company to do this, and secured their permission. They are trusting us to send the other 8,000 quickly, and we are trusting you to help us do it soon.

If you have only a half dozen coupons, and cannot collect any more, please put them in an envelope and mail them to us; for everyone will count now. You will help us quickly now, we know, and we thank you.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON.

GOOD TIMES

Think "good times"—
It is state of mind
That brings prosperity
And puts dull days behind.

Talk "good times"
No matter what they say,
Sane, optimistic talk
Will drive the clouds away.

Act "good times"—
Be equal to the test;
Compel "good times" to come,
Resolve to do your best.

Spread "good times"—

POWERFUL MOTIVE

It was the young barrister's first case, and he was bubbling over with pride and enthusiasm as he stood in court.

"Now," said he, addressing the defendant, "you say you came to town to look for work? It put it to you there was another, a stronger motive that brought you all this distance."

"Well," hesitated the defendant, "there was —"

"Ah!" cried the barrister, triumphantly. "And what was it?"

"A locomotive."

"I Am the Way, the Truth, and the Life"

I am the way that leads to God:
All other paths will lead astray.
Be ever mindful of your course,
And choose the strait and narrow way.

I am the truth that tells of God:
I am the Father's perfect Son.
You see in Me what is in Him,
In heart combined We two are one.

I am the life that flows from God:
The life that all may now receive—
The gift of God to those who come,
Forsake their sins, in Me believe.

Trouble We Know Not Of

The following news paragraph is from a Methodist Episcopal church paper. It deals with the question of presiding elders. The founders of the Methodist Protestant church decided over a hundred years ago that the service of this piece of ecclesiastical machinery is more theoretical than real. Hence our church has never been burdened with presiding elders. They have caused considerable trouble in the Methodist Episcopal churches in addition to the expense of theri support. The Oregon conference it seems has found a way to do away with at least one. Here is the news item with comment:

By a majority of 69 to 32, the members of the Oregon Conference, at the recent session of that body, voted to reduce the number of districts from four to three, as follows: Portland, 57 charges; Salem, 57, and Cascade, 42. "If the vote can be analyzed," says the reporter for The Christian Advocate, Pacific Edition, "it was less concerned with effective administration either by three or four units than it was interested in some means of reducing a mounting overhead that is becoming a burden and for service that often seems more theoretical than real."

Painful Maladjustment In Missionary Work

We publish this week an article reporting court action in a case of interest to every Methodist Protestant; the controversy between the W. F. M. S. and the Board of Missions. It is unfortunate that the matter had to be referred to the courts. We believe that this might have been avoided had the last General Conference taken the time to go into the matter thoroughly and understand the situation fully. It was easy to assume that the General Conference, being the highest representative body in the church, had full authority to determine the relationship between the two missionary agencies. If the General Conference thought the two ought to be merged, then it had only to vote to bring it about. But the case was not so simple as that. When the W. F. M. S. was organized fifty years ago it agreed to work in harmony with the Board of Missions, but reserved to itself the right to control its own funds. It also received a charter from the State of Pennsylvania. It was therefore under obligation from two sources: from its relation to the church and to the state. Moreover, before the General Conference met, a referendum was taken which revealed the fact that a majority of the members of the W. F. M. S. were opposed to the merger. Had the General Conference been made to realize this, we do not see how it could have voted as it did. Respect for a noble band of women who for years at personal sacrifice had carried on foreign missionary work for our church would have forbidden such a course. Rather the Conference would have tendered these women a hearty vote of thanks and bidden them Godspeed. After the Conference voted for the merger, in the face of the protest against it, we were not surprised that the officers of the W. F. M. S. referred the matter to the courts to ascertain the proper course for them to pursue. But the courts cannot undo the harm done by that unfortunate vote of the General Conference. Let the harm be reduced to the smallest possible dimensions. Let not the missionaries in foreign lands be made to suffer on account of this difference of opinion as to mode of administration. Let not good brethren and sisters lose the spirit of fraternity through a misunderstanding. Let none lose the missionary spirit in an altercation about the best way to do missionary work. There may yet be harmony. God sees how. May He lead!

Dr. Lyman E. Davis Suddenly Taken

In a little over a year our general church organ, Methodist Protestant-Recorder, has lost three editors by sudden death. Benson was taken, Lewis was taken, and on Tuesday of last week Davis was taken. Three distinct and great losses to the church. The genial spirit of Dr. Davis and his disposition to help where and whom he could endeared him to many. It is not too much to say that he had hundreds of friends. In editorial ability he was excelled by few now living. He wielded a ready pen and expressed himself with grace and force. His place will be hard to fill. He was a popular pastor before he became editor, and served two consecutive terms as president of the General Conference. He was the son of a minister and was an alumnus of Adrian College.

THE CHURCH AND THE PREACHER IN POLITICS

By Ernest H. Cherrington, LL.D., Litt.D.

General Secretary, World League Against Alcoholism

Has the church the right to work as well as to pray for the coming of the kingdom? Have non-Christians a monopoly of political rights? Does Christianity disfranchise a citizen or does it prevent him from concerted action with others like-minded for the public welfare? These and like questions rise to the mind on reading the continuous assaults upon the church and upon outstanding moral leaders who dare to urge that "righteousness exalteth a nation but sin is a reproach to any people." Two recent and very timely books discuss this subject. They are "The Church in Politics by Stanley High, (published by Harper & Brothers, New York, $2) and "The Preacher and Politics," by W. Wofford T. Duncan (published by the Abingdon Press, New York, $1.25).

Mr. High reminds us that "it is not the church in politics that is the issue at all. It is rather the church in politics on behalf of certain questions which these particular editors, Congressmen and lesser crusaders desire to settle in a fashion which the church in politics makes very difficult." While Mr. Duncan urges that "Most of the expressed fear that the church will lose her spiritual power comes from those who have never shown any interest in preserving the spiritual life of the church." Mr. High carries the war into the enemy's territory when, on this phase of the question, he remarks: "So there is nothing new in the demand that the church give up 'meddling' and return to 'the good old gospel'. Such a demand, George Bernard Shaw points out, has always been 'the favorite defensive resort of the people who, consciously or subconsciously, are quite determined not to have their property meddled with by Jesus or any other reformer'."

Two standpoints from which to view the church are afforded, the first in this statement by Mr. High: "With due regard, therefore, for its human frailties it still remains true that the church in the United States today is in politics simply because politics is one agency whereby the extension of its moral ideals will be furthered or delayed. The church has not injected moral issues into politics. They were there long before the first political parson became concerned over their fate. The churches, doubtless, would keep clear of politics if kept clear of morals. But politics has always involved moral questions and probably always will. At present, therefore, the churches are no more likely to surrender their right to political action than politicians are likely to ignore those social and international issues which affect the modern Christian's conceptions of the aims of Christ. As long as the forces of unrighteousness are in politics the forces of righteousness, in brief the churches, are likely to remain there."

With this one might read Mr. Duncan for the reverse of the picture: "There are great cities in this land, with numerous churches, flourishing Bible classes, and prsoperous Sunday Schools, where political corruption, flagrant lawlessness, and civic indifference abound. In these cities it is almost impossible to secure an outstanding Christian citizen even to be a candidate for the office of mayor. Political machines dominate the government and carry their slimy ramifications down through the school and the home. On election days only thirty per cent. of the better citizens go to the polls, while the underprivileged and immoral classes turn out one hundred per cent. Sunday after Sunday throughout the year preachers and Bible-class teachers tell their hearers of corrupt practices in the days of Joshua and David, and much detailed study is given to the way in which the local politics of Jerusalem and the federal corruption of Rome conspired with the civic indifference of the people to perpetrate that gigantic miscarriage of justice, the crucifixion of Jesus. Yet no reference is made to the parallel corruption at that very hour within a radius of a few miles of those churches. Under negative preaching corrupt politicians are born and reared."

It is noteworthy that both these authors, writing independently make the same point and use the same illustration. Mr. High reminds us of the effectiveness of the work done by the church and asserts: "The Anti-Saloon League 'the church in action against the saloon,' is continually under fire because of the efficiency of its political organizaton and the nature of the issue it represents rather than because the church has no other political plank in its platform and no other political facilities at its disposal." And Mr. Duncan emphasizes the same point when he says: "No longer is the church scorned because of the futility of its efforts. It is now being excoriated by its enemies because they have felt the potency of its opposition. The Anti-Saloon League, for example, which is 'the church in action against the saloon,' does not by any means fight 'as one that beateth the air.' The swift defeat of liquor candidates and causes is blamed on that strenuous body. Its bitter enemies are those who have felt its power. The same is true of other temperance and reform organizations which are the offspring of the church."

The unselfish attitude of the Christian people or of the churches of the country when organized for effective social action is developed by Mr. High in these words: "But it is a fundamental fact that the churches of the United States have gone into politics exclusively on behalf of moral issues and never for their own ecclesiastical or temporal aggrandizement. This fact qualitatively distinguishes between the political activities of the churches of the present and of certain other periods of Christian history." Mr. Duncan makes the same point thus: "The Protestant church in furthering these reform movements is gaining nothing for itself as such. If it were seeking personal promotion for its ministers or members it would take a different course. No man joins the Anti-Saloon League or any other reform hoping to gain favor with the politicans. They are not moved to partiality by the continuous prodding to ethical conduct which reform leaders give. Just the opposite is the effect. The politicians would breathe a sigh of relief all over the land if every reform society were permanently withdrawn. Because Protestantism will not withdraw from the field of battle for civic righteousness she receives all manner of abuse. The press, the theatre, the novelists, and the cynical magazine editors find their favorite indoor sport in condemning militant Protestantism at the point where it assumes a prophetic attitude toward public wrong."

Mr. High does not attempt to avoid the fact that the churches do have a political function today but asserts plainly: "But it is, I think, apparent that when the church today goes into politics—that is, accepts politics as one among many agencies whereby a more abundant life may be helped or hindered—it takes its apologetic from the tradition not of the priests, but of Jesus and the eighth century prophets." Mr. Duncan in his exposition of the same general principle goes a bit further and reminds us that not alone the church but the religion of Jesus itself, "cuts sharply across the path of the political partisan. While for a time it may seem to travel the same road with him, the roads soon diverge. Again the Anti-Saloon League serves as an illustration. Formed largely by Republicans, and sometimes called a partisan organization, its full history reveals that it has stood often with the Democrats and that it belongs to neither party. The cordial hatred of politicians of both parties is high testimony to the fact that it has been cleaving closely to the line and has cut across all partisanship.''

The whole issue in regard to the rights of organized Christianity to secure social action against recognized evil is thus very succinctly and yet fully presented by Mr. High: ''Once establishment was forbidden and religious liberty secured, the church, under the Constitution, came into the same position relative to the government as that of any other voluntary association of citizens. Aside from those two issues there is no Constitutional limitation upon the political activities of the churches. The present movement to disfranchise the churches may have some legitimate foundation, but not in the Constitution of the United States. The spokesmen for the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America do no more violence to the Constitution when they petition Congress, than the representatives of the National Education Association or the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. From the standpoint of our fundamental law there is no more reason for attacking Bishop Cannon as a political parson than for assailing Nicholas Murray Butler as a political pedagogue. The Constitution makes no discrimination between a cassock and a cap and gown.''

Mr. High in his discussion of ''the liquor war'' and the church's part in it has this to say: ''The churches, doubtless, have made many and grievous mistakes in their dry crusade. But it should be fairly clear that they made no mistake when they accepted liquor as a moral issue. And many of the wets, in their fanatical condemnation of the saloon, seem ready to agree to that. Where the churches erred, so these wets go on to say, was in carrying their perfectly justifiable movement against the saloon to the extreme of establishing prohibition. The saloon, they say, was a moral issue. Prohibition is not. Quite the contrary.

''Now that assertion is noteworthy. If in ten years, prohibition, at its worst, has been good enough, by contrast, to convince the wets that the saloon is done, then obviously this noble experiment has been far from fruitless. For that conversion of sentiment the churches well can boast. But we can afford, perhaps, to make a closer examination of this line of thought. Such an examination will take us into the history of the prohibition movement and bring to light some of the reasons why the churches, in their drive against liquor, ended up with the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act.'' To which he later added: ''The churches went into politics on the liquor question because the very regulative measures which today's wets declare to be morally necessary met, when first proposed, with the well-organized political opposition of the liquor interests. * * * *

''But here again it will be pointed out that the churches should have been content with regulation. And they might have been, if regulation had regulated. But it did not. And national prohibition, in brief, is a result of the failure. The churches found out that the business of selling liquor, under whatever restraints, remained an outlaw. From the very first up to the ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment the wet forces fought every measure—local option, zoning, eight o'clock closing—that was designed to put liquor under legal restraint. And when these laws were passed they were promptly violated. Liquor was no more restricted before prohibition than it has been prohibited since. 'Bootlegging' and 'speakeasies' are not prohibition-made phrases. They hark back to the liquor lawlessness of regulation days.''

Concerning the altered character of the prohibition issue now he writes: ''Liquor will be got rid of and prohibition, thereby, succeed when and only when we make our currently popular cocktail degeneracy as much a thing to be shunned, and our currently canonized race of bootleggers as much to be despised, as the drunks and the booze-venders of a generation ago were shunned and despised.

''Such a changed program is particularly important in regard to the practices and the point of view of the younger generation It is widely asserted that prohibition is debauching our youth who are said to be drinking more than ever. I do not believe that. But I do believe that there is less criticism of the drinking young person and less condemnation of the thing he drinks. This is the case, in the main, because the younger generation has not been taught to identify this commodity as the same thing that, after seventy-five years of experimenting, the American people outlawed, or to recognize that the effects of its use are the same today as they have always been.''

These books are both timely. They are honestly written. They do not seek to avoid any of the implications of the question they discuss. They are bold, frank and inspiring. They are worth reading and rereading. They will bring new courage to those who today ''dare to be a Daniel'' and they should put heart and valor into the souls of those who ''cry peace, peace, when there is no peace.'' They will have a wide circulation. They deserve the widest.

WASHINGTON AND THE WHISKEY INSURRECTION

Writing in the Christian Advocate, New York, Mr. Frank G. Porter makes a valuable contribution to the public understanding of the first President of the nation. Mr. Porter says:

''In the present fierce fight against the Eighteenth Amendment, there is an appeal to history, and we are told that the 'fathers' of the American Revolution and the Constitution would never have stood for national enforcement of any law against the liquor traffic, especially 'shotgun' enforcement.

''Let the appeal be to history. Two years after the inauguration of Washington as President, Congress (March 3, 1791) placed an excise tax on the manufacture of spirituous liquors, which was generally accepted throughout the country. It was not pleasing to men along the frontier. Some of the settlers of western Pennsylvania, whose means of transportation to the seaboard were crude, found it profitable to condense their corn and grain into whsikey, and to these mountaineers the tax seemed unfair. The Government heard their complaints and made such reduction as possible, only to be met by riotous demonstrations.

''In 1794 there was open revolt; at a mass meeting near Pittsburgh (including two counties) it was decided to resist the law by force. They attacked the inspector, seized his papers of office, and destroyed his buildings by fire. The Associate Justice of the United States said the law could not be enforced by the marshal of the district. The Governor of Pennsylvania awaited action by national government. Jefferson denounced the law and its enforcement. President Washington issued a proclamation commanding the mal-contents to desist. On August 7 the President did two things: he appointed commissioners to bring about obedience to the law, but they were unsuccessful; at the same time he made a call for 15,000 militia from the states of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey. Would these citizen troops march against their fellows of a neighboring State to enforce a national law? March they did, with Washington in command. When they reached Bedford, Pa., the President returned to the seat of government, leaving the chief command with the Governor (Lee) of Virginia.

"By the time the army reached Pittsburgh the insurgents had dropped out of sight. Some were convicted of rebellion but, on signing an oath of submission, were pardoned by Washington. The oath of submission taken by these Pennsylvanians, with their signatures, is in the Library of Congress. It is given with thirty-four names in The Pageant of America, Vol. 8, P. 186:

" 'Pittsburgh Allegheny County,
September 11, 1794.

" 'I do promise to submit to the Laws of the United States; that I will not directly nor indirectly oppose the execution of the Acts for raising a Revenue on Distilled Spirits and Stills, and that I will support as far as the Laws require the civil authority in affording the protection due to all officers and other citizens.'

"So ended the 'Whiskey Rebellion.' The tax was retained. Every historian has marked with satisfaction this first test of the authority of the Government, agreeing in substance with Elson, 'The Constitution had borne the strain, and the friends of law and order had won a victory.'

How Washington Felt About It

"President Washington, November 17, 1794, sent to Congress a message, chiefly having to do with the Whiskey Insurrection, giving at length all the steps taken in dealing with the matter. As the historians do not quote from the message, it may be well to give three or four sentences to show the feeling of the President and the attitude of the early Americans. (Select Documents of United States History, 1776-1867, pp. 130-5.)

" 'I wish to acknowledge,' says the President to Congress, 'the efficacious and patriotic co-operation which I have experienced from the Chief Magistrates of the States to which my requisitions have been addressed . . . To every description, indeed, of citizens, let praise be given. But let them persevere in their affectionate vigilance over that precious depository of American happiness, the Constitution of the United States.' The march of the army moved him profoundly, and he writes: 'It has been a spectacle, displaying to the highest advantage the value of Republican Government, to behold the most and the least wealthy of our citizens standing in the same ranks as private soldiers, pre-eminently distinguished by being the army of the Constitution, undeterred by a march of 300 miles over rugged mountains, by the approach of an inclement season, or by any other discouragement."

"Before writing the above message, Washington's attention was called to several Methodist preachers. The early Methodist preachers gloried in our 'admirable Revolution,' and 'did not hesitate to utter their solemn convictions on political matters involving Christian ethics.' (Stevens). As early as 1793, when the insurrection in Pennsylvania was alarming the country, Washington wrote to Thornton Fleming, Valentine Cook and William M'Lenahan, preachers in the midst of the agitation, thanking them for 'using their influence in their several spheres to inculcate the necessity of a peaceable compliance with the law.' 'Your conduct on this occasion, gentlemen,' he adds, 'is that of good citizens and certainly meritorious, and I hope and trust that those good and enlightened characters who have at heart the true interest of the public, will endeavor to effect, by fair and just representations, what it would be extremely painful, however necessary, to carry into operation by compulsive means."

NATIONAL CHURCHES

Pursuant to instructions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South's, general conference at Dallas last spring Bishop Edwin DuBose Mouzon of Charlotte, N. C., sailed into Rio de Janeiro's mountain-shadowed harbor last week. A motor procession carried him and his party to a conference with important Brazilian Methodists. They at once began to write a constitution for a Methodist church of Brazil. Just arrved from Europe with his new wife and meeting them was Bishop James Cannon, Jr., the Southern Methodists' missionary bishop of Brazil, as well as chairman of their Board of Temperance and Social Service. When at the end of this month Brazilian Methodists adopt their constitution and elect their own bishop, they will be independent of the Methodist Church, South.

Last month Methodist Bishop Warren A. Candler (South) and Methodist Bishop Francis John McConnell (North) met in Mexico City with Mexican Methodists and wrote a constitution for a Methodist Church of Mexico. The middle of next month Mexicans will organize their church, elect their bishop.

Last week Methodist Bishop Herbert Welch (North) was on the Pacific coast. The first week of September he will sail from Vancouver for Korea on the Empress of Japan. With him will be Bishop James Chamberlain Baker (North) of Korea. At Seoul they will convene with Bishop William Benjamin Beauchamp (South), seven other U. S. Methodist clergymen and ten Koreans to organize a Methodist Church of Korea.

In Japan Northern Methodists, Southern Methodists and Canadian Methodists (now part of the United Church of Canada) established the autonomous Japan Methodist Church.

In Korea, Mexico and Brazil the National Methodist churches will be in "competition" with national Presbyterian churches. The Presbyterians have been the most active of U. S. denominations in nationalizing their missions. There are Presbyterian churches of Persia, India and China. In China this church per se is nominal. It has only 17,000 communicants. There is a reason. Some years ago most Chinese Presbyterians decided to merge with other Protestants in China to form the Church of Christ in China (communicants now 120,000). Dissident Presbyterians keep up the old church organization. Presbyterians are the most potent Protestants in China. It happens now that both the Chinese head of the Church of Christ in China, Dr. Cheng-Ching-yi, and the Caucasian head, Dr. Raymond Kepler, are Presbyterians.—Time.

—We sometimes wonder whether God is not trying through the prevailing drought to bring the people back to a sense of their dependence on Him. Many have forgotten God and do not have Him in any of their thoughts. People would be better off without bread than without God.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Dr. L. E. Davis

Word came to us last week, but too late to make a report through the HERALD, of the passing of Dr. L E. Davis, Editor of the Methodist Protestant-Recorder. We do not know the particulars of his death, but understand that his going was sudden. For many years he has been an outstanding man among us, and one of our most capable leaders. The North Carolina Conference feels, with the rest of the church, a distinct loss in his passing. We rejoice, likewise, in the thought of his noble life; of the honor in which his name is forever enshrined; and in the assurance of the glorious thingse that are his in the church above. Our tenderest sympathies are extended to his bereaved family.

Archie Gray Williams

This is the young son of Brother and Sister B. M. Williams. For several weeks he has been a patient in the Sternberger Hospital, Greensboro. This hospital is dedicated to the treatment of children, and is thoroughly equipped and well operated. Archie Gray seems to be enjoying his stay there. His disease does not yield readily to treatment, and his recovery will be slow, perhaps, but we trust, sure. He will continue to have our interest and prayers.

Better

We reported last week that Dr. R. M. Andrews was ill; we are glad to report this week that he has been relieved of his suffering, and is able to be out again, though he is still under the care of a physician. He, too, will continue to share in our deep interest and prayers.

Graham, Mt. Pleasant, Haw River

August 17.—These three churches were included in our Sunday program. We began, in a new experience, at Graham. Instead of preaching at 11 o'clock, the usual hour, we preached at 10, and then attended the Sunday School immediately following. This is a "noble experiment" that this church is making, and we acknowledge a liking for it. It seems to us to have merit. It is really one service in two parts, preaching and religious education, with the entire program closing at 11:45. Whether this plan proves satisfactory or not, the church evidences vitality in seeking newer and better ways of doing its work. The congregation will vote next Sunday on whether or not the plan is to be continued. Since our previous visit here a hut has been erected on the church grounds in the rear of the church building. It is 54x38 feet, and well constructed, at a cost of about $1,400. One department of the Sunday School meets in the hut, and the building is found to be very serviceable for various purposes of this active congregation. Brother Minnis and his family have endeared themselves to their people, and to the community, and they are regretfully given up. This feeling is mutual, too. Brother Minnis and his wife will go away with their hearts full of lasting affection for the church, and for the people of the town.

In the afternoon, we were with Brother Hutton and his people at Mt. Pleasant, and had the privilege of preaching in the revival meeting beginning at this time. This is one of our strongest and most progressive rural churches. Among the membership are to be found many of the most substantial people of the community. The church has also a wide connection in former members and friends who have gone from it and have made their homes in other places. They were back in large numbers on this occasion. Rarely do we see so many people at church as we saw here. The large congregation that heard the pastor in the morning was duplicated in the afternoon. We enjoyed the worship and the fellowship of the people, and their attentive interest helped us in our efforts to preach. Brother T. O. Pender had charge of the singing, and is to continue with the meeting during the week. He is a good conductor of evangelistic singing; we commend him to the brethren. Brother J. L. Trollinger was expected on Monday to preach during the meeting. Brother Hutton and his people are earnest in their desires and in their efforts for the success of the work. We shall hope and pray that a real revival may attend the labors of this week, and that the year may be crowned with a happy and successful ending. Our opinion is that Mt. Pleasant should be an honor roll charge.

We were glad to have the company of Dr. W R. Goley on this trip to Mt. Pleasant, and the return.

Our night appointment was with the Haw River church. Here again we had the opportunity of preaching in a revival meeting, and to a large congregation. The two Methodist churches of the community are uniting in this meeting, a sensible and Christian thing to do. The churches are within a stone's throw of each other, and neither congregation is strong. Rev. Mr. Clark, the pastor, was present and had charge of the service. We found him congenial and brotherly. Brother Loy, our pastor there, and Brother Carroll, who is preaching in this meeting, were each engaged in other appointments at this time. We were sorry that they could not be present. There was a splendid spirit in this service, we thought, and a good interest. Our hope and prayer is that they may have a real revival. We have a very faithful membership at this church, and the work in general appears to be encouraging. The brethren assured us that salary and budgets would be paid in full. We trust that in every way, these closing weeks may be full of happiness for pastor and people.

Our visit to these three churches was greatly enjoyed by us, and we are grateful to pastors and people for their unstinted courtesy and kindness to us. We shall pray daily that God's rich blessings may attend their labors in these closing weeks.

Winston

August 18, Monday.—We attended a called meeting of the quarterly conference of this church on this date. The purpose of this meeting was to act upon the request of Pastor Surrat for a release from the charge. For a number of years Brother Surrat has desired to attend Yale Divinity School, but has been hindered in this purpose up to this time. He feels now that he must go, or give up the idea, and that, he thinks, he should not do. His stay with the Winston church has been very pleasant for him and for his wife, and they regretted to break the relation. The church was equally reluctant to give them up. Brother and Sister Surrat have a warm place in the hearts of the people here. Their work has been constructive and progressive, and naturally the church feels a distinct loss in their going. But a mutual feeling of good will and esteem characterizes the separation. A pulpit supply committee was created, and provision will be made for carrying on the work during the remainder of the year. Brother and Sister Surrat will leave for Yale September 22, and will continue with the church here until that time.

Leaving

Three of our young men—Minnis, Ballard and Surratt—will temporarily retire from the active work of the conference in September. Brother Minnis, pastor of Graham charge, goes back as a missionary to India; Brother Ballard, associate pastor and director of religious education, First Church, High Point, wll study for two years in Boston University; Brother Surratt, as has been said, will enter Yale Theological School. These young men and their families, by their personal worth and their good works, have won their places in the conference, and we regret to see them go from us, even for a short time. But their ambitions are laudable, and we can not but bid them Godspeed. Our esteem and prayers will follow them, and a warm welcome will await their return. May God richly bless them in their new endeavors, and provide men for the churches that they leave.

Attention Pastors

Please send me a post card report on the following: Special meetings held, and results; salary and budget prospects. We are close enough now to the end of the year for pastors to have a dependable idea as to the finances of their respective charges. We shall appreciate it if they will be as accurate in reporting on this as possible. It is not our custom to use the Herald in requesting these reports; we are doing it this week in the interest of time and economy. We shall be grateful to pastors if they will be prompt in replying, and if they will give to us as full information on these two points as a post card will allow.

"Now Concerning the Collection"

We beg you, pastors and officials, to give much thought, effort and prayer to this during these remaining ten weeks. Our collections are so much in arrears that we can not but feel a growing concern about them. A remark of one of our interested and leading laymen gives us comfort. There is still time, he said, for much improvement, and he expressed the belief that the final results would be gratifying. This is a hopeful and encouraging attitude, and in this spirit we win. Let every pastor and every layman face the task of these closing weeks in this spirit, and the end will have its rich reward. If we do our best, we shall have both an inner sense of satisfaction, and money for the purposes of His kingdom. And surely none of us—pastors and congregations—will be content with less than our best in this matter. Pray much, brethren, work much, and give, "as God hath prospered" you.

Fraternally yours,

August 19, 1930. S. W. Taylor.

AN URGENT CALL

Surely every pastor in the North Carolina Conference takes the Herald and reads it. And surely every Sunday School superintendent reads the Herald. And every Sunday School teacher should read the Herald. And also every Woman's Missionary Worker.

If these four sets of workers take and read the Herald, then we are depending upon you to pass along the word, and in your own way present the matter to each Sunday School in the Conference early in September and take an offering and send directly to us at the Children's Home.

School opens about the middle of September.

1. We have ordered two car loads of coal to be delivered at an early date. Coal and freight must be paid for upon delivery.

2. School supplies for about 95 children must be bought and paid for.

3. Seventy work shirts, and about as many pair of overalls, and also several suits for our older boys must be had soon. Much sewing has been done in our sewing room this summer for both boys and girls. But such clothing as mentioned above must be bought readymade. Rather, it is cheaper to buy it readymade, at wholesale prices.

4. About 100 pair of shoes must be gotten soon.

5. We must continue to buy some food supplies, though we are largely living upon the products of our own gardens and fields at present.

6. Repairs must be made on furnace in Girls' Dormitory before winter comes. It will not heat the building.

All this must be done within the next few days, so we are taking this means of appealing to our people for a good September offering from every church and Sunday School. Please do not overlook this. We know somebody will present this in every Sunday School.

The offerings for the spring and summer have been exceedingly short, and some Sunday Schools and churches have left us out altogether for several months. So the condition with us is serious. We face these immediate needs with almost no funds.

Will individuals and Sunday Schools and churches and missionary societies please take note, and come to our rescue within the next three weeks? We need you and you need us. So please let us hear from you speedily.

We are resorting to this method this time instead of mailing a personal letter to each pastor, and each superintendent. Please consider it a personal letter to everyone who reads it.

This matter weighs heavily upon our hearts. Those from whom we buy expect us to pay, and when a bill runs a bit overtime they are insistent in their demands for pay.

We are looking to you for immediate relief. We know you will help, and we thank you, and may God bless you.

Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. Dixon.

OUR STORY PAGE

LEONARD FELL AND THE SURPRISED ROBBER

In the seventeenth century the night was surely a bad time for traveling. The roads were dark and lonely, and robbers roamed the English streets and wilds from sunset until the dawn.

One Sunday evening, or First Day evening, as he would have told you, Leonard Fell was riding home from a Friends' meeting on horseback. He was the son of Margaret Fell, and a fearless gentleman. He supposed he was alone on the road, when suddenly a hand seized the bridle-rein and stopped his horse. Then, in a rough voice, a robber spoke these words:

"Your money or your life!"

Mr. Fell immediately gave the robber his purse. By the faint moonlight that shone through the trees, the young Friends saw a gleaming pistol in the robber's hand. At the minute the robber caught the flash of Mr. Fell's gold watch chain. With a flourish of the pistol he made another demand:

"Your watch or your life!"

Without a word, Mr. Fell gave the robber his watch. By this time the robber was sure that he was dealing with a coward. Pointing his pistol at the victim's head, he said:

"Your horse or your life!"

That robber probably expected Mr. Fell to tumble off his horse from fear, and he was not at all surprised when the gentleman dismounted and handed over the reins.

The robber's surprise came a mniute later. He mounted the stolen horse and was about to ride away, when Mr. Fell took hold of the bridle-rein and ordered the robber to halt! And then Mr. Fell, holding his own horse by the bridle, preached a sermon to one person, out there on that dark, lonely road.

Meantime the robber sat on the horse's back with a pistol in his hand, and listened to the sermon. He was too astonished to move.

Mr. Fell talked straight to that robber about his sinful deeds and wicked life. In telling the story afterwards, Mr. Fell said that he talked "of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come."

The robber recovered enough from his surprise again to present his pistol, and to say:

"If you don't stop, you are a dead man!"

But he couldn't make Mr. Fell stop talking, and the horse refused to travel on.

The sermon continued. The preacher spoke more earnestly than ever about the robber's sinful life, and begged him to repent and save his soul. At last the amazed robber exclaimed:

"I thought you were a coward—you gave me your money, your watch, and your horse, to save your life; and, now you have nothing more to lose, you risk it by standing there preaching to me."

The answer came: "Though I would not risk my life to save my money, my watch, or my horse, yet I will risk it to save thy soul."

The robber dropped his pistol and dismounted. He gave back to Mr. Fell his money, his watch, and his horse. He then told the story of his life, and how he had gone down hill step by step, until he believed that every man's hand was against him. He had become a highway robber to save his family from starvation. He told Mr Fell that, after he began to drink, he had lost his work and all his friends. He had found every one ready to give him a kick, until, with a sick wife and starving children, he had become desperate. Until that night, the robber believed that no man cared for his soul.

Mr. Fell made his sermon worth while. He promised to give this unfortunate man work if he would promise to change his ways.

The robber did truly repent. He once more became an honest working man and soon won respect for himself and his family. When Mr. Fell risked his life to save a man's soul, he lifted an entire family from despair. And who shall say, what a long, later procession of men, women and children were made happier because of one man's bravery!—Christian Register.

IS COLLEGE OF USE FOR BUSINESS

There is a wide-spread belief among business men that a college training does not really help a young man to make a success in business. This belief receives a rude jolt in an article on "Does Business Want Scholars?" by Walter S. Gifford, in Harper's Monthly Magazine.

Mr. Gifford says:

"The other day a gentleman said to a New York friend of his who is a lawyer, 'My son is going to graduate from the law school this year, and is looking around for a place. Could I send him in to see you?'

"The lawyer replied, 'Certainly; I'd be glad to see him,' but there was no great enthusiasm in his tone.

"The father continued, 'He is on the Law Review, and several offices have spoken to him; but if you will tell me who in your office sees——' He got no farther. 'You send him right in to see me,' answered the lawyer. I'd like to talk to him.'

"The change had come over the lawyer when the father said, 'He is on the Law Review.' That means he is a high-mark man.

"The big law firms seek the high-mark men from the law schools. The profession believes that the man who stands well in his law studies will make a better lawyer than one who does not.

"The hospitals take the same attitude toward medical students. A man with low marks in the medical school is not likely to get an appointment in the best hospitals, for it is the experience of the medical profession that those who stand well in the professional school are more likely to stand well in their profession later on.

"But business, on the other hand, does not as a rule select men on the basis of their marks in college. Perhaps for this reason the undergraduate who intends to go into business does not always consider his scholastic standing in relation to his business career. He is somewhat apt to think of his college course as an era in itself, without influence on his life after graduation. If he does connect his college course with a business future at all, he is likely to think that his athletic or social activities, his work on college papers or in dramatic clubs, or similar extra-curricular efforts, are better training for the future than his academic work."

The reason for this attitude is stated in a single sentence.

"Business believes that a law school teaches a boy law, but that a college does not teach a boy business. Consequently, a boy who stands high in the law school will possess knowledge more immediately useful than one who doesn't, while, no matter how high a boy stands in college, he will not have much, if any, knowledge immediately useful in business."

Studies have been made of this. Mr. Gifford tells us of one made by the Bell Telephone System, which clearly proves that the best students in college earn more in business life than the poorer class of students. The longer the best students are in business, the more rapidly their earnings rise. The longer the poor students are in business, the slower their earnings rise.

"If studies by others corroborate the results of this study in the Bell System, and it becomes clear that the mind well trained in youth has the best chance to succeed in any business. Business will have a surer guide to the selection of able young men that it has used in the past, and the young men who train the muscle or their brains can feel reasonably certain that such training will add to their success in business and, in all probability, to the fruitful and happy use of the leisure which success in business will give them."—The Christian Endeavor World.

THE RULING OF THE COURT—WHERE LIES THE VICTORY?

After long months of waiting, the Woman's Foreign Missionary society and the new Board of Missions have the decisions of the Court of Common Pleas on questions that have alienated these two organizations, and to a considerable degree, disturbed the peace and harmony of the constituency of the church at large. The Board of Missions is acclaiming throughout the denomination that the women have suffered defeat; the women on the other hand are praising God for the signal victory. The Board of Missions is shouting over a minor decision of the court; the Woman's Foreign Missionary society has a doxology in its heart because of the rulings on two major questions. We submit the following facts and leave it to the reader to reach a conclusion.

Those who have kept in close touch with this controversy know that the attorneys who are defending the rights of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society, appealed to the court for a receiver to take charge of the assets of the W. F. M. S. This plan was adopted to protect the society from the invasions of the new Board of Missions. Within seven months after the adjournment of the General Conference of 1928, the Executive Secretary of the Board, with the assistance of the denominational treasurer, collected $28,757.47 of the funds of the society. Some months later Mrs. Lida K. East, treasurer of the W. F. M. S., entrusted $7,534.38 to the denominational treasurer to be sent to the foreign fields—India, China and Japan. To this day she has been unable to secure an accounting as to what became of that money. Later, on advice of attorneys, she sent funds directly to the foreign fields. Dr. Haddaway, on learning this, required the missionaries to return the money to his office. Immediately after the adjournment of the General Conference, the Board of Missions, without consultation, took entire possession of $75,000.00 of property in India, China and Japan, vested in the W. F. M. S. Not content with these invasions, the Board of Missions illegally seized the Missionary Record, the official organ of the society and converted it to its own use. In doing this, it shut the society off from communication with its ten thousand members.

It was invasions such as these that caused the loyal members of the W. F. M. S. to seek protection from the courts. An appeal for a receiver was not the most desirable method of procedure because of its complications, but circumstances made it imperative.

After long delay, the Court of Common Pleas announced its decisions. It dismissed our appeal for a receiver. The Board of Missions and its collaborators were jubilant. They rushed into print and heralded abroad that the women were defeated. The court had dismissed their appeal for a receiver, but they were as silent as the tomb concerning the two major rulings. The dismissal of the plea for a receiver was a minor matter compared with the pronouncement of the court regarding the legal status of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society, and the restrictions it announced for the church body and its officials. These two major decisions strike to the core of the present controversy. Let us note them:

On page one of the Court's Opinion the legal status of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant church ranks as follows: "Corporation of the first class, incorporated in 1882 by decree of the Common Pleas Court of Allegheny County." We have underlined the words "First Class" because of their superlative importance. A first class corporation is self-administrative.

The second major ruling of the court has such a bearing on the present situation that we capitalize it:

"THE CHURCH BODY AND THE OFFICIALS THEREOF ARE WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO SO APPROPRIATE TO ITS OWN MISSION PURPOSES THE FUNDS, ASSETS AND PROPERTY OF THE DEFENDANT CORPORATION TO THE PREJUDICE OF ANY INDIVIDUAL RIGHT."

The Methodist Protestant church, through its General Conference, and the Board of Missions as its representative, have, in their treatment of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society, been doing the very thing that the Court of Common Pleas has ruled they have no authority to do.

Protected by those two outstanding rulings of the court, we are entirely willing—more than that—gratified, that our plea for a receiver has been dismissed. The court in closing indicates a more effective way of presenting our case, and adds these encouraging words:

"A bill which discloses such a state of facts, equity might well give its aid to a proper adjustment."

Did the Woman's Missionary society suffer defeat in the recent rulings of the Court of Common Pleas? We think not.

Our faithful attorneys will hold a conference in a few days to determine what the next step will be.

Lee Anna Starr.

Article VII, Section 3 of the Constitution of the Methodist Protestant church. "Neither the General Conference nor any Annual Conference shall assume power to interfere with the constitutional powers of the civil government, or with the operation of the civil laws."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By J. T. BOWMAN

President C. E. Society, High Point College

August 31: WHY ARE INDUSTRIAL MISSIONS WORTHWHILE?

Scripture Text—1 Cor. 9:9-23.

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Paul, a tradesman, Acts 18:1-6.

Tuesday—Work brings self-respect, 2 Thess. 3:7-10.

Wednesday—Missions build character, 1 Cor. 3:9-15.

Thursday—The duty of work, John 9:14.

Friday—Teaching thrift, Proverbs 13:11.

Saturday—Building a life, Proverbs 14:23.

Bible Hints

"Paul was a working man. To win men we must become as one of them.

"Missionaries are not interested in building boats and houses; they do it to make the people they serve independent, and win them to a higher life.

"We cannot help people at long range. God could not save us except by becoming a man and living our life. So missionaries must work with their hands and teach the habit of work.

"The spiritual motive dominated Paul's life. He did all for the 'Gospel's sake.' That is the spirit of the true missionary."

Thoughts for the Leader

The supreme task of every Christian is to help evangelize the world for Jesus Christ. If for any reason he is not helping to do this great work he is out of harmony and out of step with the world program of his Christ. Then he may be out of step by the methods which he is using or helping to use, for the evangelization of the dark places of the world for Him who came to bring the light. There can be no doubt that man's methods and lack of methods have blocked the progress of missionaries to a great degree at times. By so doing they have done untold harm to the cause of Christ and permitted millions to fold their arms in death without knowing of the blessed Lord who died that they might live.

Suggested Songs

"There Are Lonely Hearts to Cherish," "Lord Send Me," "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go," "Bringing In the Sheaves," "We've A Story to Tell to the Nations," and "Throw Out the Life-line."

Questions to be Considered

1. What is Christ's program for evangeiizing the world? Will it work today?
2. To what do you attribute the failure of missions in many places?
3. Are industrial missions the divine plan for missionary work?
4. What is the supreme task of every Christian?
5. Are we to make Christians out of the heathen by industrial education, or by a changed heart?
6. Did Christ make a program that would work in all ages?
7. Why is the world not evangelized? Who is to blame?
8. Just how interested is this church in the spread of the Gospel in foreign lands? What do we give and do?

Quotable Poetry

"WE'VE A STORY TO TELL"

We've a story to tell to the nations,
  That shall turn their hearts to the right;
A story of truth and sweetness,
  A story of peace and light.

We've a Saviour to show to the nations,
  That shall lift their hearts to the Lord;
A song that shall conquer evil
  And shatter the spear and the sword.

We've a messsage to give to the nations,
  That the Lord, who reigneth above,
Hath sent us His Son to save us,
  And showed us that God is love.

We'vea Saviour to show to the nations,
  Who the path of sorrow has trod,
That all of the world's great people
  Might come to the truth of God.

For the darkness shall turn to dawning,
  And the dawning to noonday bright,
And Christ's great kingdom shall come on earth,
  The kingdom of love and light.

LINEBERRY LADIES' AID

Lineberry Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. Vann B. Wood Saturday, August 9. The meeting was opened by singing, "He Leadeth Me."

Mrs. Vann Wood, vice-president, acted as president in the absence of Mrs. M. T. Skeen, the president.

Mrs. Whit Wood was in charge of the devotional. She read the 91st Psalm. Mrs. Walter Lax led in prayer.

Mrs. Vann Wood read a letter of thanks from Dr. Dixon for the octagon coupons sent in from the society.

The roll was called, 11 members were present. There was one new member, Mrs. R. B. Tucker.

Reports were made by the committees.

The society gave Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lanier $2.50 in sympathy for the loss of their baby.

The meeting adjourned to meet with Miss Nora Carroll in September.

The social committee had very interesting games planned. And everybody seemed to enjoy the social hour.

Mrs. Wood served us with watermelons which was thoroughly enjoyed by every one.

We hope to have all members present at next meeting.

Our special meeting begins September 7. Rev. N. G. Bethea is the help. May we all pray for a great revival.

OLD FRIENDS GET TOGETHER

Before the outbreak of the World war Poultney Bigelow, noted American writer and traveler, and Kiaser Wilhelm II of Germany were close friends. Bigelow admired the German emporer and wrote many books in which he figured. "The German Emperor and His Eastern Neighbors," "The Borderland of Czar and Kaiser," and "History of German Struggle for Liberty" were the titles of some of the books written in those days. But when the war came the friends parted company. Bigelow charged the kaiser with starting the war and hated him as intensely as he had admired him before. No more bitter articles were written against Wilhelm than those by Bigelow. Recently Bigelow and his wife made a journey to Doorn, Holland, for the sole purpose of apologizing to the aged ex-emperor and asking his forgiveness. Bigelow said his conscience hurt him and he was mistaken in his charges. Wilhelm forgave him with all his heart and the two old friends spent three pleasant days at Doorn.—The Pathfinder.

PLEASANT GROVE LADIES' AID

The Pleasant Grove Ladies' Aid met August 6th in the home of Mrs. B. E. Kennedy. The devotional exercise was conducted by Mrs. Vivian Cecil.

We were glad to have two of our members who have been sick back with us. They were Mrs. Ralph Kennedy and Vivian Cecil. Mrs. Homer Veach also is sick. May we all pray to have her back at our next meeting and also in the church.

We had 19 members present and our collection amounted to $20.70.

Our society and church needs more prayer and work, so may we work and pray as never before.

Our pasttor, Rev. D. R. Williams, gave us an interesting talk. I am sure it was enjoyed by all present.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

TO SECRETARIES OF BENEVOLENCES

Business Girls' Home in Baltimore

This home was opened two years ago last May. There are twenty rooms with accommodations for twenty-six girls. The board ranges form six to eight dollars, according to the salary they make. The aim of the Home is to take only those who are making sixteen dollars or less. While the Home can never be self-supporting it is doing a wonderful work in affording a Christian home for girls who come from the country. The superintendent of the Home is one of our own Methodist Protestant women, who is striving to be a real mother to the girls. The age limit is from sixteen to thirty years of age. The Home is supported by the auxiliaries and churches of the Maryland Branch. At the present time there are fifteen girls there.

Please plan to have at each auxiliary meeting something on stewardship. The Christian Stewardship Covenant cards can be had by letting me know how many you could use

SUFFERING CATFISH

When the Mississippi River overflows every year, the countryside is covered with fish. When the waters recede, the fish congregate in stagnant pools. Last week, men in hip boots, were skimming these pools with nets. Every year the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries tries to save the Mississippi's stranded fish before the summer sun dries up the pools. Hauling up load after load of suffering fish, the rescuers return them to the main stream of the river or ship them away to stock special preserves. Black bass, pickerel, pike, pike perch, white bass, yellow perch, crappies cannot stand crowding, bad water, must be rescued first. Buffalo fish, carp and catfish are toughest.

This year, because there has been so little rain, the work was begun a month earlier than usual. Last year flood conditions continued throughout the summer and only five million fish needed saving. This year's total is expected to exceed 150 million.

Equally uncomfortable, last week, were pet goldfish. Equally solicitous was the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries. It advised fish fanciers that on hot days goldfish should be taken from their bowls, put into shallow pans of fresh water.—Animal stories in "Time."

IMPROVED TELESCOPE

John Ritchie, noted American astronomer, and a French astronomer named Cretien, have invented a new type of telescope. It is known as the aplanatic telescope and is only 54 inches long. Although it uses a mirror only 20 inches in diameter it is said that it produces better results than does the 160-inch telescope installed by Ritchie at Mt. Wilson observatory. The American astronomer is experimenting with the new telescope in France on the estate of a French nobleman.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

BRYAN UNIVERSITY

"For the purpose of establishing, conducting and perpetuating a university for the higher education of men and women under auspices distinctly Christian and spiritual, as a testimony to the supreme glory of the Lord Jesus Christ, and to the Divine inspiration and infallibility of the Bible," William Jennings Bryan University was last week chartered to operate as an institution of learning at Dayton, Tenn., scene of its namesake's last triumphs and death. Until buildings are completed, classes will be held at the Rhea County High School. Matriculating students may be of any race, creed or sect, but administrative officers and faculty of the college must be firm believers in Oldtime Religion. First President, also announced last week: Dr. George E. Guille, longtime extension Bible teacher at Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

WOOL PRODUCED ARTIFICIALLY

The British Reseearch Association for the Woolen and Worsted Industries predicts that the time will come when wool will be produced artificially. Pieces of live sheepskin will be removed from the animals and placed in vats containing certain chemical solutions, says the association, and these pieces of skin, being properly nourished, will continue to grow wool.

GIGGER

At Tampa, Fla., Kimoto Toono, Japanese sailor, went ashore from his ship to spear small fish. So as not to lose his gig (spear), he fastened the end of the rope around his body. Then he sighted a 340-lb. jewfish, speared it, was pulled off the dock, out to sea, drowned. Next day searchers found Gigger Toono and his jewfish. — Animal Stories in "Time."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Spencer.—Our revival closed Thursday, Rev. T. G. Madison was with us and did the preaching. He brought us interesting and inspiring messages that will do lasting good we hope. We were very glad to have Mr. Madison and his good wife with us again. He made many friends while he was our pastor and we appreciate his interest in our church. We wish to express our thanks to the members of his church at Thomasville, Mrs. Lindsay Loftin sang a solo selection at each service. These were enjoyed very much and the singing on Thursday evening by the quartet from Thomasville we appreciated and enjoyed much. Many visitorss attended our meeting from the other denominations in Spencer. We had a good congregation throughout our meeting and regret that our good pastor Rev. P. S. Kennett could not be with us in these services. Hope our attendance will be better in the future.

MRS. A. L. MOORE.

Spring Church.—We are doing a few things down here, but not turning the world over. Our Sunday school is holding up fairly well; attendance has been off some during vacation weeks.

On the fourth Sunday in July we had our Children's Day service with a large congregation. The children rendered a splendid program. After the children were through with their part of the program, Brother Shelton gave us some very fine remarks. The collection at this time was $22.70. The audience was favored with a quartet singing, "Wandering Child, O Come Home." A solo was rendered in the afternoon and also another selection by the quartet. We were glad to welcome Rev. J. B. O'Briant, wife, and niece at this time. We are always glad to have them with us. In the afternoon Brother Shelton delivered a very forceful sermon to a large congregation. He used for a text Matthew 9:37; "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few."

A Christian Endeavor society was organized in the early summer, the following officers being elected: President, Mr. Spruce Mitchell; Vice-President, Miss Virginia Massey; Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Katherine Crew. Our meeting every Tuesday night at 8 p. m. is very well attended. We are very glad to see some of the older people taking so much interest in the C. E. work. They are a great aid to the young in this work. A picnic supper is being planned for the coming Thursday.

The teachers of the small children in the Sunday school gave them a picnic on the church grounds on Wednesday, July 30. It was reported that every one seemed to have had a very nice time, and the delicious dinner enjoyed by all.

The Third Quarterly conference met at Lebanon church, Thursday night, July 31. The usual business was transacted. The votes for delegate counted. Mr. J. W. Crew, of this place, was declared delegate-elect.

Our revival meetting begins the fourth Sunday in this month. Rev. J. E. Pritchard will be the pastor's assistant in this meeting. We greatly desire the fervent prayers of every Chrstian that much and lasting good may be accomplished. May it be the best that has ever been held at this church

REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—Our Third Quarterly conference was held at Pleasant Hill church last Sunday according to the announced program. The preaching service was conducted by the pastor at 11 a. m., dinner was served at the church by the Pleasant Hill people, and the business session was held at 1:30 in the afternoon. The pastor delivered the sermon for the occasion. Special music was rendered at the preaching service by two young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Rothrock, of near Winston-Salem. They sang duet selections which were thoroughly enjoyed.

The business of the quarterly conference was traansacted in a harmonious manner. All of the churches were represented, with Pleasant Hill having the largest number of officials present. Good reports were made by Sunday school superintendents and the work of the two Christian Endeavor societies on the charge was reported progressing nicely. The pastor rendered a report of his work for the year, showing that he had made 407 pastoral calls, conducted 11 funeral services and four revival meetings held. Amount paid on pastor's salary was $504.03 and not much paid on the budgets. Approximately $85 was raised as special offerings for help in four revival meetings.

The vote for delegate to Annual Conference was tabulated by a committee representing five of the churches and the result of the vote was made known. Brother J. Henry Speaas, of Stony Knoll church, received a majority of the votes and was declared elected delegate. Miss Gertrude Masoncup, of Tabernacle church, was the other nominee. Brother Speas was delegate last year and represnted the charge in a splendid manner. The next quarterly conference will be held at Stony Knoll church the latter part of October.

During the devotional services of the quarterly conference a special selection of music, a trio, was rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Hunter and daughter, Miss Lena Hunter.

Some of the people of this charge continue to remember the pasttor and family with suitable gifts of food. Since our last report we have been remembered in this manner by Mrs. J. F. Hunter, Mrs. A. R. Long, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Long, of Pleasant Hill church, and Mrs. J. T. Ridings, of Stony Knoll church.

This pastor appreciates the kindness of Rev. H. F. Surratt, pastor of First Church, Winston-Salem, who consented to preach at Stony Knoll church the first Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The pastor was away on vacation during that Sunday.

Our service next Sunday will be at Harmony Grove church at 11 a. m. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be administered in connection with the service.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Enfield Charge.—The revival service at Whitakers Chapel came to a close on Friday night after the first Sunday. Dr. T. M. Johnson was my help and brought helpful Gospel messages. We did not have the visible results which we naturally hoped for as the outcome of such efforts. However it was a good meeting and I trust the years to come will reveal the fruits of our efforts in a much more visible way.

At the third quarterly conference Brother J. R. Powers was elected delegate to the conference.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Hebron, Orange Circuit.—The revival began at this place the second Sunday in August, and closed the following Friday night. Rev. Mr. Short came on Sunday and remained till the close. He preached the plain Gospel and I think his messages were enjoyed by all. As a result of this meeting, eight united with the church, others will join later Mr. and Mrs. W. N. James were also received into the church by letter. Although the visible results were not what we had hoped for, we trust much lasting good was done.

MRS. LELIA GIBB, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—The revival meeting began at Hebron August 10th, and closed August 16th. Rev. Robert Short did all the preaching.

Brother Short gave us a fine series of sermons. His messages were well received and I believe made a lasting impression.

Visible results: 15 conversions, several reconsecrations, 10 additions to the church.

Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis will give a missionary program at Efland church the fourth Sunday night, beginning at 8 o'clock.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Burlington, First Church.—Our work is moving along very good considering all things, it seems. Today we had 227 in the Sunday school with offering amounting to $12.50.

At the 11 o'clock preaching hour, our pastor brought a very applicable message on, "How Saul lost a kingdom." Among the many good points mentioned in the sermon was that we should take warning from the failure of Saul and strive to always be obedient to God's command to us.

The annual Sunday school picnic was held Wednesday, August 13, at Alexander-Wilson High school, a few miles east of Burlington, from five unttil eight-thirty p. m. A large number of members of the school were present and the supper—a great variety of good things in abundance — was enjoyed immensely. When the supper was over, the school was treated to a feast of watermelons donated by the Baraca class. This was a great occasion of feasting and Christian fellowship and we believe it pays a Sunday school to have an annual occasion of this nature.

Rev. F. L. Gibbs, of Durham, N. C., was a recent visitor in the city and with Rev. L. W. Gerringer and family. Ferry is one of our own boys and we are always glad to have him back.

Mr. L. E. Anthony, secretary of the Baraca class, and faithful member of the church, who recently resigned his position with the Cash Store Co. of this city has accepted a place as buyer with a grocery company in Greensboro, N. C. We will not lose Mr. Anthony from our church though, as he plans to be at home with his people here on the week-ends.

The Ladies' auxiliary of the church is to meet Monday evening at 7 o'clock at the church and go in a body to the home of Mrs. Walter W. McCulloch out at Dickey's Mill, for their meeting.

Our revival is to begin the third Sunday in September with Rev. J. E. Pritchard, of Asheboro, as pulpit help. Let's begin now to think, plan and pray for the meeting.

The Third Quarterly conference of the church will meet Wednesday evening, August 27th in the auditorium of the church at eight o'clock. Let each officer and member of the church be present for this meeting.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth.—Sunday the 17th. The pastor, Rev. C. B. Way, preached a fine sermon from the text, "Upon this rock will I build my church." He painted for our spiritual vision, a vivid, and beautiful picture of the church, not the church-house, but the members who compose the real church of God.

Wish we had space to tell more about this picture.

Two or more churches of the West Forsyth charge were present to worship with us.

Special mention must be made of two small girls, the little Misses Rothrocks, who sang so sweetly two special selections, with piano accompaniment. The chilren were visitors to this church. Following preaching service dinner was served on the grounds, and at 1 o'clock, the fourth quarterly conference convened.

Well, as I am not the reporter I will leave the rest for her to tell you, and just sign myself—A MEMBER.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—Our protracted meeting began the second Sunday in August and closed Friday night. Brother Suits of High Point was the pulipt help. He did some good preaching. All seemed to enjoy each sermon fine.

Quite a number of the girls claimed Jesus as their Savior. Several of the young men and girls asked the prayers of the church, and we gave them our hands and promised to pray for them. Will we do that? If we will live up to our duty they will be saved. My prayer is: Lord save them all, and make them all useful in the church. One girl joined the church, Elizabeth Loflin. We hope that she will make a useful member of the church. Church, help her.

Our pastor gave us some good talks which he is always able to do. He had the children to sing, that was nice. They sing well and enjoy it.

I hope that the superintendent will keep it up, it will help keep them in their place.

The meeting was not what we hoped for, but we hope that the Christians will take new courage from the splendid preaching Brother Suits gave us and that it may be the means by which many sinners may find Jesus.

We are sorry that Mrs. Reed still stays on the sick list, and Mr. Reed is not well himself. Let us not forget them in our prayers. Some of the sisters are making up money to paint the church inside.

ABBY COGGINS.

Concord.—Our pastor, Rev. G. F. Millaway, and Mrs. Millaway are back at the parsonage after a two weeks' vacation spent in Guilford county. Mrs. Millaway has been confined to her room mostly since her return but is improving now.

The usual services will be held now and we hope that after this vacation period, the attendance will increase.

On next Sunday, the 28th anniversary of our church will be celebrated in the Sunday school. A splendid program will be given and a brief historical sketch of our church will be read.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

St. Paul, Greensboro.—Our Children's Day service was held the second Sunday in July. We had a large crowd out to hear the children. The program was good and we owe our thanks to Mrs. Buelah Moore and Miss Lenora Lineberry for their faithful work in training the children.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Millaway pay our church a visit while they were in Greensboro a few weeks ago on their vacation. He served St. Paul six years as our pastor and we are always glad to have them come.

The Royal Blue class held their class meeting with Mr. and Mrs. Willie Seamore on Friday night, August 1. After the business was attended to, Mrs. Seamore served watermelon which was enjoyed by all. The Royal Blue class is a class of married ladies and is one of the best attended classes in our Sunday school. C. E. Wilson is our teacher and he is a number one teacher.

Our Sunday school will hold their picnic Saturday at Camp Hermon. The Ladies Aid society had a picnic supper last Saturday at Camp Louise; they played games and went boat riding, and all report a good time. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. J. S. Wade at her home on Summit avenue extension.

Mrs. N. Brittain is visiting her father and mother at Hickory.

Miss Lenora Lineberry had as her guests the past three weeks, Miss Nellie Grice, of Asheville.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Wade of Covington, Ky., are visiting his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wade. They were one-time members of St. Paul church, but have been in Kentucky for the past four years.

Communion service was held Sunday at the 11 o'clock service.

Sunday school attendance has been good all through the hot weather.

Preaching every Sunday at 11 o'clock and at night by our pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn. We ask your prayers in our work.

MRS. J. S. WADE, Reporter.

Grace Church.—Last Thursday evening the McCulloch Sunday School class of Grace M. P. church held its monthly meeting with Mrs. S. W. Taylor, who will soon move to High Point to live.

Members of the class present were Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Mrs. Nannie Moore, Mrs. Hester, Mrs. Scarboro, Mrs. Jobe, Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Ferrell, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. Bernard, Mrs. Brittain, Miss Mary Wills, Mrs. Bain, Miss Mattie Lucas and Mrs. J. F. Dosier. Visitors present were Rev. S. W. Taylor, S. W. Taylor, Jr., Misses Frances Taylor, Margaret Moore, and Margaret Terrell.

The meeting was opened with a song with Mrs. Taylor at the piano, after which Miss Mary Wills, teacher of the class, raed a Scripture lesson and Mrs. Jobe lead in prayer.

Mrs. Moore gave the secretary's report of the last meeting and Mrs. Scarboro gave the financial report.

After the business session, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Taylor, the hostess, who entertained the crowd with many interesting games and contests. Two prizes were given to the winner in the contests, and Mrs. W. B. Terrell won both prizes, a wall placque and a vase.

After the games and contests were ended, Mrs. J. F. Dosier, assistant teacher, presented Mrs. Taylor with a beautiful casserole dish, as a parting gift from the class. She spoke a few words in behalf of the class, expressing appreciation of Mrs. Taylor's help in the class, and assuring her that her sunny face would be greatly missed and wishing her much success and happiness in her new home.

Mrs. Taylor accepted the gift in a very gracious manner.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. Taylor, assisted by Misses Frances Taylor and Margaret Moore, served a delicious salad course, iced tea, olives and salted peanuts.

MRS. J. F. DOSIER.

Union.—There will be a "Home Coming Day" at Union church, (Halifax charge) Thursday, September 4, beginning at 11 a. m.

All of the former pastors, helpers in revivals, and also all of the members of this church are cordially invited to be present at this service.

Arrangements will be made for those who are coming from a distance to spend the night. Those who are expecting to spend Wednesday night, please write to Mrs. N. B. Whitley, Enfield, N. C.

Asheboro.—In these vacation days there is not much of which to boast except to say we are trying to hold things together until the hot weather is over and the people come back. It might be some inducement for those who have gone away to come back to say it never gets as hot in Asheboro as it does in other places in the state, the highest temperature here this summer being only ninety-eight while a great many places over the state have registered more than one hundred.

The Sunday school attendance last Sunday was 222 as compared to 194 a year ago. This is the lowest attendance we have had this summer so far and we are hoping it will begin to pick up again soon. The congregation last Sunday morning was very good indeed considering the weather.

Our choir should come in for a word of praise. At practically all the services this summer they have had special music of a high order. We greatly appreciate their faithfulness.

The Woman's auxiliary held their annual meeting and picnic at the lovely country home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl F. Bulla yesterday afternoon. A splendid programme was rendered and a fine social hour was greatly enjoyed. The attendance was very gratifying.

Some of the new members of the Herald family in our midst are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bulla, Mrs. L. D. Pritchard and children, and Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Milks and children. We trust that all of these may enjoy reading the paper and that they may become as eager to see it each week as is the writer.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

English Street.—Our work at English Street is moving along very smoothly, although both pastor and people are working under handicaps. Some of these will soon be removed and then we can accomplish a great deal more. The last payment will be made on that salary note of four years ago, Oct 18th. Our people this year have had to pay $531.00, on back notes and debts that never should have been made.

Our Senior C. E. society is doing fine work. Sometime ago they pledged $10.00 in conference budget, and Friday evening of this week they are to give an ice cream supper and with the proceeds will pay off their pledge. Sunday school is doing well with J. A. Robbins as superintendent. We now have 328 on the roll and if we had proper room, many more could be added to this number. We have a wonderful opportunity in this part of the city, but are forced to work with hands tied. We seriously doubt if there is a more promising situation anywhere than the one here at English Street.

Brother J. A. Lee has been elected delegate to the next Annual Conference.

Brother G. W. Payne is now on crutches, because of an injury to his foot when the wheel of an automobile passed over it. No bones were broken and soon he is expected to lay his crutches aside. Mrs. J. A. Bowers was absent from church last Sunday because of sickness, but we hope soon to have her back at her usual place in Sunday school and church. Brother Livingood has also been sick but glad to know that he is able to be out again. Mrs. I. L. Elliott, one of our faithful and most efficient Sunday school teachers, is now with her husband in Louisville, Ky. We hope that her health may be fully restored and that she may be able to return to High Point. Brother P. M. Caudle, a federal prohibition officer whose arm was broken in an automobile accident several months ago, is now at home from a hospital in Atlanta, Ga. He expects to be able to return to his office in Wilson, N. C., about Sept. 15.

Our Sunday school plans a picnic at Guilford battleground Saturday, August 23.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Pilot Church.—Our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, filled his appointment the third Sunday evening at 3 o'clock. I think all who listened to Brother Hunter's message should be inspired to live on a higher plane.

Mrs. Linville and daughter Dorothy united with the church at the evening service. We are glad to have them with us in the church. We are having very good attendance at Sunday school in spite of the unusually hot weather.

Mrs. J. M. Ashburn quietly passed away at her home the 31st of July, and was laid to rest in Cedar Hill cemetery the 3rd of August. A truly useful woman has been taken from us, unto the rest that remaineth for the people of God.

Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Watson's little son, Eugene, died and was buried in Woodland cemetery, Winston-Salem. Mrs. J. W. Watson who has been in feeble health for some time seems to be much improved and we hope she will soon be restored to health.

The home-coming day will be the first Sunday in October, beginning at 10 o'clock a. m. We wish every one that has ever attended church here and especially all old members and former pastors would come and be with us on that day.

Our revival meeting will begin the first Sunday in October. Rev. W. F. Ashburn will be the pulpit help and we are looking forward to his being with us with great pleasure, and we hope with proper co-operation on the part of the church and pastor that we may have a great meeting.

Best wishes to the Herald.

Lexington, State St.—Our pastor was with us again Sunday morning after being away all of the preceding week conducting revival services for Rev. Mr. Ferree at Union Grove. The meeting was in every sense a great success. Many conversions and a general reconsecration of the church members resulted The Sunday morning message was one of the best and was delivered in a forceful and impressive way that reached the hearts of many.

In the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the quarterly conference was held jointly with the Elbaville folks at the Elbaville church. Our church was well represented. Mr. J. A. Walser was elected delegate to the annual conference, with Mr. Broadway of the Elbaville church as alternate.

We were glad to note an increase in Sunday school attendance Sunday morning. Now that the extremely hot weather is over and the folks are all home from vacation trips we are expecting a large gain in attendance.

Miss McKinley of Jacksonville, Fla., returned to her home last week after spending ten days here as the guest of Mrs. T. A. Blanton.

The "parsonage folks" are much pleased with a most generous pounding they received from their Union Grove friends at the close of the meeting there last Friday night.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Our revival meeting came to a close Sunday night. The visible results were not what we would like to have seen, yet with the interesting and helpful sermons we have heard from both our pastor, Mr. J. C. Russell, and Mr. Lee Leonard, we feel sure that seed were sown that will yet bring forth fruit.

The third quarterly conference of the Anderson charge was held at this church on Saturday, August 9th. Mr. Will Compton was elected delegate to annual conference to represent this charge.

MRS. JEWELL HARRISON, Reporter.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Since our last report our church has sustained a loss in the death of one of its oldest and most loyal members, Mr. John G. Hanner. He had been a lifelong member of our church and as long as he was able to attend its services he was found in his pew, and after he became unable to attend services his thoughts were still there. When the writer would visit in his home he always loved to talk about the church and what was being done by the church. Our church will miss him, but we feel that "our loss is his gain," and we would commend the bereaved family to the God whom he served and trusted.

Our revival closed last Friday night. Rev. L. W. Gerringer did most of the preaching. He was taken sick after coming to us and was unable to preach at two of the services. He certainly did some good preaching. There were only three converts and one addition to the church, so far, but we feel that much good may come from the meeting yet.

Our church has recently had quite a pleasant surprise in the form of a gift of $500.00 from one of our most loyal members, Mrs. M. E. Moore. Mrs. Moore has for several years been a member of our church and has proven herself a most helpful member, and we want to assure her that this most generous gift is greatly appreciated and we trust that we may use it to a great advantage to the church and to the glory of God. We certainly thank you, Mrs. Moore, and pray that God may bless the "giver" and the "gift."

South Lexington.—Our work is going along fine, our Sunday school is looking fine, we had 214 present today, but our goal is 250 for next Sunday and we are hoping and praying that we may have that number present.

On last Thursday evening Brother C. L. Hedrick who teaches the men's class gave them and their wives a watermellon feast at his home about four miles southwest of Lexington and all those who were present enjoyed the occasion very much.

We were glad to have Brother Isley back with us today after an absence of two weeks in which time he has been in revival meetings and we were glad to know that he met with good success. In the morning service Mrs. Ida Beck was received into our church and we were all glad to have her unite with us. The letter which Dr. Taylor sent to Brother Isley was also read this morning and the pastor urged the people to respond at once to all of the claims, also to the needs of the church paper. We are going to try to raise all of our claims this year and by the help of God we believe we can raise it.

A large crowd was present for the evening service, the church being almost full. Brother Isley preached a very forceful sermon, his text being found in John 19th chapter and the 14th and 15th verses: "Pilate said unto the Jews, Behold your king, the chief Priest answered, we have no king but Caesar." His subject was "Crowning Christ or Caesar."

All who were present seemed to enjoy it very much.

We ask the prayers of all Christian people that our work may continue to grow and that we may do much for the advancement of His cause to whom we belong and whom we serve.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—The third quarterly conference of Littleton circuit was held Saturday at Littleton.

Our revival started the second Sunday, opened with Children's Day, carried out very nicely.

The Sunday school teachers were elected to get it up, but I think it goes to two of them, Misses Beatrice Hawkins and Bertha Woodruff. The superitendent's wife, Mrs. Baldy Greene, played for them as she is a music teacher.

Pastor Smith didn't have any pulpit help, was expecting help until too late, Mr. Thompson preached once.

We didn't have any to join the church; it was not because Mr. Smith didn't preach the Gospel and plead with them.

We are glad our preacher and family seem to be at home when they visit you.

Our C. E. meeting was planning to go on a weinie roast but didn't. Guess they will have a social very soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Georgie Thompson, daughter of Mr. Georgie Greene, and Mr. Claude Hawkins and writer motored to Durham August 11, to get Mr. Georgie Greene who has been in the Duke University hospital for some time. He is now at home but suffer lots with his jaw bone. He will have to go back the first of September. He has been our sexton in our church for years and has been faithful, too. Both white and colored love him.

One of our members was recently married: Miss Ruby Shearin to Mr. Jenkins.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The Daily Vacation Bible School which closed Friday evening was a success. The teachers were: Miss Kathleen Paschall, superintendent; Miss Lois Coble, Beginners; Misses Ruby K. and Truth Isley, Primary; Mrs. Effie Keck, Juniors; Miss Grace Kick and Rev. J. E. Elwood Carroll, Intermediate; Miss Truth Isley, Pianist. The enrollment was 86. Because of a ruling that one could not be absent more than once, only 81 certificates were given. The "commencement exercise" was a demonstration of the class room work. It was an inspiration to see and hear those girls and boys, from 4 to 18 years of age, sing, quote scripture, answer questions, tell stories, etc. Rev. T. J. Whitehead delivered the address in which he emphasized the importance of religious education. After the services were over the hand work was displayed in one of the Sunday school rooms. There were some splendid note books. The children were asked how many wished a school next summer, every hand went up quickly.

The Woman's Auxiliary gave a play at E. M. Holt's for which they realized a nice profit. They plan to give the play at other places.

Our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, is helping in a meeting at Haw River. He preached there the third Sunday morning. Rev. O. C. Loy, pastor at Haw River, filled his appointment at this place using as his text, Deut. 8:11. He is one of our own boys so we were glad to have him, and proud of the fact that he can preach so well.

Winston.—We were indeed glad to have Rev. and Mrs. Surratt back with us Sunday. Mr. Surratt's sermon was most impressive. "Church Membership" was discussed. "Fellowship" was included in his sermon. "May God help us to make the church what it ought to be," this statement from Mr. Surratt should challenge us to be more at work to help make our church a better church.

The choir sang a lovely selection Sunday morning.

During the absence of the pastor last Sunday week, Rev. Mr. Whitaker filled the pulpit. We were very glad to have him with us. He worshiped with us this Sunday, also; we were glad to have him present.

Circle No. 1 of the Auxiliary will meet Tuesday evening with Miss Maggie Snipes on Patterson avenue.

Circle number 2 meets Tuesday evening with Mrs. Holder on Buxton street.

Circle number 4 met Monday night, with Miss Ellen Wakefield, hostess. A very interesting meeting was held and plans made for the purpose of making money to add to the budget of the circle. We regret very much to report that the adult leader of this circle Mrs. J. A. Gwyn, is in a local hospital and has undergone an operation. It is hoped by all that she will soon be well again.

Rev. S. W. Taylor was with us Monday night.

On Friday night of this week the Baracas are giving the Philatheas a picnic at James Park. All the officers and teachers of the Sunday school are invited too.

First Church, High Point.—President G. I. Humphreys announces from his office that High Point College will open its doors for the seventh annual session on September 15th with a large enrollment of upperclassmen and 100 new students, 40 of whom are out-of-town residents and will board in the dormitories. Several faculty changes are announced as follows: H. L. Shessard, who succeeds Stanley Pugh as Professor of Business Administration, will serve as Dean of Men; Prof. C. R. Hinshaw, head of the Department of Education, will be faculty manager of athletics, while Julian F. Beall, former grid star at the University of South Carolina will succeed Jack Boylin as director of athletics. Prof. Ben H. Hill has reconsiderel his resignation as head of the Biology Department, and will serve again next year. Floyd R. Garrett succeeds Miss Mary Louise McDearman as librarian, and Miss Naomi Morris will head the Department of Home Economics as successor to Mrs. Madeleine B. Street. A successor to Miss Dorothy St. Clair, teacher of violin, will be announced September 1st. The college book store, formerly conducted by the Atheltic Association, will be directed by R. H. Gunn, Bursar.

The circles of the Woman's Auxiliary held meetings at the following places on Monday at 3 p. m.; No. 4, Mrs. Douglas, chairman with Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell on N. Main St.; No. 5, Mrs. A. M. Rankin, chairman, with Mrs. E. L. Auman, Montlieu Avenue; No. 6, Mrs. Paul Kennett, chairman, with Mrs. A. L. Cecil, Oakwood Court; No. 7, Mrs. Ben Moore, chairman, with Mrs. Willard Thomas, Otteray Drive; No. 8, Mrs. J. G. Snipes, chairman, with Mrs. W. P. Pickett, North Main St. No. 1, young girls' circle, will meet Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock with Misses Margaret and Lois Snipes, Steele St. Despite the business depression and "hard times," our women are working faithfully and courageously, and finances are coming up in fine shape.

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society enjoyed a pleasant social on Monday evening, which was well attended.

Dr. Humphreys left Monlay for a visit to conferences in the middlewest, the Illinois and Iowa Mission, where he will spend about two weeks. Upon his return here about September 1st, he expects to bring his family, who will move into the home on West College Drive, now occupied by Dr. R. M. Andrews and family. The latter will remain in High Point until November, when conference convenes.

Dr. S. W. Taylor, president of N. C. Conference, plans to move his family to High Point September 1st, and they will occupy the home erected by Mr. H. A. Garrett and family, who now live on R. F. D. No. 7, Burlington. The congregation of First church and people of High Point generally, especially of the denomination, will welcome most cordially this splendid family into our midst. President Taylor and his charming wife, who is treasurer of N. C. Branch of Women's Work, occupy honored positions in the conference, and also from a personal standpoint, we are delighted to have them for neighbors and fellow citizens in the community. Their daughter, Miss Frances Taylor, will be a freshman at High Point College.

We are greatly pleased to announce that the condition of Mr. W. C. Lyndon, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, shows decided improvement. He was removed to his home on Willowbrook street a week ago, and although weak and nervous from his recent operation, is able to ride out in his car.

Mrs. J. T. Foister and the two boys, William and Tommy, have returned from a visit of two weeks to Mr. Foister in Goldsboro and other relatives in Raleigh and Chapel Hill.

Wyatt A. Pickens, who is assistant professor of Romance Languages in Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, arrived Thursday evening for a visit of a few weeks to his mother and other relatives. He reports high temperatures in Louisiana this summer, in some places being 113 degrees, but at Baton Rouge it was not higher than 102 degrees. The university buildings being located on a bluff overlooking the Mississippi river, there is usually a breeze, which modifies the heat and intense humidity. He taught nine weeks in the summer school.

Capt. A. M. Rankin and family have moved back into their home, which since its removal, is now located on Church street. They have been living for several weeks with Judge and Mrs. Lewis E. Teague on Johnson street.

Albemarle.—Our Sunday school is moving along rather slowly since vacation time came, but attendance is still above the 200 mark.

Rev. Anderson has just closed a very successful revival meeting at Love's Grove church, about 20 miles from here. It was my privilege to attend one service, and there was scarcely a vacant seat in the church. We were told that this was true at almost every night service. They have a fine well-trained choir, and they surely did some real singing.

Our hearts were made sad on August 1st by the death of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Reece Smith. The baby was only three days old, but it had already entwined its little fingers about the hearts of many. The funeral was conducted at the home Saturday morning, and the little body laid to rest 'neath a mound of beautiful flowers, in the Fairview cemetery.

We were glad to have Mrs. R. L. Leonard back with us last Sunday, accompanied by her baby daughter, Emma, the latest addition to the Leonard family.

Rev. and Mrs. Anderson had as their visitor the first week of this month, Mr. Anderson's sister, Mrs. Nolan, of Atlanta, Ga., and her three children. We are very glad to make the acqaintance of this charming family.

Miss Beulah Moton of High Point was the charming visitor in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Moton, last week.

Mrs. Maude Williams and daughter, Helen, of Columbia, S. C., spent several days last week visiting her mother, Mrs. D. F. Harkey.

Friends of Mrs. Ira Hatley will learn with regret that she is in a serious condition at the Badin hospital, following a major operation.

Members of the entire Sunday school motored to Moss Springs last Friday evening, and enjoyed a bountiful watermelon feast.

The Cam Snotherly circle of the Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. J. D. Smith August 5th. This meeting was not as well attended as usual, on account of vacations and sickness.

At this time we opened our banks, in which we have been saving money for several months. The total amounted to $42.49.

Several articles of hard work were brought in for the bazaar this fall.

At the conclusion of the business hour, delicious sandwiches, cakes and lemonade were served.

The meeting of the Lucy Hatley circle will be reported next week.

EVANGELISTS SLIPPING

Evangelism is no longer what it used to be in the days of Moody, Gypsy Smith and Sam Jones. A survey made of the fields by Charles Stelzle of New York, who sent out questionnaires to 100 prominent evangelists, indicated that the effectiveness of evangelism has decreased from 80 to 10 per cent. The work, replied the evangelists, is becoming more difficult, the number of converts distressingly small, and they cannot secure engagements for more than half their time. Thirty replied that they could no longer make a living at the work and had given it up.

On the other side of the ledger it was said that though present converts are fewer they are of a better type. The opinion was almost unanimous that men are more "spiritual minded" than women when once converted; that women's interest in religion is apparently superficial, and that it is getting indifficult to interest them. Evangelism was found to flourish best in the Middle West and South. It is less popular in the East, and is least popular in the Far West.

Stelzle is publicity representative of various religious organizations.—Pathfinder.

BEAR

One George Winch and wife of Lake Placid, N. Y., went blue-berrying last week. With them they took their son Peter, aged two, who played while his parents picked. Also out berrying that afternoon was a large, female black bear, which gave small Peter Winch an experience few naturalists would believe though storybooks are full of such things. The she-bear picked up the child in her mouth. When he cried out and the parents came running, the bear loped away, carrying the child until she came to an open field near a railroad crossing where, alarmed, she dropped her burden, sped away. The child was badly bitten but expected to live. — Animal Stories in "Time."

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Jobe

John W. Jobe was born May 2, 1856, died August 7, 1930. He joined Hebron M. P. church when he was 16 years of age and remained a faithful member of this church until death.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by W. M. Loy, August 9th at Hebron church. The large congregation present showed the esteem in which his memory is held.

May God comfort the bereaved ones.

Johnie Edgar Bishop

J. E. Bishop, son of Enoch and Mary Garrett Bishop, peacefully departed this life August 6, 1930, age 55 years.

Mr. Bishop was born May 12, 1875 in Laurens county. After his marriage to Kate Garrett, he moved to Spartanburg county, near Cross Anchor and lived near this place until about five years ago, he moved to Clinton, S. C. Just a short while before his death he was carried to the home of his son in Enoree, hoping the change and everything would do him good. He at first seemed to improve but finally could not be up any more. Everything that tender care and loving hands could do was done, but the hand of death could not be stayed, he was called to a better place to be with God. He had been in ill health 'most two years, of heart trouble and complications. He had not been able to be out very much in the last seven months.

Mr. Bishop was a faithful member of Yarbrough Chapel, Methodist Protestant church. He loved his church and Sunday school and always attended its services when he was able. He was unusually devoted to his family. He was honest, kind and quiet of nature and loved by all who knew him. In his most intense suffering he was so humble and patient, trying to smile. He said a short while before he died, "There is nothing in the way, I am ready to go." He was so appreciative of every thing that was done for him, of every kindness shown him. His home was a place of peace and welcome to his pastors, they always knew his home was their home. He will be greatly missed everywhere he was known. With the assurance he was ready to go.

> We sorrow not without hope,
> Oh, no, not dead! but past
> All fear of dying,
> And with all suffering o'er—
> Just passed out of earthly hearing,
> Where all is calm and bright.

The funeral service was held from Yarbrough Chapel Methodist Pritestant church Thursday afternoon, after which interment took place in New Hope cemetery at Cross Anchor. Rev. Mr. Broome, his pastor, conducted the service, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Whiteside and Rev. Mr. Brown of Enoree, S. C., and Rev. Mr. Touchberry, of Cross Keys, S. C. A large number of friends and relatives gathered to pay tribute to the passing of Mr. Bishop and many beautiful floral offerings were laid on his grave. The pallbearers were sons-in-law of the deceased, Cecil N. Mills, W. C. Young, T. H. Stevens and Earl Cole.

The deceased is survived by the following children: Mrs. Cecil Mills and Mrs. Earl Cole, of Clinton, S. C.; Mrs. W. C. Young, of Asheville, N. C.; Mrs. T. H. Stevens of Cross Keys, S. C., and A. N. Bishop of Enoree, S. C., and A. N. Bishop of Enoree, S. C., and by seven grandchildren. Miss wife, Mrs. Kate Bishop, preceded him to the grave about two years ago.

MARRIED

Thompson-Amick

In a beautiful, yet simple marriage ceremony Miss Georgia Amick and Prof. Eugene H. Thompson, of Liberty, N. C., were married at the M. P. parsonage in Concord, N. C., on Tuesday afternoon, August 12. Rev. G. F. Millaway, a former pastor of the bride, performed the ceremony.

Miss Amick is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Amick, and was educated in the Guilford county schools and at Elon College, and is now teaching in Nathaniel Green high school in Guilford county. Mr. Thompson is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thompson, a graduate of Elon college, and is teaching in Providence high school, Randolph county.

They were accompanied to Concord by Mr. W. C. Coley, and Misses Bettie Jo, Margaret and Fern Amick, sisters of the bride.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Thompson left in their car for western North Carolina and points in South Carolina.

HEARING WITH TEETH

Dr. Frederick Bedell, professor of physics at Cornell university, says that those who have defective hearing need no longer worry provided their teeth are good. He has invented a device for hearing with the teeth. Powerful vibrations thrown off by the apparatus are picked up by a tiny metal disk on a round, cloth-covered ball and transmitted to the teeth of the listener by means of long pieces of wood with sharp points. It is said that by biting the free end of the stick lightly he can hear as well as if he were using his ears. The human ear drum, the scientist states is largely superflous. Sound vibrations can pass directly to the auditory nerves through the bones. Should the theory advanced by Dr. Bedell prove true it may be possible to utilize it in making practical devices by which the deaf can hear.

VOLUME XXXVI GREENSBORO, N. C., AUGUST 28, 1930 NUMBER 41

"He Is Able To Deliver Thee"

He is able to deliver thee
From all thy deep perplexity;
Resolve thy doubts, make plain thy way,
Help thee to walk in light of day.

He is able to deliver thee
From Satan's snares thou dost not see;
To lead from paths with perils strewn,
To guide thy feet to safety zone.

He is able to deliver thee
From depths of sin's impurity;
To purge thy soul from evil's taint
And make of thee a glorious saint.

Overcoming Trouble By Ignoring It

The trouble you are not aware of is no trouble at all. If we could remove our troubles to the sphere of unconsciousness we would thereby free ourselves from them. But can we do it? Rev. T. J. Ogburn related this experience: He was intensely annoyed by what seemed a trivial matter. He prayed that he might be freed from the annoyance, and his prayer was so completely answered that he was not able even to recall what it was that troubled his mind. Believing prayer would free us from many of the thoughts that trouble us. Trouble is altogether in the mind, and if we disconnect the switches that make a way into our minds we protect ourselves against the intrusion of many troubles. The mind that is stayed on God and separated from the tribulation of the world is kept in perfect peace.

Even in cases where we cannot become absolutely oblivious of our annoyances, we can reduce their force by partially forgetting them. We can lessen our physical pains by dividing our attention. We proved this in a recent surgical operation. While the surgeon was piercing and cutting in our throat we squeezed the chair arm with all our might and gave attention to that, thus reducing perceptibly the pain of his operations.

By giving us control of our power of attention God has done a wonderful thing for us. In large measure we choose, make and live in our own world.

The First Sin

It was an epoch in the life of the race when the first sin was committed and it is an epoch in individual life when the first sin is committed. The transgressor at once realizes the greatness of the occasion. He has assumed an indefensible attitude toward God. He has become a violator of the majestic moral law. He has crossed over into the territory of the rebels. He is no longer on God's side. He feels that God is justly against him. He is a deserter from God's army. He is fighting on the other side. He is unhappy and imagines that there is no more happiness for him in this world or the world to come. He plunges into excesses in sin, trying to drown his miseries. To his first sin he may add all the black sins in the catalogue. He knows only the worst side of life and does not know that there is for him any better life. What a glorious revelation it is when it at length dawns upon him that he may wash his robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb! That his sins may be removed from him as far as the east is from the west! That he may have the deep and lasting joy of the pardoned sinner! That his ugly past may be forgotten and he may enter upon a glorious future!

Was Christ A Christian?

You are surprised at the question and may say: Certainly, He was a model Christian, a perfect Christian. But not so fast. Is the sun a plane in the solar system? Is the sun to be ranked with Venus, Mars, and the Earth? Surely not. The sun holds a unique place in the solar system. All the planets revolve about the sun. So Christ holds a unique place in the Christian world. He is the Central Figure and the Master Power. Christians are drawn to Him by the magnetism of His moral influence. Without Christ there would be no Christians. All Christians are indebted to Christ for whatever virtue they possess. But Christians are saved by the grace of Christ, which description does not apply to Him. No, Christ was not a Christian any more than "God is a Presbyterian."

◆

The First Automobile

When was it made? After you reflect a little you will say, toward the end of the nineteenth century. But reflect further and you will probably change the date. What is an "automobile"? It is a self-moving machine, a vehicle propelled by its own power. Without much if any stretching of the definition we say that Adam saw hundreds of automobiles. The horse has an engine, battery, and steering mechanism and moves and guides himself. So the dog, the cow, the ape, and many other creatures. All are automobiles. And the birds and insects are wonderful flying machines. Man in his inventions is an imitator, crude and clumsy in comparison with God.

PRAYING FOR A JOB

I was walking down a street in Morgantown, W. Va., some time since when I met a colored man who served as janitor of the Methodist Protestant church there when I was the pastor thirty years ago. He is now a prosperous manufacturer of ice-cream, and invited me to come into his place of business and sample his products.

The Morgantown church has now one of the leading congregations of the Methodist denomination, with a membership of 1,200 and a Sunday school numbering 1,350; the annual budget for expenses and benevolences is nearly $20,000. But, when I went to it thirty-four years ago, it was in so dilapidated, disorganized, and discouraged a condition that the delegate who asked me to go there said, "If we do not get a pastor now, we won't need one next year; for there won't be any church to come to." After investigating the situation I saw the possibilities of a future for the church, and decided to stay and work it out. But I confess that I did not see a denominational front-rank position within thirty years.

There had been no pastor for six months; there was no janitor; and the building was out of repair and terribly dirty. My first and most pressing need was to have the building put in order and then kept clean. So I started out early in the week to find a carpenter and secure a competent jaintor. One block below the church, on Walnut Street, I met the young colored man referred to, and engaged him to take care of the church.

While I was sampling his ice cream, Huff said to me,—his name was Huff Blue,—"Do you remember the morning when you engaged me to take care of the old Methodist Protestant church on Walnut Street? Well, that was the greatest day in my life."

"How come?" I said. "It seemed very commonplace to me."

"Well, suh, you see, it was this way. You know I had to support my mother and sister, and I was out of a job. I had tried all the week before to find a job, and had failed. On Saturday night I was so discouraged that I didn't know what to do. But I went to church on Sunday night; and when I got home, I began to think where I would go on Monday to look for work. And I decided to ask the Lord about it. So I went to my room, and got down upon my knees, and began to pray. I told the Lord all about our needs, and how I couldn't see my mother and sister suffer for want of food; that I was willing to work at anything that would give me honest money. I think God heard my prayer, and I went to bed feeling much encouraged.

"The next morning I came down the street past the bank just as Dr. Combs, the cashier, was going in. When he saw me, he turned round and said, 'Huff, what are you doing now?'

"I told him I wasn't doing anything, and was looking for a job.

"'How would you like to take care of the bank for us? Our janitor quit last Saturday.'

"I said I would be mighty glad to have the job.

"'Well, you come in at three o'clock this afternoon, and clean up.'

"I thanked him with a happy heart, and walked across the street. On the opposite corner I met Mr. Wilgus, who was president of a men's club. Mr. Wilgus said, 'Huff, how would you like to take care of our clubroom? We don't have any janitor now.'

"I said I would be mighty glad to do the work for them, and he told me to come around after dinner and get the keys and clean the rooms.

"Well, suh, I went down Walnut Street feeling pretty good; and just in front of Mr. Pickenpaugh's store I met you, and you said, 'Huff, I am looking for some one to take care of the Methodist Protestant church; how would you like to do it?' I said I would be glad to take it, and would have the church clean and lighted ready for the Wednesday evening service. Mr. Barnes, you don't know how I felt that morning. On Sunday night I had prayed the Lord to help me find a job, and before ten o'clock on Monday morning I had three good jobs, with good pay. I reckon it is a good plan to ask the Lord to help you out after you have done all that you can for yourself."—Rev. I. A. Barnes, Fairmont, W. Va.

GODLINESS WITH CONTENTMENT

Dewitt Talmage, the celebrated Brooklyn clergyman, was riding one day in a railroad coach, soon after the decease of a favorite son. His grief was constant and acute, and he could not feel that anyone had ever suffered as he was doing.

In a seat near him sat a gentleman who, he thought, possessed one of the most cheerful faces he had ever seen. "How happy that man is compared to me!" he thought. "I will get into conversation with him. Perhaps he may console me, or cheer me up a little."

The dialogue ran upon general subjects for a little while, and then turned upon Dr. Talmage's great loss. "I cannot help envying you," said the preacher. "You seem, from your appearance, as if you had not a trouble in the world."

The other gentleman looked grave, and a spasm of grief went over his countenance. "I never saw a sadder face, for the moment," said Talmage, in relating this incident to the writer.

"My dear sir," he inquired, "will you tell me where you are going?"

"Why," replied Talmage, "home: to Brooklyn, New York. I get there this evening, if all goes well."

"I suppose to a wife—perhaps a mother—a live son—a daughter or two?"

"Oh, yes! I have all those awaiting me."

"Now I will tell you where I am going. All my family are dead but one, and that one is my wife; and I am making my regular weekly visit to her, at an insane asylum. She is hopelessly insane. But God has left my life, my honor, and my faculties; and I am trying to keep patient and cheerful, with the hope of meeting them all again in a better world, by and by."

Talmage rose, and took the stranger by the hands.

"I surrender!" he exclaimed. "My sorrow is as nothing compared to yours. I have learned a lesson and I hope God will aid me to profit by it."—Exchange.

A SPIRITUAL TRIUMPH

When I was in Australia, says a minister, in Melbourne, I kept hearing stories about a woman, a cripple, and I never believed them. I did not think the stories could be true. And I went one day to offer comfort to her, but before I had been in the room ten minutes, I found it was I who was receiving instruction, broken down, and dissolved in a flood of emotion. When she was eighteen she was siezed with a dread malady, and the doctor said that to save her life he must take off her foot. Both feet went. They followed the disease up the body, took off her legs to the knees, still followed it up, and as far as the trunk. Then it broke out in her hands. The first arm went to the shoulder, and the second to the shoulder, and when I saw that woman, Miss Higgins, all that remained of her was a trunk, nothing more than a trunk. For fifteen years she had been there. I went to offer comfort, but I did not know how to speak to her, or what to say. I found a room the walls of which were covered with texts, all of them radiating, speaking of joy, and peace, and power.

She lay in bed one day and asked what she could do, a dismembered woman without a joint in her body. Then an inspiration came to her, and she got a freind who was a carpenter to come, and he fitted a pad to her shoulder, and then to that another, and a Swan fountain pen, and she began to write letters with it. And remember, when you write, you write with your arm. She had to write; there was no joint, she wrote with the whole body. There may be clever calligraphists in this place, but I will undertake to say there is no woman who could write a letter one-half so beautiful from the point of view of calligraphy as that woman wrote in my presence, almost like copperplate; and she had got 1,500 or 1,600 letters from people who had been brought to Christ through the letter she had written in that way from that room. And I said to her: "How do you do it?" And she smiled and replied: "Well, you know Jesus said that they who believed in Him out of them shall flow rivers of Living Water, and I believed in Him, and that is all."—Tract.

A GOD-FEARING PILOT

John B. Gough used to say: It is only by violence that deliverance can be wrought in situations of extreme peril. John Maynard was well known as a God-fearing pilot on Lake Erie. He had charge of a steamer from Detroit to Buffalo one summer afternoon. Smoke was seen ascending from below; and the captain cried out, "Simpson, go down and see what that smoke is!" He came up with his face as pale as ashes, and said, "Captain, the ship is on fire!" Buckets of water were dashed upon the flames, but in vain. There were large quantities of rosin and tar on board, and it was useless to try to save the ship.

The passengers rushed forward and inquired of the pilot, "How far are we from land?"

"Seven miles."

"How long before we reach it?"

"Three quarters of an hour, at our present rate of steam."

"Is there any danger?"

"Danger enough here! See the smoke bursting out! Go forward, if you would save lives!"

Passengers and crew, men, women children, crowded to the forward part of the ship. John Maynard stood at his post. The flames burst forth in a sheet of fire; clouds of smoke arose. The captain cried out through his trumpet, "John Maynard!"

"Aye, aye, sir!"

"Run her on shore."

Nearer, yet nearer, she approached the shore. Again the captain cried out, "John Maynard!"

The response came feebly, "Aye, aye, sir."

"Can you hold out five minutes longer, John?"

"By God's help I will!"

The old man's hair was scorching from the scalp, one hand was disabled, and his teeth were set; yet he stood firm as a rock. He beached the ship. Every man, woman and child was saved, as John Maynard's spirit took its flight to God.

Even so "Jesus steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem," to the cross-crowned hill, and through the fires of the wrath of God.—Peniel Herald.

THE STINGING TONGUE

They tell of a terrible tree that grows in Australia, called by the natives "stinging tree." No one cares for close acquaintance with it. Try to imagine a monster like that—a nettle grown as big as a tree, if you want to get a little idea of its characteristic. Luckily, it has a very unpleasant odor, so the natives and animals can easily avoid it. At first the sting or prick of the tree's thorns does not trouble one at all; he feels no pain whatever. But in a few minutes he is in great distress and agony so that he screams with pain and rolls upon the ground. Weeks and months afterwards, he suffers terribly if water touches the wound. When a dog is pricked by it, it is pitiful to hear him whine and cry, and to see him bite pieces of flesh from the place that has been stung.

Does it occur to you how much this is like the stinging tongue? All men and animals avoid these tree nettles as much as possible, but, unlike the stinging tree, they are not stationary, but move freely, inflicting their poison upon those who do not seek them or come carelessly into their neighborhood. And the poison lasts. Weeks and months and whole lifetime afterward, the wound burns and rankles. The stinging tongue may even be still in death, yet the misery it wrought still lives. Before speaking unkindly, think of it! It is not necessary that you should be a monster of wickedness or cruelty to be the possessor of this stinging tongue that does such mischief. One sometimes falls almost unknowingly into the habit of uttering sharp speeches, never dreaming how angry, bitter, rancorous words live in the memory. Beware of forming the habit. A wholesome tongue is a tree of life, but the stinging tongue is a tree of death to all who suffer by it.—Selected.

IN A SMALL PLACE

Fret not because thy place is small,
Thy service need not be,
For thou can'st make it all there is
Of love and ministry.

The dew drop, as the boundless sea,
In God's great place has part;
And this is all He asks of thee:
Be faithful where thou art.

In thee His mighty hand can show
The wonders of His grace,
And He can make the humblest room
A high and holy place.

HE COULD ANSWER THE PRAYER

A rich farmer, during his prayer at family worship one day, petitioned God long and earnestly that help for their bodily needs might be sent to a very poor family living near by. His small son was observed to be deep in thought afterwards, and at last ran to his father with a bright face. "Daddy," said the child, "you can answer your prayer for poor old Smith yourself, can't you?"—A. B. Webster, in S. S. Friend.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Weaverville—Asheville—Democrat

Four days were given to these charges, August 19-22. The Weaverville churches are again without a pastor, Brother Pierce having retired from the charge. We met Tuesday night, at Clark's Chapel, with a large delegation from the three churches, and again Wednesday night, at the Weaverville church, with a committee representing the charge. By agreement, Brother Casto will look after the work until conference, and will be assisted by Brothers Williams, Paschall, and Thompson. These brethren will be glad to supply the charge with preaching services for the remainder of the year. We earnestly trust that the coming conference can make ample provision for the care of the work. Our people in this section are at a disadvantage because of their remoteness from the centers of our conference; but they are loyal, and they manifest a becoming devotion to the church. We must do our best to take care of them. More and more western North Carolina is becoming a summer resort, and a rendezvous for sightseers and home-seekers. Streams of people are constantly going there from all sections of the country, far and near. Our own folks are in the currents, and it will be gratifying to them to find a church home in these beautiful mountains, whether they go there as permanent residents, or for a brief stay.

Brother Adrian Thompson, a ministerial student at Weaverville College, is taking care of the Democrat charge. He and and his people seem happy in their work together, and I am sure that good is being accomplished. We had an appointment at Pleasant Gap, but it was not well published, owing to the limited time in which Brother Thompson had to get word to the people. The result was that we had only two auditors,—two "elect ladies" of the community, and faithful members of this church. After a pleasant talk with them, we had prayer, and dismissed. This church is lifted up high toward the heavens, and the cloudless sky was resplendent with sparkling beauty on this night. With the Psalmist, we felt to say, "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork."

We had no meeting with the Asheville church, not being able to accept an invitation from Brother Paschall to attend their Wednesday night prayer service, owing to another appointment. However, we visited with Brother and Sister Paschall, and had the privilege also of sitting in with the auxiliary, which met at the parsonage Friday. We found the women interested in their work, and busy with their programs. Brother and Sister Paschall are giving themselves with much earnestness to their duties here, and we hope and pray that their labors, together with the devotion of their people, may lead to rewarding results. The financial stringency is creating a problem for them, as it is for the other churches. We trust that they may find a timely solution for this, and that the year may close hopefully, and with encouraging prospects for the work ahead.

Bethel Home

For the most part during our four days with the churches, it was our good fortune to be the guest of Brother Casto, and his good helpers and interesting patients at the Bethel Home. Brother Casto (the "Boss") occupies the "log palace," located on the grounds of the Institution. The "prophets' room" is in this palace, and it was here that we rested snugly under two woolen blankets, fanned to sleep by the mountain breezes. The large living room of the palace afforded us a work shop, where we attended to some important conference matters, and also enjoyed hours of pleasant converse with the "Boss." Eleven patients are in the Home, representing seven states, extending from Massachusetts to Mississippi, and one foreign country, England. We greatly enjoyed visiting with the patients and the helpers in the Home, and shall retain pleasant recollections of each of them. May the "seamless dress" of the great Healer be "by their beds of pain."

When traveling in this section of "sky-land" don't fail to visit Bethel Home. You will find a pleasing reception there, and your heart will be moved wth an appreciation of the great value of this institution to our afflicted brothers and sisters who are seeking "the cure." In this Home Brother Casto is showing forth the spirit of mercy toward the sick that Jesus so graciously manifested during his earthly life. Let us help him on in this great work by sending him a spare dollar when we can, and by remembering the Institution in our prayers.

The Good Samaritan

One of the well and favorably known men of Asheville is "the Good Samaritan," Rev. J. S. Williams. We shared with him the pleasure of being luncheon guest of Brother Casto, and then had a brief visit with him in his office. His work is a God-send to Asheville, and he is equally busy and happy in it. A booklet, giving in detail the work that he is doing, is just off the press. We hope to be able to secure a few copies, at least, for distribution at our coming conference. Brother Williams has been an honored member of our conference for years, and we look upon his work at Asheville as a noble contribution of the conference to needy and suffering humanity. God bless him in his ministry of loving helpfulness.

Oteen

A brief visit to Oteen gave us interest and pleasure. The United States government has acres and acres of ground here covered by great hospital buildings in which sick soldiers of the world war are being treated and nursed back to health. Our visit there was to see Brother L. L. Wilson, a member of the Burlington church, and whom we served as pastor for a number of years. We found him much improved in health, and hopeful in spirit. On his table by his bed was the Burlington daily paper, and the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, gifts to him of the Baraca class of the Burlington church. Though a shut-in, he keeps in touch with his church, and with the outside world. We hope and pray for him a complete recovery.

Melton's Grove—Rockingham

Our appointment with these churches was on Sunday, August 24. This was our initial visit to Melton's Grove. We were in two services there, morning and afternoon, and were greeted by a gratifying congregation at each service. In the afternoon the house was full. This church is in Montgomery county, and is situated three miles south of Mt. Gilead, and about midway between Albemarle and Rockingham, as a crow would fly. The distance is about eighteen miles from Albemarle and twenty-five miles from Rockingham. We wish that there might be more intercourse between this church and these nearby churches. Such fellowship would be mutually helpful, and especially so to Melton's Grove, removed as it is from the other churches of our denominational family. We suggest this for the consideration of our brethren in this part of the conference. Our impressions of the church here are favorable. It seems to be well located, and for fifty years or more, it has been contributing to the religious needs of the community. The allotment of $1.50 for Young People's Work was paid by the Sunday School, and a payment of $3.22 was made on the A. C. B. We are grateful for this. Why not make Melton's Grove an honor roll church? Try it, brethren. To do it would give you a mighty good feeling when you go up to attend the conference this fall. And it would look good to us, too, to see your church in this list. We are counting on Melton's Grove. The special meeting is to begin here next Wednesday; we pray that God may make it a spiritual benediction to saint and sinner.

For the night service, we went over to Rockingham, and had the pleasure of Pastor Trolinger and his wife, and their little girl neighbor, as traveling companions. Here again we were met by a goodly number of people, and their earnest attention to our message was pleasing and helpful. Since our visit there more than a year ago, the church building has been painted inside and out, and a Sunday School room provided in the basement of the church. The building is commodious, and is provided with two Sunday School rooms on each side and in the rear. Brother Trolinger and his wife have the confidence and esteem of the people, and the work appears to be prospering. The full allotment to the Sunday School of $3.00 for Young People's Work was paid, and $4.75 on the A. C. B., with more pledged to be paid later. A Children's Day offering of $5.08 was also turned over to us to be forwarded to Dr. Brown. Thank you, Rockingham, for these offerings. And won't you please keep it going until you have raised every dollar possible. Why not make Rockingham an honor roll church, too? We are counting on you, brethren. Your VERY BEST now, for God and His church!

Concord

Last night, Monday night, August 25, we were with Brother Millaway and his people in their third quarterly conference. The spirit of the meeting and the promptness with which all business was transacted was cheering. The pastor reports the church in good spiritual condition. We regretted to learn that the Sunday School superintendent, Brother Ralph Waddell, has just undergone an operation for appendicitis. He is doing well, and we shall hope and pray for his recovery. He has evidently been giving a good account of himself as superintendent, judging from the attendance. The brethren reported that this had been unusually good during the summer. The school is departmentalized, and a well-arranged building affords facilities for good work in all departments. The Children's Home receives $25 monthly from this school. If all of our schools would do that well in proportion to ability, Dr. Dixon's appeal would not be necessary. The Auxiliary and C. E. Societies are functioning normally, and the attendance at the preaching services is up to the usual standard. Thirty persons have been received into the church this year. The debt on the Sunday School building has been reduced to $2,200. This is carried through building and loan, and is being paid at the rate of $66 per month. The church is considerably behind on salary and budgets, due to industrial conditions. But an earnest effort will be put forth to bring these up, and no doubt a great improvement will be made here before the year closes. Brother Millaway and his good wife have the esteem of the people and their co-operation. The work is prospering. On last Sunday afternoon, Brother McLaurin and other workers went out, at the solicitation of the pastor, and secured 24 subscriptions to the HERALD. This completes the allotment for this church. Brother Surratt has secured the allotment for the Winston church, also. We failed to make mention of that in our report last week. This is worthwhile work; let it be continued.

Upon our arrival yesterday, we found Sister Millaway sick, and suffering intense discomfort. A physician was called and her ailment has responded to treatment. She is better today, though still in bed. She has our sympathy and our prayers for a speedy and complete recovery.

Seeing the Brethren

On this itinerary we have seen, up to this time, the following brethren, in addition to those already mentioned: Lowdermilk, Hill, Anderson,, Hulin and Short. We also saw in Weaverville, our neighbors, Brother Bates and his family. They were there on vacation We enjoyed a brief visit to their "cabin," and shared the honor of being guests with them in the home of Brother Guy Edwards and Brother Jesse Edwards. We were glad to see all of these brethren, and to find them and their families in usual health, and busy and anxious for a good closing of the year's work. Brother Lowdermilk informed us of the death of the infant child of Brother and Sister J. M. Morgan. They have our tenderest sympathies. God's blessings upon them in their sorrow. And may the rich blessings of God rest upon all of our pastors, and upon the people that they serve.

Appointments

Many other things that we want to say must go over until next week. Already this report is too long. We must express our gratitude to all who have befriended us on this visit with these churches. This is one of the most delightful itineraries that we have had during the three years that we have served in this capacity. Every where we have been graciously cared for, and our needs timely and fully met. Pastors and people will please accept our grateful thanks.

And now this final word: Everyone giving himself to God in renewed consecration for the work of these two remaining months.

September 7, Sunday.—Alamance charge, with Sapling Ridge and Center churches.

September 10, Wednesday.—Moving to High Point.

September 14, Sunday.—Enfield, in dedication service.

September 17-18, Wednesday and Thursday.—Creswell charge.

September 21, Sunday.—Burlington.

September 28, Sunday.—Shiloh charge.

October 11, Saturday.—Randleman charge, in quarterly conference. Hour, 7:30 P. M.

October 25, Sunday.—Tabernacle church, Tabernacle charge.

"Put them in mind—to be ready to every good work."

Fraternally yours,

TWO UNSELFISH BROTHERS

One Sunday in a little church in the country there was to be a missionary collection. Stephen and James Holt were so poor that they had not even a cent to give, though they wanted to help the missionaries.

As they were talking things over one day Stephen saw a big potato lying on the ground. He thought for a minute or two, and then picked the potato up.

''Let us give this,'' he said.

His brother laughed. ''How can we give a potato to the collection?''

''We can't give it next Sunday, but we will plant it in the nicest spot we can find, and take care of it, and give every potato it raises to the missions.''

So they planted it carefully, and you never saw anything grow like that potato.

''It beats all,'' said their father. ''If all my potatoes grew like that I'd make my fortune!''

When digging time came, there were forty good, sound potatoes from that one.

Then they wrote this sentence out forty times in their best handwriting: ''This is a missionary potato; it is from the best stock known. It will be sold only to someone who will promise that he will plant it in the spring, and give every one of its children to missions. (Signed, James and Stephen Holt.'')

Every potato had one of these slips pasted on its side.

And those potatoes were bought immediately. One gentleman even gave a gold piece for one of them, and James and Stephen were able to give quite a lot of money to the collection.

I cannot tell you how pleased and happy they were; but I can tell you one thing, they each have a missionary garden now, and the things in them grow splendidly.—Publisher Unknown.

CHRIST WILL COME IN PERSON

Speaking of the ''Second Coming of Christ,'' at the Northfield Conference, Rev. Charles R. Erdman said that it is a subject not often discussed at such a conference, and he deplored the fact that a doctrine so generally accepted by Christian people should be a divisive one, and in discussing it people should be so dogmatic. Christ's coming is a controverted doctrine, but a church doctrine which has always been held. The belief permeates hymnology and the doctrine is a scriptural one. The coming of Christ is not a matter of conjecture but is a doctrinal one given great prominence all through the New Testament. It is startling in studying the Bible, to see how much material relates to Christ's second coming, and if it has such a prominent place in the New Testament it should have place in the study and thought of the day. Because it is so controverted, people are not studying it, and contempt of it is as regrettable as controversy about it.

The church has meant all through the centuries, when it speaks of the second coming of Christ, that He will some day be actually, physically, personally, visible. The coming is not to be a spiritual coming, but a blessed reality. The abiding presence of Chrst will come to us if we trust in Him, but this is distinct from the fact that He will come in person. The words used in speaking of the coming of Christ are never those which mean a spiritual experience. No New Testament scholar of standing, whether he believes in the doctrine or not, but will say that the word used always means coming in the physical sense.

Before Jesus comes there will be a concentration of evil in the form of the anti-Christ; and an evangelization of the whole world. There is no doctrine so cheering as that of the second coming.—The Armory.

THE DIVINE SCULPTOR

Scant beauty Nature gave her! in disguise
  Rugged and harsh she bade her go about
With face unlovely, save the dark, sad eyes,
  From which her fearless soul looked bravely out.

But Life took up the chisel, used her face
  Roughly, with many blows, as sculptors use a block;
It wrought a little while, and lo! a grace
  Fell, as a sunbeam falls upon a rock.

Across her soul a heavy sorrow swept,
  As tidal waves sweep sometimes over land,
Leaving her face, when back it ebbed and crept,
  Tranquil and purified, like tide-washed sand.

And of her face her gentleness grew a part
  And all her holy thoughts left there their trace;
A great love found its way into her heart—
Its root was there, its blossom in her face.

So, when Death came to set the sweet soul free
  From the poor body that was never fair,
We watched her face, and marveled much to see
  How Life had carved for Death an angel there.

—Bessie Chandler.

HE'LL DO

''He'll do,'' said a gentleman decisively, speaking of an office boy who had been in his employ but a single day.

''What makes you think so?''

''Because he gives himself up so entirely to the task in hand. I watched him while he swept the office, and although a procession with three or four brass bands went by the office while he was at work, he paid no attention to it, but swept on as if the sweeping of that room was the only thing of any consequence on this earth at that time. Then I set him to addressing some envelopes, and although there were a lot of picture papers and other papers on the desk at which he sat, he paid no attention to them, but kept right on addressing those envelopes until the last one of them was done. He'll do, because he is thorough and in dead earnest about everything.''

You may naturally be a very smart person; you may be so gifted that you can do almost anything, but all that you do will lack perfection if you do not do it with all your heart and strength.—Christian Endeavor World.

S. O. S.

Harry and I were standing at the ship's rail watching the water go by.

"Let's go up in the radio shack," he said. "Maybe we can listen in to a concert or something."

"I don't believe the radio operator is allowed to listen to concerts," I replied. "But let's go up there anyway."

Harry's father was Chief Mate of the ship, and he had brought the both of us along just for one trip. We had made friends with 'most everybody, and among them Jim Croney, the radio man.

"I guess I'd like to be a ship's operator at that," remarked Harry, as we went up the ladder. "That's why I'm always hanging around the shack trying to learn something."

"Gosh," I said, "You know quite a lot already."

"Not so much as Jim Croney does," replied my chum, modestly.

Jim was seated in front of his instrument looking tired.

"You know," he said, "I used to have ideas about the sea and the romance that was to be found there. In my boyhood days I read stories of iron men in wooden ships, but I guess I'm a wooden man in an iron ship."

He paused for a moment and then continued:

"Those were the good old days—when grizzled salts on reeling yard-arms clung to the rigging in stinging gales—now I sit in an office chair waiting for something that never happens. I advise you two boys to stick to the land if you want excitement."

A sudden jolt threw the three of us sprawling across the room.

"What happened?" groaned Harry, picking himself up from the floor.

His answer was a rush of feet along the deck and a frightened face in the doorway. It stayed just long enough to yell:

"Hey, Jim! Shoot out an S. O. S.! We've struck a rock and we're sinking!"

"G—Gosh!" gasped Harry, "S—Sinking?"

Jim was still lying on the steel deck of the radio room.

"He's unconscious!" declared Harry. His chair tipped over and he landed on the back of his head!"

We tried to bring him back to his senses, but we couldn't. There were more excited footsteps and Harry's father stood in the doorway.

"Where's Jim Croney?" he said, in a deep, serious voice.

"He's hurt, dad," explained Harry. "The jolt—"

For a moment Mr. Holmes considered the circumstances. Then he said:

"Harry, it's up to you. We're sinking rapidly and need help. Can you send out the distress signal?"

"I'll try."

He clamped the 'phones to his ears and started up the generator. Then he sent out a general call for all ships and followed that by S. O. S., repeated nine times. He ended the message by giving the call letters of our ship. Then he shut down and listened for a reply.

I could tell by the expression on his face that there was one. Then something happened, because his jaw dropped.

"What's wrong?" I asked.

"I got an answer from the Carmania," he said. "She wants to know our position."

"I don't know."

"Ask the Carmania."

"Where are you?" came the answer. "What is your latitude and longitude?"

"Quick, Art," Harry told me. "Run to the bridge and ask my father."

As I worked my way toward the bridge, I noticed that the decks were already beginning to slant. Mr. Holmes told me what I wanted to know and sent me back to the radio room with the orders to get the "position" off to the Carmania at once.

But just as Harry began to send the message which would tell our rescuing ship where to come, the lights first dimmed and then went out entirely, leaving us in a black room with a disabled set.

"The batteries!" cried Harry. "Quick, Art. Find the switch and throw the set over to the storage batteries!"

A red light glowed above the instruments as I did so.

"The batteries are on, Harry," I said. "Go ahead with your message."

Dot by dot and dash by dash, Harry sent the message. He knew that the batteries would not last very long; therefore, he took his time and made every letter distinct.

"We are near the Sealby Rocks, Lomo Point. Ship in darkness and sinking rapidly.

"Cheer up," came the answer. "You are not far away and we're coming full speed to your aid."

A sudden lurch of our ship slid the storage batteries against the low wall, where they joined almost every other article in the shack that was not nailed down. The connecting wires broke and the set went dead for the second time.

"What will we do now?" I asked.

"Stick to our post," was Harry's answer. "I'll re-connect the batteries and splice the broken wires."

"But you can't see!" I protested.

Harry did not answer, but neither did he splice the broken wires. Instead he answered the hail of his father from the doorway.

"Come out of there, Harry! The ship's going and the last lifeboat is being lowered over the side right now! Come on, Art. Drop everything and get in the lifeboat!"

"But dad—we can't leave Jim here!"

"Is he still unconscious?" said Mr. Holmes in surprise. "All right, I'll carry him to the boat. C'mon, Harry, no time to lose. Let's get out of here."

Half an hour later the Carmania, ablaze with lights, saw our flare signals from the lifeboats. She trained her huge searchlights on our small craft and lowered down ladders so that we could climb aboard. Jim was lifted out of the lifeboat in a half net, half chair, and taken at once to the radio room, where there was a spare bunk the Carmania's operator said he could use.

Nothing could be seen of our ship but a few pieces of wreckage that had floated free when the vessel sank. Harry and I were too excited to sleep, so we went to have a talk with the radio man who had received our message.

When we got to the shack, Jim was just opening his eyes. First he felt the back of his head and appeared to be surprised that it was still there. Then he looked at the Carmania's radio set and blinked his eyes.

"Harry?"

"Yes, Jim."

"This isn't my radio room, is it?"

"No. It's the Carmania's."

"Who's the Carmania's?"

"A ship."

Jim thought this over for a few minutes and then said:

"Where's our ship?"

"It sank."

"It sank?"

"Yes."

"And where was I while it was sinking?"

Harry told him the whole story—how the first jolt had knocked his head against the floor, how the orders came to send the message, and how he had been carried to the lifeboat by Mr. Holmes.

"Quite an exciting time, wasn't it?" he said.

Harry nodded.

"Just my luck!" groaned Jim. "That's the first chance I've had in fifteen years to send out an S. O. S. or do anything exciting and there I was, lying on the deck unconscious! It didn't use to be like this in the good old days!" he added. "So you boys had better take my warning and stick to the land. I don't know, though. If you boys are figuring on a radio career, you sure got a healthy start!"

Harry and I looked at each other and laughed. We were wondering if the adventure would ever go out of the sea for us so long as we remembered the night when the Sealby Rocks tore a hole in the first ship that either of us had ever been on!—Selected.

HOW THE MISSIONARY STAYED

Sad, disheartening news had reached the little church back home. A letter from the young lady missionary whom the church was supporting in a far-off land had reached them that week. It bore tidings of the terrible conditions then prevailing on that particular field. In the face of it all she was endeavoring to stay and continue her labor of love. It was a matter of uncertainty how much longer she could remain. Perhaps if the church at home could manage to send her a few dollars a week extra for a few months the mission station could weather the crisis and emerge as the victor in the struggle.

The matter was presented to the church—and then another struggle began. There were those who favored sending the needed financial aid, and there were those who couldn't see how it could be done. Of course, it might be done if everybody was willing to work. There were ways in which it could be raised.

"There will be no raising money by any of the methods frequently used," the pastor declared. "This money will be a free-will gift. If your hearts are in this work and in the continuance of that mission station with its soul-saving message then you will find some way of sacrifice which will enable you to give the money so badly needed."

The matter was discussed for some moments without a definite decision being reached. It was during the Sunday School period that a lady came to the pastor.

"One of the young ladies would like you to present this missionary matter to the boys and girls," she told him. "She thinks they can help in this serious matter."

Following the request, the pastor met with the boys and girls and presented the facts to them. After he had finished, the young lady who appeared to be their leader arose.

"I suggest that each boy and girl think of something they are in the habit of having, and during the next few weeks we do without these things and give the money to our missionary," was her suggestion. "It may be ice-cream or candy or other things. What do you say?"

They were enthusiastic over this. Of course, she knew the enthusiasm of some would die but she knew some would be whole-hearted in giving. The next Sunday found four dollars in their gift.

"It is surprising," one of the leading members said to the pastor. "I didn't think they would do it. It's a small sacrifice, but yet it counts up."

"What do you mean by small sacrifice?" the pastor asked.

"I mean it doesn't amount to much,' 'the man explained.

"I don't agree with you," the pastor returned. "It does amount to something. When you ask a child to give up an ice-cream cone, you ask them to give up something that means a whole lot to them. It means much more than some things many times the value means to adult folks. They are giving up something they understand and like, for a cone full of cream is something tangible to them. They are giving their money for a cause they do not fully comprehend, though they may have an inkling of it, and for work which they do not understand. Out of hearts that want to do something for others they are giving."

"I hadn't looked at it that way," the main replied.

"No, and you're not doing it that way, either," the pastor continued. "You are familiar with the cause and the work, but I don't find where you are doing as much as the children. I know you are giving twenty-five cents a week more but that didn't cost you anything. How about putting extra money into this campaign?"

The man gave an uneasy laugh, but failed to reply.

"Of course that's a matter for you to decide," the pastor continued, "but before I decried the efforts and sacrifices of our children again I think it would be advisable to weigh ourselves in God's scales to find how heavy we weigh in this matter. A small sacrifice, eh? Well, that goes much farther than no sacrifice. When we get down to the real sacrifice of giving then God's work will be rid of many of its spiritual problems. God bless the children for what they are doing. Through their giving the missionary will stay on the field."

And she did. The station weathered the storm, and continued its work of shedding abroad the atoning work of Jesus Christ. Results were seen a year later when two of the young people of that church offered themselves as missionaries to this particular field, and the boys and girls pledged them their support.—L. L. Weightman.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

Septemebr 7: OUR CRUSADE PLANS

Scripture Text—Ex. 33:12-15.

(Consecration Meeting)

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Soul Winning. Matt. 4:18-20.

Tuesday—The Good Citizen. Psalm 24:1-5.

Wednesday—Good Will to Men. Luke 2:13, 14.

Thursday—A Soul Won. Acts 16:25-33.

Friday — Citizenship Principles. Romans 13:1-8.

Saturday—World Peace. Isaiah 2:1-5.

Suggestion to the Leader

You might initial this meeting as an E.P.C. meeting. The letter E is for evangelism. This began when Andrew and Philip each brought one to Jesus, and has been gonig on ever since, one bringing one to Christ. Each of us can evangelize in this way. P is for Peace. Christian Endeavor is promoting goodwill and peace must follow goodwill. C stands for Citizenship. Christian Endeavorers must be better, more intellingent, loyal Americans.

Leader's Talk

The Christian Endeavor movement is made up of about four million youths. If these are united by a single program of action they will be a mighty force of righteousness. What would be the limits of such an organized force? The crusade for clean citizenship is a real fight and the pre-requisite of peace is always rigteousness. The word evangelism should thrill our hearts. It is refreshing to find a great movement like Christian Endeavor giving it first place in its crusade plans. It should be first and may it always remain so. Christian Endeavorers can help evangelize the world in many ways. Personal contact and influence with others has won many. Then much is done through missions. Of course every one cannot go to the foreign fields but we may help by real giving, our prayers, our interests and our time.

Discuss These

1. What is the meaning of crusade?
2. How may a Christian Endeavor society help in evangelism?
3. What can a Christian Endeavor society do to promote good citizenship?
4. What contributions can a Christian Endeavor society make toward world peace?
5. How can the Christian Endeavor movement aid in promoting Christian unity?
6. How can C. E. help our minister?
7. What can four million Christian Endeavorers do for "Christ and His Church?"
8. Name half dozen of the main causes for which the young people of this generation need still to crusade.

Suggested Songs

"Onward Christian Soldiers," "The Victory May Depend On You," "Bringing In the Sheaves," "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," "I Love Thy Kingdom Lord," and "As a Volunteer."

Quotable Poetry

NO COMPROMISE

No compromise with evil shall be our battle-cry,
For God and right must conquer, and sin and wrong must die;
Unfliching we are standing, uncompromisingly
Beneath the flag of holiness forever we will be.

No compromise with error, for Bible truth we stand,
Let none remove the landmarks erected by God's hand.
With loyalty our watchword and faith in Christ our stay,
We'll bravely storm the forts of sin and through Him win the day.

No compromise with worldliness, no yielding to the wrong,
No lowering the standard that's good through ages long;
With Jesus as our leader, His Spirit as our Guide,
We'll firmly stand for righteousness whatever may betide.

—Haldor Lillenas.

ASPIRATION

I'd like to be a butterfly
And flit from flower to flower,
To fill the air with beauty rare,
Reflect both sun and shower.

I'd like to be a violet
Of native modesty,
Exhale perfume in every room,
With true humility.

I'd like to be a giant tree
To serve as sentinel;
A near retreat from storm or heat,
Where men might safely dwell.

I'd like to be a mountain high,
Majestic, noble, strong;
All could climb to heights sublime,
Beyond the reach of wrong.

I'd rather be a child of God
And see creation fair,
To truly know the way to go,
And find Him everywhere.

QUARTERLY REPORT BLANKS

I am mailing blanks in order to get reports from auxiliaries for our executive committee meeting the last week in September.

I presume that there has not been as much activity during the weeks of hot weather we have recently experienced, but if there is any work done in our churches, the women usually have a hand in it and, sometimes both hands, so I am expecting a erport from each auxiliary. I would appreciate reports from several new organizations, also.

Our conference president and our treasurer seem to be worried by the lack of funds that are coming in to support the work of our church. The women of our branch are pledged to stand back of all departments of church work, so let us put on our far-seeing spectacles and look beyond our own work. Having seen the various needs of the conference, let us work with renewed zeal to supply them.

Officers of the executive committee will receive cards notifying them of the date of the meeting at Weaverville in September. Whatever comes, or doesn't come, we must not let our mission work, nor our missionaries fail of our support. In a few days our own Mr. and Mrs. Minnis will begin their long journey to India. May they be accompanied by the prayers and the offerings of all our Methodist Protestants in North Carolina.

The following prayer was written by someone for a missionary society. Let us make it ours.

"O Lord, give us more charity, more self-denial, more likeness to Thee. Teach us to sacrifice our comforts to others, and our likings for the sake of doing good. Make us kindly in thought, gentle in word, generous in deed. Teach us that is is better to give than to receive; better to forget ourselves than to push ourselves forward; better to minister than to be ministered unto, and unto Thee, the God of Love, be glory and praise forever. Amen."

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN,
Corresponding Secretary.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Executive Committe of the North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Missionary Work will meet in Weaverville September 22 and 23. A full attendance of this meeting is desired. The Executive Committee is composed of officers of the Branch, secretaries of the various departments, and the district chairman.

MRS. Wm. C. HAMMER, Pres.

The Auxiliaries are expected to hold a Thank-offering service in September, and it is hoped that all will do this. We have promise of a program for this service for next week. We are told that it will be simple enough that all will have ample time to prepare.

HOT WEATHER ADVICE

During the hot summer days we are inclined to do a lot of things that are not the best for our physical beings. We eat all sorts of foods, drink gallons of cold beverages, take long walks or play tennis or golf for hours in the hot sun. We naturally get hot and sweaty. Then we hie to the shade and cool off too rapidly. All this is of course hard on the body. And too long exposure to the sun may even affect the brain unless the head is properly protected. At this season of the year hearty midday meals should not be eaten. Heavy meals during the hot summer months are not good for anyone. But frequent baths are indispensable, and the hair and feet need special care. Sensible clothes, preferably washable things, should be worn. Also the bedroom should get all the fresh air possible while a person is sleeping.

◆

SUN A BABY DOCTOR

Old Sol is a good baby doctor. Let him have a chance at your child. So says Dr. Martha M. Eliot, director of child hygiene of the Children's Bureau. Sunbaths in the direct sunlight, she points out, are the simplest method of giving the baby enough ultra-violet light. These baths should be begun when the baby is three or four weeks old. Of course care must be taken not to burn the skin. Exposure must be gradual, exposing a little more of the child's body each day. After all the body is exposed a slight reddening of the skin each day will gradually tan the baby.

MOON ROCKETS AGAIN

John Q. Stewart, professor of physics at Princetown, prophesies that in a century man may travel to the moon in a huge rocket in the form of a sphere weighing 70,000 tons. A crew of 60 men, equipped with apparatus suitable for wear in the moon's rarefied atmosphere, could be accommodated in the tank of the rocket. The sphere, says Prof. Stewart, could be shot from the earth rocket-fashion, and travel at a speed of 50,000 miles an hour toward the lunar orb. Cannon with which the rocket would bristle would be discharged en route in order to give the machine added impetus. Of course all this is mere speculation. But it is fascinating to us huggers of mother earth. The problem, says Stewart, is to get sufficient energy for the speed required. At the present time minute quantities of ionized hydrogen are isolated in the physicist's laboratory. These contain 100 times the energy of coal and oxygen. It is not known yet how to make such energy available for power, but a method may be discovered.—"Pathfinder."

CANCER DETECTED BY DYE

Dr. Arnold A. C. Butts, director of the Emery laboratory of Hahnemann hospital in Philadelphia announced that progress has been made in the development of a dye which will make it possible to detect internal cancers in the early stages of their growth. So far the dye, which has been in use in the hospital for two years, has been employed only as an aid to early diagnosis. Dr. Butts believes it will provide an accurate method of detecting cancerous growth and will pave the way for prompt surgical removal of the cancer of treatment by radium or x-rays. The dye in diluted form is injected directly into the veins of the patient.—"Pathfinder."

The immediate objective of the expedition will be traces of the ancestors of the "Peking woman."—"Pathfinder."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Glen Raven.—On Saturday night, August 16th, the Ladies' Aid gave a very delightful and successful supper at the church for the benefit of the church.

Many donations were made for the supper which consisted of Brunswick Stew, Chicken pie, home made ice cream, etc. The Ladies' Aid was very pleased to report $33.65 cleared after the supper, and this money will be used to the best advantage for the church work. We feel very grateful to each and every one who donated or helped in any way to make this supper a success.

Mrs. O. C. Loy, with other working members of the church, worked up and presented a very entertaining and enjoyable Children's Day program Sunday evening. The church was filled almost to its capacity, and the offering which was about $9.00 was used for Foreign Missions. Everybody felt proud of the splendid workers in getting up this program and also of the bright and little children who were so active in taking part.

At the present time, owing to hot weather, vacation time, etc., there has been a little decline in Christian Endeavor, Sunday school, and church attendance, but vacation days will soon be over and we are expecting our church to shine out as it never has shined out before. Our record attendance in Sunday school is 224, but we hope to get everybody busy and soon double this. There are on roll at the present 211 members with 137 present for last Sunday, $3.00 collection, with the collection banner going to the Young Men's class and attendance banner going to the Beginner's department.

Gideon Grove, Flat Rock Circuit.—The pastor, Rev. Paul Pegg, filled his appointment the second Sunday morning at 11 o'clock at which time the Lord's Supper was administered. The preaching services are well attended and the Sunday school is progressing nicely. The new seats were bought and placed in the church just before the revival services which began the first Sunday in July. It was a pleasure to the Ladies' Auxiliary to be able to furnish the money to paint the seats and the woodwork of the church. The pastor had as his helper in the revival services, Mr. Suits of High Point. There were four new members received into the church, and two came in by letter. The church as a whole seemed spiritually revived and regretted that Mr. Suits could not continue the meeting longer, for we felt sure that he could have seen greater results if time had permitted. We are sure that people of Gideon Grove church and surrounding community feel grateful to Mr. Suits for his serivces and will be glad to welcome him back at any time.

MRS. H. R. ANGEL.

Laurel Hill, Fallston Charge.—The Sunday school is getting along nicely. New members are being added. The teachers seem to be taking more interest in their classes. The Sunday school enjoys the talks given by our good superintendent, Mr. A. A. Sain, from Sunday to Sunday.

The revival meeting closed at Laurel Hill church Friday night. Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk of Shelby aided Rev. Mr. Morgan in the services. He gave some interesting messages. He was an inspiration to the good people. Seven members were added to the church, may God bless this number and ever keep them in His keeping.

Mr. Renius Rich taught a very successful singing school the last of July. The young people took a great interest in the singing.

We were very glad indeed to have all the visiting brothers and sisters that visited us and helped us worship and pray during our revival.

◆

Mebane.—Ever ready circle has had two very interesting meetings.

It met Monday night, July 21st, with Mrs. W. M. Loy as hostess. A large number of members were present and several visitors. The program for the meeting was in charge of Miss Norma Smith, leader of group number 2, a study of the M. P. church and its different organizations. After the program a business session was held and several plans for raising money for the circle were discussed. The offering amounted to $12.35.

Mrs. Loy assisted by Mis Pauline Nicholson served delicious fruit salad and cake.

The Ever Ready circle was entertained by Mrs. Tyson Smith and Miss Norma Smith as joint hostesses at the home of Mrs. Smith, Monday night, August 18th, at 7:30 o'clock.

The program was in charge of Miss Bessie Barnette, leader of group No. 3. A very interesting program was enjoyed.

There were twenty-three members present and three visitors. Offering $1.05, officers for the girls' philathea class were elected.

Plans for a stunt night to be given in the near future to raise money for the circle were discussed and a committee was elected to carry the plans forward. After the business a delicious course of ice cream and cake was served by Mrs. Smith, Miss Smith, and Mrs. Earl Brady.

◆

Welch Memorial, High Point.—No news is often good news. Nothing has been sent to the Herald for some time from Welch but that does not mean that there has been nothing good to say. Our young people both in the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor have been doing some nice things. The Christian Endeavor has just been conducting a contest for membership and other matters that seems to have given greater life and activity. Both the attendance and the programs have been good. The Sunday school has recently been graded to a very large extent. Brother O. W. Brown has been made superintendent of the elementary division and he and his helpers are doing a great work. Since these departments have been taken out of the main school and placed in rooms to themselves there has been such an improvement that one would hardly know the school. A leadership training school has just been conducted in the local church that has done much good. A Christian Endeavor expert class has just been conducted from which a number of experts have been turned out. At our quarterly conference which was conducted August 11, it was found that we were considerably behind in finances but other matters were moving along nicely. Brother D. B. Eldridge was found to be elected delegate to the Annual Conference. A number of delegates from our Sunday school attended the county Sunday school convention at Pleasant Garden and reported a very pofitable time.

Mr. Luther Medlin who has all the while been a great worker in our church will soon go to Belmont, N. C., to become a teacher in the high school of that city for the school season. We regret very much to give him up but we wish him well in his new field of labor. On next Sunday night the class of young men which Mr. Medlin has been teaching for a number of years will render a program at the regular evening service.

We regret very much that Dr. McManus who for a number of years taught a class of boys has left our city to follow his profession of dentistry in Siler City. We will miss the doctor very much. But what is lost to us will be a gain to Siler City. We have heard that he found a new wife to go with him. Congratulations to the doctor.

Mrs. W. C. Gibson, one of the charter members of our church and one of our oldest members, is quite sick. It is feared that "Grandmother" Gibson will not recover.

We were glad to have Brother Edwin Suits pastor of Lebanon church of this city, worship with us on the morning of July 17. It was his birthday and his people had given him a vacation. We did not learn how old he was. That part he did not tell. May your birthdays be many more, Brother Suits, and you have a standing invitation to worship with us every time it comes around. We will look for you the 17th of next August.

GEO. L. CURRY.

P.S.—The elementary division of the Sunday school with Brother Brown and his workers are to picnic on next Saturday afternoon at Pleasant Grove church. A good time is expected.

◆

Bess Chapel.—Our revival meeting began the 10th of August, with Rev. T. A. Williams as pulpit help from Randleman, and had great results. The meeting was one of the best we have had in several years. We had fifty-one professions and reclamations, and sixteen accessions; hoping to receive others later. The offering to the help amounted to $33.65. The people was greatly pleased with Brother William's work. We hope he may be pleased to pass our way again sometome. We are also glad to state that our Sunday school made an offering to the church at Kannapolis, to aid them in heroic effort to carry on for the Master. It is not my purpose to "Toot my horn" but I cannot refrain from saying I am proud of my people and the splendid efforts and loyalty to kingdom service. These people do things.

M. C. HENDERSON.

Siler City.—The third quarterly conference was held at this place on Wednesday night, August 20th. Both church were well represented but the financial part of the program was not very encouraging. We are far behind on the budgets, but much can and we hope will be done yet. Mr. I. L. Smith was elected delegate to represent this charge at the Annual Conference. Surely no delegate wants to go to conference without a "clean sheet", so, members of our church, let's get busy.

Since my last report our Sunday school has enjoyed our annual picnic. This time we had a watermelon slicing on the church lawn. The crowd was estimated at around 200. We have had extra good attendance all this summer.

The Woman's auxiliary is getting up a play, "Sewing for the Heathen" to be given in hte next few days. A silver offering will be taken at the door. Mrs. L. L. Woody, Mrs. J. N. Johnson, and Miss Sallie Smith are directing this play and we feel sure it will be a success.

The Woman's auxiliary is also sponsoring a "Diminishing Tea" which if none of the links in the chain are broken will net us $81.25.

The C. E. society was delighted to have Mrs. Pearle Moore Lucas from Darlington, S. C., meet with them on this last Sunday night. Mrs. Lucas was a former member of our church and was instrumental in helping to make the C. E. society what it is today. Mr. and Mrs. Lucas are visiting Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Woody. We are always glad to welcome them in our home and church.

Miss Susie Smith has returned from an extended trip to Lexington where she visited her niece, Mrs. L. H. Shaw.

Dr. Williams has filled all his appointments and has given us extra good sermons such as he can and does give.

MRS. J. A. COOPER, Reporter

◆

Asheboro.—In the absence of the pastor next Sunday who will be away helping Brother Shelton in the meeting at Spring church, Dr. R. M. Andrews will occupy the pulpit at the morning hour. There will be no evening service. J. E. PRITCHARD.

◆

Fairfield Churh, Guilford Church.—Rev. E. O. Peeler brought an eloquent message on the two commandments Jesus gave the Pharisee lawyer as being the greatest commandments. After the message, he read a letter from the president of the annual conference to the members reminding them of the nearness of the conference and urging them to be punctual in their obligations; also, that more members should subscribe to the church paper in order that it may continue to be published.

A large crowd attended the funeral services of Odell Henry Ward, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Ward, who died August 17. Messrs. Peeler and Whitehead had charge of the service. Interment was made in the church cemetery.

The Woman's auxiliary met August 17, at the church with Mrs. E. O. Peeler, the president, presiding. A program was given with various members giving readings on the different phases of life and promotion of health.

Mr. J. D. Strader, the class leader, called a class meeting last Sunday night. It has been some time sine a meeting of this kind was held. We hope the members responded in good numbers.

J. VAN CASHATT, Reporter.

◆

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson.—We are moving along nicely considering the busy time of the year. We know that we should not fall back in attendance but there are some people on every charge that are neglectful to the church in regard to attendance.

On the fourth Sunday, August 24, Brother H. L. Powell brought a wonderful sermon to the congregation, with a goodly number present.

We always have something to be thankful for. On last first Sunday in August with the kind help of Miss Alice Haynes of Spring Hill church the young people of our church organized a C. E. society of which we are very proud. The young folks have seemed to liven up a good deal since the organization of the society. We had our first meeting on the third Sunday in August with a total of 35. We hope to take in more members at the next meeting. We feel that we have something to be thankful for. Ruth Payne was elected president, Mrs. Will Clodfelter vice-president, Miss Victoria Ball secretary, and Mr. Paul Greene treasurer. The leader for next meeting will be Mrs. Roy Hilton. We are hoping for a great success.

Our revival meeting will begin the fourth Sunday in September, and we hope much good will be accomplished.

Mt. Moriah, Cleveland Charge.—Since our last report we have held a seven days' revival meeting with Rev. Mr. Hill as pulpit help. Brother Hill did some splendid preaching. We had a good revival, forty-five conversions and reclamations, twelve additions to the church.

Last Sunady afternoon our pastor, C. E. Ridge, brought to us a great sermon. His text was found in the book of Daniel 3:17. "If it be so, our God is able to deliver us from the fiery furnace." It was very intersting. I think everybody, young and old, enjoyed it.

We were glad to have some members with us Sunday that have not been present for some time.

Our Children's Day service was held the fourth Sunday afternoon in June. The children rendered their parts well. After the end of the program two small girls took the offering which was very good.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. Have gained 50 new members this summer. We have 123 on roll now, the most we have ever had.

We are asking all Christians to remember us and all our works, in their prayers.

Oak Grove, Near Rural Hall.—It seems that Brother Williams preached his best sermon for us Sunday. But there was great interest on through. After the S. S., or before the close, the pastor read the appeal from the "Home" at High Point, and explained to us all; and the result will be a financial effort later on.

It seems that but few peope have an idea of the "nerve strain" that those responsible at the Children's Home have to bear.

Of course, "times are hard" now, but real economy is not hard. It is really easier to do right than to do wrong.—and there is much teaching needed—hence the need of every family to have the Herald coming in every week.

Besides the many churches there are evangelists with tents. Also those who serve in the Salvation Army come around right often. Inside of the second week in this month, a man with a tent served at King by preaching at night. He did not have what is called "a revival," but he made interest in his way. He did not draw large crowds, and a peculiar thing about this "drawing" was that he seemed to be able to preach rather better to few than to many. A reminder that the evangelist, Mr. Moody, had the power to preach as well to only a few as to many. On the third Sunday night there were other meetings near, and he had but few to hear him, but on that occasion he seemed to be at his best.

Saturday night some that serve in the Salvation Army gave the people of King a "revival." The great occasion only lasted about an hour. One peculiar item to report about the occasion is that there were hundreds of people standing thick around, and closely listening. Perhaps there were five hundred in sight. W. F. GRABBS.

Rockingham.—Our Sunday school is very good. The collection and attendance are very good for this season of the year. Our pastor has filled his appointments here bringing to us some very inspiring messages. Our good pastor is beginning a revival this week at our sister church, Melton's Grove. Pray for them and us.

Our mid-week prayer meeting is continuing with interest, part of the time our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, gives Bible study at these meetings.

The Ladies' Thursday afternoon prayer meeting is also very helpful and interesting. They have accomplished some mission work.

Our Hapyy Hand boys and girls are very much interested. Their mission is to cheer the sick and afflicted, and the distressed.

Our excellent Sunday school superintendent, Brother W. F. Hudson, happens to be the leader of this grand organization that he is working with. It is training children for greater service.

We were very pleased indeed to have with us on Sunday evening, August 24, the president of the Annual Conefernce, Dr. Taylor. He brought to us a very, very inspiring message—one that sank in to most of our hearts I think; one that was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. We were very thankful to have him with us. I think any church would enjoy having him present at their services. We are thankful for him and hope that he can visit us more often in the future.

We ask you all to pray for us that we may make the best year's work in the service of the Lord that we have in the history of the church.

MISS BIRDIE CONNELL.

English Street.—Our Sunday school had a most enjoyable time at our annual picnic last Saturday afternoon. It required too large trucks and several cars to convey the jolly crowd of young folks and adults to the historic Guilford Battleground, where the occasion was celebrated. There were 92 that gathered around the long table in the grove, and after a few words and thanks offered by the pastor, everybody helped themselves to the good eatables that had been prepared by the good ladies of English Street church. Superintendent Robbins, as well as the pastor and others, were highly pleased with the happenings of the afternoon.

Mrs. Phillips, one of our very attentive members, is very much improved. She has been in bed for two weeks or longer, and has been missed in the Sunday school and church services.

We plan to begin a revival campaign in our church here, the first week in October. We urgently request all praying people to remember us in this attempt to have a real revival. All spiritual life has not yet been extinquished at English Street. We have some good praying people, Jacob like, who seem determined to hold on till the blessing comes. The mist is already beginning to clear and we believe a brighter day is just ahead. GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

◆

Enfield.—On the second Sunday in September we expect to dedicate the Enfield church. The President of the Conferene will be with us and preach the sermon at the eleven o'clock hour and some former pastor will preach at the evening hour. We are expecting this to be a big day in the history of the church and desire all those who are interested in the church to plan now to be there.

Roberta Station.—Our revival meeting began the first Sunday in August, with Rev. J. D. Cranford as pulpit help. We all feel benefited by the splendid preaching which he did. Brother Cranford certainly did good work, and we were delighted with his methods. The results were not gratifying, from the standpoint of new members at any of the village churches, but from the standpoint of good preaching, the four week's of revival effort at the three churches have not been excelled in the past four years.

On Sunday p. m. one week, the pastor went away to be with Brother Bingham in a meeting. When he returned the next week end, more than one hundred folks had appeared at the church, and the grounds had been cleaned, graves sanded and the trees whitewashed. And that was not all, when he went away there was not a stick of lumber on the ground, but when he returned four new S. S. rooms had been added to the church, and a new well sunk and fitted with a pump affording five gallons of water per minute. When these people take the notion to do anything, they don't talk always about it, they just do it now. I threatened to leave because they did part of this without mentioning it to me. The good women went to work, and decided if I went they would send us away full, for once. So here they came with the sumptuous pounding, and I fell in love with them just for that! I have decided if there was any going some of them would have to do it. Two whole 100lb. bags of flour, and wife and daughter nice new slippers was among the gifts. May God bless every one of them, and reward them.

Under the fine management of Brother Z. D. Cochran, our S. S. is on a real march. The number has not fallen below 300 but once in several weeks. We are entering a contest with our first church in Concord, until conference. They may outstrip us, but they will not sleep until noon Sundays if they do. You ought to see our young men's and young ladies' classes, which enroll about a hundred each, hustle for the banner attendance each Sunday! To God be the glory for all He has done for us while here. Pray for us.

Denton Charge.—We have been so busy in our revival work that we have not reported to the Herald lately. Rev. J. R. Short assisted in the meeting at Cid beginnig the fourth Sunday in July and closing the following Friday night. Mr. Short did some good preaching which seemed to be appreciated by all. The attendance was also good, but the visible results were not what we would like to have seen. We began our special meeting at Piney Grove on the second Sunday in August. The pastor did the preaching and Miss Annie Chisem helped with the music. The special music she rendered was enjoyed by all, we believe did much good. We had three professions at this place and two additions to the church. The other one expects to join later. The third Sunday we began our meeting at Canaan. Here the pastor did his own preaching except one sermon each by Rev. C. H. Hill, Rev. H. W. Bell, and Rev. P. E. Bingham. We thank each of these for his help. Mr. Hulin, a brother to Rev. Mr. Hulin, was with us during this meeting. He had charge of one service and also helped out many times by his prayers and exhortation. The Canaan people appreciated his coming very much. At Canaan we had thirteen professions and thirteen additions to the church. .Mrs. Mattie Snider Garner joined by certificate. The others joining at Canaan are: Waymon Hunt, Edward Hunt, Carl S. Bisher, Clinard Nance, Reice Kinley, Roland Surratt, Walton Ward, Hayden Ward, Bulah Gallimore, Mizell Garner, and Lena Hunt. At Piney Grove the two joining were Foy Delk and eJwel Surratt. We begin our revival at Mt. Elba the fifth Sunday in August. We invite every one to come and bring well filled baskets for the Sunday all day services. The attendance and interest has been good at all these services. We wish to thank each one for their fine co-operation.

Gibsonville Church.—The Christian Endeavor societies, the Woman's auxiliary and Sunday school have continued through the hot weather without a vacation.

On the first Sunday evening at 7 o'clock a union Christian Endeavor meeting was held at Gibsonville church. The visiting societies were Whitsett, Brick church, and Lowell church. A good program was enjoyed. The topic was "Chance to Serve Christ in the Summer." Miss Maxine Hammer lead the discussion. Special music was furnished by Miss Charlotte Hammer of Washington, D. C.

Miss Hammer has been spending the summer months here with her cousin, Miss Maxine Hammer. She has been active in the Christian Endeavor and other young people's work. She and Maxine will leave September the fourth for Washington where they will attend college this winter.

A union social was given by the Gibsonville and Brick church on Saturday evening, August ninth. Out door games and contests were enjoyed by a large crowd.

The Christian Endeavor, B. Y. P. U. Epworth League, and the Luther League held a union prayer meeting at the Gibsonville church on August 17th. A splendid program was enjoyed. Dr. W. T. Whitsett was the principal speaker. String music was furnished by Mr. "Bill" Killett and Harlan Trogden. Miss Anna Gerringer and Theo Edwards sang a duet.

The Young ladies Bible class and the Intermediate girls met with Mrs. D. M. Davidson on Tuesday evening of last week and organized a Young People's Missionary society. Miss Hazel Woodland was elected president, Miss Lessie Faucett secretary; Mrs. Carl Allen treasurer; and Miss Esquridge Yow, program committee. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Allen.

There will be no preaching at our church until the first Sunday in September.

Shiloh.—Shiloh has had a glorious revival, for whih we are truly thankful. Our pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler did the preaching, the church watered it with her prayers and God sent the increase. Our hearts were strangely warmed, God's holy spirit came to pastor and people and it was good to be there.

We would love to outline every sermon, but that would require too much space. Sunday was a good day, a large crowd was present. The Carlton quartette furnished music for both morning and afternoon services. On Sunday Brother Troxler urged that the church put on her strength, clean up community, desecration, bootlegging, and immorality and rescue our boys and girls, who are the sunshine of our land.

Especially sweet and inspiring were the afternoon services. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon we had consecration services after each sermon when the church knelt at the altar and plead for the presence of the Holy Ghost in each heart.

One of the sweetest services was held Thursday at 3 p. m. Many testified and witnessed God's saving and keeping power. "And they overcame him, by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony." Several front benches were filled with children under 15 years of age. The pulpit and altar were filled with young people at the close of the service and the aisles were filled with older men and women, and such a consecration service, this writer has never seen before. Have never seen such a holy hush over the entire audience. Even after benediction it seemed as though no one wanted to go home, they just sat or stood still; sobs and shouts were audible, and such a sweetness came to our souls. Very reverently did every one leave, even the cars were quiet. Do you say that was excitement? No, just the Holy Spirit of God.

Thursday night Brother Troxler called Uncle Joe Laughlin to the pulpit to tell what God had done for him. He is a living testimony to God's saving grace. Once he was a drunkard and nothing was too bad for him to do. God wonderfully saved him from his sins 17 years ago. He says he's giving God the scraps of his life. He says he's giving God God's word, but he quotes scripture as glibly as if he were a college graduate. He is not plain of speech, but he speaks mightily for God. Though ignorant (he says) every one can see that he has been with Jesus, but he daily abides in Him. His happiness and joy fairly beam in his face. Said the Master, "My joy I leave with you."

Friday afternoon the friendships service was a blessing to all. Brother Troxler said to tell friends how much they had helped you now while they could hear rather than to wait and send beautiful flowers when they could not know or say kind words, when they could not hear. Bless you, we did that very thing and hungry hearts rejoiced.

Sunday morning at Sunday school every one seemed to be running over. Jesus was there, in every classroom. There were more than 50 young men in their class, taught by Brother J. L. Evans. Some of these young men were saved during the class period. Young men working with and praying for young men. No wonder they sang, clasped hands and, yes, shed tears unashamed. May this spirit abide in Shiloh. The meeting closed Sunday night.

No! The day of revivals is not over.

Tabernacle Charge.—Our revival meetings have been held at both churches on this charge. Rev. T. M. Johnson was our pulpit help at Julian and Rev. A. D. Shelton was the engaged help at Tabernacle. Rev. O. C. Loy preached three sermons at Tabernacle before Brother Shelton arrived. The preaching of these brethren was of a high order and was appreciated by pastor and people. As a result of these meetings there were thirteen conversions and renewals and eight have joined the church. It was a pleasure to have with us at Tabernacle the following ministers of our conference: Revs. S. W. Taylor, J. R. Hutton, J. E. Pritchard, W. F. Ashburn, T. F. McCulloch, J. D. Williams and L. W. Gerringer, also Revs. J. N. Bowman and Wayne Curtis of the Baptist church.

Since our last report the people have remembered the pastor with flour, meal, fruit, cantaloupes, watermelons, meats and cash. The following have our thanks: Misses Annie and Lizzie Harden, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hanner, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Holt, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Coble, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Smith, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Whiteley, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Coble, Mr. Riley Blackard, Mr. Tom Garrett, Mr. Riley Fogleman and Mrs. P. A. Hardin.

A few days ago Brother E. L. Coble handed the pastor a check for $10.00 to help pay for his new Ford. He has our sincere thanks.

H. L. ISLEY.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Our revival meeting began the Fourth Sunday in July and closed the following Friday night. Our pastor was assisted in this meeting by Rev. Mr. Loy who delivered some splendid messages. We believe much good was done although the visible results were not what we had hoped for. There were two accessions to the church. We hope Brother Loy will come this way again.

We are having a splendid Sunday school with an enrollment of something like one hundred.

Brother Trollinger was away last Sunday, so his place was filled by Rev. Mr. Abernathy from McCleansville: his visit was enjoyed. We were also glad to have with us Brother Madearis.

Our Sunday school will be entertained next Wednesday night by the superintendent with a watermelon feast. We are expecting a good time.

At the request of President Taylor I am giving a report of our receipts since conference to and including July 31. The items for the Woman's Auxiliary were received from Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Treasurer. The women are doing fine work. Their contributions are larger than they were at this time last year. We wish we could say as much for the other organizations in the church. We have less than three months in which to meet our obligations. In this short time we ought to raise not less than $15,000. Shall we do it? We hope so. If any mistakes are noted in this report we shall be glad to correct them.

GEORGE R. BROWN, Treasurer.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Boyd

Mrs. William J. Boyd departed this life at her home near Warrenton, N. C., on July 9, 1930.

She had been ill for about four years; during all of this time she showed a degree of cheerfulness and resignation, together with fortitude in suffering, which was truly remarkable.

Mrs. Boyd was the daughter of Rev. W. H. Wills, D.D., one of the pioneer ministers of the Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina, and a sister of Rev. R. H. Wills, whose life was given to the ministry of the gospel in the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant church.

She was born at the old family homestead in Halifax county, and as a member of Bethesda church she gave to it the efficient service of her young womanhood, until her marriage to Mr. Boyd in 1890, when she moved to another community. While quiet and unobtrusive, her Christian character was pronounced, and could but be observed in her home, as well as in her relation to members of church and community.

She leaves two daughters to mourn her loss: Mrs. Jack Scott of Warrenton, and Mrs. Spencer Scott, of Manson; also two sisters, Misses Mary and Harriet Wills, of Greensboro; and a large number of other relatives and friends.

After a brief but appropriate funeral service, her body was laid to rest in the family plot in the Warrenton cemetery.

A Good Man Passes

Alson Sharpe, the oldest child of John Sharpe and Sallie Loy Sharpe, was born September 1, 1838, and was called to his reward July 29, 1930. During the period of his earthly life he took part in a number of important activities. For a number of years he taught singing school in Alamance and adjoining counties, one of these schools was at Mt. Hermon M. P. church, six miles south of Graham, N. C. At this church he led the music for more than 40 years to the joy and pleasure of the people. Mr. Sharpe furnished the plans for the old part of the present church at Mt. Hermon and constructed the Tabernacle, which was torn away more than 30 years ago. He also helped to build Bingham Military Academy and old Alamance Cotton mill. The Farmers' Alliance honored him by making him president for several years.

More than three years of his life were given to the War Between the States, spending the last six months of the war in prison at Point Lookout, Md. While in the Confederate army he excelled all contestants in jumping at Camp Mangum in eastern N. C. During the three years in the war he did not receive a wound of any kind. At the close of the war Mr. Sharpe was married to Miss Ella Albright, daughter of Colonel Mike Albright, who with four children survive: Prof. S. A. Sharpe, A. A. Sharpe, L. H. Sharpe, and Mrs. C. M. Neese. Also one brother, Mr. H. G. Sharpe, who has been a licensed exhorter in the M. P. church for 30 years.

Many years ago he united with Mt. Hermon M. P. church on Mt. Hermon circuit, and remained a faithful member until death. It was his burning desire to point out the way of life to others. Mr. Sharpe was one of God's gentlemen, always ready to counsel and help. Everywhere he was loyal. Loyal to his friends, loyal in his devotion to his home and his own, loyal to his church, loyal to his Christ. It would never occur to a man to suggest to him for the sake of any selfish desire or promise to act contrary to his conscience. In his passing the writer has lost one of his best friends who will long be remembered for that simplicity that is in Christ Jesus that held possession of his soul and made his life beautiful in the beauty of Christ.

Mr. Sharpe lived a long life, a blessed life and at last, weary of the way, tired of the burdens that hung heavy upon a weakened frame, he lay down upon his couch and slept in God to wake in heaven. Farewell, my friend, and my father's friend. As you enter the gates above we believe you will meet him who guided the writer's feet along the ways of life, and who was anxious to live to help him through college, but was almost suddenly called away.

The funeral was conducted at Mt. Hermon, July 30, 1930, and the burial took place in the church cemetery.

> Now the battle day is past,
> Now upon the farther shore,

Outerbridge

Whitakers church sustained another great loss when Mrs. Mary Bulluck Outerbridge, sometime ago, went to her reward. Love, loyalty, and liberality were elements, large, in her Christian charecter. She never measured off her part of the work and then quit when that had been finished.

In recent years Mrs. Outerbridge was welfare worker for Nash county. Her daily routine of sympathizing with suffering humanity, of planning for and working out relief for the needy unfortunates involved much travel, sometime it meant long drives to other parts of the state. Yet, on her return home in the evening she was never too weary to attend prayer meeting or any church meeting and join heartily in the worship exercise. Her contributions to the kingdom, whether in worship or of service or of money, were always generous.

Mrs. Outerbridge did not live as long as some are permitted to live, but she lived much by living well. She followed literally the injunction: "Be thou faithful, unto death."

Her interest in humanity was not lessened but, I think, rather intensified by her devotion to her own loved ones. Often when I saw Mrs. Outerbridge and her two sisters so happy in each other's campanionship, I felt there should be triple names, as Faith, Hope, Charity, for the trio. The love thus cultivated in her own household found expression in sympathetic activity in her daily round among the unfortunates.

The hearts of friends go out in sypathy to sorrowing ones and up to God in prayer in her behalf.

T. M. JOHNSON.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

Mr. R. B. Hughes, Concord, personal gift	$50.00
Mrs. H. C. Bulla, Asheboro, personal gift	2.00
Flat Rock, Flat Rock	2.40
Rehoboth, Granville	6.20
Cedar Falls S. S., Randleman	4.50
Mt. Pleasant, Guilford	.71

We are thankful for these gifts to the Home. Every one of them counts in helping us out just now.

Obligations had to be met both yesterday and today that we could not have met had not Brother Hughes come along on Sunday and out of the bigness of his heart handed us a check for $50.00, and then came the personal gift of Mrs. Bulla who frequently remembers us with just such offerings. We sincerely thank these two friends, and also the churches and Sunday schools who helped us this week.

Clothing and Other Gifts

The Daily Vacation Bible school, State Street, Lexington, 10 aprons, 23 gowns, 1 pair bloomers, and 3 slips.

The Daily Vacation Bible school Enfield, 1 teddy and 10 pair bloomers for little girls.

Mr. J. G. Rogers, Burlington, 6 dozen pair hose for our larger boys. It is so kind of our friends to send us this new clothing in this way, and we thank them.

The gifts of money by Brother Hughes and Mrs. Bulla, and the gift of hose by Brother Rogers came in direct answer to "Our Urgent Appeal" in last week's Herald. Look it up and read it and "go thou and do likewise."

We must place an order real soon for at least one hunderd pairs of shoes, and we have no money with which to pay for them. At an average of $2.50 per pair, and that is a very cheap shoe, you can readily count what the bill will be. Who will pay for one or more pair?

Our Refrigerator

It is now nearly ours. It was installed in our milk house last Wednesday, by the High Point Hardware company, and is doing fine service. We wish all of you whe helped in any way to get it could see it. It is a beauty. It is 62 inches wide, 57 inches high and 25 inches deep, and will hold 12½ gallons of milk and the butter and other foods, and it will prove a very great saving to us besides keeping our milk and butter in so much better condition. We thank you over and over again for your help, and we know you are rejoicing with us.

We are now asking that you keep sight on helping us to get a smaller sized refrigerator of the same make for the boy's dormitory. They need it so badly, and it will be such a help and such a saving in foods when it is installed. We already have about 4.000 coupons on that, since they have come in so rapidly for the last few days. We sent the full amount of coupons required for the refrigerator we now have, and had left over this good start on the next one. Thank you for your help, and may the dear Lord bless and guide in all His work.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

—Prof. T. C. Amick has been in Boone for three months teaching in the Appalachian State Teacher's College. He has enjoyed his stay there. The summer school ends this week. He will return to Elon college in good time for the opening on September 8.

—Elon College is expecting nearly two hundred new scholars this fall term.

—At the request of Mrs. R. R. Michaux, Dr. T. C. Amick has written her obituary.

—The Bessemer City strike has ended. The mills have consented to pay the same wages and the employees have returned to work with the exception of a very few who are to be supported until they find employment elsewhere.

—A note from her daughter, Mrs. L. W. McKinney, reports the recent death of Mrs. R. R. Michaux. She had suffered long with diabetes and had to have one foot amputated eight years ago. She lived at Gap, N. C., and was buried at Stony Ridge Baptist church. She retained through the years her interest in the Methodist Protestant church, though separated from it.

Mistreating God

We know how God would have us go,
But choose to go another way,
Pretending that we do not know
The thing that He to us would say.

We bolder grow and then deny
The claims of God upon us all;
We claim the right to steal and lie
And turn away from God's plain call.

Insult we add to injury
And charge our God with many wrongs,
Ascribe to Him all tyranny,
And sing of Him blasphemous songs.

But God, so wondrous good and kind,
In matchless patience bears it all:
But fearful end he's sure to find
Who runs this course to final fall.

For Peace In Industry

President Green of the American Federation of Labor in his Labor Day address expresses some fine sentiments that make for peace in the economic world. Some agitators in the labor world represent human life as a brute struggle between classes. But Mr. Green has a higher and truer view. He sees in men something more than greedy seekers after material supplies. He sees the higher moral life which he would have dominate the lower elements in man's nature. Here are some of his words:

"Without service rendered by the heart, hand and brain of labor, civilization would perish while cities and towns would become desolate.

"If capital and labor are to carry on a relentless industrial class warfare, then religion and ethics have failed, the rule of righteousness in human relations has ceased to operate, and a sense of individual moral responsibility has been destroyed.

"The American Federation of Labor steadfastly refuses to embrace such a philosophy or to accept such a pessimistic theory."

Rev. J. F. Minnis Returns to India

On Tuesday of this week Rev. J. F. Minnis was in Greensboro on his return journey to our mission field in Dhulia, India. He will stop for a few weeks with his father-in-law in Whitford, Md., and then will drive on to New York, as he wishes to take his auto to India.

We imagine that it requires more of the spirit of consecration and personal sacrifice to go to a foreign mission field the second time than the first. One knows better what he is losing in leaving the homeland and better what he will encounter in the foreign land. But if Brother Minnis felt any aversion to going this time, he did not show it by word or look. He had the courage born of a former experience which braced him for the new undertaking. But he realized that he was incurring a distinct loss in leaving the friends he had made in his years of service in the pastorate. He will carry with him the benefit of their prayers and good wishes.

Just before saying good-bye he took from his pocket an Indian god and gave it to us, "not as an object of worship for you," he said, "but to show you what absurd objects the heathen worship." It was a little larger than my thumb, a jet black metal figure of a monkey sitting at ease with his hands folded as if in prayer.

We told Brother Minnis good-bye with some sense of the greatness of his sacrifice and with genuine admiration of the Christian spirit that leads him on. May his efforts be greatly blessed of God in turning many to the Christward way.

Men and Missions

Fifteen or twenty years ago there was a noisy movement among men to evangelize the world in one generation. Men spoke rather contemptuously of what women and children had been doing for missions and declared the work a man's job and were confident, now that men had taken hold of it, that it would be accomplished in one generation. That "men and missions movement" was not a total failure by any means, but it did not result as largely as its friends expected and predicted. One reason was that the zeal of the men was too short-lived. Theirs was a hare's race. The women's race may be at the tortoise pace, but they win by never stopping to rest.

But the men were right in their statement that the task is not exclusively for women. There is a large place for the men which the women can never fill. All Christian men should be brought to realize constantly the need of their strong and hearty co-operation in the effort to convert the world to Christ's way of thinking and living.

Are the men of the Methodist Protestant Church not depending too exclusively upon the women to raise money for missions? We fear that they are.

THE PIONEERING CHRIST

Rev. W. A. Ledford

Dr. James Moffatt shows a touch of genius and poetic insight in his illuminating and inspiring phrases, "the pioneer of life"; "the pioneer of faith," and "the pioneer of salvation." They are found in Acts 3:15; Heb. 2:10, 2, and present the meaning far more clearly tan the translations in the older versions. They come with a health of inspiring suggestions also. The pioneer figure presents Christ, according to Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, as we see Him in the Gospel, "a lone figure trying to win the world to God." Dr. Joseph Fort Newton commenting on the scene of Christ in Gethsemane, where it is stated, "He went a little further," as being characteristic of His entire life and work.

Christ is still out on the frontiers of life, beckoning for His followers to come on to new heights and adventures. There has been much talk about getting "back to Christ," but it should be "forward to Christ." The world may get away from, but never ahead of Christ. The pioneer is one who goes ahead preparing the way for others to follow, enlarging the possible area of things; pushing back horizons and opening up new trails for the coming multitudes. From the days of Abraham on his westward hazard of faith, pushing out into unknown domains, down to the lonely flyer making the first trail through the air across the seas, the pioneer has been a fascinating figure. Christ as "pioneer of life" enlarged every thing He touched, pushing back horizons, crossing the old frontiers of nations, races, classes and clans; making the "uttermost parts of the earth" the goal instead of a small, favored portion, as Palestine. While success accompanied His efforts in the physical and social realms of life; His greatest achievements were in the spiritual and eternal realms. He lengthened out these brittle, frail, fleeting, perishing, vanishing lives of ours into lives that are immortal and eternal.

"The pioneer of faith" repreesnts Christ's work far better than "the author of faith." From the days of Abel down till now there have been men who lived and wrought by faith. There was faith in the world long years before Jesus came to give us the perfect. matchless example of how faith should manifest itself. Jesus founded no system of doctrine, dogmas, nor even church creeds, but lived pre-eminently the ideal for faith. Christians, according to Paul, are to live their lives not by their own weak, wavering faith, but by "the faith that was in Jesus Christ, who loved us and gave himself for us." This would include His abiding and unshaken faith in God and His unalterable confidence in man. There is need for a greater faith in God, all would admit; but there is equally as great need for a stronger faith in man to supplant the uneasiness and suspicion which prevails so generally between nations, churches and individuals.

"The pioneer of salvation," is appropriate in speaking of the work of Christ, since He went further, sacrificed more than the world will ever know for its salvation. He left His Father's house of light, where He was co-equal with the Father, for the world's night: "emptying Himself of all but love"; that "whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." He, unlike Joshua of the Old Testament, leads His people all the way to "the promised land." Early in life the "Divine Must" came into His work, and remained there till "the zeal of thine house ate Him up." Late in His afternoon, which was early, I see Him climbing the slopes of Calvary; bending low under the Cross, because of the world's sin and iniquity, with His features marred more than the sons of men." I ask Him what it is all about, and He unhesitatingly replies, "I came not to be ministered unto but to minister, and give my life a ransom for many."

In Hebrews we read, "He is able to save unto the uttermost them that draw near unto God through him," which is generally interpreted as meaning that salvation is for all who will accept it unto the uttermost parts of the earth. This view is in accordance with the Great Commission given to the disciples and something far different from "salvation is for the Jews" and them alone. While the preceding interpretation is in accordance with all Scripture and confirmed by history and experience; yet, it does not exhaust the meaning of this great text of Scripture. The marginal reading is "completely" and agrees with John's teaching, "That the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." One does not have to be a fanatic nor an extremist to preach "full salvation." After many years of painstaking study of the Scriptures, I unhesitatingly assert I know of no other kind except full salvation.

The Christian world is under lasting obligation to the consecrated knowledge and wisdom of Dr. Moffatt in giving it the novel phrases, which afford a "new slant" in studying the manifold and marvellous life of the Christ. "The unsearchable riches of Christ" can be better understood by looking at them in the above light. Yet, it is under far greater obligation to Him, who pioneered in life, faith and salvation for an undeserving world.

WHAT IS RIGHT WITH THE CHURCH?

(A Constructive Evaluation of the Contribution of the Church to the Progress and Welfare of Society)

It has been said, that the religion of the modern world is essentially determined by Protestantism. And the fact seems to be that both in principle and action Protestantism has shown itself to be more congenial to modern tendencies than Catholicism. Born out of the travail of afflicted consciences, Protestantism has ever watched with jealous care to safeguard the prerogatives of the individual believer against every assumed authority both of church and state. For the Protestant the essence of the Christian religion consists in the filial relation of the believer to a forgiving Father-God. He considers himself a member of the church because he follows Jesus, who in His own person realized this filial relation to God perfectly.

All the followers of Jesus, of whatever name or sign, according to the Protestant conception are members in the body of our Lord, which is the church. This communion of the saints, in the course of time has found expression in the various denominational segments or sects, none of which can claim for itself to be the church, Catholicism not excepted.

When a Catholic criticises the church, he commits a grave sin. Because for him the visible church and the kingdom of heaven are identical, and the church is infallible. Absolute obedience to the church is therefore indispensable. The Protestant knows no such restrictions. Since to him the church transcends the historical expression of it in the various denominations, and since these are subject to growth in knowledge and perfection, the critic has felt himself at liberty again and again to assail the existing order of things and call for changes which to him seemed vital and helpful. Much of this criticism has been helpful to the church. It has given us a conception of the Bible, which need not conflict with the reasonable demands of science, and has made more secure the authority of the Bible in matters spiritual. Criticism has freed Christianity from superstitions, from slavish adherence to creed, and has helped it to recognize itself as the life which must be ethically defined in terms of personal purity and brotherhood.

Much good has thus come from criticism when exercised in a true, scientific, and fair spirit. On the other hand, criticism has often been too assuming. Unproved hypotheses were presented as facts, and outright denial deemed sufficient to sweep aside some of the most sacred concepts of the church. Let this not be construed as indicating an utter condemnation of criticism in the church and in Protestantism in particular. Protestantism would have died at birth if this right to criticise had been denied it successfully, for denied it was and most strenuously. But what men like Huss, Wyclif, Luther, Melanchthon, Calvin, and others in their day offered in criticism of the church, was directed against ungodliness, criminal abuse of a trusting laity, and against a lack of spirituality in general which threatened the church and had largely robbed it of usefulness in the promotion of the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

The criticism directed against the church so frequently in our day is of a different type. Nor is it hurled against the church by her friends alone. Many of the critics are not concerned about the kingdom of God. Some are actually proposing the creation of a new God. Others are talking about the creation of a radio church, whatever that may be, and still others want to wipe out the church entirely. Such critics see nothing good in the church as we know it today.

But whatever the defects of the church today may be (and what human institution has ont its defects?), let it be remembered that the Christian church is the only institution in our civilization which confessedly purposes to help man to realize his sonship relation with God. Sometimes when we are momentarily shocked at the methods which some branches of the Christian church employ to obtain this end, we must remember that their raison d'etre too is the aforementioned purpose.

Again it is true beyond any reasonable doubt that the Christian church is the most altruistic institution in our civilization. The church is mother to the orphans, comforter to the aged, healer of the sick, helper of the unfortunate, and teacher of the young. We cannot think of any real need at home or abroad, during war or famine, earthquake or flood, storm or fire which is not, so far as humanly possible, assuaged by the church of Jesus Christ. Critics ought to be very thoughtful before they attack and undermine the influence of an institution actuated by such a spirit of helpfulness. Such institutions do not grow overnight.

Furthermore, the church is the bulwark of morality. Much criticism is directed against her because she is a most inconvenient barrier to companionate marriages and much licentious living. Not that the church swings the policeman's club, but she does exercise a wholesome discipline by bringing her members again and again face to face with the eternal Father, in whose presence the desires of men are purified and their purposes defined. In this atmosphere licentiousness and immorality cannot thrive.

Let me call your attention to one other matter which even the most casual observer must have noticed in these days of new reapproachements among the peoples of the earth. The Christian church alone seems capable of uniting the peoples of the various nations into a universal brotherhood. The yearning of the soul after the living God, men hold in common everywhere. This yearning God satisfies, and when He does He begets in the soul of man not only filial love to Himself but a fraternal love as well, so that from the Fatherhood of God flows the brotherhood of man. Nor is this a sentimental affair. It is conceived in love and grounded in righteousness. This brotherhood is the hope of our present world, and in so far as it is now a reality, it is the glory of our present civilization. Professor Pupin in "The New Reformation," calls the "life and the teaching of Christ the highest spiritual reality which our belief in God, the fountainhead of all spiritual realities, planted in the soul of man . . . Love, according to Christ, is the most powerful of all these co-ordinating forces. Its co-ordinating action in the spiritual world is very similar to the co-ordinating action of the gravitational force in the physical world." The church applies this love, imperfectly as yet, to the affairs of life. By its power alone can threatening chaos of life be transformed into the cosmos of human brotherhood. This is the "integrating force" which Professor Wieman brings so forcibly to our attention. This love alone can gather into the fold of a beautiful brotherhood the various races of the human family.

No, the church need not fear criticism. Analysis and scrutiny is wholesome for any institution. As long as critics enter upon their task sympathetcally, for the purpose of increasing the usefulness of this wonderful organism, let the "reformation continue in head and members," but as to discarding or annihilating the church, that cannot be done.—Otto Geisen in Zion's Herald.

LEST WE FORGET

In the August 21st number of the HERALD we published: "An Urgent Call." Several responses have been made already to that appeal. Lest our workers forget to present this appeal, as per our request, we are asking our good Editor to repeat the article for us this week. This article is published and re-published to save the time and expense of sending out to pastors and Sunday School superintendents personal letters. Please read it and heed it, and we thank you for the results. We have faith to believe that the results will be good.

An Urgent Call

"Surely every pastor in the North Carolina Conference takes the HERALD and reads it. And surely every Sunday School superintendent reads the HERALD. And every Sunday School teacher should read the HERALD. And also every Woman's Missionary Worker.

"If these four sets of workers take and read the HERALD, then we are depending upon you to pass along the word, and in your own way present the matter to each Sunday School in the Conference early in September and take an offering and send directly to us at the Children's Home.

"School opens about the middle of September.

"1. We have ordered two car loads of coal to be delivered at an early date. Coal and freight must be paid upon delivery.

"2. School supplies for about 95 children must be bought and paid for.

"3. Seventy work shirts, and about as many pair of overalls, and also several suits for our older boys must be had soon. Much sewing has been done in our sewing room this summe rfor both boys and girls. But such a clothing as mentioned above must be bought readymade. Rather, it is cheaper to buy it readymade, at wholesale prices.

"4. About 100 pair of shoes must be gotten soon.

"5. We must continue to buy some food supplies, though we are largely living upon the products of our own gardens and fields at present.

"6. Repairs must be made on furnace in Girls' Dormitory before winter comes. It will not heat the building.

"All this must be done within the next few days, so we are taking this means of appealing to our people for a good September offering from every church and Sunday School. Please do not overlook this. We know somebody will present this in every Sunday School.

"The offerings for the spring and summer have been exceedingly short, and some Sunday Schools and churches have left us out altogether for several months. So the condition with us is serious. We face these immediate needs with almost no funds.

"Will individuals and Sunday Schools and churches and missionary societies please take note, and come to our rescue within the next three weeks? We need you and you need us. So please let us hear from you speedily.

"We are resorting to this method this time instead of mailing a personal letter to each pastor, and each superintendent. Please consider it a personal letter to everyone who reads it.

"This matter weighs heavily upon our hearts. Those from whom we buy expect us to pay, and when a bill runs a bit overtime they are insistent in their demands for pay.

"We are looking to you for immediate relief. We know you will help, and we thank you, and may God bless you."

NOTE—Since writing the above the coal has been put into our bins. The freight is paid but the coal is not paid for. The Railroad Co. declines to give us a rebate on freight this time. We had expected that to help pay for coal, but must look elsewhere.

The shirts and overalls being a necessity, were purchased at wholesale prices with a promise to pay soon. These, together with the other necessities await your response. We thank you for a liberal response soon.

A. G. DIXON.

A REMARKABLE STORY

We have verified the following through correspondence with Officer Manuel:

Shepherd Dog Proves to be a Hero

One day last week, Officer Albert H. Manuel's attention was attracted by a shepherd dog who, every time a car passed a certain spot in the road, ran from the woods and barked. The dog had worn a path from the road into the woods where he had run back and forth. Officer Manuel followed the dog and came to a big police dog tangled up near a small popular tree. A wire attached to the chain on the dog's collar had got wound around the tree and held the police dog a prisoner. The dog was nearly exhausted and evidence of its struggle to get free were plainly seen. The shepherd dog had evidently found the police dog and was doing his best to obtain help. Officer Manuel liberated the prisoner. The dog dashed to a brook of water and then running back placed his fore paws on Mr. Manuel's shoulders and licked his face in gratitude. Both dogs then hurried away. There appeared to be no name or license tag on the police dog's strap.—Franklin, N. H., Transcript.

WHAT CHRIST OFFERS TO MODERN YOUTH

To youth Christ offers at the outset the spirit and the incarnation of eternal youth.

No other figure has ever appeared upon the scene of human life who has so perfectly embodied and so illustriously revealed those qualities of mind, those attitudes of will, those aspirations of the soul, toward the fulness of life that so fully interpret youth at its best as did Jesus. It is not the mere fact that He lived and died a youth Himself that warrants our conclusion and enlists our confidence. It is rather an ageless, mysterious, ineffable, and yet self-evidencing something which forever lifts Him above the level of His fellows. He is at once the best-beloved son of humanity. If this were all, it would be inspiring beyond words. Yet how far from all it really is! There are vaster outreaches. He offers all of this and yet as much more as our desires transcend our capacities, our purposes outmeasure our achievements.

He offers youth the matchlessly simple record of an earthly life lived to the full. The Gospel story is perpetually glowing with the charm of His own radiant life. Out of the innumerable words He must have said and the many things He must have done there has been preserved for all succeeding generations a matchless biography. To call it a skeleton of His life because it is so short and simple is to misinterpret it. To cause it to carry all the weight of casuistic theological interpretations is to overburden it and obscure it. Yet it has survived the centuries of attrition, of theological disputation, of clashing opinions and inadequate understanding; and it remains today the freshest and most vivid presentation of a human life lived to its uttermost we have ever known. If modern youth desires to come into first-hand contact with a perfect picture of what the life of youth can be in any age or generation, under any set of circumstances, let it turn to the unadorned story of the life of the young man Jesus of Nazareth.

Jesus also offers to youth a crystalline philosophy of life. Untutored in the schools and entering into no misalliance with any fleeting form of knowledge or theory of science, He continues to hold the centre of the world's stage as the philosopher par excellence. Socrates, Plato, Buddha, Confucius—He outshines them all. His philosophy puts personality at the centre. In this it is ultra-modern. It puts God, the infinite personality, at the centre and on the circumference; in this it is as ancient as the hills. It interprets the universe in terms of infinite reasoning and of inexorable although unfathomable goodness: it shows that there must be a heavenly Father because such a heavenly Son appeared to reveal the Father. It gathers up all of the implications of our scattered rays of light, and focuses them upon the meaningful point of personal destiny and conscious immortality.

It is interesting to note that whenever the philosophical opinions of mankind have become drab and case-hardened, the spirit of life has been squeezed out by ruthless formalism. In its weariness and unrest the heart of youth turns ever and again to the words and wisdom of Jesus, and never ceases to find in His philosophy of life and the principles which underlie it, the purposes which give it constancy, and the program which calls forth its exercises, release from its bondage and a new sense of freedom.

In the fourth place, Jesus offers to the seeking spirit of youth the fact of forgiveness and all the rich consequences

The President's Letter

All Things Through Christ

Deceased

Sister Michaux, wife of the late Rev. R. R. Michaux, passed to her reward a few days ago. We are not informed of the exact date of her death. Her residence during her last years, was at Gap, N. C. It was not our privilege to know Sister Machaux, but we are glad to learn that she never lost her interest in the Methodist Protestant church, though being located where she could not attend its services frequently in her latter years. An obituary committee will be appointed, and an obituary prepared in her honor, and read at the conference memorial service. We extend to her bereaved family and relatives our tender sympathy, and pray for them the consolation that God is so able and so ready to give.

Continued

In our itinerary from August 18-27, we stopped, on Tuesday night, with the Kannapolis church, and enjoyed an evening of worship and business with them. Since our last visit there earlier in the year, the membership of the church has practically doubled, and the Sunday School has increased 100 per cent. The church has an active Aid Society of sixteen members, which has raised during this conference year $140. The old tabernacle, used by the congregation since our work began there three years ago, has been removed, and a frame church building, 32x50 feet, erected on the site. The exterior is finished, including painting. The interior is seated, though not ceiled. Owing to the generosity of Brother Dan McLaurin, the church was erected at a cost of $754, nearly half of which has been paid. The debt on the parsonage has been reduced to $1,200. This is being paid through Building and Loan, at the rate of $22.50 per month. Brother J. L. Love is serving his first year here as pastor, and he and his people are making most gratifying progress in this new field. The indications now are that we will become established here, and ultimately develop a worthwhile church. Pastor and people are to be heartily congratulated upon their splendid achievement. We enjoyed our visit here, and shall watch with deep interest the continued growth of this charge.

On our way through Spencer, we had a very pleasant visit with Brother and Sister A. L. Moore. Brother Moore has been in feeble health for a number of months, but appears to be greatly improved now. They are strong supporters of our Spencer church, and we were glad to learn through them that the church is active, and that a normal condition maintains. A necessary arrangement for this work seems to be to link it with some other charge. We trust that a satisfactory plan in this regard may be made for another year.

After a brief visit with my mother and other members of the family, at Yadkin College, I came on to Greensboro, stopping on the way to see the following pastors: Revs. Troxler, C. G. Isley, and Hendry. Brother Troxler was away in a meeting, but we had a pleasant visit with his family. The family has just had a distressing experience with a copper head snake. One of the boys, while working in a field near the house, was bitten on the hand. He was rushed immediately to a physician, and reacted well to treatment. He seemed to be on the way to a complete recovery when we saw him. The snake, or snakes, for there were two in fact, were found and killed. We missed Brother Isley, but enjoyed a short stay with Brother Hendry. He gave us good reports of the progress of his work, and is hopeful of an honor roll closing, especially at State Street. The work seems to be going well at Elbaville, also.

At 6 o'clock we joined the family again, and were glad and grateful to find them all well and happy. We are grateful also for entertainment and other kindnesses shown us on this last lap of this good trip.

Treasurer's Report

We are very grateful to Dr. George R. Brown, treasurer, for a full report of receipts up to August 28. This ,of course, has been examined by readers of the Herald, and doubtless totals have been observed, both as to individual causes, and the grand total for all receipts. A comparison of receipts of last year for period corresponding exactly with this period of this year, is very interesting and informing, and I think I may say, encouraging.

Here it is:

1929, to August 28		1930, to August 28
A. C. B.	$ 1,378.00	A. C. B.	$ 1,281.00
G. C. B.	3,112.00	G. C. B.	1,846.00
College	4,582.00	College	6,569.00
Superannuates	20.00	Superannuates	71.00
G. G. D.	413.00	G. G. D.	10.00
Auxiliary	4,674.00	Auxiliary	4,308.00
		Famine Relief	62.00
Total	$14,207.00	Total	$14,175.00

The one intreesting fact in this report, at once apparent, is that the two years for this like period run parallel in receipts. The only difference is $32 in favor of 1929. There is less than $100 difference in the receipts for the A. C. B. for the two periods, and only $366 in Auxiliary receipts. The college for this year, runs ahead, as was expected it would do, $1,987.00. The G. C. B. is short of last year, for this period, $1,629.00. This take account of credits from Auxiliary.

The one encouraging thing about this report is, that despite the money stringency, we are running up with last year. And there is still further encouragement in the fact that many of the leading charges in the conference, that are in the habit of paying largely on these budgets, are not yet in with their contributions. In many cases, practically all of their apportionment is yet to be paid. This is encouraging because we are fully expecting these charges to live up this year to their good records of the past. Only five charges appear blank in the report.

A good deal of work has been required in getting up this statement and in making this comparison. But the results are amply rewarding. After all, the financial cloud is not so threatening as it has appeared to be. Now, brethren, to the task! Only two more months remain of this conference year; but they are sufficient to bring our finances up to a creditable showing, when we meet on the fifth of November. Every pastor and every charge will be expected, now, during these remaining months, to press these collections with all diligence. If we fail, brethren, it must be after we have done our best. But we won't fail then.

This is proof of it: "Seagrove has paid G. C. B., A. C. B., Superannuates, and College in full. Love Joy has paid A.

C. B. in full.''—Rev. W. H. Neese. Thanks to Brother Neese and his people.

''And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work.'' (II Cor. 9:8.)

Rally Day

Have you received it—the program? If not, please have it sent at once. Send card to Rev. Frank W. Stephenson, D.D., Pittsburgh, Pa., 613 West Diamond St., N. S., and he will do the rest. This is what he says about the program, ''OUR YOUTH'': It contains music, suggested programs, sketches, etc., while the ''Supplement is packed full of choice readings, plays, and other material. Send for it at once, if you do not already have it.'' A pageant, ''Columbia's Concern for Her Country,'' will be furnished upon application. This pageant emphasizes Christian Education, and will no doubt prove pleasing and profitable. Call on Dr. Stephenson for this also. It will be a great pleasure to him to send it to you, and your people will enjoy preparing and rendering the program. The offering counts for G. C. B.

We believe that there is merit in the ''Rally Day.'' It comes after the lull of the hot summer months, and is a good way of starting off the work for the fall and winter. We earnestly hope that a large number of our churches will observe this day. Please tell us, through the Herald, that you will.

That Postal Card Report

The request was in the Herald of August 21. And this is what we asked pastors to report on: Meetings held, and results; salary and budget prospects. Just those THREE things. Reports from a few pastors have reached us, and upon the whole, they are pleasing. We know that pastors are busy, and that it is difficult to get the many things done that crowd in upon them. But please, pastors! This report will help us.

Denominational Day

Friday, November 7th, is to be ''Denominational Day'' at our Annual Conference. Everybody is to be made a D.D., and Dr. Straughn, and other speakers designated by him will tell us what this D.D. means. We want to make this an outstanding day in the conference, and one of the ways by which we hope to do this is by having large numbers of our people present. If possible, we want 1,000 Methodist Protestants present on this day. We urge that pastors and congregations begin making preparations now to be there. And we suggest that churches provide banners, and sit together during the program. We think that arrangements can be made for this, and we are sure that it would add much to the enthusiasm of the occasion. Begin NOW to get ready to start to make preparation to attend Denomination Day.

Delegates

We are now making out the list of conference committees, but can't complete until list of delegates is in. The election law of the conference requires pastors to send name of delegate-elect to the secretary of the conference, immediately after the third quarterly conference. Of course, delegates are all elected now, and names should go to Brother Bates at once. Please do this, pastors, without delay, so we can go ahead with the committee assignments. Thank you for this help.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

The following changes in the program of the Department of Religious Education will doubtless be of general interest to our workers throughout the denomination. The office of the Department has been removed from Durham, North Carolina, to Westminster Theological Seminary Building, Westminster, Maryland. Rev. F. L. Gibbs, who has served as Assistant Secretary of the Department for the last three years, has also moved to Westminster and will have charge of all details in connection with the office.

The Executive Secretary, Rev. Lawrence Little, has been granted a partial leave of absence by the Board of Christian Education and will resume his studies in the Graduate School of Yale University. In connection with his studies at Yale, he will continue to act as Executive Secretary and will have oversight of general administrative matters and responsibility particularly for leadership training. Correspondence having to do with these phases of the Department's program should be addressed to him at 1424 Boulevard, New Haven, Conn. All other correspondence should be addressed to Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Seminary Building, Westminster, Md.

KING'S MOUNTAIN

President Hoover is expected at the King's Mountain celebration in October. George Bancroft, the eminent historian says of this battle:

''The victory at King's Mountain, which in the spirit of the American soldier was like the rising at Concord, in its effects like the success at Bennington, changed the aspects of the war. The Loyalists of North Carolina no longer dared rise. It fired the patriots of the two Carolinas with fresh zeal. It encouraged the fragments of the defeated and scattered American army to seek each other, and organize themselves anew. It quickened the North Carolina legislature to earnest efforts. It encouraged Virginia to devote her resources to the country south of her border. The appearance on the frontiers of a numerous enemy from settlements beyond the mountains, whose very names had been unknown to the British, took Cornwallis by surprise, and their success was fatal to his intended expedition. He had hoped to step with ease from one Carolina to the other, and from those to the conquest of Virginia; and he had no choice but to retreat.''

OUR STORY PAGE

THE TALE OF A TAIL

Perhaps you do not know it, but in Bunnyland there lives a great-grandfather bunny. His real name is Bobby Bunny, but he is known to all the bunnies, great and small, as Great-grandfather Bunny.

Of course he is quite old and very grey; almost as white as the cotton in his tail has always been. His frolicking days are over and he is content to sit still, and the rest of the bunnies see to it that he has the softest, cushionary arm chair to sit in.

Because Great-grandfather Bobby's teeth are not so good as they used to be, all the choicest morsels of corn and cabbage and carrots and bark are saved for him. Eating so much and sitting quiet have made him quite plump and even the very strongest chair in Bunnyland goes cricket-creak as Bobby Bunny carefully lowers his round, sleek body into it.

In the winter he sits by the open fire and nods and naps and tells stories. In summer weather his chair is placed in the shadiest corner of the north piazza where he nods and naps and tell stories. In fact, his silky, grey head seems to be just crammed with the jolliest stories.

And how all the bunnies love Great-grandfather Bobby and his tales, and no one ever tires of the rabbit lore of bygone days.

When Great-grandfather Bobby wakes in the morning and hears the pitter-patter of the rain on the roof he knows he will have a busy day of story-telling, for just like, the bunnies who do not want to play in the rain must stay indoors, and they like rainy-day stories and games, too.

Except when the dear old fellow actually drowses off in the middle of a story—they never wake him—there is seldom a time when his chair is not the center of a group of listening rabbits—big rabbits, middle-sized rabbits and teeny-weeny rabbits—all with long, shining ears, tilted eagerly forward.

Everyone knows that Great-grandfather Bobby is—oh, very wise, and all quarrels are brought to him. Whatever he says is quite all right.

Being very old, Great-grandfather Bobby has many odd habits. When a matter is laid before him he always reaches for his pigskin case and puts his great, bowed, bone-rimmed, owly spectacles on his smooth, twitchy nose. And always he looks square over the top of them!

When thinking deeply he pulls his long, silky right ear down, tucks the tip of it into his mouth and chews it. That is the beginning of every story; and when his soft paw goes up every bunny who is near flip-flops his ears and twinkles his pink nose in expectation, and bunnies come scampering from all quarters to hear what Great-grandfather Bobby has to say.

The baby bunnies call Great-grandfather Bobby's ear the hi-ki-yi, which is rabbit for story book. You see, they have no books as you have, and they believe that Great-grandfather Bobby gets the tales in some strange way from his ear.

''Great-grandfather Bobby,'' one will ask, ''why is it that my tail is so very short and my ears are so very long?''

Up goes the paw and down comes the hi-ki-yi. Great-grandfather Bobby has told the story a hundred times, but he does not seem to mind repeating it.

''It was this way, Sonny Bunny—he always begins the same way, except when it is a little girl bunny he says Sis Bunny instead of Sonny Bunny.

''It is just because the very first bunny who came hippity hop into Bunnyland was too vain.

''He had long ears like yours and his tail was bushy and long and flat; that is what caused all the trouble; it was such a splendid tail that Buster Bunny—that was his name—began to boast to his neighbors about it.

''Next door to him, in Hollow Tree House, lived Squinky Squirrel, who was just the same color as Buster, but of course he was much smaller and had neat little ears and a tail to match.

''He was a good-natured, happy little fellow, and went whisking, frisking about his work and play. He and Buster became good friends, but always Buster teased Squinky about his short ears and tail to match!

''Why didn't he have a long, handsome tail such as he had? And Buster would hippity hop away through the woods to show off his graceful tail.

''One day Squinky got real angry; he had heard quite enough about his neighbor's fine ears and tail. Besides, it made him feel badly; he had always longed for just such a long, curling tail but had never made himself unhappy over it. Now, no matter where he met Buster he was reminded of his homely, stumpy tail.

''With a shriek of anger he darted at Buster—and if ever Buster needed all the hippity in his four legs it was right then!

''Away they went toward Bunny Bungalow. Squinky was no longer his happy, whisking, frisking self—he ran with all his might, determined to punish his boastful friend.

''My, but Buster did get tired, darting over rocks and logs and through bushes. But always Squinky was near his heels. He had to keep his precious tail laid flat on his back to keep the angry Squinky from tweaking it!

''When he thought he could not go any farther or faster Buster would remember vividly that Squinky's teeth were sharp enough to crack nuts with and that his paws ended in the pointest sort of claws, and he would keep hopping and panting. By that time the hippity was all gone from his legs.

''Seeing he was nearly home he dashed madly around a rough stump, and as he went on, felt a great twinge of pain, but he never paused until he heard a queer, glad-sounding shout from Squinky.

''His tail was hurting him and he wanted to see what made Squinky so happy. Turning his head he was shocked to see only a bit of his tail and it was white as the snow he loved to play in!

''He forgot his weariness and hipped and hopped this way and that, to get a better view of himself—but his handsome tail was gone!

''His big, round eyes grew bigger and rounder, when, in answer to Squinky's eager voice, he beheld the beautiful, bushy end of his tail being borne triumphantly off by his neighbor with the despised stump of a tail.

''Then he knew just what had happened; in passing quickly around the stump, his flat tail had become wedged tightly in a crack and in his wild effort to reach his door, it had been jerked rudely off!

"It was a sorry bunny that, over his shoulder, regarded the remaining homely stump of his once boasted bushy tail, and a sorrier one still who, in a week later, was greeted by his neighbor Squinky, proudly wearing his own lovely, long tail!

"Now he thought he knew how his friend had felt before, but it was too late to mend matters.

"Squinky had carefully and gleefully carried home the severed tail, and though it hurt him badly, had coaxed his mother to sew it to his own poor one. Mother Squirrel had tacked it firmly with a thorn needle and a fibre thread. It was there to stay, Squinky said.

"You may be sure there was no more chaffing about tails after that, for the new owner of the tail felt sorry for Buster."

"And why are our tails regular cotton balls?" begs Sis Bunny, though she knows quite well.

"Buster always said he thought his fear of Squinky that day had turned it—white—as—as snow!"

Every bunny, with his finger on his lip, tiptoes softly away.

Great-grandfather Bobby is fast asleep! — Christian Guardian.

What Christ Offers to Modern Youth

that flow from the assurance of that fact. It is altogether impossible to disassociate what Jesus did from what He said when we face the problem of universal moral evil and of individual sin. It remains the most baffling mystery of the ages, and yet it brings the fullest measure of release and satisfaction. Jesus upon His cross outshines every other ray of redeeming light, and penetrates every abyss of moral darkness. It is not merely the life He lived in thirty-three rounded years, but the death He died on that timeless day that makes Him the cynosure of the ends of the earth, who look unto Him and are saved. Despite every passing wave of opinion Jesus' outstanding claim to the heart of humanity, and so to the heart of youth, is his Saviourhood. He takes away sin, its sting, and its shame. He gives the soul of youth moral and spiritual wings. He severs the leaden ties that bind men to a dead past. He pours upon the bruised spirits of those who have struggled with evil in their own hearts to their own undoing the healing balm of satisfying forgiveness. He takes away all that needs to be removed; He gives all that one requires to receive in order that the sons of men may become conscious of their high heritage as sons of God.

Christ also offers to the youth of the world an unmistakable call to humanity's greatest adventure. It is not the subjugation of trackless wastes, even though they must be made subject to its sway. It is not the discovery of unexplored continents or the unlocking of the chambered treasuries of physical power and resources, although even they must pay their tribute to His purpose. It is not primarily, or even essentially, along the so-called paths of traffic and trade, commerce and industry, that this great adventure will finally find its fruition; yet even they must become a part of its purpose; their marvellous resources must be marshalled to contribute to its ongoing to victorious triumph.

The high and holy adventure to which I refer is that of redeeming all of life, individual, social, corporate, and in bringing human existence in all of its ramifications under the full sway and power of the holy will of God. Such an adventure has infinitely more than an economic Utopia as the focus of its converging rays of vision. Such a goal is as far removed from philosophical Nirvana as it is from fantastic projections of economic or political pragmatism. Jesus Himself clothed this adventure with garments of vivid beauty when He taught His disciples to pray, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." If such a day ever dawns, it will break only when Christ possesses all of life and every life. All honor to great explorers who at unreckoned risk bring new areas of the earth, new corners of the world, into the channels of common knowledge and possessions. To discover new rivers and mountain peaks, to find treasure-trove of scientific or economic wealth, is surely worthy of humanity at its best; and yet, when youth strides forth upon its highest quest, it seeks not merely these, but something vaster and better; it seeks to bring all of the resources of life, physical, mental, moral, social, and spiritual, under the sway of a great purpose and to make available for every last lost man, woman, and child in the world the fulness of life that Jesus came both to be and to bring. It follows, therefore, that the liege followers of the Christ will never rest upon their arms until the last citadel of weakness and want, of tyranny and force, of selfishness and sin, has been despoiled and the banner of the King of love has been forever unfurled everywhere.

And last of all, out of an almost infinite range of possibilities for the life of youth Jesus offers to every man who will follow Him life's crowning task, life's noblest achievement, life's unsurpassable fulness. He promises that those who truly follow Him will be like Him. Christ-likeness; that is the ultimate, to be like Him, to have His outlook upon time and eternity, to enter into His relationships with the loving Father and with the cosmos which is the Father's world, to trample all fear and all force underfoot, but with feet that are shod "with the preparation of the gospel of peace"; to understand all mysteries, but with an understanding that passes understanding; that is, the understanding of love; to rise above all imperfections and limitations; to overcome the thraldom of tradition, the drive of inherited tendencies, and the urge of subtle and sinister influence from without; to integrate one's personality, heart, mind, and will; to embody the best of one's racial and national stock; and, at the same time, to give a new birth to a higher and ultimate form of humanity that shall know no barrier of clime or color; to be the very best that youth could ever dream of being or desire to be, to to be a Christian, a Christ one, a Christ-filled, Christ-inspired, Christ-guided, and Christ-redeemed soul, and living out one's own life in unyielded integrity to live out His life, day by day, thought by thought, act by act; this is the high calling to which He summons those who like a little company of young men in His own earthly day and generation without a word rose up and followed Him. The romance of a youth-life lived long ago is still alive. The philosophy that crowns youth, the Saviourhood that forgives and heals and redeems, moral and spiritual adventure that allure and challenge, Christ-likeness that eternally looms as the ultimate and everlasting thought and action, these are the things He offers youth. The things He offers you.—An Address at the Berlin Convention by Rev. William Hiram Foulkes, D.D., LL.D., Vice-President of the International Society of Christian Endeavor.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

By J. T. BOWMAN

President High Point College C. E.

SEPTEMBER 14: HOW TO INCREASE OUR MEMBERSHIP

Scripture Text—Acts 2:42-47

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Make the society serve, Romans 12:4-8.

Tuesday—Create Spirit of Goodwill, Phil. 2:14-16.

Wednesday—Attend the Meetings, Ps. 84:1-4.

Thursday—Win Souls, Acts 9:32-35.

Friday—Gain Spiritual Power, Acts 1:8.

Saturday—Talk Up the Society, Acts 18:24-28.

An "Efficiency" Meeting

Efficiency is being stressed everywhere. Every corporation has its efficiency expert. The old methods will no longer hold pace with the time.

This meeting would be good time to have your C. E. society advisor to make a talk to the society advising it as how it can and should be improved. Insist that they should tell some of the good qualities of the society also.

Suggested songs: "Where He Leads I'll Follow," "Onward, Christian Soldiers," "Win the One Next to You," "Loyalty," "Work for the Night Is Coming" and "Bringing in the Sheaves."

Leader's Talk

How may we increase our membership is being asked by almost every organization today, and it is certain that those who find the answer to this question are not only improving their own organization but they are leaving the others far in the background. Where there is no growth it is sure death.

"Therefore, our question is not one which is of minor importance. It is a question of vital importance, and wise are they who seriously seek its solution."

This subject should surely lead us to examine our own selves and see if we are growing or if death is near at hand.

Discuss These

1. What is the secret of any growth?
2. What is the chief cause for any C. E. society dying?
3. What benefits come from an increased membership?
4. Tell what C. E. has meant to you.
5. What would you suggest as the most successful plan for gaining new members.

Quotation and Poetry

"Experience has hown that the C. E. societies which prosper are those that maintain a high standard of membership. Do not let down the bars."

"WIN THE ONE NEXT TO YOU"

If you would work for the Master today,
Win the one next to you;
If you would show some poor wand'rer the way,
Oh, win the one next to you.

Have you looked over the great harvest-field,
Seeking for work to do?
Hasten, go forth, reap the golden yield,
And win the one next to you.

Close to your door may be some one in sin,
Tell him the story true
Of Him who died that poor soul to win.
Oh, win the one next to you.

You may not go to a far heathen land
Or to a country new;
But in your home for the Master stand,
And win the one next to you.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIPTIONS

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

A CLEVER ANSWER

When the use of anaesthetics was first introduced in England, the clergy, almost without exception, denounced it, saying the Lord wanted us to suffer and doctors had no right to make patients unconscious and free from pain while their legs were cut off. That was cheating the Lord.

A young Scotch doctor produced the right answer, advising clergymen to read in Genesis how "the Lord caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam" before he took out his rib.

Since the Lord had operated on Adam, first making him unconscious, the young doctor said he had the right to do the same. He won. —Our Dumb Animals.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

GOOD NEWS

Just want to tell the women of our church that we have sent to the Executive Secretay since April 1, eight hundred dollars more than we sent for the same period last year. Our check to Executive Treasurer last August was for $275.94 and this August it was $568.39.

More auxiliaries are sending remittances than ever before and more women are working than ever before. Let us take courage and push our budgets to the limit.

Sorry to have to tell you that our N. C. budget is running a little behind but am sure it will come up after conference.

Please notice change in address of Treasurer. MRS. S. W. TAYLOR.

DEPARTMENT OF LIFE MEMORIAL AND PERPETUAL MEMBERS

I have a supply of certificates and will be glad to send to any who will ask for them as long as they last. Don't all order at once, as you might swamp my supply. Of course if that should happen I will order more. Do help me to have a good report, by ordering certificates of Life Memorial or Perpetual Members. MRS. SAMUEL R. HARRIS, Sec.

Mrs. Bates, chairman of districts, was present at the thank-offering service at Tabernacle church near Greensboro at 11 o'clock, finding a good attendance. She visited the district meeting at State Street, Lexington at 2:30 and found a good gathering and good reports. Then at 8:00 p. m., she was at Mt. Carmel, Forsyth circuit, where a good and well attended service was held.

Suggested Program for Thank-offering Service

Every auxiliary in this branch is asked to hold a public service during the month of September. This is the time to open the Thank-offering boxes and to give an opportunity to the entire church to give a Thank-offering.

"Count your many blessings;
Name them one by one;
Count your many blessings—
See what God hath done."

This offering counts on your auxiliary budget and also on the general conference budget for your church. Please send offering to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer, and tell her it is your Thank-offering.

Quiet Music—"Now Thank We All Our God." Hymnal, No. 62.

Leader—"O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good; for his mercy endureth forever."

Response—"O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men."

Leader—"For he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness."

Response—"O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men."

Leader—"And let them sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving, and declare his works with rejoicing."

Hymn—"Praise the Lord, Ye Heavens, Adore Him." Hymnal, No. 19.

Recitation—

"We Thank Thee, Lord"

We thank thee, Lord,
For all thy golden silences—
Silence of moorlands rolling to the skies,
Heath-purpled, bracken-clad, aflame with gorse;
Silence of deep woods' mystic cloistered calm;
Silence of wide seas basking in the sun;
Silence of white peaks soaring to the blue;
Silence of dawnings, when, their matins sung,
The little birds do fall asleep again;
For the silence of the golden noons;
Silence of gloamings and the setting sun;
Silence of moonlit nights and patterned glades;
Silence of stars magnificently still,
Yet ever chanting their Creator's skill;
Deep unto deep, within us sound sweet chords
Of praise beyond the reach of human words;
In our souls' silence, feeling only Thee—
We thank Thee, thank Thee,
Thank Thee, Lord!

Leader—"Let every man prove his own work. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit."

Response—"And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in the synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the Kingdom, and healing all manner of diseases, and all manner of sickness among the people."

Recitation—

"Jesus Christ and We"

Christ has no hands but our hands
To do his work today;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in his way;
He has no tongue but our tongue
To tell men how he died;
He has no help but our help
To bring men to his side.
We are the only Bible
The careless world will read;
We are the sinner's Gospel,
We are the scoffers creed;
We are the Lord's last message
Given in deed and word—
What if the line is crooked?
What if the type is blurred?

What if our hands are busy
With other work than His?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's allurement is?
What if our tongues are speaking
Of things his lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help him
Unless from him we learn?

Hymn—"Go, Labor On." Hymnal, 378 (congregation standing).

Go, labor on; spend and be spent—
The joy to do the Father's will;
It is the way the Master went,
Should not the servant tread it still?

Toil on,—faint not; keep watch and pray!
Be wise the erring soul to win;
Go forth into the world's highway;
Compel the wanderer to come in.

Go, labor on, while it is day,
The world's dark night is hastening on.
Speed, speed, thy work! Cast sloth away;
It is not thus that souls are won.

Prayer, Leader (congregation seated)—"Our Father, we thank thee for the example and inspiration of Jesus; and we pray that our teaching may be clear; that it may lead men to know thee, and that, knowing Thee, they may accept Thee as the King of their lives. We pray that we may preach the good news by our words and by our deeds; that men as they see us and hear us will know that we have been with Jesus, and have learned of him. May we not forget that Jesus' ministry was three-fold, and as we teach and preach, may we remember that our bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost, and may they be kept fit for His indwelling. May we be ever ready to minister to the sick and the suffering." (Closing with prayer hymn, Hymnal, 158, sung softly and with heads bowed.)

O Master, let me walk with thee
In lowly paths of service free;
Tell me thy secret; help me bear
The strain of toil, the fret of care.

Help me the slow of heart to move
By some clear winning word of love;
Teach me the wayward feet to stay,
And guide them in the homeward way.

Teach me thy patience; still with thee
In closer, dearer company,
In work that keeps faith sweet and strong,
In trust that triumphs over wrong.

In hope that sends a shining ray
Far down the future's broadening way;
In peace that only thou canst give,
With Thee, O Master, let me live.

Leader (congregation standing)—"And Jesus came and spake unto them saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.

Response—"Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

Leader—"Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world."

Hymn—Hymnal, No. 389.

(Verse 3)

O strengthen me that while I stand
Firm on the rock, and strong in thee
I may stretch out a loving hand
To wrestlers with the troubled sea.

(Verse 4)

O teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things thou dost impart
And wing my words, that they may reach
The hidden depths of many a heart.

Leader—"For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the Gospel; not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ be made of none effect."

Response—"For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish, foolishness, but unto us who are saved it is the power of God."

Leader—"And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power."

Hymn 389—Verses 1 and 2:

"Lord, speak to me, that I may speak
In living echoes of thy tone;
As thou hast sought, so let me seek Thy erring children lost and lone."

"O lead me, Lord, that I may lead
The wandering and the wavering feet;
O feed me, Lord, that I may feed

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Granville.—We began our revival services at Rehoboth church on the first Sunday in July and closed the following Friday night. Rev. Mr. Curtis, of Burlington, N. C., R. F. D., had charge of the singing, and he conducted that part well. The writer did the preaching. We had a splendid revival with ten conversions and ten accessions to the church, and the church was greatly revived.

On the second Sunday in July we began our meeting at Mt. Carmel church. Rev. B. M. Williams came to us on Monday and did the rest of the preaching. Mr. Williams did some good, plain gospel preaching which was enjoyed by all who heard him. The church was greatly revived, and a few reclaimed and nine accessions on profession of faith.

We began our meeting at Union Chapel on the fourth Sunday in July. Rev. R. S. Troxler came to us on Monday and did the rest of the preaching. This week was a very busy week with the farmers, so our crowds were not as big as we expected and the revival was not what we hoped for, but Brother Troxler did some of his best preaching, and I am sure great good was accomplished.

We are up in "The Land of the Sky" this week, taking a vacation and rest.

With best wishes to the "Herald."

C. L. SPENCER.

First Church, Burlington.—The attendance ta the Sunday school showed an increase over the previous Sunday's record. Today we had a total of 293 present with offering amounting to $17.21.

Our pastor brought two very helpful sermons today. We began holding the evening preaching service today and we hope our people are now ready to line up for fall work, as vacation time is over.

Mrs. Chas. K. Stafford, faithful member of our church, who has been very ill for sometime, is improving in Rainey hospital where she is a patient. Mr. L. L. Wilson, our member at Oteen, is improving, also, we learned from Mr. Ben Wiles, who paid Mr. Wilson a visit a few days ago. Others sick members are Mr. Carl Isely, Midway Road, and Mr. A. E. Sykes, West Brook Sanatorium, Richmond, Va., and we hope for each one of these members a speedy get well. Any one who may wish to, can write Mr. Sykes at the Westbrook Sanatorium, Richmond, Va., and we are sure he will appreciate any work of encouragement.

The Third Quarterly conference was held in the auditorium of the church Wednesday evening, August 27, at eight p. m. Many items of business of the church were discussed and a number of things passed upon. The votes as taken for delegate recently were counted at this conference and read as follows: Mr. J. G. Rogers, 34; Mr. J. Curry Isley, 33; as Mr. Rogers received the largest number of votes, by one vote, he was duly declared delegate to represent the church at the Annual Conference.

The Woman's auxiliary of First Church, met in the hut Monday evening, August 18th at 8 o'clock for their August meeting with 37 members and 2 visitors present.

The meeting opened with song, "Stepping In the Light," accompanied by Mrs. Harlan Mc Pherson at the piano. The 23rd Psalm was repeated in concert, followed by the Lord's Prayer.

Reports of the individual circles were very satisfactory. A new plan for making money known as "Diminishing Tea" was then brought before the auxiliary. It was adopted and proved very interesting to the members, as well as a splendid money making plan.

After the business, a social hour was enjoyed, during which Mrs. Floy Rogers and Tula Paul gave several humorous readings. Mrs. Harlan McPherson also gave several piano selections. Miss Margaret Rogers had charge of the games. Ice cold watermelon was served for refreshments.

Our revival begins the third Sunday in September with Rev. J. E. Pritchard, of Asheboro, N. C., and a former pastor of our church, as the visiting help. Let each member, that possibly can, plan to attend this meeitng regularly and work and pray for the salvation of the lost.

West Forsyth.—Since our last report one of the faithful and valuable members of Baltimore church has been removed by death from this earthly life. On Wednesday morning, August 27, the soul of Brother Thomas J. Phillips took its flight to the heavenly abode. Funeral services were conducted in the home and at Baltimore church Thursday afternoon by the writer, assisted by Elder O. J. Denny, of Winston-Salem. The Masonic order,of whiceh Brother Phillips was a member, attended the services in a body and had charge of tthe burial services. The deceased was also a member of the Junior Order and memmbers of that lodge attended the services. Over seven hundred people passed the casket in the church and viewed the mortal remains of Brother Phillips. An obituary will appear in the Herald later.

The young people's missionary socieety of Pleasant Hill church rendered a very interesteing and instructive program last Saturday night. The services consisting of a pageant entitled "Go-Ye," was rendered by the young girls of thte society under the leadership of Mrs. R. J. Whitman, superintendent of the young people's missionary society. An offering was taken for missions. In connection with the program refreshments were on sale on the lawn of the church during the evening.

Brother Clinton Sprinkle, member of Pleasant Hill church, has been a patient at Lawrence Hospital, Winston-Salem, since Tuesday, August 25th, having undergone a serious operation. His condition is reported improving slowly, but it is thought that he will be required to remain in the hospital for several weeks.

Miss Blanche Hennings, member of Stoney Knoll church, has been at the Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem for over a montth, having had an operation for apendicitis. She expects to return to her home within a few days.

We can hardly realize it, but we have entered upon the eleventh month of the conference year, which means that the time for the meeting of the Annual Conference approaches rapidly. Just nine more Sundays before the Annual Conference. Much work is to be done during these nine weeks to close the year's work.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be with Baltimore and Stoney Knoll churches. We will administer the Lord's Supper at each church.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Orange Charge.—The revival services began at Chestnut Ridge Sunday, August 24th, and closed the following Friday. Rev. R. S. Troxler came in time for the afternoon services Monday and did all the preaching for us then to the close of the meeting.

We feel much good was accomplished. The church was revived, several were converted, a number reclaimed and fourteen new members received into the church.

Brother Troxler's sermons were earnestly and faithfully delivered and well-received. He will long be remembered by these people.

The following ministerial brethren attended some of above services: J. F. Minnis, J. D. and D. R. Williams, M. I. Crutchfield, of our church; Brother Caldwell, of the Baptist church and Brothers Parker and Sharpe, of the M. E. Church, South.

Brothers J. F. Minnis and J. D. Williams each preached for us during the meeting. Glad to have all these brethren with us.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Welch Memorial Tidings.—Yesterday was a good day at Welch Memorial. The morning service was not as well attended as usual because of a number of our families being out of town. But the services were good in that everyone seemed to be happy and full of joy. It was a joy to preach to the congregation in attendance.

At the Christian Endeavor prayer meeting Mrs. D. B. Eldridge was the leader and it was very evident that nothing had been spared in making preparations for this service. Mr. Luther Medlin and his fine class of boys had charge of the devotional part of the program. It consisted of songs, scripture readings, and prayers so arranged that the program was indeed uplifting and inspiring. At the close of the program Mr. Medlin presented two of the young men of his class for church membership. Brother Medlin has been teaching this class for a number of years, and they have grown into manhood under his care. It is indeed fine to observe the beautiful development that has taken place. It made us all happy to see these two fine young men dedicate themselves to Kingdom service and join the church. Brother Medlin is in a few days to leave us to take a position as teacher in the Belmont High School, Belmont, N. C. We wish him every success as a teacher, but we shall certainly miss him at Welch Memorial. Mr. John Easter is to take his place as teacher of the boys' class here.

Mrs. W. C. Gibson, the oldest member of the church and one of the charter members, passed into the beyond last Tuesday. The funeral was conducted August 27 in Welch Memorial church by the pastor, Rev. T. E. Pierce, a former pastor, and Rev. Mr. Edwards of the Christian church who was a neighbor of the deceased. The funeral was largely attended and the floral contributions were beautiful. The body was laid to rest in the city cemetery.

Mrs. D. L. Millington, who has been kept away from church because of a broken arm for a number of weeks, was able to be with us again on Sunday night. We were indeed glad to see her out once more.

Mrs. W. W. Fry, who has been away from us for a number of weeks because of an operation, is rapidly improving and we trust will be back in her accustomed place in the church at an early date.

Miss Frances Sechrist because of an operation has been away from her accustomed place in the church for a number of weeks, but we were indeed glad to see her in the congregation at both services Sunday.

The elementary division of the Sunday school picnicked at Pleasant Grove church last Saturday. A great time was reported.

GEO. L. CURRY.

Graham.—For some weeks there has not appeared a report from Graham. It is true that we have not done sufficient to need much of a report to inform the conference friends of our progress. However, we have not ceased to exist, and have made some slight progress. During the hot season we have run the Sunday school and the morning preaching service together. This system, while by no means perfect, did add to the attendance at the preaching hour.

This morning was our last service with these good people. We shall leave the state for Maryland Tuesday morning. We want to say for the people of Graham that we have found them a most excellent people. Our stay among them has been extremely pleasant, and were the call back at our mission station less urgent we would be delighted to continue working with them. We have not accomplished all we had hoped, yet the people have been most gracious to us and co-operated with us in a fine way. They are a good people to live among and we believe that great possibilities lie ahead of this church. With wise guidance there is no reason why Graham should not become one of our best appointments.

The spiritual condition of the people is good and the financial condition better today than one year ago. We are up to date with the local expenses and we think that if the mills get to going better before conference time the year will end with a very good showing from Graham.

We regret the losing of five of our good members, but it is not a loss to the cause. Mr. D. M. Johnson and family soon are to move to Greensboro, where they will unite with one of our churches, and Miss Mary Tome Hughes will join the Christian church of Graham. She has been playing with them for many months, and as she feels that she is needed there, she wishes to join with them. We wish for all these a joy and contentment in their new homes.

W are glad to welcome into our church Miss Dorothy Bayliff, who has come from the Children's Home to live with her mother.

Last Monday afternoon Mr. Grover Bain was buried. For two weeks Mr. Bain had been in the Rainey hospital in Burlington. One day while at his work someone who failed to see him shot at a bird and the ball struck Brother Bain in the back and lodged in his liver. All that skilled doctors and loving hands could do proved of no avail, so he went to be with the Father Saturday, August 23. Mr. Bain joined Graham church about five years ago. He leaves his wife, a little boy, his father and step-mother, and several brothers and sisters to mourn his going.

J. F. MINNIS, Pastor.

◆

South Lexington Charge.—The revival at Mt. Carmel began the first Sunday in August. Rev. O. C. Loy, the pulpit help, came to us Sunday afternoon and did the preaching in an able and forceful manner till the close of the meeting. The splendid and efficient labors of Brother Loy and his wife were crowned with 25 conversions and seven accessions to the church. The attendance was unusually large—many said the largest in the history of the church.

At the close of the last service we found our car loaded with meat, flour, vegetables, sugar, and many other useful and necessary articles for the pantry. The Mt. Carmel people know just what is needed for the table.

The work in general at Mt. Carmel is making good progress. Lumber is being put in shape for the new church building; and we hope to begin the wirk of erection soon.

The third quarterly conference was held at South Lexington church, August 28. A good attendance showed that the membership of the charge was interested in the business of the quarterly conference. Brother W. F. Honeycutt was elected to represent the charge at annual conference.

The Sunday school, as well as other arms of the work, at South Lexington, is making progress. On last Sunday, both preaching services were attended by large and attentive congregations.

We are hoping to be able to meet all claims before the annual conference.

C. G. ISLEY.

First Church, High Point.—A farewell tribute of honor was paid to Rev. and Mrs. E. Lester Ballard last Friday evening in the form of a delightful party given by the C. E. Society at the home of Misses Irene and Inez Reynolds, daughters of Rev. and Mrs. G. L. Reynolds on Fourth street. The lower floor of the residence was thrown ensuite, and the rooms were prettily decorated with summer flowers. The young people present enjoyed a number of interesting games such as "Parcheesi" and Carroms, after which delicious refreshments were served. Miss Myrtle Davis, president of the society, in a graceful speech, presented to the honorees a miniature suit case containing a substantial check as a parting gift of appreciation from the society.

On Sunday morning after Sunday school was conducted as usual, the adult and junior congregations united in a service conducted in the main auditorium, by Rev. E. L. Ballard. A large audience was present to hear this popular and well-loved young minister in his final service as Director of Religious Education. At the close of this service another substantial check from the Woman's Auxiliary was presented to these faithful and earnest young Christian workers as a mark of esteem and affection. Too much cannot be said in praise and appreciation of their splendid work among us for the past four years, and the love and good wishes of the entire congregation and every organization of the church will follow them to their new home and field of service in Boston, Mass., where Mr. Ballard will study in Boston university for two years.

A recent visit to "Jugtown," where the unique and celebrated pottery is made, was of so great interest to the writer and her son that she wishes to pass it on to the readers of the "Herald," and assures them that a visit to this town, which is not a town at all, is well-worth while, and though in a remote, out-of-the-way corner of the world, just where Randolph, Moore, and Montgomery counties unite, it is easily accessible from Asheboro, there being a good sand clay road from the Gap, where a turn is made to the left from highway No. 70. Pottery has been made in Staffordshire, England, for centuries, and even prior to 1648, English colonists made it in Virginia, according to authentic records. Some of these potters gradually drifted southward into North Carolina and settled in Randolph county, making pottery there 200 years ago. Thirteen years ago Jacques Busbee and wife, nee Julianna Royster, were living in their native city of Raleigh, N. C., both being artists, and Mr. Busbee had studied abroad. By chance they found some pieces of the old Jugtown pottery and admired it so much that they decided to try to restore this old handcraft. Selling their comfortable home in Raleigh, they came to this backwoods section, bought 30 acres of land, and built a picturesque log cabin for their dwelling. They searched out and brought back two young men who were direct descendants of the Staffordshire potters, Ben Owen and Charley Teague, who have inherited a love for the wheel and an innate sense of line. A certain kind of clay found in that immediate section is used, which after being formed into shape on the "kick" wheel is set aside to dry, and then is burned in a kiln with fire of intense heat, part of it being salt glazed and of a brilliant orange color. The original shapes of Jugtown ware were utilitarian, including platters, pie plates, butter jars, tea sets, milk crocks, pickle jars, candlesticks, and bowls, which many of us remember as used by our grandmothers; all these are made at Jugtown now, and in addition many beautiful vases, urns, jardinieres, and other examples of decorative art are formed under the magic fingers of these descendants of English potters, who have inherited their talent. Mr. Busbee has tried in vain to learn their art, but failed. Their wares find ready sale in New York, New Orleans, San Francisco, and many art centers. Recently one of their early Jugtown copies brought $400 when purchased by a Northern museum. Unwittingly, Jacques Busbee has done for North Carolina what the renowned Josiah Wedgwood accomplished for his native Staffordshire in England, and he and his wife have the great satisfaction of knowing that they have restored a real art which will live long after they are gone—a craft which but for them would have probably remained unknown forever.

A large number of friends and admirers in High Point heard the sad news of the death of Dr. Lyman E. Davis with surprise and sorrow. He came to High Point several years ago as President of the General Conference, and many of us remember his sermon on that occasion. He was an unusually graceful and forceful writer, being master of the best English, and as editor of the Recorder at Pittsburgh and later of the combined papers, Methodist Protestant-Recorder at Baltimore, he wielded a strong influence which was almost nationwide. His splendid and understanding editorials will be sadly missed, and his equal will be hard to find.

Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer and children are expected to arrive at home from a vacation of a month spent with relatives in Wellsville, Ohio, and other points.

We are much pleased to note that Mrs. C. W. Vance and Mrs. L. R. Peacock, who have been ill with influenza, are much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Vuncannon and daughter, Alta, and Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Vuncannon and daughter Ernestine, went to Asheboro Sunday to attend a reunion of the family.

We were pained to learn of the death last week in Mount Airy of Rev. J. J. Eads, who had been a minister in the M. E. Conference, South, for many years. He was the brother-in-law of Mrs. W. P. Pickett and Miss Mary Eller. Mrs. Pickett and several members of her family went to Midway, between Lexington and Thomasville, to attend the funeral services.

Much sympathy is extended to Mr. J. E. Perryman in the recent loss by death of his mother, who lived at Bethany in Davidson county, and attained the ripe age of 83 years. It is very sad to know that the old home will be broken up, since the husband and father preceded her three years ago.

Mr. June Gray and young sons, Alson and Joe, left Saturday morning for a sight-seeing tour to Washington City. The boys are no doubt enjoying this first trip immensely.

Cleveland Charge.—We have been so busy with our revival work during the past two months that we have neglected making a report to the Herald. We will mention a few things that we think will be of interest to the Herald readers.

Our meeting was held at Oak Grove church the first and second week in July. Rev. J. M. Morgan did the preaching. The church was revived and many backsliders reclaimed, but there were many more who hardened their hearts against the gospel.

Our meeting was held at Pleasant Hill the third week in July. Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk came on Monday and did all the preaching to the close. At this church our attendance was not large due to the small membership and other hindrances over which we had no control. The church was revived and the interest was good among those who came. One member was added to the church and others expect to join later.

Our meeting was held at Kistler's the first week in August. Rev. J. W. Hulin did the preaching except the two last services. We had large congregations and the interest was fine. The visible results were not what we had hoped for, but we believe much good was done.

The last night of the meeting some of the brethren presented the writer with a real good pounding. In addition to the many useful articles brought some money was given to fill the car with gas. Many others on the charge have remembered us with fruits, vegetables, watermelons, etc., during the summer. Space will not permit me to mention names, but may I say to one and all, "Thank you" and "God bless you."

Our meeting was held at Mt. Moriah the second week in August. Rev. C. H. Hill did the preaching. The church was greatly revived and about 35 professed faith in Christ and 12 joined the church.

Mrs. Hill was a guest of Mrs. Ridge during the meeting.

Our meeting was held at Mt. Pleasant the third week in August. Rev. Seth Ivester, a young preacher from Kistler's church, was the helper in this meeting. The church was greatly revived and 18 professed faith in Christ and four gave their names for church membership.

My congregations were delighted and edified with the fine gospel messages delivered by these brethren. It was a privilege to labor with them in this great work, and a pleasure to the pastor and family to have them in our home.

Now that our revival meetings are over we have two goals that we want to reach on this charge by conference: first, a good financial report; second, our full quota of Herald subscriptions. The farmers up here have a good average crop of cotton again this year and it is not at all unreasonable to expect this people to send the pastor and delegate to the Annual Conference with as good a report as ever went up from this charge. Brethren of the charge, we are counting on you to co-operate with us in this accomplishment.

C. E. RIDGE, Pastor.

* * *

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our revival meeting began the third Sunday in July with Rev. Robert Short as pulpit help. Brother Short did some good preaching which was helpful to all who heard him. Our meeting was not what we had hoped for, but we feel that much good was done. We hope Brother Short will come our way again; he is welcome any time. Rev. Mr. Joyner was with us the first and third Sundays in August; as usual he preached a good sermon.

Our Sunday school is about as usual. Very good attendance.

* * *

Calvary, Greensboro.—Just a few items that may be of interest to the readers of the Herald:

On the first Sunday night in August we were delighted to have Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Gerringer and the Gerringer children in the congregation. Brother Gerringer was the first pastor of Calvary church, and much of its present success is due to the work he did during the three years he was here. "Paul planted, and Apollos watered; but God giveth the increase."

During the pastor's absence over the second and third Sundays in August, the pulpit was supplied by Brothers Taylor and P. S. Kennett. They have our thanks for the service they gave, and the thanks of the folks who heard them for the sermons they preached.

Quite an improvement has been made in the convenience of the parsonage by the addition of an uncovered porch, and the screening in of the porch already there, on the rear of the building. Brother A. E. Causey and J. S. Plummer, of Calvary church, and Brother O. E. Dever, of Centenary church, have our thanks for doing the work free of charge.

Last Sunday it became necessary to raise $300 to meet an emergency in our building debt—an item not provided for through the regular channels. After explaining the situation to the membership they responded with $233. Sunday night $21.25 more came in. Others to be heard from will put us over the top without difficulty. Tight as the times are, and as needy as our folks are, it was a fine response.

We are beginning our annual revival this Sunday with Rev. Edward Suits of High Point doing the preaching during the week. The meeting will continue for ten days. We are looking for a good meeting, and everything indicates that we are going to have it. Brethren, pray for us, that the Grace of God may rest upon saint and sinner, and that many may be won to Christ and His Kingdom.

C. W. BATES.

Pleasant Grove.—The third quarterly conference was held Wednesday night, August 6. Mr. Clyde Payne was elected delegate to the annual conference.

Our pastor and wife left Monday of last week for the eastern part of the state and places in Virginia, where they will spend most of their two weeks' vacation. In the absence of our pastor Sunday morning we were very glad to have Professor West of the Hasty high school make a talk at the close of the Sunday school.

The Brotherhood met Saturday night. At the close of the business session, Rev. G. L. Reynolds made a very interesting talk. Then delicious refreshments were served.

REPORTER.

* * *

Lexington, State Street.—For the past two Sabbath mornings at the morning worship hour Mr. Hendry has given us fine addresses in a study of the life of James, one of our Lord's best loved disciples. Probably many of us never realized the beauty and worth of the character of this great man.

The evening services on Sundays are a service of sermons on the importance of choosing a life mate and founding a home. This subject of such a vast interest to all young people especially is being discussed by our pastor in an able and helpful way.

On Sunday afternoon the meeting of the Ninth District of the Woman's Auxiliary met at State Street church. Mrs. C. L. Koonts, our efficient district chairman, had charge of the program. Our pastor, Mr. G. H. Hendry, gave the address of welcome and a response was made by Mrs. Wyley Shoaf of Shiloh church. The devotionals were led by Rev. Mr. Troxler of Shiloh charge. Mrs, Hammer gave an instructive and very interesting address on "How the Women of the M. P. Church Can Help With the Work of the Church." Before her address Mrs. Hammer asked that a tribute of respect and gratitude be paid to the memory of the late Dr. Lyman Davis. This was responded to very heartily by the entire congregation.

Mrs. Whitaker of High Point, talked on different phases of the work at the college, stressing especially the student loan fund. Surely no one could present this worthy subject in a more convincing and appealing way than Mrs. Whitaker.

Mrs. Bates spoke briefly on several of the most important subjects of the work of the church in general, stressing the need of more loyal support of the church publications. The noble way in which Brother McCulloch is standing by the "Herald" in the face of discouragement was brought out by Mrs. Bates and also by Rev. Bates and others.

Reports were heard from some of the societies—a few were not represented—but those that were reported good work.

Our own loved president, Mrs. H. C. Rodgers, gave a concise and minute report of the work of our society.

Songs by the Troxler family and by the Leonard sisters at intervals during the program delighted the audience as does always the singing of these splendid folks. A visitor from another denomination remarked that the M. P. church has much to be proud of—"Its Women especially."

All the branches of church work seem to be taking on new life and vigor after the hot summer days and vacation absences, etc.

Mr. T. A. Blanton is doing good work with the intermediate boys and Miss Helen Harkey deserves much praise for her work as president of the Young People's C. E. society.

The ladies of our Missionary Society are planning a unique birthday party for Wednesday night. A social hour and refreshments will be enjoyed.

Why Not Charge.—Our meeting at Flag Springs closed Friday night following the third Sunday in August. Rev. M. P. Chambliss was pulpit help. He did good work, which was highly appreciated by both pastor and people. Four joined last Sunday night as a result of the meeting. Those uniting were Mrs. Elsay Cox and her two children, George Williams and Clara Louise of Asheboro, and Mrs. Clarence Cox, Asheboro.

On the first Sunday in September our meeting will begin at Pleasant Hill. Rev. B. M. Williams will arrive Monday and assist throughout the meeting.

On the second Sunday in September the annual camp meeting at Love Joy will begin. Rev. J. D. Williams is the engaged helper.

On the fourth Sunday in September our meeting at New Zion will begin. Rev. E. A. Bingham is to assist here. New Zion will be the eighth meeting for this charge. At this point we complete the first round.

A township rally was held at New Hope last Sunday. All the Sunday schools in the township participated. The writer preached at 11 a. m. The day was well spent.

Albemarle.—The Ladies' Aid Auxiliary meeting, which is held once each quarter, met at the church on August 12th, with the Cam Snotherly circle members acting as hostesses.

The meeting was presided over by the general president, Mrs. J. A. Furr. The hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" was used to open the meeting and Mrs. D. F. Harkey read the Scripture lesson and led in prayer. The roll was called showing 13 members of the Snotherly circle and 14 of the Hatley circle present. We were glad to have several visitors with us at this meeting also. The reports of the secretary of each circle were very interesting, giving an outline of the work done by each during the quarter.

This was followed by the general secretary's report of the last auxiliary meeting. The treasurer reported the amount of $93.02 collected during the quarter of which $54.37 came from the Snotherly circle and $38.65 from the Hatley circle. We think this is very good for the summer months.

This being the conclusion of the business hour, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. C. S. Morton, chairman of the entertaining circle. An interesting program was rendered consisting of vocal and instrumental musical selections, and readings. Several humorous features were included on the program, which proved very entertaining.

At the conclusion of the program, refreshments in two courses were served. The first course consisted of sandwiches, pickles and iced tea, and the second, orange ice, topped with cream, and Sunshine cakes.

Several of our families returned last week from the Catawba camp ground, and they report a wonderful time was had in the meetings there.

The members of the Junior choir were entertained by their leader, Mr. Wade Lowder, at a watermelon feast, on August 19th. Full justice was done to the delicious melons, after which the children were taken for a truck ride before returning to their homes.

Mr. Don F. Helms has been confined to his room for several days, with a bad throat trouble, but is now improving.

The union service which was held at the Tabernacle M. E. church Sunday night, in which our choir rendered the music, was a great success. The church was filled to capacity, and Rev. Mr. Dorton of the Baptist church, brought us a wonderful sermon. The next union service will be held in December.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit.—Our revival meeting began here the fourth Sunday in August with Rev. R. S. Troxler as pulpit help.

Mr. Troxler came to us Monday at noon, and did all the preaching except three sermons; one by our pastor, Mr. Williams; one by J. F. Minnis, and one by J. D. Williams. All of these brethren were at their best; their sermons were enjoyed by all.

The sermons preached by Rev. R. S. Troxler were helpful and inspiring. He preached plainly and that is just what was needed. We feel that much good was done, and the church greatly revived. There were twelve professions, five reclaimed and fourteen joined the church, more to join later.

The people learned to like Mr. Troxler and enjoyed his stay among us. He has a warm welcome in our hearts and we wish for him to come again. He delivered some wonderful messages.

We were glad to have with us in this meeting, Revs. J. F. Minnis and family; D. R. Williams and wife; J. D. Williams; M. I. Crutchfield; Mr. Caldwell; Mr. Sharp and Mr. Parker.

At the close of the meeting a purse of over $30.00 was presented to Mr. Troxler.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—We have had a larger attendance at Sunday school throughout the summer than ever before. We were well represented at both the township and county conventions. We lacked only two points of winning the banner at the county convention.

Our revival meeting began August 24 and continued until Friday night with Rev. Mr. M. C. Henderson of Concord as pulpit help. Brother Henderson rendered splendid help. He preached wonderful, soul-stirring sermons from beginning to the close of the meeting. There were about 31 conversions and 13 gave their names to join our church. I think there may possibly be others who will come in later. We believe we can say this was the best meeting we have had in several years.

We made up a purse of $20.30 for Mr. Henderson; not what we would like to give him, for we feel sure he earned more. Hope he will come again.

We were indeed glad to have with us on Sunday Rev. Mr. William Howard, Jr., of Bethel, and also Rev. Mr. Fred Love and family of Concord.

Also we were glad for the other churches on this charge to come and worship with us.

We are especially indebted to Bethel for coming and rendering special singing. We hope these good people will remember us and come again.

A FAMOUS WAR HORSE

Probably the oldest horse in the service of his country is "Old Tom" who, as a two-year-old colt, enlisted for life in the United States Marine Corps as far back as 1894. He went to Cuba with the American troops in 1898 and there served as a personal mount of General Elliott, U.S.M.C. Retired. He participated in skirmishes and battles at Camaquam and San Juan Hill. He was with Roosevelt and his Rough Riders when they stormed the Hill. Severely wounded in the battle of San Juan he is, therefore, not without battle scars and experienced in the art of warfare. He was retired to the Marine Barracks Navy Yard at Portsmouth, N. H., on full rations several years ago.

The Department finally having ceased to provide for him any longer, his fate was either to be put to sleep or sent to our Farm. He is still, at the advanced age of 37, so lively that it took three men to catch him recently when turned out in the pasture at the Navy Yard headquarters. They say of him that he positively refuses to be ridden or worked and would just as willingly tilt off the colonel as he would the top sergeant. He will spend his last days in peace and comfort at our Farm.

Since writing the above we have been informed that the men at the Navy Yard have themselves raised the money necessary to provide for Old Tom rather than part with him.—Our Dumb Animals.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

White

Charlie D. White was born December 27, 1896. He was married to Miss Bessie Barnes, October 3, 1921. To this union, three children were born. With these and his wife, he leaves his mother, Mrs. W. E. White, and two brothers, J. E. and T. J. White, also two sisters, Mrs. Agnes Phelps and Mrs. Martha Phelps. These with a host of friends, mourn his departure.

Brother White suffered from tuberculosis, contracted in the army during the World War. He had been a patient of the Government hospital near Asheville, N. C., for a little over ten months, where he died.

Brother White joined the Mount Hermon M. P. church in August, 1920. He was a quiet, hard working boy, and a consistent loyal member of his church. He departed this life, August 26, 1930, age, 33 years, seven months, and 29 days. We commend his wife and mother, brothers and sisters, to the loving care of our Heavenly Father, trusting in Him, and faithfully serving Him, until we all shall be gathered in unbroken family where parting is unknown. R. L. HETHCOX.

Michaux

Mrs. Sallie Davis Michaux was born in Granville county, North Carolina, on July 18, 1857, and fell asleep at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. W. McKinney, on August 16, 1930.

During the latter years of her life, Mrs. Michaux had been a constant sufferer, suffering from the inroads and ravages of disease upon her body; yet in all her sickness she was cheerful, patient, hopeful, and full of the peace and joy that only those who have lived lives worthy and noble and who lived in close touch with the author of all being can possess.

Before her marriage in 1878 to Rev. R. R. Michaux, Mrs. Michaux was Miss Sallie Davis. She was reared in a happy home with hosts of friends wherever she was known. Her husband was one of the outstanding ministers of the Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina a generation ago. Mrs. Michaux made for him a loving, devoted, and faithful wife, helpmate who knew best what to do to assist her husband in his work and to make him the efficient minister that he was in the church. During the husband's life and for a number of years after his death the family lived at Liberty, North Carolina, and it was there that the children grew to manhood and womanhood. In the course of time the children commenced to leave the home hearth to go into business for themselves or to establish homes of their own. Finally the old home was broken up and the mother went to live with her daughter, Mrs. L. W. McKinney of Gap, North Carolina, at whose home she died.

Mrs. Michaux leaves to mourn their loss her six children and one step-daughter all of whom are still living, as follows:

Mrs. L. B. Padgett of Farmville, N. C. Mrs. N. W. Booker of Richmond, Va., Mrs. L. W. McKinney of Gap, N. C., Miss Garnett Michaux of Washington, D. C., Messrs. W. W., and B. D. Michaux both of New York City, New York, and Mrs. Rev. J. S. Williams of Asheville, N. C. She also leaves nine grandchildren and a host of more distant relatives and friends who mourn her departure to the spirit land.

"Servant of God, well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

Perkinson

Mr. Andrew Perkinson departed this life Thursday, August 14, 1930. He was born October 26, 1855.

Mr. Perkinson united with the Methodist Protestant church at Union Chapel early in life where he remained a faithful member until the end came.

Mr. Perkinson had been in declining health for some time but the end came earlier than we expected. His wife and one son, J. M. Perkinson, have preceded him to the grave. Eleven children survive, as follows:

E. O. Perkinson and E. H. Perkinson, of Kittrell, N. C.; Mrs. J. H. Hight, Henderson, N. C.; Miss Maggie Perkinson, Jr. R. Perkinson, and Mrs. J. B. Pully, Kittrell, N. C.; Mrs. P. J. Wynn, Oxford, N. C.; H. H. Perkinson, of Wadesboro, N. C.; B. T. Perkinson, Kittrell, N. C.; C. W. Perkinson, Richmond, Va.; P. R. Perkinson, of Kittrell, N. C.

The funeral services were conducted in Oak Ridge Baptist church, by the writer, assisted by the pastor of the Baptist church, after which the body was laid to rest in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morning.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Staley

Arthur E. Staley, 61 years of age, prominent farmer and dairyman of Julian, died at 3:17 o'clock Sunday afternoon at St. Leo's hospital, to which he had been admitted 11 days ago. Death followed an acute attack of appendicitis, which was complicated by pneumonia.

It is expected that the service will be conducted at Shiloh M. P. church, near Julian. Interment will be in Shiloh cemetery.

Mr. Staley was born about two miles from Julian. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Staley, his father having been one of the pioneers in scientific farming in that section. He attended the public schools in the Julian community. All of his life was spent in that section and he was known as one of its leaders. He was a successful farmer and also found time to engage in a number of meritorious community enterprises. His interest in good roads, public schools and other enterprises of public nature was consistently active. Mr. Staley also evidenced an abiding and unselfish interest in the welfare of others, particularly those in distress. He was a devoted member and diligent worker in Shiloh Methodist Protestant church.

About ten years ago Mr. Staley was married to Miss Anna Kimrey. She died about three years ago. They had no children. He leaves a brother, Augustus E. Staley, who is a prominent manufacturer of corn products in Decatur, Ill., and two sisters, Mrs. Georgia Anna Coble, of Guilford College, and Mrs. N. G. Garner, of Julian.—Greensboro Daily News.

BROTHER J. F. MINNIS SAYS GOODBYE

Dear Dr. McCulloch:

Enclosed you will find quite a long report from Graham, but I hope you will allow me a bit more space to bid all our good friends farewell. While we are not sailing until September 27th, yet we are going to Mrs. Minnis' home in Maryland next week. We are planning to take the car along so I am planning to drive directly to New York and ship it on a boat sailing Monday, September 8th.

Our stay in the conference has been a most delightful one and we regret that for a season we must say farewell. We are now very anxious to get back to Dhulia and let Mr. and Mrs. Cassen return home.

We are very happy that this time we are representing in a very real way the North Carolina Conference. We shall try to do more to make ourselves more nearly worthy of the trust you have put in us. Space nor time will allow me to mention all the churches, auxiliaries, and friends who have expressed their love and appreciation in showers, farewell parties and surprise boxes. For all these expressions we are most grateful. We want to take this opportunity to thank everyone for all they have done for us and the cause of missions. We want to assure you that we shall not soon forget our stay with you and the effort to make us happy and comfortable in our new home. Be it known to all, that we are happy to represent the North Carolina Branch, and if at any time we can do something to show our appreciation, by serving you in some personal way, please feel free to call on us.

May God richly bless every auxiliary and all the young people with the conference and make us happy in the work of redeeming the lost both at home and abroad. Assuring you of our prayers, continued interest and best wishes, I am,

J. F. MINNIS.

P. S.—Possibly some of you would like to know when and how we are sailing. We sail from New York, September 27th, on the Leviathan.

Who has stopped the age-old practice of blinding song-birds in Italy

KADRA MAYSI

It must have been Il Duce heard—
Above his marching song of steel—
Across his bugles' brazen peal—
As plainly as a pleading word,
That sound of little wings which whirred
Through endless night their mute appeal.
Time's trumpet call could not conceal
From him the clear note of a bird.

Let ages prove his right or wrong—
The justice of his iron sway.
One paean shall be his when, long,
Forgot are nations' Yea and Nay.
Forever his shall be the song
Of birds that, now, know breaking day!

The Prating of Fools

One fool has said, "How doth God know?
Enthroned on heights of space afar
He cannot know, He does not see:
No thought of Him our minds need jar!"

Another fool has loudly said:
"If God exists, He does not care;
We men may do just what we please,
He'll never lay our secrets bare."

A third has said, "There is no God!"
Of all the fools the greatest he:
His mind and heart are black as night,
All steeped in sin's impurity.

This Year 1930

What sort of year is this year we are passing through? It is gaining the reputation of being a very hard year. But many people have the reputation of being "hard" who only seem so. Those who know them well know that their hearts are soft. When we come to look back upon 1930 from a distance, we believe we will see that 1930 has brought to the world the usual or average amount of good. God is not less benevolent or less wise than He has always been and He still rules the world. From year to year He may change the form of His dispensations, but He never fails to be gracious. What we now consider great evils will be found to be blessings in disguise. We may not know the precise purpose of God in any particular dispensation of His, but we know that His purpose is benevolent. "God is love." God has shown the world how to minify the evils that come. Local famines are not the dreadful things that formerly they were. Men have learned how quickly to transport supplies from place of plenty to place of dearth, and a development of human sympathies has made men ready to help one another. Diseases that people formerly died of can now be cured. Men have learned how to cure more and also how to endure more. Fifty years ago 1930 might have been a "hard" year. But it will soon be seen that it was one of the most friendly years that have come to us. Aside from our fears we will not be able to recall that we suffered much from conditions i[illegible]930 and we may be able to see how the world was greatly helped by this year. We believe that 1930 is one of God's years.

Wouldn't This Be Fine?

The cry of "hard times" has greatly reduced expectation of the offerings made for church work this year. This makes possible some pleasing surprises. Wouldn't it be a pleasing surprise for some charge that has never paid out fully before to do so this year? And would it not be another pleasing surprise for charges accustomed to pay in full to overpay this year? These things can be done.

Our Robbery of God

Can a man rob God? A prophet of the Bible represents God as saying to men: "Ye have robbed me in tithes and offerings." But what does God care about the tenth of our little possessions in comparisons with another thing we owe Him—our hearts, our allegiance, our love, our devotion? "The gift without the giver is bare." We may give God the tenth, the fifth, the half, the whole of our possessions, but if we give not ourselves, we are great robbers of God. How vain to think that a great gift of money at the end of life will square our account with God. God is not mocked. He cannot be deceived into accepting any substitute for our supreme love and obedience. What shall a man give in exchange for his soul? There is nothing valuable enough to compensate God for the loss of a human soul. All souls are His. He has bestowed upon each one infinite pains and perpetual hope and love. A human soul is in God's sight a jewel beyond compare. He would not sell a soul for a million worlds. But we can take our souls from God and give them to Satan, our worst enemy. We have it in our power to do God a monstrous injustice. We may imagine that we are enriching ourselves at God's expense, but nothing is farther from the truth. Robbing God impoverishes us with the most wretched and hopeless poverty. Giving God ourselves and our all enriches us with everlasting possessions. Life apart from God is a poor thing, however enriched with earthly magnificence. Life in complete and perpetual partnership with God is an everlasting and most glorious success.

Those Curious Athenians

Luke tells us that in the days of Paul "all the Athenians spent their time in nothing else but either to tell or to hear some new thing." They had no newspapers, but they were all newsmongers. They had no serious occupation. They simply amused themselves and each other by rehashing the news of the day. They had plenty of time for gossip and they had plenty of gossip for the time. Luke does not tell us the effect upon their minds and morals of their course in life, [illegible] that they had not much depth of soul. Their chief interest in an event was the gratification it brought to their insatiable curiosity. When Paul brought to them the moving story of the Gospel of Christ it was to them simply a one-day's wonder.

Those curious Athenians have many successors in our day. Men and women who pore over two or three daily papers to gratify their curiosity. Reading the record of the world's crimes and tragic accidents. Reading of wars and rumors of wars. Looking to see who were killed in automobile wrecks or airplane falls: who have married and who have died; who have eloped and who have been divorced; who are candidates for office and who have been defeated in elections;

THE FOE PROHIBITION FACES

(Address by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary World League Against Alcoholism, at Ohio Methodist Episcopal confernece at Oxford, Friday evening, September 5.

A small group of American multimillionaires, actuated by a desire to evade their proper share of the financial burdens of the federal government, constitute the newest and most powerful foe of prohibition, Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, told the Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at Oxford, September 7.

''While we still face, on the battle line, the old foes of prohibition, including the former brewers, the old distillers, the saloon gang of former days, the barflies and the underworld, as well as the more rsepectable friends of the old liquor traffic, these forces, weakened as they have been in the public mind by a century of education and enilghtenment, could not accomplish much in direct opposition to the present policy of government,'' he said.

''These anti-social forces in recent years, however, have been augmented by a half dozen multimillionaires, interested from another point of view, thus tending to submerge the liquor issue in the larger issue as to whether a small oligarchy of a few multimillionaires, controlling vast business interests, may dictate political action to the federal government and determine the nation's policy on a great social problem.

''The evidence uncovered by the United States Senate lobby investigation committee and the testimony of the wet leaders in that investigation, demonstrate beyond a doubt that the eighteenth amendment and the prohibition law are making marvelous headway in actually decreasing the manufacture, sale and consumption of beverage alcohol, and that this fact is responsible for the tremendous propaganda efforts of this small group of financial wizards. The clear objective appears to be either to coerce or subsidize the press, to blind the public with a barrage of wet propaganda, and to compel great business enterprises even in matters of social welfare to do the bidding of those few men who control great systems of industry and finance.

''This evidence throws a flood of light on the recent extreme wetness of certain national weekly magazines, which, in their earlier years, were staunch advocates of prohibition, and which have been household weeklies in the homes of preachers, teachers and leading professional and business men throughout the nation.

''The novel and interesting idea which these barons have fostered is to have the income tax of great corporations taken from their broad shoulders and placed upon the backs of the industrial workers of the nation. The fact that those industrial workers would need to spend for beer alone probably $5,000,000,000 annually in order that the government might collect such a tax is a mere incident for these wizards of finance, as is also the whole question of the terrific indirect economic cost to the nation of such a policy and the general social and political consequences thereof.

''These few men associated together today are said to control forty billions of dollars of American wealth and industries employing more than three million men and women. Incidentally it appears that one of these corporations has perfected the largest and finest distilling equipment in the world, which equipment might easily be called to extra service if either the government sale system or a license system could be substituted for prohibition. No brewer, distiller or saloonkeeper in the old days ever more definitely personified the spirit of greed.

''Tyranny in popular government ofttimes makes its entry with a loud voice, shouting in patriot tones and demanding that the people shall have their liberties. William Pitt understood this as well as the science of government when he said, 'where law ends, tyranny begins'.''

J. H. Larimore.

TOBACCO AND POVERTY

B. C. Forbes, a recognized authority on commerce and finance, in answering a question put to him by a man who wrote that he had a hard time to make both ends meet, at the same time asked the readers of his articles to offer suggestions. Among the many responses, two readers advised the questioner to cut out tobacco, which he had written cost him $4 a month, or about $50 a year. One of the readers added these words:

''Under his circumstances tobacco is out of the question. Let him cut it out and THUS INCREASE HIS ENERGY.''

The Rural New Yorker tells how tobacco causes poverty in another way, as follows: ''The burning (smoking) of the tobacco crop grown in this country means a loss of 3,000,000 pounds of ammonia, 500,000 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 6,000,000 pounds of potash. That is a fair estimate of the amount of plant food left in the tobacco ashes. Very little, if any, of this is saved for use on the land. No other crop shows such a complete economic loss. Other forms of fuel used for heat or illumination give the greater part of their plant food back to the soil. Tobacco does nothing of the sort.''

But the tobacco men do not like any intimation of the economic loss caused by the use of tobacco. For instance, the Tobacco Record comments thus on the refusal of the manager of a chain of restaurants: ''It is assininity of this kind, coupled with greed, that harms the tobacco industry.''

How cruel must seem the act of parents—to tobacco men—who refuse to allow their children to play with razors! ''It is asininity of this kind that harms the razor business!'' Bah!—Will H. Brown.

A SUGGESTION ON CHURCH MUSIC

By J. L. Trollinger

I have found that the one big objection to the use of our own Church Hymnal is that it can't be bought in shaped note editions. That is true. And it is a sad truth for some churches. But this need not make it necessary for our churches to resort to one of those cheap books, with the cheaper music in them, just because they have shaped note editions.

I have in my possession copies of several good hymn books, that I can recommend to the churches of our conference. And I am giving a list of them together with their publisher, because as a member of the Conference Committee on Church Music, I believe it will help us in our work as a committee.

The Cokesbury Hymnal, by the Cokesbury Press, Nashville, Tenn.; the New Cokesbury Hymnal, by the same company.

New Songs for Service, by the Rodeheaver Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

I will say, however, that I am using these books on my charge, and have found them entirely satisfactory. Then, Dr. Jas. H. Straughn says that another book I have, Hymns of Praise, Number 2, by the Hope Publishing Co., of Chicago, is one of the best he has ever used. The Modern Hymnal, for sale by the Baptist Book Store of Raleigh, or Nashville, Tenn., is also a very fine book of 484 hymns of the very finest kind for all the services of the church. Tabernacle Hymns, Number 3, by Tabernacle Publishing Co., of Chicago, is also a very fine book. Brother D. R. Connell, director of music, First Church, Thomasville, says it is one of the best he has used in many years, and he knows a good book when he sees it.

All of these books are pubilshed in shape note editions, and are priced so reasonably that any church in the conference can get enough of them for congregational singing. Get them. Put your people singing. The sweet singer of Israel once said: "Let all the people praise him." Try letting all the congregation sing those grand old hymns of the church, and see how much more spirituality you will have in your services.

A CLINIC IN TEMPTATION

The enemy of souls sat in his luxurious private office planning a campaign to make good people tolerant of evil and error, when the office boy announced an arrival. A smirking imp in plus fours stood before the carved desk.

"It's about John Smith, your majesty," he said. "I have plied him with wine, women, and song, but he will not notice them. It seems that he was reared a prohibitionist, and has always been prejudiced against every bacchanalian."

"Have you tried him on the love of money?" asked the devil. "That nearly always gets them. I failed on everything else with Judas Iscariot, you know, until I got him to look at a handful of coins from just the right angle."

"Yes, I tried him on that," was the answer. "He merely remarked that the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them would do him no good after the undertaker is paid, and that he preferred keeping his conscience to selling it. That ended the interview."

The devil touched a buzzer button, and a clerk entered.

"Look in the files and get me John Smith's card," said the devil.

"See here," he chuckled when the card was produced. "Here is a real lead. He has a tendency to be vain and conceited, and to court popularity. I knew there would be a weak spot somewhere. You fellows do not pay enough attention to the principles of salesmanship. You have got to know your man, if you expect to land him. Look Smith up again, and show him how he can easily make himself popular with the crowd. Don't forget, either, to remind him that the crowd is not found in the straight and narrow way."

Next day the emissary was back.

"It worked," he said. "Smith swallowed it, hook and all. He said he was lonely, and would do anything to stand in with the crowd. I told him plenty to do. You needn't worry any more about his case."

"Very well," said the devil. "Check over the files and see what we can do about Richard Brown."—Clarence E. Flynn in Zion's Herald.

FROM THE AMERICAN EUGENICS SOCIETY

William Allan Neilson, president of Smith College, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York and Professor Earnest A. Hooton, professor of anthropology at Harvard are announced by the American Eugenics Society as the judges in its sermon contests which has just closed. Sermons were received from widely varying localities all over the United States and the Society's Committee on Co-operation with Clergymen, which has been in direct charge of the contest, states that a preliminary scrutiny shows the entres to be of a high quality in their literary, homilestic and scientific aspects. An announcement of the awards will be made early in the fall.

The contest was open to any minister of any faith and to the theological students, and was to be preached before a bonafide religious congregation. It was to deal, in general, with the relation to eugenics of the churches. The sermons will be judged for their scientific validity by Professor Hooton, for their persuasiveness by Rabbi Wise and and for their literary quality by President Neilson. Prizes aggregating $1,000 are to be awarded by the judges, $500 for first prize, $200 for second while there will be three third prizes of $100 each. The Society has reserved rights of publcation on the sermons, and will publish the winners in Eugenics, its official organ.

"I LOVE MY MASTER"—"I WILL NOT GO FREE"

A young negro slave stood in the old salve market of Mombasa in Africa waiting to be sold. An Englishman passing through the market place caught sight of the young man, was attracted by him, and, "looking upon him, loved him." He bought him, although the purchase money was high. After the transaction he asked the negro if he knew why he had bought him. The slave murmured something, and the Englishman said, "I have bought you to give you your liberty and set you free." He had to repeat it several times before the young man could grasp its meaning; and even then, he could not believe it, and refused to accept it as true. When at last the truth of it dawned on him, he looked the Englishman straight in the face, and said, "Then there is only one thing I have to ask you." The Englishman said, "What is that?" "That I may be your servant for ever," was the reply.

Are we as grateful to our Saviour and Redeemer, who has done and will do infinitely more for us than even that Englishman did for the negro? Christ redeemed us with His own precious blood. He has prepared a place for us in His Father's House of many mansions. What are we giving Him in return? We sing—

"I could not do without Thee,
O Saviour of the lost,
Whose precious Blood redeemed me
At such tremendous cost."

But what are we giving Him in return? "Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's."

Jesus said, "If a man love Me, he will keep My words" (John 14:23).

"Father," said a little boy once, "I do love you." The father replied, "Do you love me enough, Douglas, to weed the garden, as I told you yesterday?" The test of love is obedience—not lip service but a life devotion.

"Be ye doers of the Word, and not hearers only" (James 1:22).—A. M. W., in Our Children.

OPTIMISM | The President's Letter | EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Alamance

The first Sunday in September was spent with this charge in a visit with Sapling Ridge and Center churches. At the former church, we found a building project under way. The old building is being brick veneered, and Sunday School rooms are being added in the rear. Red brick are being used throughout, and with pleasing effect. The new addition in the rear is about 60x18, and will provide three large rooms. The porch entrance, with brick columns, gives the front of the church a pleasing architectural effect. Hardwood floors are to be laid, and the interior completely overhauled. The congregation is fortunate in having some good mechanics who are taking marked interest in this improvement. The work is being well done, and at a cost that is very low. We understand that some liberal money contributions have been made, and it is most likely that the major part of the cost will be paid when the building is completed. This church will be a credit to the community, and to the conference, and we most gladly extend our congratulations to Pastor Burgess and to this congregation.

Inthe afternoon, the appointment was at Center church. And here, too, we found important improvements underway, in work that is being done on the cemetery. Fortunately for this improvement, many of the graves are in rows, and concrete walls are being laid from one side of the graveyard to the other, inclosing the space occupied by these graves. This work was begun in June, and is to be continued until the entire cemetery is laid off in this way. This is the outgrowth of the Memorial organization at this place, and is commendable work. It is too often true that burying grounds are neglected. We are glad to find that churches are awakening to this fact, and that there is a marked tendency to care for and beautify the place where our dead sleep.

Some years ago this church added Sunday School rooms, and we found the unusual here in the Sunday School—a young woman superintendent. It is to be further added, too, that she is a graduate of High Point College,—Miss Lillie Mae Braxton. We feel sure that the school is safe in her hands. This is the home church of three of our ministers,—Revs. A. O. Lindley, J. W. Braxton, and T. J. Whitehead. These are all active in the conference, and all reflect honor upon the church that give them to us. We trust that Center may continue to be the mother of preachers. We found that a C. E. Society had just been organized here, and that the allotment to the Sunday School for Young People's Work had already been paid. We were assured too, that it would be paid at the other church. These are logically honor roll churches. In fact, this is true of the entire charge. Alamance heads our list, and it certainly would be a fitting thing to have the charge that heads our list of charges, also head our "Honor Roll." Bethel was on last year in three places, and Center in two. Now just a little extra this year, brethren, and put your entire charge where it belongs. Thank you! Thank you!

We enjoyed the day with Pastor Burgess and his people. Congregations were good at each church; the spirit of the services was good; the fellowship with the people was good; and the general tendency of hopefulness and progress were encouraging. On our way back from the day's work, we stopped at Bethel church to look over the improvements that are being made there. An addition is being made to the rear of the building which will provide a number of Sunday School rooms—four we believe. The choir floor is to be raised and an approach made to the choir from the new annex. This work is well on the way, and will be completed soon, no doubt. We most heartily commend the brethren for what they are doing here, and suggest that when the painting begins, they include the entire building. Pastor Burgess reports good meetings on the charge, and gratifying additions to the membership. Earnest and persistent effort will be made to close the year well, and we are confident of pleasing results. The high esteem in which Brother Burgess is held on the charge is evidenced by the fact that this is his fifth successive year.

From Greensboro To High Point

After a stay of nearly three years in Greensboro, we have taken up our residence in High Point. This is in obedience to conference action, ordering the President to be located near the college. The parsonage trustees bought the H. A. Garrett property as a district parsonage, and we are now the occupants of that house. Our own people in Greensboro, and our neighbors as well, were thoughtful of us, and unfailing in their many courtesies and kindnesses. We shall retain pleasant recollections of our stay there (which was all too short) and our friends in Greensboro will continue to have a place of grateful appreciation in our hearts.

The fate of a Methodist minister and his family is to make their friends, do their work, and then pass on to do the same thing over again. We yield, of course, to the inevitable, and have for our comfort the fact that we have just passed out of one good city into another, and out of one community of good friends, to make equally good ones in another equally good community. This is pleasing compensation. We regretted to leave Greensboro; we are glad to be in High Point, and near High Point College. We are "getting" located in our new home, and expect to realize continued enjoyment in the cultural environment that surrounds us.

Our new address is 909 West College Drive.

High Point College

The opening prospects seem good. We understand tha about 100 freshmen will be enrolled, and of course, a goodly number of former students will return. The college will draw the ilon's share of last year's graduates of High Point high school. The number expected is about 35, we believe. Dr Humphreys and his family are here. We give them a hearty welcome into our fellowship. They are living in the President's home on College Drive. This is the house built by Dr. Andrews, and bought from him by the college. President Humphreys is entering hopefully and zealously upon his new duties. He will have the support and the prayers o the many friends of the college. We shall expect another yea of progress in this institution that has accomplished so much in the six years of its existence.

From Post Card Reports—Meetings

Finances

"Prospect good for salary in full." "G. C. B. will be paid. A. C. B. doubtful, though I am hopeful. Salary about one-third paid." "Prospects are good for salary, and also budgets." "Salary practically paid to date. G. C. B. well up. A. C. B. will be paid in full." "Think salary will be paid in full." "Hope to make fair financial showing at close." "We will have a substantial increase over last year on budgets." "Salary will be paid in full. Hope to raise all of A. C. B." "We are going to do our best; I think we will raise the budget at some of the churches." "Financial outlook not encouraging." "Salary will be paid; hope to raise a good part of budgets." "Salary in full. Two or three churches expected to pay A. C. B. in full." "To date, we stand about as we did last year at this time." "I am striving for full budgets." "Budget prospects not so good, owing to financial depression."

Only 21 reports received. Upon the whole, they reveal encouraging signs.

Revised

In our comparative financial report of last week, we discover that we inadvertantly omitted the month of May, in bringing the receipts of 1929 up to August 30, so as to make them compare with a like period of this year. The revision of the comparison shows an excess in favor of last year of $814. It should be said, too, that the revised report shows a gain in the women's work, in favor of this year, of $275. These figures are sufficietly accurate we think, to give the financial comparison of the two years for these like periods.

Our task now is to recover this shortage, and do it with a big plus. All we ask is that we do our best. God will not ask more of us; but He will ask that. We must not go up to conference, brethren, with any feeling in our hearts that [illegible]

Pastor's Federation

It was our privilege to attend the meeting of the Central Federation, held on last Monday with President Maier. Several ministers were present, though not nearly all in this Federation. Basket dinner was served under the beautiful oaks at the parsonage. In the business meeting after dinner, the officers of the past year were re-elected, as follows: President, Rev. H. W. Maier; secretary-treasurer, Rev. P. S. Kennett. It was a matter of regret to the meeting that Dr. Humphreys, who was on the program for an address, could not be present. We appreciated the privilege of speaking to the brethren in regard to the problems that confront us in the closing work of the conference year. These Federation meetings are potential of much good, and we were glad to be present on this occasion. The December meeting will be held with Brother Bates at Calvary church.

These Things, Now

Rally Day. Send to Rev. F. W. Stephenson, D.D., for supplies. Address, Pittsburgh, Pa., 613 W. Diamond St., N. S.

Send name of delegate to Brother Bates, so conference committees can be completed.

Pray constantly for God's blessings upon us in the work of these closing weeks.

Plan to have a large delegation from your charge at the conference on Denominational Day—Friday.

Your post card report, please.

WHAT THE FRIEND OF FAILURE SAID

He lacked tact.
Worry killed him.
He couldn't say "no."
He did not find his place.
He never managed to save.
He never did care how he looked.
He did not guard his weak points.
He was too proud to take advice.
He didn't fall in love with his work.
He got into a rut and couldn't get out.
He did not learn to do things to a finish.
He loved ease; he didn't like to struggle.
He was the victim of the last man's advice.

"FOR ME, EVEN ME"

It was after a Gospel preaching. The subject had been John 3:16, that glorious message:—

"For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

An aged woman stayed to speak to the preacher, and as she caught his hand, exclaimed, "Oh! can it be true that God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, for me, even me? To think that God loved, and tonight has saved a poor eighty-year old sinner like me. Oh! what a God!"

Saved at eighty! What mercy and goodness of God to spare her until that age, and to save her after a life spent without Him.

Far better is it to be saved at eight years of age and spend the life for the glory of God and for the good of others, than to wait until the end of a useless life draws nigh and then to come to God with the hope of blessing.

If blessed then, you can have but the wasted years standing like a monument of shame to look back upon.

"Whosoever will" may come, but not many aged ones do come.

You had better come at once.

"Now is the accepted time, behold now is the day of salvation."—Scattered Seed.

HARNESSING OUR TROUBLES

Do our troubles harm us or help us? Do they drive us, or draw us? God makes every trouble a helper to those who love Him.

A true and consecrated minister whose beloved wife was taken Home recently, after their ideal married life of more than half a century, writes in a personal letter to a friend: "I was much struck with a sentence in a prayer offered by an old minister of the Christian church here the other night. He said, along the line of Romans 8:28: 'O Lord, we cannot understand how Thou canst harness all our troubles and sorrows and make them work for us, but we know Thou dost.' And that is just it! We don't understand these things, but we do know Him, and that is sufficient for it. Out of it all God is going to bring glory to His own Name and everlasting good and blessing to us. That has helped me through this greatest sorrow that has come into my life, and has kept me steady and quiet. It seems very strange to be alone after fifty-two years of life with my dear wife, and yet I am not alone, for 'the Father is with me,' and our blessed Lord has kept His precious promises of Presence and Comfort * * *. I was so thankful she did not linger, and that she was the one to go instead of myself."

So "all things," including every trouble and problem and sorrow that comes to us, are harnessed by God and set to work for us as our helpers, our servants, working for our blessing. Then nothing but blessing can come to us if we love God and trust Him. For He loves us, and His omnipotence is always at work for us.—The S. S. Times.

SPEND AND BE SPENT

Spend and be spent, never doubting but trusting;
Toil for the Master and stretch every nerve.
Use all your powers, leave none idly rusting.
Please not yourself, but loyally serve.

Spend and be spent in your life's rosy morning.
Gain life by losing it; scatter the seed.
That flowers of love some pathway adorning
Rise from the dust of humanity's need.

Spend and be spent in your life's mid-day splendor;
Yours is a task which no other can do.
Precious these hours you can real service render.
Spend and be spent, for the Master calls you.

Spend and be spent when the shadows are falling.
Toil till the hour of life's setting sun,
"Come over and help us," a lost world is calling.
Spend and be spent till the Lord says, "Well done."

Those Curious Athenians

who have been arrested and who have escaped from the penitentiary.

They live to know how other people are living. It does not seem to occur to them that there is a more noble way of living. They do not try to make the world better. They are satisfied to be mere spectators of the world. They are feeding their souls on husks.

WEAK AS A WORM

The Lord called Jacob a worm, because he was weak, sinful and not worth anything. But the Lord loved him and was not discouraged with him. The Lord was going to make something worthwhile out of Jacob, but it would be only through Jacob's trusting Him. Jacob would have no strength of his own to please Him. All he would have would be the Lord's strength.

The Lord said to Jacob, "Fear not; I will help thee. Fear not, thou worm Jacob, * * I will help thee, saith the Lord, and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel." (Is. 41:13, 14).

Even though Jacob was as weak and helpless as a worm, the Lord promised to be his help. The best time for the Lord to help us is when we are weak, too weak to do anything to please Him. He wants to give us the strength. He does not want us to have any strength of our own. If we feel that we are strong in ourselves, it is then when the Lord has no chance to give us His strength.

Did you ever feel that you were as weak as a worm? That is just the way to feel before the Lord. The weakest people are the strongest when they let the Lord give them His strength. The strongest people are the weakest when they try to do things to please the Lord in their own strength.

Let us be among those who let the Lord show His strength through us. Those are the kind of people He is looking for, and the only kind He can use to His glory and honor.—Selected.

WALKING IN SLIPPERY PLACES

To walk on the ice without falling is not the easiest thing in the world. The boys whom we see before us in this picture have found this out. They started to cross the little pond of ice that lay between their home and the school house without paying much attention to what they were doing, and now they have all taken a hard tumble.

It is always difficult to walk in slippery places of any kind, and the best way, if we do not wish to fall, is to keep on a good path, where we know the road is perfectly safe.

Our Heavenly Father has shown us in the Bible the way way: walk ye in it." So let us hear His voice, and walk in the footsteps of our Lord Jesus Christ, for if we follow Him, we shall never go astray, and will finally reach the heavenly home which our Saviour has prepared for all who love Him.—Apples of Gold.

THE SECRET OF FRUIT-BEARING

Our only possibility of bearing any fruit worthy of ou natures, and of God's purpose concerning us, is by vital unio with Jesus Christ. If we have not that, there may be plent of activity and mountains of work in our lives, but there wil be no fruit. Only that is fruit which pleases God and as con formed to His purpose concerning us, and all the rest of you busy doings is no more the fruit a man should bear tha cankers are roses, or than oakgalls are acorns. They are bu the work of a creeping grub and diseased excrescenses tha suck into themselves the juices that should swell the frui Open your hearts to Christ and let His life and Spirit com into you, and then you will "have your fruit unto holines and the end everlasting life."—Dr. Maclaren.

OUR STORY PAGE

HOW BILLY WENT TO THE ANT

Billy stood beside the woodpile. His round, rosy face, where a smile could always be seen, was sober. Worse than sober—it was almost cross.

''I don't see why Sallie wants so many sticks for that old kitchen stove!'' he grumbled, ''Pretty nearly always she tells me the wood-box is empty, and will I please bring in a few sticks!''

A little way from where Billy was standing was a sandy place. In the sand was a whole village of ant-hills.

Billy could see the little black ants running around.

''Wonder what's going on over there! Must be a ball game or some kind of a holiday to make them so lively!'' Billy forgot he was cross, and almost smiled at this thought.

He went nearer the ant-hill village and knelt on the ground, the better to watch the tiny creatures' movements.

''Why, they're working!'' he said to himself in surprise, after watching the busy activity in Antville. ''Bringing up sand from the middle of that hill! Maybe one speck of sand is as heavy for them as a big rock would be for me! Mamma told me once they had little halls run-ways down inside. How do they do it? Now, if I should make a little sand-pile and try to keep such a tiny hole down through the center of it, I couldn't! The sand would run all together and fill it up.''

Just then he caught sight of an ant outside the cluster of ant-hills, carrying a load which seemed too much for his small size.

Billy couldn't exactly make out what it was—he would have needed a magnifying glass for that—but at any rate, it was something the little black creature prized.

He grasped it with his tiny mouth and hurried toward an ant-hill courageously, but it was too heavy for him to carry far without stopping. He laid it down, then ran all around it.

''Looking for a better way to get hold of it!'' decided Billy.

more. This time he reached [illegible] fore dropping his burden again.

Then, starting backward up the slope, dragging his prize by one end, he edged slowly upward, bit by bit, while Billy watched admiringly.

''He's a worker!'' said Billy to himself. ''I'd like to help him, but of course, I'd scare him away, and maybe spoil the whole ant-hill. He wouldn't thank me for that! Wonder what he wants it for, anyway! Maybe it's something for the baby ants, down inside there, to eat!''

But the brave little worker was to have help, even though Billy could not give it.

Two other ants came scrambling out of the hole and hurried down to where their friend was struggling; they took hold of the burden and helped him to drag it along.

''Now did he call them, or how did they know about it?'' Billy wondered.

The three ants soon reached the opening of the top and disappeared from Billy's sight, carrying their burden with them.

He jumped to his feet.

''I'm not going to sit and dread that wood business any longer!'' he declared manfully. I can fill up that wood-box in no time if I go right about it, and I will, too! I'd be ashamed to let that little speck of an ant do better with his work than I.''—The Child Gem.

CO-OPERATION

Jack stood at a window in the dining room and scowled. (Scowling is frowning and looking cross and not smiling at all.) Jane stood at another window in the dining room and scowled, too.

Jack kicked at a chair and wasn't happy one bit.

Jane looked at the rain which was making little puddles all over the yard. She wasn't one bit happy either.

The yellow canary in the kitchen was happy. He hopped up and down, and teetered back and forth, and sang and chirped as busily as could be.

Jane's kitten was happy, too. She was chasing her own black tail around and around. She hadn't ever caught it yet not once, but she was having a good time chasing it.

Mother in the kitchen was happy, too. She was singing as she made a juicy cherry pie for dinner.

Even the raindrops out of doors seemed to be happy. They splashed and bumped each other and pattered into the puddles and spatted against people's umbrellas and ran little races down the window glasses.

But Jack and Jane kept on scowling out of the windows and kicking the chairs and looking cross. Jack didn't say a thing. Neither did Jane. They kept so still that pretty soon mother came into the dining room to see what was the matter. In the doorway she stopped.

''My goodness,'' she cried. ''If those aren't two of the biggest and blackest scowls I ever saw! Whatever is the matter?''

''Jack won't play with me,'' cried Jane, running to mother.

''Jane won't play with me, mother,'' cried Jack, turning around from the window but still scowling.

''Well, then, why don't you each play alone?'' asked mother. ''One of you can come out in the kitchen with me, and the other can stay in here and play with Kitty.''

''Kitty can't play tea party,'' said Jane, ''and I want can't Jane play store? Jack won't play with me.''

''Why can't you take turns?'' mother asked. [illegible] you play store now, and then after a while both of you can play tea party.''

''No!'' cried Jane, scowling more than ever. ''Tea party first.''

''Store first!'' said Jack, beginning to cry.

Mother took Jack on her lap. ''Let's think of something else you both want, you like to go out in the barn and play in the hay?''

''No,'' said Jack sobbing more than ever. ''I can't wear my grocery man apron when I play in the hay. And I want to wear my grocery man apron.''

''And I can't play with my tea set in the hay,'' said Jane, kicking hard at her little red chair. ''I want to play with my tea set.''

''We played tea party yesterday.'' Jack objected. ''And today I want to play store. Mother, can't we play store?''

Mother picked up Jack's Sunday School book, and asked, ''Do you remember the verse Miss Helen read to you last Sunday? Here it is: 'Love one another.' Don't you think Miss Helen would want you to love one another and be more happy than this?"

"Jack ought to love me" said Jane. "And if he loved me he'd play tea party."

"If Jane loved one another she'd play store with me," sobbed Jack.

"Well, then," laughed mother. "Why don't you both love one another, and play store and tea party at the same time?"

"Store first," Jack started to say, and then he heard what mother had said. "At the same time?" he and Jane cried.

"Of course," said mother. "My goodness, when a lady gives a tea party, doesn't she have to go to the store to buy the things for the party?"

"And when she needs company for the party she can invite the storeman," said Jack, sitting up in mother's lap and forgetting to cry.

"And you can keep on your apron for the party," cried Jane forgetting to scowl.

"I can have the tea set for sale in my store," said Jack.

"And all our dolls will be our children and they can come to the party, too," cried Jane. "Come help me make my house."

"Before you start," said mother, "do you want to learn a big new word?"

"Oh, yes!" cried Jack and Jane. They liked the game of learning big new words from mother.

"It's co-operation," said mother, pronouncing very carefully and slowly. "And it means to work together and to play together and to 'love one another,' as you're doing now. Now you can co-operate by making the house for Jane's family."

After that the raindrops and the kitten and the canary weren't any happier than Jack and Jane. Everyone was happy. And when Mrs. Jane started to the store to buy the groceries for her tea party, she said to her children, "Now Annabel and Mary Frances and Eleanor if you don't co-operate every minute while I'm gone, you can't come to our tea party."—The Uplift.

was going to bed. He knelt down to say his prayers as usual, but his heart was far off from the Lord Jesus, as it had been all day; for as yet Walter did not know the Lord. He could have passed a good examination in Scripture; he knew many precious texts, and he could have told you much about the Lord Jesus; but no real, loving trust had yet found place in his heart toward Christ the Saviour.

But if Walter did not really speak to the Lord in repeating a prayer, the Lord could speak to him, and the Lord has many ways of calling people to Himself.

When he called Samuel, three times the child heard his name repeated in the stillness of the night. Sometimes He calls by the tender words of a mother's instructions; sometimes by the earnest appeals of a Sunday School teacher. At times sickness brings His message to the heart; and how loudly He speaks to boys and girls when death comes into the home, and a beloved brother or sister is carried forth to the grave!

But the Lord did not call Walter in any of these ways. We will let our little friend tell the story in his own words.

When writing to a friend sometime afterwards, he said—

"The Lord used a candle to lead to my converson, when I was going to bed one night. As I stooped down to blow out the light, the thought came to me that God could just as easily stoop down and blow out my poor dim little light—and where should I be then?"

"Where should I be then?" Was not this a rousing thought for a boy of eleven years? Many times before had Walter blown out a candle with no thought about it, but this time God spoke, and in the darkness the boy lay and thought of the lesson which the blowing out of the candle conveyed to his mind.

How dark the room seemed! How awful must be that "outer darkness," far away from all the light and happiness of heaven! God had only to stoop down, and in a moment his own little life might be quenched, and his soul would be lost in everlasting night!

The more Walter thought, the more anxious he became. What could he do? He would now call upon the Lord; he would trust himself to the Saviour's hands. And he did. He says—

"I asked the Lord there and then to take me into His care, and to lead me through all trials and temptations, and indeed He has done so. Satan very often tries to lead me astray, but there is One much stronger than Satan who is keeping me safe."

Thus Walter answered the call of the Lord, and became a saved boy.

Perhaps the Lord Jesus may use this little story to some of our young readers. If so, be sure to answer His call. You may be sure the Lord will receive and save you if you come to Him. Do you think the Lord Jesus will refuse you if you will come to Him? Ah, no; He will at once receive you, for His Word is, "Him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out" (John 6:37).—I. F., in The S. S. Visitor.

BUILDERS

We are building every day
In a good or evil way.
And the structures, as it grows,
Will our inmost self disclose.
All our faults and failings shine;
It may grow a castle grand,
Or a wreck upon the sand.

Do you ask what building this
That can show both pain and bliss,
That can be both dark and fair?
Lo, its name is character!

Build it well, what'er you do;
Build it straight and strong and true;
Build it clean and high and broad;
Build it for the eyes of God.

—"A nation-wide chain of prohibition rallies on behalf of the Eighteenth Amendment, reaching across the entire country during Constitution Week, September 14-21, is being planned by friends of the amendment through all the various organizations united in its support," is the announcement made today by Charles R. Jones, chairman of the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

By J. T. BOWMAN
President C. E. Society, High Point College

September 21: HOW TO IMPROVE OUR ORGANIZATION AND TEAM-WORK

Scripture Text: Acts 6:1-7.

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Organize to Meet Needs. Tit.1:5-9.
Tuesday—Large Scale Organization. Num. 2:1-6.
Wednesday—Division of Labor. Ex. 18:13-27.
Thursday—Working Together. Luke 10:1-2.
Friday—Plan Finances. 1 Cor. 16:1-2.
Saturday—Each Doing His Part. Neh. 4:13-23.

Suggestions to the Leader

At least a week before the meeting ask several to give information and suggestions as to how our C. E. organization may be improved. Place these on the blackboard and let them be discussed by every one who so desires. Limit the time for each discussion for one minute.

Leader's Talk

"The worth while things of life do not just happen." We cannot expect our C. E. to improve without an adequate cause for that improvement.

Suitable songs: "Draw Me Nearer," "Will There be any Stars?" "Keep the Heart Singing," "I Would Like to be Like Jesus," "Sunshine in the Soul," "Revive Us Again," and "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord."

Whenever we cease to improve our C. E. society it will immediately get sick.

Organization can be improved at times, not by changing the organization, but by changing the members that work it. A person may have no aptitude for planning missionary meetings, yet might be excellent on the social committee.

Special effort should be made to put all the members into friendly relations with one another, for friendliness is the secret of team-work. If people do not like one another, they will not work together in teams.

1. Wherein [illegible] Discussion

2. What are the three greatest needs of our C. E.?

3. Can organization solve all problems?

4. What is meant by team-work? Is it a vital necessity?

5. What should be done with an organization which does not work?

6. What is the purpose of C. E.?

7. What do you like most about our C. E. meetings?

Poetry

"This world in which we live is a huge example of co-operation. The sun co-operates with the earth in the production of food, and man must co-operate with both sun and earth. If one link in the chain breaks, the effect is spoiled or weakened.—Anon.

Not alone we fall,
In each gain or triumph
Lose or triumph all."—Anon

THE LAW OF THE JUNGLE

Now, this is the law of the jungle,
As old and as true as the sky,
And the wolf that may keep it shall prosper,
But the wolf that shall break it must die.
As the creeper that girdles the tree-trunk,
The law runneth forward and back;
For the strength of the pack is the wolf,
And the strength of the wolf is the pack.

PARTING THOUGHTS

of Rev. and Mrs. E. Lester Ballard, dedicated to the Young People's C. E. society, First M. P. church, High Point, N. C.

To work with those who work with us
Makes pleasant the work, we concede;
To share with those who share with us
Makes sharing the easier, indeed;
To serve with those who serve with us
Makes service the surer to succeed;
To love with those who love with us
Makes life worth living, indeed.

Such you have been, Endeavorers dear,
As we have toiled with you;
With motives right and thoughts sincere,
You've proven yourselves e'er true.
To work and share to serve and love
Has been your honest aim;
That you might please our Christ above
And honor His dear name.

When time arrives for us to part
It brings us grief untold;
But we are always joined in heart
By cords of love that held.
Then we work and pray and love and serve
Whate'er may be the cost;
Let nothing false your purpose swerve
From serving to save the lost.
—E. L. B.

—Rev. Edwin Suits is preaching in Calvary's meeting this week. He is deliberate in manner, carefully choosing and weighing his words, and impresses his hearers with the truth he is presenting. We expect to be inspired by his sermons and are hoping that some will be led to face about and become Christians.

—St. Domingo had a terrible destuctive storm a few days ago. The number of killed or wounded mounted into the thousands. Prompt relief measures were instituted, but there must be much suffering.

DEDICATE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

The dedication services of the Enfield Methodist Protestant church will take place next Sunday morning with President Taylor in charge of the services. Following the dedication service there will be an afternoon and a night service in harmony with the spirit of the occasion. The afternoon service will be opened by Dr. T. M. Johnson in charge of the worship hour. Brother C. J. Edwards will give a brief history of the erection of the present church edifice. Following Rev. Euclid McWorter, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church South, of Enfield will speak in behalf of the churches of Enfield. And the promised day of good things will be concluded with a sermon by Rev. Chas. A. Edwards, a former pastor, and the prime mover in the erection of the present building. Brother Edwards will bring his message Sunday night at eight o'clock.

The hour of the service will be 11 a. m., 3 p. m., and 8 p. m.

To one and all who may be in reach of Enfield we extend a most hearty welcome to attend these services. Come and spend the day with us and we will do thee good.

RALPH C. RIVES,
For the Board of Trustees.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Glen Raven.—Last November Rev. O. C. Loy, and wife came to us full of life, alert, interested and willing to carry on the great work in the church and community. Their interest seemed to be contagious and in a very short time young people had caught it.

In less than a month they had organized and put to work an unusually interesting Christian Endeavor society with about twenty active members, who signed the Active Pledge Card and have striven to live up to this pledge.

We are very proud to say that our Christian Endeavor society has grown and continued its work; even though we have had some rough hills to climb. There was a little decline in attendance during the summer months, but vacation days are about over now and we expect to get busy at once and show Glen Raven what the young people of this place can do.

At the monthly business meeting and social Tuesday night the society discussed ways by which they could increase the membership of the society to one hundred members before the society had been organized one year. The first suggestion which is the most important thing in any undertaking, was to have a continued prayer meeting. This was agreed on by a unanimous vote. And on Monday night, September 8th, we expect to start a week's prayer meeting at the church; having leaders from various churches in and out of town. We do not know just at the present who all the leaders will be, or who will assist in giving special music but we feel sure that those who attend this week of prayer meetings will feel greatly benefited.

The second plan voted on by the society was to have an honor roll or chart system and all those bringing in new members or doing special work for the improvement of the society are to get a star. At the end of the contest the member having the most stars on the chart is to receive a C. E. pin.

We are anticipating this campaign to be one of the best ever held in Glen Raven among the young people and expecting a 100 per cent. co-operation from each member and a full support from the entire church. We are asking the prayers of all the praying people that our campaign may be a success.

Everybody is cordially invited to attend our entire prayer meeting, September 9-12, inclusive.

PRESIDENT C. E.

Harmony, Yarborough Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, was with us for the usual services the fourth Sunday morning and evening in August. He delivered two forceful and impressive sermons.

We were glad to note an increase in Sunday school attendance the past Sunday morning.

A community picnic was held on our church ground the past Wednesday afternoon. A large crowd was present and everyone reported of having a nice time and "plenty" to eat.

Four new members were received into our church last Sunday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Bob Reeves and son James, came by letter and Miss Sarah Simpson was sprinkled. We have four other young people to be immersed the second Sunday afternoon in September. We welcome these eight new members into our church and hope that they will enter into their new work willingly.

The friends of Mrs. W. M. Buzhardt, one of the oldest members of our church, will learn with regret that she is seriously ill at her home near here.

Our C. E. society held its regular meeting Sunday evening. We had a good attendance, the best we have had this summer. An interesting program was given on the topic.

Mrs. C. T. and Mrs. J. B. Hughes have returned home after spending several weeks in New Jersey and other places of interest.

Hobbs Chapel, Greensville Circuit. — Our special meeting commenced the fourth Sunday in August and closed the following Friday evening.

Brother O'Briant preached for us Sunday morning and worshiped with us two days during the week.

Brother Auman came Sunday afternoon and was the pulpit help throughout the meeting. He said Sunday evening, "It was the largest congregation he had seen anywhere at a revival meeting in ten years." We had people to worship with us from the following places. Elpaso, Texas; Crewe, Blackstone, Kenbridge, Richmond, Hopewell, Portsmouth, Franklin, Emporia and Lawrenceville, Va., also Roanoke Rapids, Rosemary and other places of North Carolina.

Brother Cowan took charge of the senior and junior singing. With these three consecrated ministers to lead and help us God blessed us with the best meeting we have had in years. Yes, He poured out His Holy Spirit upon us. Fathers, mothers, boys and girls took their stand for Christ, nine united with the church. Brother Auman won the hearts of Christians and sinners. He has a manner that appeals to the unsaved especially. If our meeting could have lasted another week, we feel that many would have surrendered their lives to Christ. Brother Auman promised to come back next year if he wasn"t in Japan. We trust that he will not get too busy [illegible] that promise. But if he should go to Japan we wish him Godspeed and success wherever he goes in the great work he has undertaken.

Just before the meeting the men here covered our church; built a choir loft, inclosed our pulpit and altar with a balustrade, also made a cement floor and built a new curb for the well.

Our ladies had two coats of paint put on the interior of our church. These things added to our pleasure and comfort.

Misses Rosa Jane Clark of Matthew's Chapel neighborhood, and Miss Dora Pair visited relatives and friends the second week at Richmond, Va.

Mesdames I. L. Daniel, Curtis Snead and family spent the third week with Mr. W. W. Pair. Mrs. Daniel remained a week longer with her daughter and attended our meeting.

Mesdames A. I. Jones and J. W. Statesbury of Richmond, Va., spent the fourth week with relatives and attended our meeting.

Miss Ida Chambliss of Triplet, spent several days with Miss Dora Pair and attended the meeting; also Mrs. Norman Porch of Franklin, spent the week with her sister, Mrs. W. A. Phillips.

We were glad to have these people visit us during the meeting as they were great help in singing.

Pray for us that we may continue to grow in the Christian graces and do more of Kingdom service.

Asheboro.—In the absence of the pastor, Dr. R. M. Andrews preached for our people on the fifth Sunday in August. Several who heard him said he preached the best ever. For the past three Sundays our Sunday school attendance has been 250, 250, 251. As the hot weather ends we are hoping to get back near the three hundred mark. The highest attendance we have had this year was 305 and the highest monthly average was 284.

We had a goodly number present yesterday for our quarterly communion service. Rev. N. M. Harrison of Charlotte was present and assisted in the service. A thunder storm and a fine rain came just at the beginning of the evening service. At the morning hour yesterday Mrs. Allen Redding united with our church, coming to us from the Mt. Olive M. E. church, South, in the lower part of the county.

Next Sunday morning we will observe Educational day and we are making an effort to have just as many as possible of our boys and girls of school age to be present.

◆

Roberta Station.—We are now in a contest with Concord Methodist Protestant church. Attendance at our church for Sunday was 364. Collection amounted to something over $19.00.

Rev. Short delivered a fine message Sunday morning after which communion services were held.

Prayer meeting is held every Sunday eve- 7:30 p. m.

Our superintendent, Mr. Z. D. Cochran, has been elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

The third quarterly conference will be held at the church on Friday night of this week. Also, all members of the Young Men's class are [illegible] MILLER, Reporter.

Beulah, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our revival meeting which began the fourth Sunday in August lasted until Friday night, September 5. Rev. Earl Cook of the Pageland work was our pulpit help. Mr. Cook certainly did some good preaching, each sermon was interesting. Mr. Cook hasn't been preaching very long but he is a fine preacher. Our meeting was a very good success. There were a good many that accepted Jesus. And we also had ten new members to join our church. We had large attendances all through our meeting expecially the night services. We were quite fortunate to have Mr. Sullivan and his little children of Monroe with us two nights. The little children certainly can sing to be so small. We also had the Weddington quartet one night to sing, we all enjoyed all this fine singing and wish to have them to come back again any time they will and sing for us. Three ladies of the Stallings church came over one night and helped to organize a ladies aid society. We will have our first meeting

Saturday afternoon, September 13, at the church. A lot of us young girls are joining and we want to help out all we can in having a good society and hope we will have much success in this work. We are still having good attendance in our Sunday school. And we also are still having prayer meeting each Sunday night. Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Joyner, I suppose will fill his regular appointment Sunday afternoon, September 14, we urge all to attend. Mr. W. E. Elmore is still on the sick list and seems not to be getting any better. We all miss Mr. Elmore very much in church and we all pray that his health may be restored to him.

Elbaville, State Street, Lexington.—Attendance at Sunday school Sunay was fine. We had 42 present. Only a few weeks ago we attended the township picnic and brought back with us again the banner. This is our second year to keep it in our church. Much interest is being shown.

Last third Sunday we had the privilege of having to meet with us Third Quarterly conference. At this time the elections of delegate took place, Fourth Quarterly conference will meet with Yadkin college.

Saturday afternoon quite a number were entertained at the Ladies' aid revealing party after which a nice supper was spread on the ground.

We are glad to see our folks coming home from vacation, while there are others going.

C. E. society is progressing nicely. More interest is being shown. We desire the prayers of readers and former pastors for a greater success.

Our hearts are saddened over the going of one of our older members, Mrs. Tom Sidden of Winston-Salem. His death was quick and sudden. Saturday night while going to the grocery store he and his wife were knocked down by a car. Rushed to a hospital, he died Sunday. His funeral was attended by a large crowd of friends and loved ones. For the bereaved God bestow his richest blessings.

Some time ago the Junior Philathea class [illegible] There was much enjoy- joyed it very much.

Best wishes to the Herald.

Mocksville Charge.—We began our revival services at Union Chapel the first Sunday in August and closed the following Friday night. Rev. R. C. Stubbins came on Monday and did al the preaching and we feel that much good was accompished; there were twelve conversions.

On the second Sunday in August we began our meeting at Union Grove and closed the following Friday night. Bro. G. H. Hendry, the pulpit help, came to us Sunday afternoon and did all the preaching in an able and forcible manner till the close of the meeting. There were twenty conversions.

The third Sunday in August our meeting at Bethel began and continued more than a week. Rev. Fred R. Love, the pulpit help, came Sunday evening and did the preaching to the close. Brother Love did some good plain Gospel preaching which was enjoyed by all. The church was greatly revived, nine were converted and nine gave their names to join the church.

On the fourth Sunday in August, we began our meeting at Dulins with Rev. M. C. Henderson as pulpit help. Brother Henderson's sermons were earnestly and faithfully delivered and well received. The church was greatly revived, and there were thirty professions, thirteen gave their names to join the church. These four ministers will long be remembered by pastor and people for their splendid service. May the Lord bless them and give them many souls for their hire.

G. B. FERREE.

Concord, Saxapahaw Circuit.—Since our last report the special meeting has been held. Brother Bethea was our pulpit help. We enjoyed his splendid preaching and his presence with us. One new member was added to the church.

Since special meetings are all over we hope the attendance at S. S. will be better.

The Baraca class purchased 200 quart cans which the Philathea class have filled with fruit and vegetables for the Children's Home.

Brother Whitehead filled his regular appointment Sunday and as usual preached a good sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was observed.

Brother Grey Hargrove of our church was elected delegate to the Annual Conference. The year has seemed short and it's hard to realize that conference is no near at hand. But there remains much yet to be done.

On next Saturday night, September 13, the church is goig to give a play at Eli Whitney auditorium, "The Winning of Latane." Admission 15 and 25 cents. The Philathea class will sell refreshments.

The proceeds will be used for improvements in the S. S. rooms.

Everybody come and help us and enjoy the evening with us.

MRS. J. C. GUTHRIE, Reporter.

Mount Carmel Church.—Another revival meeting has been held at Mount Carmel. The services began the first Sunday in August and lasted about a week. Rev. O. C. Loy did the preaching during all the services except Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. C. G. Isely, held that service. The services were uplifting will be well remembered. influence that was sent out for good made professions and A number of people were united with the church. Th end of the meeting marks the beginning of a new year of renewed effort, with prospects brightening.

Saturday evening and night of September 5, the Sunday school gave a lawn party at one of the member's home for the benefit of the new church. The proceeds were $20.00.

Much preparation is being made for the new church. Lumber is now ready for building. During the past week the little church that stands on the yard of Mount Carmel was moved more to the west in order to give more space to the new church and to give a prettier view for the front of the church.

The Sunday school joins me in all good greetings to the church paper.

◆

Pine Bluff, Midland Circuit.—The revival services began Sunday, August 31st, and closed the following Friday, Septemebr 5th. Rev. C. E. Ridge did the preaching. The church was revived and many backsliders reclaimed but there were many more who hardened their hearts against the Gospel. This being Brother Ridge's third year as helper in the revival meetings. We have learned to like him more and more. The love and good wishes of the entire congregation follow him out into his field of Christian work.

Even though we seldom have a report in the Methodist Protestant Herald from Pine Bluff, we are a small band working, with the help of our able pastor, Rev. J. W. Hulin, for the upbuilding of God's cause.

We have a live Sunday school and very much interest is shown in this work by the teachers and pupils.

The Christian Endeavor society and prayer meeting have been combined for the past few months.

Fairfield Church, Guilford Circuit.—The quarterly meeting convened at the local church August 30. This occasion should be of great importance and of much interest to the church members. Such a meeting should edify them in the faith and admonition of our Lord through the fellowship of their co-workers who are come together from the various churches of the circuit. It should be inspiring and encouraging to hear from other churches. churches.

Superintendent Orville Bailes, of the Jamestown township Sunday school convention, visited our Sunday school the Sunday before last for the purpose of making arrangements for the Township Sunday school institute to convene at Fairfield. The Institute will meet on the fourth Sunday in September. Plans are being made for an all day service; speakers are expected to be present before noon and afternoon. Every one is cordially invited to come and attend these meetings. The township is expected to be 100 per cent represented. We are assured that much and lasting good will be done through the association and exchanging of ideas one with another.

The time of the series of meetings to begin at our church the third Sunday in this month is drawing near. Rev. Madison of Thomasville is expected to assist Rev. Peeler. Other church members should be mindful of us during these meetings.

Miss Rosa Mae Ingram took her class of little folk to Hayworth mineral springs last Saturday afternoon on a picnic.

The Roseville quartet, composed of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Llewallen, Marvin Cashatt and J. Van Cashatt, spent last Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Allred and attended the Cedar Grove township singing convention held Sunday at New Union M. P. church which is located west of Asheboro on N. C. 62.

First Church, Winston.—At both Sunday school and church worship this past Sabbath morning there were quite a few new faces. We were very glad to welcome all of these visitors and prospective members.

It is with deepest regret that we announce the acceptance of the resignation of our pastor, Rev. H. F. Surratt, which will be in effect about September 18th. The auxiliary is giving a "Farewell Social" for Rev. and Mrs. Surratt in the Sunday school room of the church, Monday evening, September 15th. All members of the Sunday school, church, and families of members and friends are invited to attend. It has meant happiness to our entire congregation to have Mr. and Mrs. Surratt with us for nearly two years. The splendid personality of both of them has won for them love and friendship of our church and all others who were fortunate enough to be associated with them. We wish the best of happiness and success for them, and hope that sometime in the vast future we may be able to have them with us again, and they will always be welcome in our midst.

Mrs. J. A. Gwyn is steadily improving and has returned home from the City hospital, where she had undergone an operation a few weeks ago.

Sunday school officers were elected Sunday morning and it was voted that they be installed next Sunday by our pastor before his leave. After the installation they will not assume their responsibilities until October—1st Sunday. The nominating committee is to be thanked for working out this list of persons and it is believed that the persons elected to the various offices will serve in the best possible way and help at all times to make our Sunday school bigger and better.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Kirk, about 3 month old, was christened Sunday morning by our pastor.

High Point college will be opening soon, we hope the work this year will be bigger and finer than ever. All true Methodist Protestants should, and we believe do, feel that way about Our College.

Haw River Charge.—We began our revivals this year at the Brown Summit church with Rev. C. E. Ridge of Lawndale as the preacher. Brother Ridge gave us a very pleasant surprise in that he is a much better man for work like this than we had expected. He did some of the finest preaching any young man has ever done in any of my meetings. The people learned to love him, and his messages were real spiritual uplifts to all of us, and he will long be remembered by the people at this church.

Rev. N. G. Bethea, our "Father in the ministry," was with us at Mizpah. He always does good work, and of course he did not fail to come up to his standard. His messages were all grouped around the Christ, and seemed to link one to the other in a way that I have never seen Brother Bethea do before. Much good was accomplished and the spiritual life of the church quickened. Brother Bethea is driving home the necessity of the family altar; in this part of the work, he sold almost a dozen copies of "God's Minute."

Old historic, and much loved Fair Grove, the home church of Capt. A. M. Rankin of High Point, and also of Mrs. S. W. Taylor, has not had a meeting for several years, but this year decided to have a meeting alone, rather than unite with another church. Rev. J. R. Hutton came to us on the opening day, and his messages throughout the week were inspiring and uplifting. Much good was accomplished in reviving the church. There is an atmosphere of unity and co-operation there that makes one feel that this was perhaps one of the most outstanding meetings of the circuit. President Taylor, a much loved son-in-law of the church. was present on the opening Sunday afternoon.

We had a spike team at Friendship. Dr. J. D. Williams and Prof. "Tom" Pender came and helped us here. Dr. Williams preached the most heart-searching, and soul-reaching sermons I have ever heard. I had heard him at conderences, and other places, but frankly, his strong forte is in revival work. Then, Prof. Pender's music was fine. The people on this charge like to sing, and so does Pender, and when those large congregations sang under his direction it would make any man preach if there was any preaching ability about him. Haw River charge is not noted for her congregational singing, not a choir on the circuit, and with a leader like Pender the folks sang with all their hearts. If any brother pastor wants a good leader of music, that leads for the very loev of the thing, and not for the purpose of making himself the biggest thing in the service, I advise that he secure Prof. T. O. Pender, of Mebane, N. C.

Rev. W. M. Loy, did the preaching at Midway. The meeting opening there on the fourth Sunday in July. Dr. A. G. Dixon, preached the opening sermon, and at the same time presented a beautiful Bible and hymnal too for the pulpit, in memory of his father and mother. These much needed books came as a gift from the sons and daughters of this family. Dr. Dixon's father was the father of this church, and it is a sacred spot to all the surviving children. Rev. Roy I. Farmer came over from High Point and preached in the afternoon, and then Brother Loy came for the Monday night services. Like all the other churches, we feel that Midway has enjoyed a good revival in the church this year.

The ingathering from the unsaved was not large on the circuit, but the result we note most was that new spirit of devotion, and reconsecration on the part of the church as a whole. I don't think I have ever seen anything just like it. The spiritual condition of this charge—according to some of the members—is better than it has been for several years, and the pastor and people are thanking God for the wonderful blessing received.

Schools and colleges are starting, and many of our young pople will be missed. Some have gone away to teach, others doing post-graduate work, others have [illegible] from their enter college, and will be [illegible] are counting on them, and we have the confidence in them that they will not fail those of us who remain at home with the work.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Charge.—Our revival meeting began the third Sunday in August with Rev. O. E. Peeler as pulpit help. Mr. Peeler came to us Monday at noon and did all the preaching until the meeting closed the following Friday night. The sermons preached by Mr. Peeler were helpful and inspiring.

We feel that much good was done, though not what we had hoped for. The people learned to like Mr. Peeler and enjoyed his stay among us. We wish for him to come again sometime.

We were glad to have with us in this meeting Dr. J. D. Williams and family; also Rev. H. L. Isley and family. Our pastor, Rev T. J. Whitehead, filled his appointment first Sunday evening in September.

I think all who listened to Mr. Whitehead's message should be inspired to live on a higher plane. After the sermon our auxiliary held a meeting. The meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. J. L. Maynard.

Our pastor was with us and gave a very helpful talk on missions.

Macedonina, Fallston Charge.—Our revival meeting began the 24th of August, with Rev. J. D. Morris as pulpit help. We all feel benefited by the splendid preaching which he did. The attendance was also good, but the results were not what we would like to have seen. Although we thank God for the souls that were saved. We had three professions and two joined the church. On Thursday night we had with us the Lincolnton quartet which did some splendid singing, every one enjoyed it.

Our Sunday school is very good; the collection and attendance are very good for this season of the year.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Saxapahaw Charge.—Our work is getting along fairly well. We have not done in a financial way what we would have liked to, but we are hoping to make more progress in this closing period of the conference year.

The delegate to Annual Conference is Mr. H. G. Hargrove. He is a member of Concord church.

We have had very good revival meetings on the charge this year. Rev. J. T. Rowland, pastor of the M. E. church, did the preaching at Saxapahaw Union church. Brother Rowland is a splendid worker. He made a religious survey of the village in connection with the revival. This survey gives the pastors some idea as to the actual needs of the people. Rev. N. G. Bethea was pulpit help at Concord. His sermons were enjoyed by all. The people were so well pleased with Brother Bethea's visit that they delayed his departure as long as possible by filling the front seat with good things to eat. It took him some time to arrange these things [illegible] Williams did the preaching and Mr. T. O. Pender directed the singing at Salem. We held morning and afternoon services with dinner on the grounds. The attendance was the best in years—so it was said by a number of people, Brother Williams was well known around Salem. The people were all happy to have him preach to them again. He did good preaching and Brother Pender did splendid work in directing the music. Rev. E. O. Peeler was the help at Orange Chapel. He preached splendid sermons. The people enjoyed very much his stay with them.

During these meetings about one hundred were converted or reclaimed. Sixteen additions have been made to the churches with prospect for some more to join before the year closes.

In the past two months our hearts have been made sad by these deaths:

Mrs. J. A. Winningham passed from this life on July 15. She was a faithful member of Saxapahaw church. The loss that relatives and friends will feel will be her gain. The writer was assisted in the funeral by Brother G. W. Holmes and Brother L. W. Gerringer.

Mr. A. S. Pendergraph was called from this life on July 23. He had been a member of Salem church for a number of years. For some time Brother Pendergraph had been in ill health. The pastor conducted the funeral at Salem.

On August 3rd, Mr. D. M. McVey was called to his reward. Brother McVey was an industrious farmer. He was also interested in civic and spiritual betterment. The relations and neighbors will miss Brother McVey, but the Lord has another work for him to do. The pastor was assisted in the funeral by Brother G. W. Holmes.

Fountain Place, Burlington.—We were glad to have our pastor with us again last Sunday night after a month's vacation. Although there was no preaching service during August the Sunday school and the Intermediate Christian Endeavor continued to meet as usual. Christian Endeavor has enjoyed two social events, a social or tackey party early in August and a picnic last Saturday at Bowman's pond near Julian. The whole party went on a truck and of course this added much to the enjoyment of the trip. The pond is a lovely place and although there was no bathing done many of the girls nejoyed wading.

The Sunday school held its annual picnic at Dixon's park August 9. A large number attended and every one seemed to enjoy the occasion.

The Ladies' auxiliary held the August meeting at the home of Mrs. T. A. Amick. A special effort is being made to bring the inactive members to the next meeting and a program committee is to plan a program. At the close of the meeting the hostess treated the society to a watermelon feast.

After a month of vacation, picnic, and socials it is hoped that our church will go to work with renewed vigor and finish the work that needs to be done before conference.

Kistler's, Cleveland Charge. — Our revival meeting began the first Sunday in August, with Rev. J. W. Hulin as pulipt help. He did some good preaching, which was helpful to all who heard him.

Our meeting was not what we had hoped for, but we feel sure much good was accomplished. We hope Brother Hulin will come again.

Our good pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, filled his regular appointment the first Sunday in September. He brought to us a very helpful message which was greatly enjoyed by all. We were very glad to have visitors with us Sunday from Oak Grove church. Visitors are always welcome. So, come again.

Our Sunday school is about as usual, very good attendance. REPORTER.

North Davidson Charge.—We are still living and going forward. Every branch in the Kingdom service is active.

We held our special meeting at Canaan on the fourth Sunday in July. Pastor preached at 11 o'clock. Rev. Glen Madison, pastor First M. P. church, Thomasville, came to me in the afternoon and did the preaching from then on. Congregations increased on to close Thursday night. A good revival—one convert—no additions. The people seemed to be delighted with the splendid messages by Brother Madison. Brother and Sister Madison endeared themselves greatly with this people—and we shall always be glad to see them back.

On second Sunday in August was the regular time for Bethesda, a large congregation greeted us, the pastor preached both morning and afternoon. Rev M. P. Chambliss came us late Sunday evening, and did all the preaching from then on to the close Thursday night. Results: A good revival, several reclamations, 17 professed faith in Christ, 15 joined the church. All small children. This church believes in bringing the children into the Kingdom early and keeping them in the good old way. One child baptized by pastor.

Brother Chambliss preached good sermons and endeared himself to this people and community. We bless the Lord for these good revivals.

We have two other meetings to hold. Bro. M. P. Chambliss will help me again at Mt. Pleasant commencing the fourth Sunday in September. Brother Wm. Loy of Mebane, N. C., helps me at Spring Hill beginning the first Sunday in October Pray for us that our meetings may be greatly blessed of God and that these churches may be strengthened. The church needs an old-time Holy Ghost revival. At this time we need a great reformer to rise up to bring the people back to God; revive the reading of His Holy Word; the keeping of His Holy Sabbaths, that His people may rejoice in Him again.

May God bless our conference.

Baltimore, West Forsyth Circuit.—Death has taken one of our most beloved church members and fellow workers, Mr. T. J. Phillips. He had been choir learder for many years and had done much to promote interest in the choir. He was also one of the stewards and served in other capacities as well. He was a splendid citizen and church worker and was always faithful in the discharge of his duties. The love and esteem in which he was held was shown by the large congregation that attended his funeral. It was estimated that approximately one thousand people were present at the funeral service. It is needless to say that we will miss him in the church, but the choir and the Sunday school realizes more fully the great loss we have sustained by his death.

The pastor brought to us another one of his splendid sermons last Sunday at the usual hour. The text being, "upon the rock will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." He presented his message in his usual splendid style, and judging by the attention he received the audience was much impressd.

The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed at the 11 o'clock service last Sunday. It was with sincere appreciation that we received as a gift a lovely communion service set from the daughters of Mr. S. L. Doub, Misses Inez, Martha Pearl, and Louella Doub. The gift was given in memory of their father, S. L. Doub, who during his liftetime was a faithful member and worker in the church. The pastor very fittingly expressed his appreciation of the gift and expressed the thanks of the church for the lovely gift.

We are glad to note that the Sunday school and young people's society are progressing very nicely. The young people's society is beginning a Bible quiz each Sunday night aside from the regular program. The young people seem very much interested and we feel sure that they will gain much knowledge of the Bible form the quiz.

We were glad to have with us Sunday morning Mr. Henry Speas of Stony Knoll church. At the close of the preaching service Mr. Speas spoke to us very briefly about conference matters. He put before the church the matter of raising the pastor's salary for the coming year. The decision of the matter was deferred until a later date.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our revival meeting began on the fourth Sunday in August and closed the following Friday night. Rev. N. G. Bethea was the pulpit help. He did some splendid preaching. He was tired and worn out when he came, having been assisting in revivals for several weeks. He was also suffering with neuralgia, but when he got into the pulpit and began preaching you couldn't tell that he was tired and suffering with neuralgia, for he sure did some good preaching. Brother Bethea was no stranger to us as he was our pastor for seven years. We were glad to have him back with us. Brother Bethea's main topic during the week was "Jesus Christ." Some of the themes he used were, "The Prayerful Christ," the "Approachful Christ," the Aggressive Christ," the "Indispensable Christ," the "Optimistic Christ," and the "Emotional Christ," All of these were helpful messages.

There were seven additions to the church, five on professoin of faith, and two by letter. We were very glad to have Mrs. Bethea and sons, Lewis and Vance, worship with us at most all of the services. The attendance at all of the services was good.

Mr. Bethea assisted pastor Fogleman in a revival at Union last week. He did some good precahing there. He is assisting Rev. W. D. Reed this week. We shall remember him in our prayers as he goes to assist in this meeting. We hope and pray that they may have a great revival and that many souls may be won into God's Kingdom.

The Woman's auxiliary has recently had the roof of the church painted which adds very much to the appearance of the church.

Pastor Fogleman continues to bring us helpful messages. We are liking him and Mrs. Fogleman better every day. We hope the Annual Conference will send them back to us.

Mrs. W. H. Neville is our delegate elected to represent us at the Annual Conference. I am sure Mrs. Neville will make a splendid delegate.

Spring Hill, North Davidson.—The attendance and interest at S. S. is good at this time. Sunday at 3 o'clock Brother Powell brought to us a very interesting message.

Our superintendent, C. W. Haynes, left three weeks ago by motor for a visit to Missouri. He will visit his uncles and aunts Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy and Mr. and Mrs. Teague, also a number of friends. While away he will attend S. S. at the church he first attended S. S. when he was small.

Our special meeting will begin the first Sunday in October. Brother Powell's help will be Rev. W. M. Loy. We are very glad indeed to have him with us because a few years ago he served as our pastor, and he has many friends at Spring Hill. We trust that this meeting may be a success, and therefore desire the prayers of the Christian people.

On Saturday evening, September 6, Miss Eula Swaim and Mr. Clyde Hedgecock were married in the parsonage at Mebane by the bride's former pastor, Rev. W. M. Loy. They were accompanied to Mebane by Misses Sadie and Bessie Swaim, Auvella Hedgecock, Alice Haynes, and Mr. Crayton Kennedy. Mrs. Hedgecock is one of our most active workers, especially in S. S. and C. E. Therefore we extend to them our best wishes for a long and happy life together.

Mr. Mitchell Wade, who underwent an operation two weeks ago, has been in a serious state but is now improving. Mrs. W. A. Craven is also on the sick list. She has been kept in all summer, but seems to be slightly improving. REPORTER.

First Church, High Point.—The congregation was delighted on Sunday morning to see our minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, back in the pulpit after a month's vacation, and to hear a splendid and earnest sermon, which was an appeal for more loyalty and greater consecration to the tasks of the church. He chose as his subject, "The Heroic Church in Action," using the text from Ephesians 5:25; "Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it." He said in part; "Lord John Russell said in some of his articles from his pen that we talk too much about the wisdom of our ancestors, but he wished that we could adopt their courage in a large measure. The challenge to men and women today is this: will you be Mr. Worldly-wise man, or will you stand loyal to the truth? The same question that confronts us today, was a problem of the early church: That is to tell people of their sins and the possibility of their salvation.

The early Christian church began its work heroically. There is yet opposition to Jesus and His truth. If you think that as Christians you will have and easy time for the next decade you will be greatly mistaken. Then the early church continued its heroic work faithfully.

Morrison, the missionary, upon being asked in a sneering manner, if he thought he could make an impression upon China, replied, "Not I, but God can." The cause of Christ may do without us, but we cannot do without it. What we need is a fresh baptism of heavenly fire. Courage is not ignorance of danger, but loyalty to a cause when knowing the facts. Let us face the task while knowing the charge. At this service we were delighted to hear Prof. E. B. Stimson play the organ after an absence of several weeks, while he was director of music at Montreat for the summer. A quartette composed of Mrs. J. H. Allred, Miss Elizabeth Welch, C. L. Gray Jr., Arthur Fidler, sang "Tho Your Sins Be As Scarlet," in a charming manner and the choir rendered the beautiful anthem, "The Voice In the Wilderness" by Scott. At the evening service the minister delivered a corollary sermon on "Action in Emergencies."

At 11 o'clock Sunday morning the Junior church services were led by Mrs. S. S. Coe, who kindly and graciously volunteered to preside over the service. Rev. Mr. Farmer is asking for other volunteers, who are willing to act as leaders for this most important department and permanent arrangements can be made.

High Point college will open its seventh annual session next Monday, September 15th, under the guidance of the new president, Dr. G. I. Humphreys. Miss Mildred Luce, of Rockford, Iowa will be the new teacher of violin, as successor to Miss Dorothy St. Clair, who resigned last spring. Prof. Stimson, head of the music department, is already back from Montreat, where he was director of music for the Presbyterian summer assembly, and Miss Margaret Sloan, intsructor in piano and voice will return from Statesville this week. Thirty-two local boys and girls, who were graduated from High Point High school last June, will matriculate as members of the freshman class at the college, which proves that High Point people appreciate the work of the college, and are supporting it by their patronage instead of sending their boys and girls to out-of-town institutions. One hundred and twenty applications for enrollment in the freshman class have already been received, and include besides the local students, a number of entrants from Asheboro, Thomasville, Jamestown, and near-by rural sections.

The Board of Education of the N. C. conference has acquired the residence of Dr. R. M. Andrews at 821 West College Drive, which is a handsome brick home erected four years ago. Dr. G. I. Humphreys and his interesting family have arrived from Salibury, Md., and are already occupying it. Dr. and Mrs. Humphreys have six children, four of whom are with them, a son and a married daughter, Mrs. Ralph Gross, living in Maryland. Miss Elizabeth Humphreys will be a freshman in the college. High Point people generally extend a most cordial welcome to this excellent family who have come to make their home in our community.

Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Andrews, three daughters, and son, Robert Jr., have moved to the J. W. Kearns residence, corner Morris St. and Bain Ave., for the present. Miss Rosalie Andrews, who was a member of 1930 class of H. P. college, has commenced her work as teacher in the Oak Hill school, which is a unit of the city school system. Miss Alma Andrews will be a freshman in the college. We hope that this splendid family whom we have learned to esteem highly and to love, may become permanent residents in our city.

Wyatt A. Pickens, who has been the guest of his mother, Mrs. R. T. Pickens, for three weeks, left last Friday morning by motor for Baton Rouge, Louisiana, where he will resume his work as assistant professor of Romance Languages in the state university.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gray went to Pleasant Hill church, Randolph county, on last Monday afternoon to attend funeral services for Mrs. William F. Fuller of Fuller's Mill, who died Sunday morning in the City Memorial hospital, Thomasville, following an operation Thursday. She was 32 years of age, and leaves four small children, who are thus sadly bereft of a mother's love and care.

Miss Annie Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Robbins, left last week for Cincinnati, Ohio, where she will study music in the conesrvatory, specializing in voice.

Miss Blanche Burgess has returned from an extended visit to her sister, Mrs. Harold Harrox, in New York state, and has resumed her work at teacher in the Emma Blair schools.

A wedding of great interest to many friends here and other points in the state was solemnized last week at the home of the bride's parents on Woodrow Ave., when Miss Viola Suits became the bride of Mr. Dale Montgomery. Only a few relatives and close friends of the two falmilies witnessed the ceremony, which was impressively performed by Dr. Samuel W. Taylor, president, N. C. conference, and Rev. Edward Suits jointly. Prior to the ceremony, Mrs. John Herbin of Reidsville played the wedding music, and the bride's sister, Miss Ezora Suits, lighted the candles at the improvised altar of ivy and cut flowers. The bride is the popular and attractive daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Edwin Suits, and holds a position as bookkeeper in Wagger's Jewelry Co. The groom is an only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Mongomery, of Mechanicsville, and is a prominent young business man. The young couple have countless friends who extend felicitations and best wishes for a happy voyage on the sea of wedded life. They are now enjoying a honeymoon trip to Canada and northern cities, and upon their return will take up their residence in High Point.

The Woman's auxiliary held its monthly meeting Monday afternoon at the church with a good attendance and the president Mrs. S. S. Coe, in the chair. It was voted to give a part of the furniture, which has been used by Rev. and Mrs. Ballard, to the Children's Home. Mrs. Ben T. Moore has resigned as chairman of Circle no. 7, and Mrs. Lewis E. Teague will serve in her stead.

The church people of High Point are much pleased to know that President S. W. Taylor and his excellent family are now domiciled at 909 W. College Drive, the N. C. conference having purchased this home from Mr. H. A. Garrett for the president. A most cordial welcome is extended to them with the assurance that we anticipate much pleasure from fellowship and association with them. The two older children, John and Frances, will be members of the freshman class in the college, while S. W. Jr., is a third grader at Ray Street school.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Bescher

Miss Sarah Elizabeth Bescher was born January 11, 1850, and died September 2, 1930. She had lived with her sister, Mrs. C. H. Surratt, for the last forty years. Prior to this she lived with her brother, John Bescher, for fifteen years. In girlhood she joined Mt. Fbal Methodist Protestant church and remained there until her membership was moved to the Denton Methodist Protestant church, where she remained a faithful member until death.

Aunt Sarah, as she was konwn, took deep interest in reaoding her Bible and the Methodist Protestant Herald. I have been told that she wore hre Bible out reading it. I wish we had more Methodist Protestants who read their Bible and church paper as she did. For the last few years of her life, she said she was ready, and it was her desire to go to the eternal home. Her parting request was to meet her in heaven.

She leaves to mourn their loss, one brother, Franklin Bescher, two sisters, Mrs. C. H. Surratt and Mrs. Roby Thompson, a large number of nieces and nephews and a host of friends. The funeral service was conducted by the pastor and her nephew, Rev. Freo Surratt, at Denton Methodist Protestant church, and the remains placed in Denton cemetery. It was her request that her nephew take some part in the service.

Phillips

Thomas Jackson Phillips was born March 8, 1873, and departed this life August 27, 1930. He was united in marriage to Sarah R. Hutchins, February 12, 1899. To this happy union were born 14 children, three of whom preceded their father in death. Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Sarah R. Phillips, and eleven children, as follows: A. V. Phillips, of Sumter, S. C.; T. E. Phillips, of Winston-Salem; C. W. Phillips, of Chester, N. J.; Kermit Phillips, Marshall Phillips and Troy Phillips, of East Bend, Route 3; Mrs. J. W. Garner and Mrs. Wheeler Simmons, of Hamptonville; Mrs. J. S. Davis, of Greensboro; Miss Ina Phillips, of High Point; Miss Lena Phillips, of East Bend. One brother, John B. Phillips, of East Bend, Route 3, and eight grandchildren also survive.

Brother Phillips united with Baltimore Methodist Protestant church, now a part of West Forsyth charge, about 33 years ago, and maintained his interest and devotion to the church until his removal from the church militant to the Church Triumphant. He served as a steward in his church for many years, and also was leader of the choir for many years, giving his earnest efforts and sincere devotion to the church and its work. He was faithful to the tasks which were assigned to him and did his work in a cheerful and willing spirit. He will be missed in his home where he was devoted to his wife and children, and in his church where his work counted for much. Being a member of the Masonic and Junior Order lodges, he was faithful to them and will be missed by the brethren of these fraternities. He enjoyed singing the praises of God, not only in the church, but in his home, and his soul gave evidences of this joyous spirit even during his last days on earth, for we are told that he sang songs up until just before he resigned from the earthly choir and joined the heavenly chorus of redeemed souls and the angelic voices who sing the glories of redemption.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Elder O. J. Denny, of Winston-Salem, in the home and at Baltimore Methodist Protestant church on the afternoon of August 28, 1930, and the mortal remains of Brother Phillips were placed in Mother Earth to await the Resurrection Morning.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from us our dear brother, E. M. Ivester, who was loved by all who knew him.

Resolved, First: In the passing of Brother Ivester, Cleveland circuit has lost one of its best members. He will be missed in the quarterly conference, in the churches, and our homes. Brother Ivester was always willing and ready to do his part in everything the church and conference tried to do. He was always ready to lend a helping hand. In the depths of sadness we fall in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well. Our loss is his eternal gain.

Second: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family and one be spread upon the minutes of the quarterly conference records, and one sent to the "M. P. Herald" for publication. Done by order of the conference.

C. E. RIDGE, Chairman,
CHARLIE GRANT, Sec.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT

The supreme Master in His infinite wisdom, on the 9th day of August, 1930, summoned into His presence one of the oldest and most faithful members of Flat Rock church, Mr. A. E. White. He served as superintendent of Sunday school for many years, a man of sterling integrity, a faithful friend, and a highly respected and honored citizen. By his well-known upright character, the departed will leave his influence among those who have known him, and the entire church will fully realize their loss.

We, the members of the missionary society, resolve:

First, that we bow in humble submission to His divine will;

Second, that in memory of his example of Christian devotion, we shall endeavor to be strengthened in our efforts to obtain a higher spiritual life;

Third, the we extend our cheerful sympathy to the bereaved family;

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy entered in the minutes of the missionary society of Flat Rock church, and a copy sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. T. P. HESTER,
MRS. W. B. REAVIS,
MRS. J. H. SATTERWHITE.

CONSCIENTIOUS FLEAS

One of the ablest and most prosperous flea-trainers in the world is Jean Rochet of France. Last week in Paris he was negotiating with U. S. immigration and quarantine authorities for permission to take his educated fleas on a U. S. tour. In the course of telling his troubles to a U. S. newsgatherer, he made a pronouncement surprising to laymen: "I prefer the male flea, because he is more conscientious."

Professor William Heckler, owner of Manhattan's largest flea-circus, disagrees with Jean Rochet. Professor Heckler uses mostly females in his acts. He finds that the male flea, which is much smaller than the female, cannot go without food for long breaks down under the strain of heavy work, is too highly strung for circus life.

Of the 500 flea species known, the human flea (pulex irritans) is the only kind used in trained flea performances. Fleamen feed their healthy performers once a day, by simply rolling up their sleeves (usually the left one).* Sickly pets are fed more often. Since fleas live only a few weeks, a trainer must always have a large stock on hand. New, untrained fleas are kept in bottles, for two or three weeks, handled daily. When the time comes to train a performer, the end of a thin gold wire two inches long is fastened collar-fashion about its neck. This collar must be loose enough to allow the flea to eat, but tight enough so it cannot jump through. When fleas are not performing they are kept in boxes with their feet entangled in cotton.

The human flea lives mostly in Europe. Professor Heckler says he obtains his supply from the boat stewards of European liners, who find them while making beds. Greatest authority on fleas in the world is Lionel Walter, Baron Rothschild of England.—"Time."

*Fleaman philosophy phrases it: "They feed me: I feed them."

MUSHROOM SYNAGOGS

Orthodox rabbis with year-round synagog jobs last week started a selfish campaign against "mushroom" synagogs wherein a large part of Jewry celebrates Rosh Hashonah (New Year's day) and Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement). Those holidays respectively occur this year September 23-24 and October 2. Already many a rabbi without a post is canvassing unchurched Jews to buy seat tickets in his temporary "schul." On the other hand the unchurched, after trying vainly to buy seats in regular synagogs, are seeking to hire rabbis to lead them in high holiday ritual. This is basically not very difficult, for many a European-born Jew was educated for the rabbinate because secular schools would not receive him, because many a Jewish family like many a Roman Catholic family expects particular favors from God by giving a son to the church. The consequent production of rabbis became too much for established synagogs to absorb.

The complaining rabbis aver that the mushroom synagogs menace the existence of their establishments, many of which are impoverished, by diverting money. A professionally rabbinical argument is that Jewish law forbids the placing of Sefer Torah (Scrolls of the Law) in unsanctified places, like lodge halls, garages, dance halls, theatres.

Prompt rebuttal is that in emergency any spot suffices for a Jew to pray in.—"Time."

Thank you for the offering nearly all of which were made before the first Sunday in September. We are looking for good reports from the first Sunday's offering.

And we are confidently expecting a fine offering from each church and Sunday school in the conference during September. You will not fail us.

School supplies, clothing, shoes, coal and other supplies must be paid for at this season. We know you appreciate the work here, and we know you will respond to our needs. Note the personal gifts alone. Mrs. M. E. Moore recently sent us a check for $5.00, and now she comes with another $5.00 to buy two pairs of shoes. Mr. S. E. Leonard also takes two pairs of shoes, and Mr. C. E. McCulloch a fine pair of shoes.

Clothing and Other Gifts

We have no gifts to report under this heading this week, but on Tuesday evening September 2nd, the Men's Bible class from First Church, Thomasville, came over and brought with them a fine lot of large watermelons and gave all of us a delightful watermelon feast. Our children thoroughly enjoyed it, and all of us enjoyed the visit, the fellowship and the melons. We thank these friends.

Then on Friday afternoon a class of younger boys from the same church, came over and played on the lawn with as many of our children as could be spared from their work. They brought with them two bushels of apples. We are glad to have our friends visit us in this way.

Co-operation

Things have looked rather gloomy here financially since the first of April; but we know you will co-operate with us during the fall months, and the Dear Father willing we will yet be able to make a good report. Money produce or clothing will help.

Thank you and God bless you. Yours in His service. A. G. DIXON.

SPEED

Speed ahead, still more speed,
Speed and danger do not heed.
Speed to start the new-born day,
Speed that claims the right-of-way.

Speed at meals to get them through,
Speed in everything you do.
Speed to business, speed back home,
Speed to London, Parsi, Rome.

Speed in thought, speed in speech,
Speed beyond sane reason's reach.
Speed despite all law and rule,
Speed and be a speed-mad fool.

Speed around the sharpest curves,
Speed inviting jangled nerves.
Speed in partnership with noise,
Speed to banish sleep and poise.

Speed and some day take quick stock,
Speed that leads to tragic shock,
Speed ahead for surgeon's bills,
Speed that goes the pace that kills.

Speed with maddening raucous roar,
Speed and speed, speed still more,
Speed that takes away your breath,
Speed that plunges
down to death!

We invite you to call and see us when you visit our city. A cordial welcome awaits you.

Human Follies

A youthful king was asked to ease
The heavy load his people bore:
He lost his kingdom's greater part
By ugly threat to tax them more.

A thoughtless man once built his house
Upon the swiftly shifting sands:
One stormy day the house crashed down
Because it could no longer stand.

Five stupid maids went forth to meet
A bridegroom coming in the night:
They took their lamps all trim and neat,
But had no oil to give him light.

A man whose fields had made him rich
Declared that he would take his ease:
He thought new barns would keep his goods,
But failed to keep himself with these.

A man of wealth in splendor lived;
For human want he took no blame:
At length he died and found himself
With parched tongue in burning flame.

And every one that walks the earth
Has call to walk in folly's ways:
We need to have the greatest care
To walk with wisdom all our days.

Conditions Ripe for Great Sermons

We sometimes hear it said that the age of great oratory is past. This is doubtful in any sphere of human life, and it is more than doubtful in the sphere of religion. What are the conditions that demand great oratory? Oratory may be defined as convincing and arousing speech. The conditions that demand such speech are conditions of apathy in the presence of great danger. The great orations of Greece and Rome were called forth by the lethargy of the times in the face of great perils. The stirring orations of the prophets of Israel were provoked by the ease of the people of Zion when they were surrounded by threatening disasters. The American revolution would scarcely have gone through without the stirring oratory of Patrick Henry and others. Man is a sleepy creature and must be awakened by those more widely awake.

If the world has not gone to sleep under the monotonous sound of its preaching, it has become drowsy under the soporific effect of false teaching. Men who deride the frenzied eloquence of religious orators have blinded the masses to their perils. There are in the religious sphere those who cry peace when there is no peace. This is no new thing in the history of the world. There were smiling false prophets in Israel who effectively opposed the flaming prophets of the truth. The multiplication of false prophets demands the greater multiplication of true prophets. The success of the false prophets calls for more strenuous effort on the part of the true.

Some of the teachings of this time remove God so far away that it is easy and natural to ignore Him. Other teachings make Him non-existent or rob Him of all the elements of personality, strip Him of His moral nature, make Him mean less to us than our great-grandfather. This conception of God, false theology of the type now prevailing, has frozen the currents of our spiritual nature. We need prophets of burning eloquence to arouse the masses out of their spiritual lethargy and make them know God as Christ sought to reveal Him. You will observe that the false prophets either ignore Jesus or misrepresent Him. The world needs above all other knowledge to know Jesus as Teacher, as Benefactor, as Sufferer, as Savior. His overtowering moral worth is the power that men need to know and feel. If this is duly realized the men who degrade their state-supported offices by trying to turn men from the Christian faith will be thwarted in their ignoble efforts. It is the high business of the Gospel minister to set forth the Christ in all his power and glory. This demands his best oratory. Indeed, who is sufficient for the task? It demands the highest eloquence of the consumate orator. When Christ is made known, He will be believed, He will be loved, He will be obeyed. Here is a theme for the orator's portrayal that has no equal and our own time is deeply in need of the orator's best.

Three Great Parties

In my travels I came to a country in which the people are divided into three parties known as "Right-siders," "Left-siders," and "Middle-headers." These are both social and political divisions and sometimes give rise to firce contention.

The Right-siders part their hair on the right side; the Left-siders, on the left side; and the Middle-headers, in the middle. Each party contends that its way is the only correct way. All freely bring charges of heterodoxy against non-conformists. One is reminded of the strife between Roundheads and Cavaliers in the days of Oliver Cromwell.

The law of the country requires a candidate for office to go bare-headed that all may see to what party he really belongs. A bald-headed man once ran for high office, thinking to capture the votes of all parties. But he was caught by a mob and with India ink and given three coats of hair, respectively parted in the middle, on the right side, and on the left. He was not elected and never ran again.

Most women belong to the Middle-headers and this party is looked upon with some contempt by both the others. Its members are supposed to be lacking in the discernment necessary to see the point at issue between the other two. The Right-siders and the Left-siders claim for their positions the

PSALMS FOR CHRISTIAN USE

By REV. LUTHER K. LONG

Practically all peoples have used Psalms (songs) in their worship. These have varied greatly in literary, in moral, and in spiritual value.

The Hebrew Psalms form the most notable collection of such writings. Their composition covered a long period of years. They were produced by writers diverse in character and ability, and they deal with a wide variety of subjects and situations.

The Christian church has produced a marvelously rich and varied aggregate of "psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs"; to which valuable additions are constantly being made.

The church has always used selections from the ancient Hebrew Psalms for reading and chanting and singing; though many Christians have realized the inferior character of certain teachings and sentiments frequently expressed. And some have heartily resented these un-Christian sentiments—as the devout old Scotch lady, who said: "When David begins cursing his enemies, I part company with him." With clearer apprehension of the spirit of Jesus the Christian heart more and more rebels against reading in church or at home the expressions of hate and longing for vengeance so copiously scattered through the Hebrew Psalter.

We can not imagine Jesus reading in the synagogue at Nazareth, or in any other gathering, Ps. 137:8,9—

> O daughter of Babylon that art to be destroyed,
> Happy shall he be, that rewardeth thee
> As thou hast served us.
> Happy shall he be, that dasheth thy little ones
> Against the rock.

Unless it would be to show his disapproval, as when he quoted the "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" passage.

Many Psalms in their present form are the result of working over of previous writings—combining or separating, adjusting and rearranging material from many sources to meet certain conditions and to accomplish certain results. In some instances the objectionable, un-Christian expressions have been inserted or added to an otherwise fine Psalm by some editor of inferior taste and judgment. In very much the same way do modern hymn editors work on the productions of previous writers, sometimes to the advantage of the hymn, at other times very greatly to its injury.

A Christian man practically makes a new Psalm whenever, in prayer or in testimony, he combines two or more verses from different Psalms—perhaps omitting or changing a word or a phrase or paraphrasing a line—the better to express his own feelings or to stir the feelings of his brethren.

The minister does the same thing when, on Thanksgiving Day or on Memorial Sunday, he "edits" the material in a number of Psalms to provide a reading appropriate for the occasion. The Psalter as it is arranged for responsive reading in public worship is the result of work along the same line. Some of this work is most excellently done.

We still need the Hebrew Psalms to be used along with Christian hymns, because those ancient singers knew so well and expressed in such a fine way many of man's primal religious thoughts and experiences—such as the consciousness of sin, the right approach to God, thanksgiving for deliverance, wonder and delight in God's manifestations in nature and providence.

We greatly need a small hand-book of Psalms for use in the home, the church, and the school. There should be included especially those Psalms that see God in nature, and those that approach him in worship through wonder, prayer, and praise. From it should be excluded those passages which give expression to un-Christian teachings and sentiments—which, we are sure, Jesus repudiates. The editors should be at liberty to change some words and expressions in the interest of clearness.

I am presenting here three candidates for admission to such a hand-book. The reader will doubtless be more impressed with his familiarity with the excellent portions that have been retained than with the omission of undesirable sections. And that is as it should be.

GOD SEES AND KNOWS

O Lord, thou hast searched me and known me.
Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising;
Thou understandest my thought afar off.
Thou searchest my path and my lying down,
And art acquainted with all my ways.
For there is not a word in my tongue,
But, lo, O Lord, thou knowest it altogether.

Thou hast beset me behind and before,
And laid thy hand upon me.
Such knowledge is beyond my achievement;
It is high, I cannot attain unto it.

Whither shall I go from thy Spirit?
Or whither shall I flee from thy presence?
If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there;
If I make my bed in Sheol, behold, thou art there.
If I take the wings of the morning,
And dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea;
Even there shall thy hand lead me,
And thy right hand shall hold me.
If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me
And there shall be no light about me;
Even the darkness hideth not from thee,
But the night shineth as the day:
Yea, darkness and light are both alike to thee.
Waking or sleeping, I am ever with thee.

Search me, O God, and know my heart:
Try me, and know my thoughts;
And see if there be any wicked way in me.
And lead me in the way everlasting.

PRAYER OF A PENITENT FOR PARDON

Out of the depths do I cry unto thee, O Lord.
Lord, hear my voice:
Let thine ear be attentive
To the voice of my supplications.
If thou, Lord, shouldest mark iniquities,
O, Lord, who could stand?
But there is forgiveness with thee.

Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving kindness:
According to the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out out my transgressions.
Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity,
And cleanse me from my sin.
For I know my transgressions;
And my sin is ever before me.

Hide thy face from my sins,
And blot out all mine iniquities.
Create in me a clean heart, O God;
And renew a right spirit within me.
Cast me not away from thy presence;
And take not thy holy Spirit from me.
Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation;
And uphold me with a willing spirit.
Then will I teach transgressors thy ways;
And sinners shall be converted unto thee.

O Lord, open thou my lips;
And my mouth shall show forth thy praise.
For thou delightest not in sacrifice; else would I give it:
Thou hast no pleasure in burnt offering.
The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit:
A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart
Be acceptable in thy sight,
O Lord, my rock, and my redeemer.

THIRSTING FOR GOD

As the hart panteth after the water brooks,
So panteth my soul after thee, O God.
My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God;
Yea, my heart and my flesh cry out for God.

My soul, wait thou in silence for God only;
For my expectation is from him.
He only is my rock and my salvation;
He is my high tower; I shall not be moved.
With God is my salvation and my glory:
The rock of my strength and my refuge is in God.

Trust in him at all times, ye people;
Pour out your heart before him:
God is a refuge for us.
Praise ye the Lord.

ROSH HASHANAH MESSAGE

By Stephen S. Wise, Ph. D., LL. D

The year is overshadowed, grievously overshadowed, by the events of its closing days. Rare is the Jewish annals that includes no chronicle of things painful and embittering. Once again we looked for light and, behold, there is darkness!

I would not utter my New Year's message in the form of threnody, but tears are in our hearts,—tears of deep, compassionate sorrow, tears of high, exultant pride! Howsoever blame is, after a time, to be apportioned, at the New Year's season it is for us proudly to recall that once again our people has proven equal to the martyr-task of its history. However terrible the guilt of others, guilt of omission or guilt of commission, our brothers have borne themselves blamelessly even to the end. So that we are denied only the feeling of contrition, for every other solace is left to us.

One holy place we craved for worship, and, even there, in violation of every tradition of the centuries, we were denied. And the tragedy of it, the guardians of the city were asleep, awaking only to disarm the thrice-wronged defenders of their people's life! We thank God for the heroism of our youth; we praise God for the nobleness of those to whom fell the immortal portion of Kiddush ha-Shem, in the highest.

England will yet assure security, lest natinal honor become a bauble of dress. The Open Door and security were promised and the promise has been doubly violated. And, indeed, reparation, however large and ungrudging, will not be enough,—not even the exaction of decent neighborliness on the part of those against whom the deep damnation of the taking off of our brothers pleads trumpet-tongued. England must at last obey the law of its own covenant of peace and honor with the Jewish people, including sternest warning to those whom we have immeasurably benefited, that plotting and uprising, if ever again attempted, will be met with swift and awful punishment.

But we must do more . We must now stand at the side of our pioneers as never before. For they are the advance guard of our loftiest hope. England and Europe and all the world must come to understand that the Jewish rebuilders of Palestine are not isolated and unsupported adventurers, but the ambassadors of their people, humble in themselves and yet charged with all our hopes and dreams and strength,—inviolable hostages in the safekeeping of the great Confederate Nation that must now strive to wipe out the stain of blood, which weakness rather than guilt has brought upon its escutcheon of honor.

But physical security is not eough, and to this end physical reinforcement alone will not suffice. We owe our heroic pioneers something more, and that something more is a new devotion to their and our cause. We, too, may be the guardians of our people's spiritual fortune. We, too, are exposed to grievous peril, the peril of disloyalty to the highest we know of desertion of an infinitely precious heritage, of foreswearing in truth and life the historic task of Israel as witness to the divine outreaching and upreaching of man, the peril of bartering loftiest ideals for meanest standards. A finer, nobler World Israel will be at one and the same time the surest security and the richest fruition of our people's life in our people's land.

So may the New Year be blessed to Israel and mankind. Then shall our light break forth as the morning and our healing spring forth speedily.

A CHALLENGE TO THE WETS

We challenge you to announce a program. How do you propose that the country shall deal with the liquor traffic if prohibition is repealed? What guarantee can you offer that prohibition territory will be respected by a trade nationally organized and hungry for profits? Why can you not agree among yourself upon a system which you can advocate to the American people as a remedy for drink, lawlessness, vice, corruption and waste?

The American people demand constructive proposals rather than destructive criticism.—Editor of Clipsheet.

merit of having a direct opposite, which cannot be said of the position of the Middle-headers.

In spite of their absorbing interest in this great question of the right place to part the hair, the people of that country manage somehow to attend to such minor matters as rearing children, and give no sign of being on the road to extinction.

—It is pleasing to hear of the good registration of students at High Point College.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Sick

Rev. J. B. O'Briant is in the hospital at Roanoke Rapids, seriously ill. He had been complaining slightly for a week, met his appointments at his churches Sunday. On his return home Sunday night a physician was summoned. His trouble was diagnosed as appendicitis, and he was taken to the hospital immediately for an operation. His case is a drainage one, and he will not be out of danger, we were informed, for several days. Dr. Johnson, Brother Auman, and I, called at his home today, and found Sister O'Briant and other members of the family in much distress. We could not see Brother O'Briant at the hospital. The prayers of the conference will be earnestly offered for this sick brother, and for his family in this time of their sore need.

Through Brother H. S. B. Thompson, we learned today that Sister Thompson has just lost a brother by death. To her and to her family we offer our sympathies and the assurances of our prayers.

Married

On the second of September, we had the happy privilege of officiating with Brother Edwin Suits in the marriage of his daughter, Miss Viola, to Mr. Dale Montgomery. The marriage was solemnized in the presence of the immediate family, and a few friends, at the home of the bride in High Point. The bride is the oldest daughter of Brother and Sister Suits, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Montgomery, all of High Point. These are splendid young people, and we join their many friends in congratulations, and in earnest good wishes for a happy voyage, as they sail life's sea together.

An Important Meeting

Last week,—Thursday, the 11th, a very important meeting was held at Calvary church, Greensboro, in the interest of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. Several ministers and laymen were present, and earnest and lengthy discussion was engaged in, with the hope of finding a remedy for the present financial stress of the paper. These deliberations resulted in a decision to ask our pastors to raise on their respective charges an amount equal to two per cent. of their salaries. The committee felt that this was not a large asking from any of our churches, and for many of them, the apportionment would be very small. The aggregate, however, will mean much to the HERALD. The deficit this year between cost and income is $1,200. This shortage has been assumed by Dr. McCulloch, but surely the conference will not permit him to pay it. For four years McCulloch & Swain have printed the paper at great financial loss to themselves. They have done this because of their esteem for Dr. McCulloch, their loyalty to the church, and their appreciation of the value of the paper to the conference. This is a highly commendable sacrifice on their part, but they can't continue to make it indefinitefy, and the church can not afford to let them do it. We must make adequate financial provision for the HERALD. This was the purpose for which this committee was called together, and the appeal for two per cent. of pastor's salary is an effort to take care of the needs for this yar. It should be stated further, that a committee was appointed at this meeting to work with Dr. McCulloch in an effort to create a new publishing house corporation, and to acquire property by which the paper may be permanently subsidized. It is most likely that this committee will have some report to make to the coming annual conference. In the meantime, we bespeak the fullest co-operation of pastors and people in the plan proposed by the committee to take care of the needs for this year. The HERALD is rendering invaluable service to our conference. Let us give to it our full support in raising the two per cent. of pastor's salary, and work earnestly and unitedly for a way by which income may be provided for its adequate and permanent support.

Tithing and Pay-up Month

This is the order of the conference for October. We urge our pastors to stress it before their people. Let as many permanent tithers as possible be secured; and in addition to this, urge the people to tithe during October, as a means of meeting our financial obligations for the year. If our people can be induced to do this, our receipts will be greatly increased. We trust that it may be pressed in every church.

Conference Order

"We recommend, that where the pastor's salary is paid in full, and a reasonable amount is not paid on the claims of the church, that both pastor and delegate be required to give account of same, before the pastor is assigned to a charge or the delegate given a pastor."

This was passed by our last annual conference, on the recommendation of the Committee on Official Character. Attention is called to it here, for fear that it may be over-looked by both pastors and delegates. In passing this order, there was no thought on the part of the conference to be rigid in this matter. The only motive was to key us all up to a due sense of the necessity of raising these budgets. No pastor, therefore, and no delegate, need be embarrassed where a faithful effort has been made to raise the benevolences of the charge. Every one will understand, of course, that I have no choice in the matter but to conform to this order of the conference.

Delegates

We presume that the certification card, sent out by Secretary Bates, is in the hands of all pastors; and we presume, also, that all third quarterly conferences have been held, and that all delegates are now duly elected. It is important that the certification card be filled out and returned at once to Brother Bates. We are anxious to make up the list of conference committees, and must have the names of delegates before we can do this. Thank you, pastors.

Children's Home

We are not unmindful of Dr. Dixon's appeals for the Home; but he presents the matter so well that it seems unnecessary for us to add anything. However, we urge here, as we do in our visitation of the churches, the fullest possible support of the Home. This is a great work that we are doing there, and Dr. Dixon is handling it well. There should not be a church in the conference that does not make regular offerings for this purpose. Quite a number of churches are doing this, and have done so for many years; let us see to it that the list grows.

"In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Eastern Pastor's Federation

The meeting was held today in our Littleton church, with the President, Dr. T. M. Johnson, presiding. Others present were Auman, Fogleman, Shelton, Cowan, Smith, Spencer, Hunter, Braxton, and Thompson. The central theme was "Religious Education in the Local Church." The matter was ably presented by Dr. Johnson, and discussions were participated in by other members of the group. Some pastors reported that they had started work along this line in their churches, and that the effort had met with good response. This is worthwhile work, and more and more it will be given a place in the program of the local church. An opportunity was given to us to address the meeting, and to present the different phases of our conference work, as we approach the close of the year. We are sure that these pastors will continue their earnestness in promoting every conference interest and that they will strive with all diligence and prayer to close the year with the very best possible results. It was great pleasure to us to have this contact with these brethren, and our impression is that this Federation is making a worthwhile contribution to the pastors of this eastern district.

These Things, Now

The Rally Day—Don't overlook it; don't neglect it. Constant prayer for our revival meetings. Constant prayer for God's blessings upon our closing efforts. Congregations are urged to join us in these prayers. A large delegation at conference on Friday—Denominational Day. Full salaries and full budgets.

A TEAR IN THE VOICE

A Methodist minister of the State astonished a church congregation when he told them that he wished the preachers could put a tear in their voices. It seems that he had been listening to Al Jolson in "Say It With Songs."

"After the show," he is reported to have said, "I told my wife that I wished to God that we who teach the Gospel of Jesus Christ could put the Gospel across in the manner in which Jolson sings his songs. Sometimes I think we are frozen."

It is rather unusual for the clergy to take lessons from the stage, though there would seem to be no harm in their doing so if the ministers feel that thereby they may make a greater appeal to the people whom they would reach. And it is true that a cold, dispassionate evangelism is a handicap in soul-saving.

On the other hand the minister who is given to "tearful" effects runs the risk of being accused of shedding crocodile tears. Some preachers are too much inclined to dramatize deathbed scenes in such a way as to be offensive to those who resent any effort to play on their emotions. Less emotionalism, rather than more, seems to be the need of the present-day evangelism.

Christ's was a ministry of comfort, and sympathy, not maudlin emotionalism and sentimentalism. Only once is it recorded of Him that he shed tears. Then "Jesus wept" at the death of a dearly beloved friend Lazarus, and the Jews said: "Behold how He loved Him! "There were other times, it is true, when He was troubled in spirit, for the sins of the world lay heavily on his shoulder.

The main point is sincerity. Every minister should feel burdened for lost souls, and if he is he will most assuredly have a tear in his voice.—The Winston-Salem Journal.

A HOME TRAINING OPPORTUNITY FOR CHURCH AND SOCIAL WORKERS

Volunteer and professional workers in the field of religious education and social service will be interested in the announcement of home study courses to be offered during 1930-31 by Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service.

These courses will include studies in Biblical history and literature, psychology, history and principles of religious education, administration, worship, religious drama, church music, leadership training and social service.

In addition the school will undertake to conduct a limited number of problems or project courses intended to assist local groups in the actual solution of concrete problems in their church or community. These courses will furnish guidance in the study of problems of reorganization, grading, curriculum construction, housing and equipment, social betterment, as these arise in connection with the church school, young people's and social service activities.

The courses are planned to fit the needs of the following groups:

1. Those who wish a broader cultural training in the general fields of religious education and social service which will give perspective and an understanding of the origin, the meaning, and the value of the principles and procedures of present-day practice.
2. Volunteer leaders who have at least a high school education or its equivalent and who wish to fit themselves for larger service in the church, either as paid part-time workers or volunteers.
3. Those who have completed the Standard Leadership Training Courses under denominational, State or International Council auspices and who desire professional training on a collegiate level.
4. Professional workers who wish an opportunity for the serious study of current problems and tendencies in religious and social service, or who desire to pursue advanced studies leading to collegiate degrees.

The Home Study Courses will be ready for release to students in October and may be begun at any time thereafter.

A descriptive bulletin covering all courses and directions for registration may be obtained from Dean Henry H. Meyer, 20 Beacon Street, Boston.

A REAL DETECTIVE

Chug Slater had a small room off the kitchen of his house, where he held all the meetings of the Junior Detective club. Almost anybody could belong who had any learning toward being a detective at all. All he had to do was to disguise himself so well that his own mother didn't know him for at least a minute when he rang the doorbell to make believe selling her something.

But in this club there was also what Chug called "The Inside Circle," to which a fellow couldn't belong unless he had found out who broke a window, or took a gate off its hinge, or rung a doorbell, or something like that. Not many fellows belonged to this small group, but the ones who did had passwords and a secret grip and special meetings all by themselves.

One afternoon, Eddie Frye, a new member, was comparing notes with Chug and asking him his opinion on what the best way was to get elected to the Inside Circle. Chug had his chest out pretty big, because once he had shadowed a policeman all around his beat without the cop ever knowing that he was being followed, and was giving advice to Eddie, the main idea of which was for Eddie to watch how a real detective thought things out, meaning by a real detective, himself.

Suddenly the doorbell rang, and when the two boys, who were alone in the house went to answer it, they found the delivery man there from Siberling's Jewelry Store. At least, he had a cap with the name of that store printed on the front of it.

"Does Mrs. Slater live here?" he asked.

"Yes, but she's out right now," answered Chug. "Got some kind of a telephone message about ten minutes ago which called her away. What is it, something my mother ordered?"

"Yes, and if you'll sign this paper, I'll leave it with you. I think it will be all right."

"Sure, it will be all right," answered Chug. "I always take the parcels."

"But this one is full of jewelry," returned the man. "It is worth about ten thousand dollars."

"Whew!" said Chug, after the door had closed behind the delivery man. "Ten thousand dollars!"

"Looks suspicious to me," said Eddie, eyeing the parcel doubtfully. "Maybe it isn't jewelry."

Chug shook it.
